DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority. I would have increased the permanent partial disability awards for Petitioner's nasal fracture and multi-level cervical disc herniations to 15 percent and 25 percent of the person as a whole, respectively.

Petitioner, a 37-year-old psychiatric nurse, was attacked by an acutely ill and concomitantly aggressive patient on June 11, 2017. Petitioner sustained a nasal fracture with a deviated septum as a result of being punched in the face by the patient, with such force that the impact also resulted in cervical spine disc herniations at two levels between C3 and C5. While the arbitrator considered and gave appropriate weight to the Section 8.1b factors in the Act, I do not believe the overall permanent partial disability awards of 10 percent of the person as a whole for Petitioner's nasal injuries and 22 of the person as a whole for Petitioner's disc herniations fairly compensate Petitioner for the extent of the injuries sustained taking into consideration the particular facts of this case.

Petitioner underwent a nasal septal closed fracture repair and bilateral inferior turbinate submucous resection following the violent incident at work. He suffered from sleep apnea and nasal congestion that prevented uninterrupted sleep requiring additional treatment to ameliorate the ongoing symptoms after his accident.

Petitioner then underwent treatment for his neck pain, headaches, and right ear tinnitus. A cervical CT showed mild cervical spondylosis greatest at C5-C6 along with an associated disc bulge/protrusion and bilateral uncovertebral joint hypertrophy resulting in spinal canal or neural foraminal narrowing. Ultimately, Petitioner's condition was such that he was recommended for, and underwent, a two-level cervical disc replacement surgery not yet at age 40. When Petitioner submitted to a Section 12 examination by Dr. Hurford at Respondent's request she diagnosed a work-related injury, status-post nasal fracture and surgery with cervicogenic headaches, cervical disc herniation, and left upper extremity radiculitis. She opined that Petitioner's cervical disc problems required ongoing attention and gave work restrictions of limited patient contact, no lifting greater than 15 to 20 pounds, and no over-the-shoulder activities. Dr. Hurford further opined that Petitioner's pre-accident headaches reported on May 22, 2017 were consistent with atypical migraine and were different in quality than the traumatic headaches Petitioner now experienced. Petitioner continued to undergo medical treatment for his varied conditions after invasive surgeries and without complete relief requiring ongoing conservative care or at-home treatment to maintain some modicum of daily living given the outcome of his injuries.

Petitioner testified that he continues to suffer from bilateral hearing loss and tinnitus in his ears. He also continues to have daily neck pain and occasional radiating pain into his arm. While Petitioner returned to full duty work and has obtained employment that did not impact his earnings ability, his injuries have limited his quality of life and required him to modify the type of work that he performs within his industry given his ongoing symptoms. Therefore, I believe Petitioner's nasal fracture and multi-level disc herniations warranted awards of 15 and 25 percent permanent partial disability of the person as a whole, respectively.

Therefore, I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority.

FINDINGS OF FACT

On June 11, 2017, Petitioner was employed as a psychiatric registered nurse for Respondent, Touchette Regional Hospital. (T.8). On that day, Petitioner was working on the acute psychiatric unit with an aggressive patient. Id. Due to threats the patient was making against staff and other patients, it was determined that the patient should be medicated. Id. Petitioner called security to escort the patient to his room, where he gave the patient an intermuscular injection into his right deltoid. Id. After receiving the injection, however, the patient again became combative and aggressive, and Petitioner made the determination that the patient should be moved to a seclusion room until the medication took effect. Id. Petitioner exited the room to unlock the seclusion room when he was approached from behind by the combative patient, who had evaded the security guards in his path. (T.9-10). The patient spit on the right side of Petitioner's face, and threw a "big hook" at Petitioner's face, punching him on the left side of his nose. (T.10-11). Petitioner testified that he suffered a broken nose, a deviated septum, and two ruptured discs in his neck as a result of this incident. (T.10). Petitioner confirmed that he never had any treatment for issues with his nose or neck before this incident. (T.11).

After the assault occurred, Petitioner presented to the emergency department at Touchette Regional Hospital. (PX3). The triage department in the emergency room noted that Petitioner was an employee in the hospital's behavioral health department who had been "sucker punched" in the face by a patient, and noticed a deformity to his nose with a 1-2 centimeter laceration to the bridge of his nose. Id. A CT scan of Petitioner's maxillofacial bones was performed, which revealed a displaced nasal bone fracture and a deviated nasal septum on the right. Id. Petitioner was given prescription medication for pain, and advised to follow up with a specialist. Id.

Several days later, Petitioner followed up with Dr. Richard Maack, an ear nose and throat specialist. (PX4). Dr. Maack noted that Petitioner had sustained a nasal fracture after being punched in the face by a patient at work. (PX4, 6/13/17). The injury affected Petitioner's left eye, left cheek and nose, and he was having difficulty breathing through both nostrils. Id. Additional symptoms of nasal tenderness, nasal swelling, nasal obstruction nasal congestion, ear pressure, fatigue, throbbing pain in the forehead, left eye and posterior scalp were also documented. Id. Petitioner also had trouble concentrating, reading and writing. Id. It was noted that Petitioner had no prior problems with his nose. Id. On physical exam, Dr. Maack documented swelling in Petitioner's medial cheeks, lower eyelids, that his nose was shifted to the right, as well as deviated septums in the right nasal cavity anteriorly, and in the left nasal cavity posteriorly. Id. A nasal endoscopy was performed that day to confirm Dr. Maack's diagnoses of nasal fracture, septal deviation, nasal congestion and turbinate hypertrophy. Id. After the diagnoses were confirmed, Dr. Maack recommended surgery in the form of a closed nasal reduction. Id.

Surgery was performed on June 16, 2017 in the form of a nasal septal fracture repair, closed reduction of nasal fracture, and bilateral inferior turbinate submucous resection. Id. Intraoperatively, Dr. Maack identified a deviated portion of the bony maxillart crest, a bony spur, as well as septal fractures. Id.

Following surgery, Petitioner unfortunately developed thrush, for which he was prescribed Clotrimazole. (PX4, 6/19/17). Petitioner also experienced post-operative apneic spells during which he would wake up gasping for air. (PX4, 6/29/17). Suction of his nose was performed which revealed a large amount of debris, which was removed. Id. Petitioner was taken off work for another week due his inability to sleep. Id. At his final follow up appointment, it was noted that Petitioner still had congestion, and had been restless, with continued trouble sleeping without the use of sleep aids like hydrocodone, Nyquil or melatonin. (PX4, 7/11/17). Pain in Petitioner's occipital scalp was also documented, as well as posterior neck pain. Id. Petitioner was advised to follow up as needed. Id.

Petitioner ultimately sought consultation with an orthopedic spine specialist, Dr. Matthew Gornet, to address the symptoms of pain in his neck he experienced following the assault. (T.13). Specifically, Petitioner testified that he initially believed his symptoms were related to whiplash, but once he returned to work, he began experiencing shooting pain into his arms, particularly on the left side. (T.13-14).

