One in four Seniors will be a victim of a financial crime. Financial abuse is the unauthorized or illegal use of an adult’s funds, property or resources by a family member, friend or stranger, which causes a loss of money or property.

All Seniors are at risk because they can find themselves in situations or relationships that leave them open to financial abuse. And the amount does not have to be large to be a substantial loss and to be considered financial abuse.

This type of abuse may be anything from stealing small amounts of cash to persuading a person to sign over a house or sign for a loan against their wishes.

Signs of Financial Abuse

Have you let someone else use your ATM card or credit card?

- Use good financial practices, do not allow anyone to use your ATM card or your credit card – cancel the card if you don’t use it.

Has someone convinced you to sign a blank check for someone else to cash?

- Fill out your own checks — DO NOT sign blank checks.

Has someone stolen your social security or pension check from you?

- Use direct deposit.

Do you have money and other valuables laying around in the open?

- Do not leave money or financial documents in plain view.

Has someone forced you to sign a check or other document against your will in exchange for care?

- Do not sign over money or property in return for care without having the agreement reviewed by an attorney.

Have you given written permission for someone to make financial decisions for you, and do you know what that means?

- If someone is helping you manage your finances, have a trusted third person review your bank statements and put all financial instructions in writing.

Has someone forced you to give them money by threatening you or stolen money from you?

- If someone threatens or steals from you, REPORT it.
