Since more than 324 plant species are on the Illinois List of Endangered and Threatened Species, there had been a consensus that they needed to be divided into manageable groups for review. Chair Hofmann pointed out that species could be divided taxonomically, geographically, or by habitat. Dr. Coons and Dr. Fant have discussed this issue since the last meeting and felt that the plants should be grouped geographically. They also presented a list of botanists and their areas of geographic and taxonomic expertise. The Board discussed the idea of having an official Plant ESTAC with a limited number of members and inviting other botanists to attend regional meetings for northern, central, and southern Illinois.