Dr. Gornet evaluated Petitioner on September 1, 2017. (PX7, 9/1/17). He took the history of Petitioner's injury, and specifically that he had been punched in the face by a combative patient who he was attempting to sedate. Id. He noted Petitioner's ongoing complaints of neck pain and frequent headaches to both sides, left trapezius and left shoulder, as well as tinnitus in his right ear. Id. Petitioner did not recall any previous problems of significance with respect to his neck or shoulder. Id. On physical exam, Dr. Gornet noted a mild decrease in range of motion on flexion and extension. Id. Dr. Gornet recommended a cervical spine MRI, which was performed that day, and revealed a large disc herniation/annular tear at C5-6 as well as a bilobular herniation at C3-4 and particularly a large fragment in the foramen. Id. Dr. Gornet believed that Petitioner sustained a disc injury at C3-4 and C5-6, and recommended that Petitioner undergo injections centrally at C3-4 and C5-6. Id. If he was not improved, consideration could be given to disc replacement surgery at C3-4 and C5-6. Id. Dr. Gornet also prescribed Meloxicam and Cyclobenzaprine. Id. He also gave Petitioner light duty restrictions. Id.

Petitioner underwent the injections as recommended by Dr. Gornet, which were performed on October 10, 2017 and October 26, 2017. (PX9). Petitioner returned to Dr. Gornet following the injections with persistent symptoms in his neck, as well as headaches, and pain into the left trapezius and left shoulder. (PX7, 11/9/17). At that point, Dr. Gornet recommended disc replacement surgery at C4-5 and C5-6. Id. A CT myelogram was also recommended pre-operatively. (PX11; PX7, 11/9/17, 11/20/17).

Surgery was performed on December 8, 2017 in the form of cervical disc replacements at C3-4 and C5-6 with Prestige LP. (PX7, 12/8/17; PX12, 12/8/17). Intraoperatively, Dr. Gornet identified a large central annular tear at C5-6 as well as a central herniation with a component to the right as well as a foraminal component to the left. Id. He also identified a left foraminal herniation at C3-4, which he described as a much harder dissection. Id. At his initial post-operative appointment, Dr. Gornet also showed him an operative video documenting the large tear in his disc. (PX7, 12/21/17).

Petitioner was released to return to full duty work on January 22, 2018. (PX76, 1/18/18). Dr. Gornet noted that Petitioner continued to have symptoms of tinnitus in his right ear, for which he referred him back to an ENT specialist. Id. Petitioner continued to progress following surgery, and was ultimately released from care on December 13, 2018 at maximum medical improvement. (PX7, 12/13/18). It was noted that Petitioner had returned to work in psychiatric nursing. Id.

Respondent had Petitioner examined pursuant to Section 12 of the Act by Dr. Patricia Hurford on September 20, 2017. (PX14). Dr. Hurford took the history of Petitioner's injury on June 11, 2017, and noted that Petitioner had been punched in the front of his face from the right side, which resulted in a nasal fracture and noticeable neck and bilateral shoulder pain. Id. Dr. Hurford likewise noted that Petitioner had a marked increase in neck pain when he attempted to return to work, and that he ultimately came under the care of Dr. Gornet. Id. Dr. Hurford also noted that prior to Petitioner's work injury, he suffered three headaches in one week, which lasted approximately one (1) hour each, for which he was treated in the emergency room with a CT scan. Id. He was advised that the CT scan was normal, and Petitioner was diagnosed with an atypical migraine. Id. Dr. Hurford noted no ongoing headache symptoms as a result of those instances. Id.

On physical exam, Dr. Hurford documented significant tightness in the left posterior scalene versus the right, as well as tightness in the upper trapezius muscles with palpation, and trigger point in the cervical splenius capitas on the left-hand side. Id. Dr. Hurford's impression was status post work-related injury, post nasal fracture, cervicogenic headaches, cervical disc herniation and left upper extremity radiculitis. Id. She believed that Petitioner required additional medical treatment to address his cervical disc problems, and specifically, if the injections did not relieve Petitioner's symptoms, surgical consideration would be an acceptable approach. Id. Dr. Hurford believed that the headaches reported by Petitioner in May of 2017 were consistent with atypical migraines, and, by Petitioner's history, the quality and quantity of these headaches were different than the traumatic headaches he was currently experiencing. Id. She recommended light duty work restrictions for Petitioner. Id.

Petitioner submitted several photographs into evidence documenting his visible injuries in the days and weeks following the assault. (PX13). The Arbitrator notes that Petitioner's nose is noticeably broken in several of the photographs, and both of Petitioner's eyes are blackened and bruised. Id.

Respondent submitted several medical records into evidence confirming that Petitioner underwent testing for headaches on May 22, 2017 and May 24, 2017. (RX3)

Petitioner testified that despite the improvement following surgery with Dr. Maack, he still suffers from an ongoing problems in his right eardrum, as well as tinnitus, or a continuous ringing in both ears. (T.17). He also testified that he notices a static-like sound in his right ear with loud noises. (T.17). He testified that he returned to Dr. Maack, who advised him there was no further treatment he could offer him for the tinnitus. (T.19).

With respect to his neck, despite the improvement following surgery by Dr. Gornet,Petitioner testified he still has pain in his neck on a daily basis, for which he takes over-the-counter ibuprofen and Tylenol. (T.19). He testified he continues to notice pain and soreness in his scalp, and tightness in his shoulders. (T.19). Petitioner indicated he will still occasionally experience some pain radiating down his arm. (T.19). He testified that he still suffers from some reduced range of motion in his neck, and is cautious about looking too quickly over his shoulder. (T.20).

Petitioner testified that he is currently employed as a psychiatric nurse at St. Alexius Hospital in St. Louis performing essentially the same type of work he previously did for Respondent. (T.16). At work, he indicated that he is now unable to sit and chart for the same duration as he could prior to his injury, and notices a significant amount of tightness in his neck when he attempts to do so. (T.20). He testified that he will take intermittent breaks from the computer due to his lack of stamina. (T.20). Petitioner also testified that he will often experience a headache or an ache in his shoulder or neck after performing a physical hold on a patient. (T.20-21). Petitioner confirmed that while he did have a series of headaches prior to his injury, the headaches he has experienced following the work-related assault are different and come more regularly. (T.22).

Lastly, Petitioner testified that since the attack, he notices symptoms of PTSD, and specifically, that he is always conscious of his surroundings and looks over his shoulder or in mirrors to make sure no patients approach him from behind. (T.23). He testified that he feels very anxious when patients approach him from the rear. (T.23).

On cross-examination, Petitioner testified that he was involved in a motor vehicle collision approximately one year ago and confirmed that he was not injured. (T.26).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to §8.1b of the Act, permanent partial disability from injuries that occur after September 1, 2011 are to be established using the following criteria: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a) of the Act; (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b. The Act provides that, "No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability." 820 ILCS 305/8.1b(b)(v).

(i) Level of Impairment: Neither Party submitted an AMA rating. Therefore, the Arbitrator gives no weight to this factor.

(ii) Occupation: Petitioner continues to work as a psychiatric nurse performing essentially same type of job duties he performed while employed with Respondent. (T.16). He testified that he must perform physical holds on patients, and will often notice pain or weakness in his neck or shoulder area after performing this type of maneuver. (T.20-22). He also testified that his ability to sit and chart for long periods of time has been adversely affected. Id. Therefore, the Arbitrator places greater weight on this factor.

