This A/E firm was competitively selected. The firm has completed some of the design work for this project. An A/E firm is required by law to affix its seal on the plans. The design work must be completed under the oversight of a licensed architect. If a new firm is brought in to finish the work, they could not use the existing work because it was not approved under their supervision. The new A/E firm would be required to certify all the work and calculations, then affix its seal, repeating work already completed.
