

Illinois Council on Food and Agricultural Research

The Illinois Council on Food and Agricultural Research (C-FAR) is a statewide partnership organized to support relevant, high-quality research and related outreach programs for Illinois' food, agricultural, and related systems. C-FAR was founded in December 1993 as a nonprofit association to address the critical need to increase state funding for food, agricultural, and related research, and to provide public input into setting research priorities.

C-FAR is governed by three board of directors, elected at the annual meeting in February 2019.