(iii) Age: Petitioner was 37 years old at the time of his injury. He is extremely young and must live and work with his disability for the majority of his work-life expectancy. Pursuant to Jones v. Southwest Airlines, 16 I.W.C.C. 0137 (2016) (wherein the Commission concluded that greater weight should have been given to the fact that Petitioner was younger [46 years of age] and would have to work with his disability for an extended period of time), the Arbitrator places moderate weight on this factor.

(iv) Earning Capacity: There is no direct evidence of reduced earning capacity contained in the record. Based on the severity of Petitioner's injuries, however, the requisite treatment, and the strenuous nature of Petitioner's employment, it is reasonable to conclude that such repercussions will manifest in the near future. Therefore, the Arbitrator places no weight on this factor.

(v) Disability: As a result of his injury, Petitioner sustained serious injuries in the forms of a nasal facture with a deviated septum, and multi-level cervical disc herniations, both of which required surgical intervention. Specifically, Petitioner underwent a nasal septal fracture repair, closed reduction of nasal fracture, and bilateral inferior turbinate submucous resection, which revealed significant intraoperative findings. (PX4). Despite improvement following surgery, Petitioner testified that he has tinnitus in his ears, and hears a static-type of noise. (T.17) Petitioner's level of disability was corroborated by the medical records. Specifically, Dr. Gornet's records confirm that after both surgeries, Petitioner continued to have tinnitus in his right ear, for which Dr. Gornet referred him back to an ENT specialist. (PX7, 1/18/18).

Petitioner also underwent a two level cervical disc replacement surgery at C3-4 and C5-6 with significant intraoperative findings confirming disc herniations at multiple levels (PX7; PX12). Despite his improvement following surgery, Petitioner testified that he still experiences soreness in his neck on a daily basis, and takes over-the-counter ibuprofen and Tylenol to manage his symptoms. (T.19). He testified he continues to notice pain and soreness in his scalp, and tightness in his shoulders. (T.19). Petitioner indicated he will still occasionally experience some pain radiating down his arm. (T.19). He testified that he still suffers from some reduced range of motion in his neck, and is cautious about looking too quickly over his shoulder. (T.20).

Based upon the foregoing factors, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner sustained serious and permanent injuries that resulted in the 32.5% loss of his body as a whole, representing 10% loss of his body as a whole for the injuries sustained to his nose, and 22.5% loss of his body as a whole with respect to his cervical spine pursuant to 8(d)(2) of the Act.

MEMORANDUM OF DECISION OF ARBITRATOR

FINDINGS OF FACT:

This matter was previously heard by Arbitrator Peter O'Malley on Petitioner's Motion pursuant to §19(b) of the Act. Findings regarding accident, injury causation and necessity of medical treatment were made on March 27, 2013.

Petitioner's Testimony

On December 2, 2011, Petitioner was a 5'11", 215 lb., right-handed cement laborer foreman for Respondent, City of Chicago. Petitioner was a member of Local 76 Laborers Union. Petitioner testified that he was employed by the City of Chicago, Respondent, as a cement laborer since 1990. At the time of hearing, March 22, 2019, Petitioner was a member of Local 1001 Laborers, working for Respondent. Petitioner's work activities in 2011 included using tools to dig holes, using a jackhammer, shoveling stone, sand and debris, and pouring concrete. Petitioner testified that a jackhammer weighed approximately 95 pounds. He also used gas-powered saws and moved various construction materials including dirt, stone and concrete. Petitioner moved in and out of excavations frequently. Petitioner's employment in 2011 afforded him the opportunity to work overtime hours. On December 2, 2011, Petitioner arrived at work and was able to perform all of his duties without difficulty.

On December 2, 2011, Petitioner was working for Respondent in the capacity of laborer foreman with a Gradall earthmoving machine crew. On that date, the Gradall earthmoving machine on which Petitioner worked was inoperative. Therefore, Petitioner operated a Bobcat and to break up sidewalk concrete. He inserted the forks of the Bobcat under the concrete to lift it up. The forks flipped a piece of concrete into the air that proceeded to strike struck him on his left leg. His left knee was painful. He reported the incident to his superintendent, who witnessed the incident.

On cross-examination, Petitioner testified that he is not able to ski now. Pre-accident, he and his family skied every couple of years. He has three children. The oldest is 29 and the youngest is 18. Petitioner testified that he coached hockey this year and last year. Now he is on the ice with Dr. Amin's blessing. Before that, he had to coach from the bench. Petitioner testified that he attempted to kneel a couple of days ago but that his left leg sticks way out. Notwithstanding, he was able to change a tire. Petitioner testified that he is currently being accommodated by the City and that he is happy to be back at work. Petitioner testified that he never injured his left leg before the accident, and that since the accident, he injured his left leg when he slipped on ice.

Petitioner's Medical Treatment

On the date of accident, Petitioner reported to MercyWorks Medical Center. The staff examined him and released him to return to work. He worked with difficulty and experienced pain and swelling in his left knee. On December 28, 2011, his left knee was so inflamed that he was unable to bend it; he could not get out of his car. On December 29, 2011, he underwent an MRI of his left knee. The radiologist concluded that he sustained an intrasubstance tear of the posterior horn of the medial meniscus. The radiologist also concluded that he had knee joint effusion and a contusion of the medial femoral condyle. PX 2, pg. 117. Petitioner continued to treat.

Petitioner saw orthopedic surgeon Brian J. Cole, M.D., on March 22, 2012. PX 2. Dr. Cole recommended a repeat MRI of the left knee to evaluate the contusion and meniscal tear and to assess whether Petitioner was suffering from Complex Regional Pain Syndrome ("CRPS"). Respondent denied authorization for the recommended MRI.

On May 5, 2012, Petitioner was taken by ambulance to Resurrection Medical Center with complaints of ongoing left knee pain that became worse after falling on his knee that day. PX 5 At that time, Petitioner was unable to straighten his left leg and was experiencing shooting pains in the leg. PX 5, pg. 84. On July 9, 2012, Petitioner returned to Dr. Cole at Midwest Orthopaedics at Rush who reiterated his recommendation that Petitioner undergo a repeat MRI of the knee to properly assess its condition. PX 2, pg. 91. On July 30, 2012, Dr. Cole noted that Petitioner was experiencing left knee osteonecrosis and avascular necrosis. He recommended Petitioner undergo pain management for CRPS and referred Petitioner to Sandeep D. Amin, M.D., at Rush Pain Center. PX 2, pgs. 89-90.

On August 24, 2012, Petitioner saw Dr. Amin, M.D., at Rush Pain Center. PX 3, PX11, PX12. Petitioner reported to Dr. Amin that he had been diagnosed with CRPS of the left leg; Dr. Amin concurred with that diagnosis. Dr. Amin formulated his diagnosis that Petitioner was suffering from CRPS because he exhibited the hallmark signs and symptoms of the condition: changes in skin color, pain as well as swelling, and signs of thickened toe nails and skin of the left lower extremity. PX 3, pgs. 167-169. All of these symptoms were consistent with Dr.

Amin's diagnosis of CRPS. Dr. Amin formulated a plan to administer a series of lumbar sympathetic blocks and to begin physical therapy to improve Petitioner's range of motion and strength in the left leg.

