OEIG Human Services and Transportation Investigations Become Public

The Executive Ethics Commission released redacted versions of two OEIG final summary reports on June 29, 2015.

One OEIG investigation addressed misconduct at the Department of Human Services (DHS). The OEIG found that DHS Caseworker Laroddica White, who was responsible for determining eligibility for benefits, among other duties, had improperly accessed government databases containing DHS client information, including DHS customers’ social security numbers and current addresses. Ms. White then provided the information to her former boyfriend, who used it in connection with his private business, a vehicle repossession company. The OEIG recommended that Ms. White be terminated. DHS concurred, and Ms. White resigned during termination proceedings. The case is In re: Laroddica White, Case # 12-01662.

A separate OEIG investigation examined multiple allegations that a Department of Transportation (DOT) employee had misused State resources. The OEIG found that Operations Manager William Helm made excessive personal phone calls during paid work time, including 41 hours of personal phone calls in a six-month period. The OEIG also found that Mr. Helm, who resigned from the State during the course of the investigation, misused a personally-assigned State vehicle by visiting non-employees during work hours, driving non-employees in the State vehicle during work hours, and violating red light traffic laws during non-work hours. The OEIG recommended that a copy of the report be placed in Mr. Helm’s personnel file and that DOT recoup the financial loss resulting from his misconduct. DOT concurred, and has demanded payment to recoup the loss. The case is In re: William Helm, Case # 11-02070.