On September 20, 2012, Dr. Amin administered a lumbar sympathetic block. PX 4, pg. 76. He performed a second lumbar sympathetic block on September 25, 2012. PX 3, pgs. 182-183. Subsequently, Petitioner experienced some improvement in his symptoms. On October 10, 2012, Dr. Amin noted that Respondent's claims handler was not approving physical therapy. Dr. Amin noticed that Petitioner had decreased swelling but continuing discoloration and pain. Petitioner exhibited severely limited range of motion with both flexion and extension as well as with temperatures differences in the left leg versus the right leg. Petitioner experienced significant weakness in the left leg. Dr. Amin started him on Lyrica and recommended that he proceed with a trial treatment involving a tunneled epidural catheter and pain pump combined with physical therapy. PX 2, pg. 183.

Respondent's workers' compensation claims handler continued to dispute the necessity of Dr. Amin's recommended treatment plan. Dr. Amin adamantly urged immediate approval of his treatment plan to improve the condition of Petitioner's leg and improve his chances of regaining functionality. PX 2, pg. 184. The dispute continued through March 27, 2013 at which time Arbitrator O'Malley issued his decision on Petitioner's motion and hearing pursuant to Section 19(b) of the Workers' Compensation Act. PX1. The hearing took place on January 15, 2013. Two months after Arbitrator O'Malley issued his decision, Respondent approved placement of the tunneled epidural catheter on May 28, 2013. On June 20, 2013, Dr. Amin placed the tunneled epidural catheter. PX 3, pg. 133.

One week later, on June 27, 2013, Dr. Amin noted a 90% improvement in leg symptoms and recommended beginning physical therapy. By July 16, 2013, Dr. Amin noted improvement in his range of motion and strength with good control of pain symptoms. Accordingly, Petitioner only required the use of a crutch for long-distance walking. After holding a six-week trial of the tunneled epidural catheter pump, Dr. Amin removed it and noted that Petitioner had improved. Petitioner performed physical therapy three times a week. Although he was improved, Petitioner was still unable to walk down stairs and experienced occasional shooting pains during physical therapy.

In September 2013, Dr. Amin obtained a repeat MRI of Petitioner's left knee at Parkside Imaging, Ltd. PX 3, pg. 158. Dr. Amin noted that the MRI showed bone marrow edema consistent with a bone bruise as a result of trauma. On September 16, 2013, Dr. Amin recommended Petitioner be re-evaluated by Dr. Cole for consideration of trial implantation of a spinal cord stimulator. On October 31, 2013, Petitioner saw Dr. Cole at Midwest Orthopaedics at Rush. Dr. Cole noted that Petitioner had continuing pain and swelling and that he had been treating for CRPS. Dr. Cole noted that Petitioner would be restricted to desk work only with no kneeling, squatting, pushing or pulling and was only capable of limited stair use. PX 2, pg. 88. Dr. Cole suggested that he continue physical therapy for strength, mobility and flexibility. On January 21, 2014, Dr. Amin noted that Dr. Cole was not planning any surgical intervention to repair Petitioner's knee injury because of the possibility of exacerbating the CRPS. PX 3, pg. 90, PX 12, pg. 29. Dr. Amin continued Petitioner on Lyrica and discussed with him the possibility of implanting a spinal cord stimulator.

On January 7, 2014, Petitioner underwent a Functional Capacity Examination ("FCE") at Accelerated Rehabilitation. PX 6, pgs. 156-163. The FCE indicated that Petitioner had an increase in symptoms after lifting weights. Additionally, Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner has finished multiple courses of physical therapy with minimal to moderate relief. PX 3, pgs. 88-89. He noted that Petitioner's CRPS symptoms diminished his function and his ability to engage in everyday activities. Dr. Amin stated that due to his decreased function and mobility that caused difficulty with everyday activities and work duties, he recommended a trial implantation of a spinal cord stimulator. He found such treatment option to be medically necessary to improve Petitioner's symptoms. PX 3, pg. 89, PX 12, pg. 10.

On May 22, 2014, Dr. Amin implanted a spinal cord stimulator at the L5-S1 level of Petitioner's back. PX 4, pgs. 58-59. Petitioner described the spinal cord stimulator as a small box implanted under his skin in his low back with electrical leads installed in his spinal column. Petitioner demonstrated, during his testimony, a small device approximately the size and shape of a cellular telephone or television remote control with which he adjusts the stimulation level of the spinal cord stimulator in his back. When Petitioner experiences increased symptoms, he can adjust the spinal cord stimulator to lessen the symptoms. Petitioner can adjust stimulation to address symptoms in various areas of his leg.

On February 3, 2015, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Amin who noted that the spinal cord stimulator was working well and required some adjustments to address Petitioner's symptoms. Dr. Amin further noted that Petitioner was capable of sedentary work with no crawling, kneeling or crouching and advised light-duty activity to avoid aggravation of pain or potential worsening of the conditions related to Petitioner's CRPS. PX 3, pg. 84. On August 11, 2015, Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner was still experiencing pain and burning in the area of his knee that was controlled with Lyrica. Petitioner was contemplating a return to work in some capacity for Respondent. PX 3, pgs. 80-81.

On October 13, 2015, Petitioner returned to Dr. Amin at Rush Pain Center. He reported that his pain was at a level of 6/10. Such pain was exacerbated by walking and relieved by rest. Petitioner reported an onset of right hip pain. PX 3, pgs. 78-79. Dr. Amin attempted to re-program the spinal cord stimulator to address right hip pain but was unsuccessful. On October 27, 2015, Dr. Amin prescribed Voltaren gel, which Petitioner used to address some of his pain. Petitioner continued to take Lyrica and was continuing to report right hip and calf soreness. PX 3, pgs. 76-77. On November 7, 2015, Petitioner reported to Dr. Amin that his right hip was "giving out." Dr. Amin assessed Petitioner with sacroiliitis as a result of limping, which led to the inflammation of the nerves in Petitioner's right hip. PX 3, pgs. 74-75. On December 3, 2015, Dr. Amin injected Petitioner's right sacroiliac joint, which produced some improvement by December 15, 2015. PX 3, pg. 71, PX 4, pg. 137.

Dr. Amin discussed with Petitioner a nerve ablation and diagnostic medial branch block, which might address ongoing right sacroiliac joint symptoms and potentially address some of Petitioner's ongoing pain symptoms. Dr. Amin performed a diagnostic medial branch block on January 7, 2016. Petitioner reported an improvement in his symptoms in the right sacroiliac joint. He noticed that it positively affected some of his other symptoms. PX 4, pgs. 96-97. On March 15, 2016, Petitioner was in the process of trying to find an accommodated position with Respondent that was within his physical capabilities. In June of 2016, Petitioner reported to Dr. Amin that he was doing well taking Lyrica and, at that point, was not taking opioids to address his symptoms.

On September 13, 2016, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Amin. He noted that Petitioner was doing well due to the functioning of the spinal cord stimulator and medication. Treatment had reduced his symptoms to minor aching around the left knee that worsened with increased activity and cold weather. Dr. Amin noted that on the current regimen, Petitioner was stable. PX 3, pg. 61.

Petitioner returned to light-duty work as a concrete acting foreman on February 2, 2017. Petitioner's work is discussed below.

On March 7, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Amin and reported increased leg swelling and pain following his return to work. PX 3, pg. 59. Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner was taking one to two Norco tablets per day. On July 25, 2017, Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner experienced a worsening in left shin pain following a fall. Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner should continue his current medication regimen.

Petitioner was seen by Dr. Amin on October 3, 2017 and January 9, 2018 and reported that his pain was well controlled with adjustment to the spinal cord stimulator and that he was taking Lyrica occasionally for pain.

On July 24, 2018, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Amin and reported two occurrences of burning pain in his left leg that was not covered by his spinal cord stimulator. PX 3, pg. 5. This required Dr. Amin to change the programming of his device to make the pain more manageable. Dr. Amin programmed the device to optimize coverage in Petitioner's ankle and foot. Petitioner returned to Dr. Amin on March 12, 2019 and reported that his pain was well controlled with the spinal cord stimulator and that he also took Lyrica for pain. Petitioner reported that he used Norco on a few occasions when he was unable to successfully reprogram his spinal cord stimulator. PX 3, pg. 2. Dr. Amin refilled Petitioner's prescription medication and recommended a follow-up visit in six months. Dr. Amin testified that in the future, Petitioner's spinal cord stimulator would require replacement batteries and reprogramming. PX 12, pgs. 12-13.

On behalf of Respondent, anesthesiologist Howard Steven Konowitz, M.D., testified. He agreed that Petitioner has CRPS as a result of his December 2011 accident. He disagreed with Dr. Amin's recommendation for the tunneled epidural procedure. RX 2, pgs. 37-38, 52.

Petitioner's Post-Injury Work for Respondent

Petitioner returned to work with Respondent on February 13, 2017. Although, technically, Petitioner maintains the position of "cement laborer," he testified that his current job duties require no physical work. Petitioner is employed in the role of data entry record keeper for various cement laborer crews employed by Respondent in the northern half of the City of Chicago. A different cement laborer with similar job duties performs data entry tasks for cement laborer crews in the southern half of the City of Chicago.

Petitioner visits cement-finishing crews to input, into a laptop computer, their time sheets and work progress notes. Petitioner secured this accommodated position by requesting an accommodated job with Respondent, City of Chicago, with the help of Dr. Amin. Dr. Amin assisted Petitioner in filling out the required paperwork.

Petitioner testified that his daily activities include driving his car to a construction trailer where he processes faxed forms from the previous day. He collects faxed paperwork for each new work day and maps a route in his territory. He drives to meet crews in the field, completes paperwork and enters the results in a laptop computer that he carries with him. Petitioner testified that each day he visits six to seven crews from 7:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Petitioner testified that the heaviest object he picks up or carries during the day is typically the laptop computer. This is the only physical activity he performs. He testified that he avoids walking in excavations and does not handle tools or materials.

Petitioner testified that, as far as he knows, the job he has been given was specifically created for him. The person assigned to the southern half of the City of Chicago territory performs similar tasks. Petitioner testified that the person assigned to the southern half of the City also has physical restrictions and is in an accommodated position because of those restrictions.

Petitioner testified that, given his physical restrictions and limitations, he is no longer capable of performing work as a cement laborer or a cement laborer foreman. He specifically testified that if he were not in the accommodated position he currently occupies, he would be unable to work as a cement laborer or foreman either for the Respondent or out of the union hall.

Petitioner testified that as a result of his injured left leg and symptoms in his right hip, he is unable to kneel, squat or twist using his left leg. Petitioner testified that he experiences pain daily, which increases with activity. Petitioner testified that he can address some of his symptoms with the spinal cord stimulator using the remote control but that he is significantly restricted in the physical activity he is now able to do as compared with before his 2011 work-related injury. He is unable to work in an unrestricted manner, which he was able to do before his on-the-job injury. Petitioner's condition and restrictions are consistent with the medical records of Doctors Cole and Amin, the physical therapy records, the FCE and the testimony of Dr. Amin.

Petitioner testified that he applies Voltaren gel frequently and takes Norco two times per month on average to address pain symptoms. Petitioner occasionally takes Tylenol to address symptoms and is taking Lyrica every day to control his symptoms.

Petitioner testified that prior to his work-related injury, he was an active hockey coach and frequently went snow skiing. He described himself as active and healthy. After his injury, he was unable to use ice skates. Recently, Dr. Amin has allowed Petitioner to use ice skates and Petitioner has started to use them on a limited basis. Petitioner testified that he can no longer ski or perform many of the other activities to which he was accustomed in the past. Petitioner testified that the week before the hearing he had been forced to change a tire on his car when it had gone flat. He testified and demonstrated that he experienced significant difficulty in changing the tire because he was unable to kneel and had to keep his left leg straight the entire time.

No lay witness testified on behalf of Respondent.

Dr. Amin testified that the battery in the spinal cord stimulator requires replacement every few years. PX 12, pg. 12. Petitioner continues to take medication. In addition, Dr. Amin is occasionally required to evaluate the performance of the spinal cord stimulator and adjusts it through a laptop computer, which is a more sophisticated procedure than using the remote control. PX 12, pg. 13. Petitioner testified that he returns to see Dr. Amin frequently and will require ongoing medical care on a permanent basis.

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner is credible.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

In support of his decision with regard to issue (J) "Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Pursuant to Section 8(a) and subject to Section 8.2 of the Act, Respondent shall pay the following unpaid medical bills: from Midwest Orthopaedics at Rush in the amount of $310.80, from Athletico in the amount of $573.00, and from ATI Physical Therapy in the amount of $8,720.28. PX8, PX9, PX10. The Arbitrator finds such treatment to be reasonable, necessary and causally related to the accident.

In support of his decision with regard to issue (L) "What is the nature and extent of the injury?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Section 19(e) of the Act, states, in relevant part, the following:

> Decisions rendered by the Commission and dissents, if any shall be published together by the Commission. The conclusions of law set out in such decisions shall be regarded as precedents by arbitrators for the purpose of achieving a more uniform administration of this Act.

In Robert Trevino v. City of Chicago, Dept. of Fleets & Facilities Mgmt., 19 IWCC 0081, claimant, at the time of accident, was a 66-year-old ironworker who sustained an injury to his right knee that necessitated surgery. Claimant was released to return to work with restrictions. He conducted a self-directed job search since he could not return to work as an ironworker. Subsequently, respondent offered him an accommodated position as a supervisor which he accepted. He did not perform heavy lifting, climbing, balancing, or work on a scaffold. Claimant testified that he did not perform his full duties as an ironworker. Without the accommodation, claimant would be unemployable as an ironworker and would not be able to obtain employment outside of respondent as an ironworker. Yet, respondent paid claimant ironworker wages. Claimant testified that he had planned on working until age 70, but due to his knee injury, voluntarily retired at age 68. He worked 6-1/2 months as a supervisor. Claimant offered evidence of a wage loss but waived his right to recover under Section 8(d)1. The Commission affirmed the Arbitrator's permanency award of 37.5%, person as a whole, pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

In Gerald Hackman v. County Tree Service, Inc., and IWBF, 17 IWCC 0847, claimant, at the time of the accident, was a 48-year-old tree trimmer who sustained acute head, brain, and neck injuries for which he underwent a craniotomy and additional surgery. As a result, claimant had a seizure disorder, adjustment disorder, impaired memory, double vision, impaired equilibrium, and was restricted from driving. He suffered a loss of trade and changed jobs. Claimant offered evidence of a significant impairment of earnings. The Commission awarded claimant a loss of use of his person as a whole to the extent of 60%, pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

Pursuant to Section 8.1b of the Act, for accidental injuries that occur on or after September 1, 2011, the following criteria are to be used in the determination of permanent partial disability:

(a) A physician licensed to practice medicine in all of its branches preparing a permanent partial disability impairment report shall report the level of impairment in writing. The report shall include an evaluation of medically defined and professionally appropriate measurements of impairment that include but are not limited to: loss of range of motion; loss of strength; measured atrophy of tissue mass consistent with the injury; and any other measurements that establish the nature and extent of the impairment. The most current edition of the American Medical Association's "Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment" shall be used by the physician in determining the level of impairment.

(b) In determining the level of permanent partial disability, the Commission shall base its determination on the following factors: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a); (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. In determining the level of disability, the relevance and weight of any factors used in addition to the level of impairment as reported by the physician must be explained in a written order.

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that no permanent partial disability impairment report and/or opinion was submitted into evidence. The Arbitrator therefore gives no weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes that the record reveals Petitioner was employed as a cement laborer foreman, to which he was unable to return post-accident. Once Petitioner had the spinal cord stimulator implanted, he was only able to work for Respondent in a significantly accommodated position. Petitioner's current position is less physically demanding to the point that it is nearly sedentary work. The heaviest object Petitioner handles on a day-to-day basis is a laptop computer. Petitioner does not handle any tools, does not operate any equipment, and does not move construction materials such as dirt, sand, gravel, or cement. He does not kneel, squat, twist or navigate through excavations. The Arbitrator gives major weight to this factor and finds that it would increase permanency.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner was 46 years old at the time of the accident and 54 at the time of the permanency hearing. The Arbitrator views Petitioner as a middle-aged worker who could conceivably remain in the workforce another 11 years. The Arbitrator gives moderate weight to this factor and finds that it would increase permanency.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner's future earning capacity, the Arbitrator notes that the record reveals that while it is true Petitioner is employed by Respondent, he is no longer afforded the opportunity to work overtime hours. Petitioner testified that his pre-accident job offered the opportunity for overtime earnings. Yet, no quantified evidence of an impairment of earnings was offered into evidence. The Arbitrator gives moderate weight to this factor and finds that it would slightly increase permanency.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator notes the following:

On March 12, 2019, Dr. Amin noted that Petitioner is a 54-year-old male with CRPS on the left knee, which is well-controlled with a spinal cord stimulator. Per patient, pain is still well-controlled with current pain regimen and SCS. Dr. Amin further noted that Petitioner is currently on Lyrica, 150 BID, and that he still rarely uses Norco (he used it 1-2 x in the past six months during the polar vortex since he could not reprogram his device). PX3, pg. 2.

In his deposition of May 2, 2018, Dr. Amin testified that during the FCE, Petitioner tested at the medium physical demand level but that there was exacerbation of pain. It was a valid FCE that indicated he had reports of left knee pain, instability, and functional difficulty with kneeling and so, that activity was not recommended. It also indicated he had difficulty with crawling and crouching and so these activities were recommended on a minimal, occasional basis. Dr. Amin determined that Petitioner's work capabilities fall below the level at which he was tested and therefore found that he should do sedentary work. PX12, pgs. 19-21.

The Arbitrator gives major weight to this factor and finds that it would increase permanency.

Determination of permanent partial disability ("PPD") is not simply a calculation but an evaluation of the five factors. The Arbitrator has carefully considered all five factors. By applying §8.1b and by considering the relevance and weight of all five factors, the Arbitrator finds that as a result of the December 2, 2011 accident, Petitioner has sustained a permanent loss of use of his person as a whole to the extent of 52.5%, pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

ARBITRATION DECISION

Wilbert Voss,	)

Petitioner	)
v.	)
	)	Case No. 17 WC 15753
Chicago Transit Authority,	)
Respondent.	)

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner, Wilbert Voss, was employed as a mechanic at the Chicago Transit Authority on February 27, 2017. Petitioner worked for the CTA for 23 years. On the date of accident, Petitioner was working on an air bag under the bus, under the right front wheel well. The air bag is a 12" x 10" rubber cylinder with a metal top and bottom, filled with 125 PSI of compressed air. Petitioner was working on the bus brake and the air bag unexpectedly exploded about a foot in front of his face. The force of the airbag explosion blew Petitioner's head and neck backwards and blew his body out of the wheel well and into his tool cart. Petitioner felt immediate pain in his neck, head, and ringing in his ears, but could not hear anything else.

Petitioner was taken to Concentra as a part of the formal procedure. Petitioner reported neck pain, stiffness, limited range of motion, mild visual disturbance, slight ringing in ears, and a mild headache. He was diagnosed with a neck strain/sprain, and post-concussive headache. He was referred for physical therapy. Petitioner was put on restricted sitting only duty. (PX 2). This could not be accommodated, and Petitioner was taken off work. The next day, Petitioner went to the Emergency Room at Franciscan Health Olympia Fields. He reported headaches, blurry vision, hyperextension of his neck, neck pain, ringing in his right ear, nausea, and dizziness. Petitioner underwent a CT scan of his head and neck, which were normal. He was diagnosed with a concussion, cervical paraspinal muscle spasm and tinnitus. (PX 1). Petitioner continued going to physical therapy for his neck at Concentra. (PX 2).

On March 7, 2017, Petitioner attended a neurology appointment with Dr. Ro Young II, who is associated with Specialty Physicians of Illinois, LLC. Petitioner reported tinnitus, blurred vision, headaches, neck pain radiating into his shoulders, dizziness, forgetfulness, difficulty concentrating and photophobia. He was diagnosed with a concussion, post-concussive syndrome, and a cervical strain. He was referred for an MRI of his brain and neck. (PX 3). On March 15, 2017, Petitioner underwent an MRI of the brain (which was compared to the initial head CT scan). It revealed no evidence of acute intracranial process, a few scattered foci of high T2/FLAIR signal in the white matter, which may be related to mild chronic microvascular ischemic changes, migraines, and vasculitis. On the same date, Petitioner underwent an MRI of the cervical spine (also compared to the prior CT scan of the head and neck), which revealed mild to moderate degenerative changes of the cervical spine, most significant at C3-C4, mild intervertebral disc space narrowing at C3-C4, small posterior disc osteophyte complex causing mild central canal stenosis, and moderate neuroforaminal narrowing. (PX 1, PX 3).

Petitioner's last visit to Concentra was on March 24, 2017. The records indicate that he met his physical therapy goals for cervical impairment, but that his post-concussive symptoms of blurry vision and dizziness with functional activities prevented him from returning to work. (PX 2). On March 27, 2017, Petitioner returned to his neurologist, Dr. Young. He reported dizziness, blurred vision, and headaches. Dr. Young found that the MRI of the brain was negative, and he felt the cervical spine MRI only revealed degenerative changes. Dr. Young diagnosed Petitioner with post-concussive syndrome and a cervical strain, Petitioner was instructed to return in one month. (PX 3). Petitioner's last visit to his neurologist, Dr. Young, was on April 21, 2017. Dr. Young noted that Petitioner's post-concussive syndrome and cervical strain were much better now, and that his symptoms were almost fully resolved. Petitioner was told he could return to work in one week (on May 1, 2017). Petitioner was instructed to return in three months. (PX 3). Petitioner returned to work with no restrictions on May 3, 2017.

Petitioner testified that he never returned to any of his treating doctors (despite the instructions to return three months after his last neurology appointment). He testified that he has no ongoing prescription medication related to his work injury, but that he takes Ibuprofen a couple times a month. Petitioner testified that he is continuing to work full duty with no restrictions or accommodations. He testified that if he is gets shoulder discomfort when he works overhead for 10 to 15 minutes, then he will switch to a new task. He also testified that he has regular soreness in his right shoulder and neck area since the accident. He has trouble sleeping: he tosses and turns at night. He no longer plays basketball because his shoulder bothers him too much. Petitioner also testified that he has periodic dizziness and headaches. Petitioner testified that he has blurred vision that comes and goes daily. He also testified that he has a low ringing in his ears all the time, but it is worse with loud noises.

II. CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

a. Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?

The Respondent agrees to pay the outstanding bill of $119.37 from Occupational Health Centers. (PX 4, ArbX 1). The Arbitrator awards the bill from Occupational Health Centers to be paid by Respondent, pursuant to Section 8(a) and subject to Section 8.2 of the Act.

b. What amount of compensation is due for temporary total disability?

The Parties agree that the Petitioner was entitled to temporary total disability payments from February 28, 2017 to May 2, 2017 (9 weeks). The Parties agree that the Respondent paid Petitioner temporary total disability benefits from February 28, 2017 to May 22, 2017, which represents a 20-day overpayment in the amount of $3,652.11. (ArbX 1).

c. What is the nature and extent of Petitioner's injury?

Pursuant to Section 8.1b of the Act, for accidental injuries that occur on or after September 1, 2011, the following criteria are to be used in the determination of permanent partial disability:

(a) A physician licensed to practice medicine in all of its branches preparing a permanent partial disability impairment report shall report the level of impairment in writing. The report shall include an evaluation of medically defined and professionally appropriate measurements of impairment that include but are not limited to: loss of range of motion; loss of strength; measured atrophy of tissue mass consistent with the injury; and any other measurements that establish the nature and extent of the impairment. The most current edition of the American Medical Association's "Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment" shall be used by the physician in determining the level of impairment.

(b) In determining the level of permanent partial disability, the Commission shall base its determination on the following factors: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a); (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. In determining the level of disability, the relevance and weight of any factors used in addition to the level of impairment as reported by the physician must be explained in a written order.

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that no permanent partial disability impairment report or opinion was submitted into evidence. The Arbitrator therefore gives no weight to this factor and finds it would have no effect on permanency.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes that the record reveals Petitioner was a journeyman mechanic for Respondent. He works in the brake department and repairs all types of CTA vehicles, including buses. Following his recovery from the February 27, 2017 accident, he returned to his full duties in this position. Therefore, the Arbitrator gives moderate weight to this factor, and finds that it would increase permanency.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner was 45 years old at the time of the accident. As he is neither an older nor a younger worker, the Arbitrator gives minor weight to this factor and finds it would have a neutral effect on permanency.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner's future earning capacity, the Arbitrator notes that no evidence was introduced to indicate that Petitioner's future earning capacity will be affected. Therefore, the Arbitrator gives minor weight to this factor and finds it would have a neutral effect on permanency.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator notes the following: Petitioner last saw Dr. Young, his treating neurologist, on April 21, 2017. At that time, Dr. Young noted that he had post-concussive syndrome and a cervical strain, that his symptoms are almost resolved, and that he is able to work in a week. In his review of systems, Dr. Young noted, neurologically, Petitioner was positive for dizziness, positive for headache, negative for weakness, negative for numbness, tingling and pain. With regard to his eyes, Petitioner was positive for blurred vision and negative for double vision. For his ears, Petitioner was negative for earache, negative for hearing problem, and negative for ringing in the ears. With regard to his muscles and joints, Petitioner was negative for pain and negative for swelling. Dr. Young instructed Petitioner to return in three months, but Petitioner did not. There is no evidence that after April 21, 2017, Petitioner sought medical care from any doctor for the related injuries. There is no evidence that Petitioner requested work accommodations from Respondent. The Arbitrator gives major weight to this factor and finds it would increase permanency.

Determination of permanent partial disability ("PPD") is not simply a calculation but is an evaluation of the 5 factors. The Arbitrator has carefully considered all 5 factors. By applying §8.1b and by considering the relevance and weight of all 5 factors, the Arbitrator finds that as a result of the February 27, 2017 accident, Petitioner has sustained a permanent loss of use of his person as a whole to the extent of 7.5%, pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petitions for Review under §19(b) having been filed by the Petitioner and Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issue(s) of causal connection, reasonable and necessary medical services, prospective medical care, and temporary total disability benefits, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Commission, 78 Ill. 2d 327 (1980).

The Arbitrator found Petitioner was not entitled to the spinal fusion surgery at L3-L4 and L4-L5 recommended by Dr. Anis Mekhail, based on his deposition testimony that the success rate is not very high. However, Dr. Mekhail testified that the success rate was approximately 70 percent. He also explained that success can be measured in terms of pain relief, and is also measured against the risk involved. Dr. Mekhail gave the example that a patient may opt for surgery with a 50 percent success rate when there is no downside risk. He stated that in lumbar spine surgery, for example, there is really no risk of paralysis from the waist down because there is no spinal cord involvement. The risks in the context of Petitioner's presentation would be the bone not healing, persistence of pain, or infection. Dr. Mekhail later added that, in general, 100 percent back pain relief would be uncommon. He testified that if a patient's pain is eight out of ten and surgery reduced that level of pain to a three out of ten, many people would be happy with that result.

Considering Dr. Mekhail's testimony as a whole, the Commission concludes Petitioner is entitled to the spinal fusion surgery recommended by Dr. Anis Mekhail, noting the surgeon's strong recommendation that Petitioner cease smoking in order to increase the opportunity for bones to heal.

Christopher O'Connor v. Trimark Marlinn, No. 15WC 24411

Preface

19IWCC0705

The parties proceeded to hearing October 19, 2018. The parties represented the hearing would be pursuant to Section 19(b) and 8(a) of the Act, even though no Petition had been filed. The parties placed the following issues in dispute: whether Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally connected to the injury; were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary, and has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services; is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care; is Petitioner entitled to temporary total disability. Arbitrator's Exhibit 1; Christopher O'Connor v. Trimark Holdings, LLC, No. 15 WC 24411 Transcript of 19(b) and 8(a) Proceedings on Arbitration at 4-7. This Arbitrator is referring to Respondent by the name placed on the Application for Adjustment of Claim. Arbitrator's Exhibit 2.

Christopher O'Connor (Petitioner), a 34 year old male, testified that on September 17, 2014, he was working at Trimark Marlinn (Respondent) in shipping and receiving, using a fork lift, loading trucks, putting stock away, and breaking down pallets. At the time, he had worked there for four to five years. He was putting stock away with a fork lift when product fell from a layer above. He got onto a pallet on the fork lift to retrieve the product. He caught his heel in some shrink wrap at the bottom of the pallet and fell back off the pallet on his lower and middle back onto a concrete floor. He felt pain when he landed. O'Connor at 10-15.

Petitioner testified he first sought medical treatment at Concentra Health Center. The records of Concentra Occupational Health Centers of Illinois show Petitioner was seen September 17, 2014, by Dr. Andrew Chet. Petitioner complained of back pain and was assessed with thoracic strain and lumbar strain. An x-ray was taken showing no acute fracture. Petitioner was told to take ibuprofen and given muscle rub cream. He was advised to use an ice and heat pack and to follow up as needed. He returned September 19, 2014, reporting improved symptoms. Petitioner told Dr. Chet he was back at work on regular duty and wanted to be released from care. He was. O'Connor at 16; Petitioner's Exhibit 2 (unpaginated). It is not clear when or why, but Petitioner testified he missed a week of work. Respondent offered no cross examination on this testimony. O'Connor at 17.

Petitioner further testified he saw Dr. Noorun Khan. The records of Dr. Khan show Petitioner saw Khan 16 days after the accident. He told Dr. Khan he fell backwards last week at work and complained of low back pain. Khan's assessment was "s/p fall", back pain and hematuria. He recommended x-rays and medication. Khan put Petitioner on light duty, with no bending, stooping, or weight lifting. O'Connor at 17; Respondent's Exhibit 1 at 6-7.

Petitioner testified he was sent to Dr. Anis Mekhail by Dr. Khan. Although the records of Dr. Khan indicated he recommended Petitioner to Dr. Mekhail in May 2015, Mekhail testified by means of an evidence deposition, Petitioner was referred to him by Dr. Khan and he first saw Petitioner October 27, 2014. O'Connor at 17; Respondent's Exhibit 1 at 8; Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 8.

Dr. Mekhail, a board certified, practicing orthopedic surgeon, testified when he first saw Petitioner on October 27, 2014, Petitioner complained of low back pain going down his leg. Petitioner was on light duty but could not tolerate the pain. Over the counter medication was not helping. Petitioner's physical examination was abnormal, but he was neurologically intact. Mekhail recommended an MRI, gave Petitioner prescription medication and kept him off work. Mekhail testified the MRI was done and revealed Petitioner had degenerative changes in the spine at multiple levels and a herniated disk at L1-2. In Mekhail's opinion, Petitioner had a back strain and the accident was the causative factor. In December 2014, Mekhail put Petitioner on light duty with a 25 pound weight restriction, refilled medication and continued physical therapy. Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 7, 8, 9, 12; Petitioner's Exhibit 9 (unpaginated).

Dr. Mekhail saw Petitioner between January and July 2015. Mekhail released Petitioner to full duty February 23, 2015, but Petitioner was still on medication. Petitioner was placed at MMI March 23, 2015. However, on May 18, 2015, after Petitioner saw Mekhail with a new episode of low back pain, he was kept off work and given pain medication. By June 5, 2015, Petitioner was released to full duty. In July 2015, Petitioner complained of severe low back pain. Mekhail kept him off work and on medication. Mekhail recommended a lumbar discogram to determine if disc disease was causing the back pain. Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 10-12, Petitioner's Exhibit 9 (unpaginated).

Petitioner submitted to an independent medical examination on August 7, 2015, by Dr. Frank Phillips, a board certified orthopedic surgeon. Phillips testified by means of an evidence deposition. Phillips reviewed the medical records of Petitioner and of diagnostic testing. He conducted a physical examination of Petitioner. Phillips noted degenerative changes and disc bulging with annular fissures in Petitioner's back. Phillips testified Petitioner's September 2014 injury aggravated his symptoms of underlying degenerative condition. Phillips did not agree with the recommendation of a discography and said Petitioner is not a candidate for fusion surgery. Phillips recommended physical therapy and medication. Petitioner's Exhibit 2 at 9-11, 30, 14-15; Petitioner's Exhibit 4.

Petitioner underwent a Functional Capacity Evaluation (FCE) on August 24, 2015. The evaluation referenced an injury on September 17, 2014. It noted Petitioner was a fork lift driver and diagnosed with lumbar strain. The evaluation found Petitioner functions at the medium physical demand level and the demand of his job is heavy physical demand level. The evaluation recommended a graduated work conditioning program and said Petitioner does not demonstrate the physical capabilities and tolerances to perform all the essential functions of his job.

Dr. Mekhail testified the evaluation showed Petitioner could not return to work. Dr. Phillips had no quarrel putting Petitioner at the medium level. Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 18; Respondent's Exhibit 3 at 42.

Dr. Phillips opined in three subsequent addendums to his IME. In April 2016 he wrote Petitioner was not a surgical candidate and a discography was not indicated. He would allow Petitioner to work within the FCE and found him at MMI. Inexplicably, Phillips testified at the time he believed there was no reason Petitioner could not work unrestricted duty, even though he was not sure what work Petitioner did. In May 2016, Phillips wrote there was no objective spinal contraindication to Petitioner resuming unrestricted duty as it related to the injury in question. In November 2016, Phillips wrote Petitioner required no additional treatment to his lumbar spine as it related to his injury. Phillips also prepared an impairment rating finding a two percent assignment. Respondent's Exhibit 4; Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 22, 28.

The records of Dr. Mekhail indicate Petitioner continued to treat with him through April 2017. Petitioner testified he still treats with Mekhail. Mekhail's records reveal consistent complaints of low back pain. Mekhail testified Petitioner has exhausted conservative treatment and can work with restrictions. He believes Petitioner has a degenerative disc disease that was aggravated by his work injury, with recurrent flare ups. He thinks surgery in the form of L3-L5 fusion is an option. The alternative to surgery is home exercise, pain control and work with restrictions. Petitioner's Exhibit 9; O'Connor at 18; Petitioner's Exhibit 10, 18, 19.

Petitioner's medical records also indicate complaints of low back pain in visits to Dr. Kahn in September 2016 and November 2017; as well as emergency room visits to Palos Community Hospital in May 2015, January 2016, and May 2017. Petitioner's Exhibit 1 at 10, 12; Petitioner's Exhibit 6 (unpaginated).

Petitioner testified he has not worked since July 20, 2015. He was on light duty with Respondent, failed a drug test on was terminated. He has applied for shipping and receiving jobs over the internet. Petitioner testified that at home he does housework, laundry, dishes and yardwork. He takes care of his two children, seven and nine, and does crafts. He takes Advil for his back once or twice a day. O'Connor at 24, 25, 26, 37, 23, 35, 22.

Conclusions of Law

Disputed issue F is, is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury. A claimant must establish, among other things, that the condition of ill-being is causally connected to a work related injury. The injury need not be the sole causative factor in the resulting condition. Elgin Board of Education School District U-46 v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 409 Ill. App. 3d 943, 948-49 (2011).

Petitioner's current condition is degenerative disc disease aggravated by the fall on September 7, 2014, with recurrent flare ups as stated by Dr. Mekhail. Petitioner's Exhibit 10 at 18, 20. That opinion closely parallels that of Dr. Phillips, who described the condition as a lumbar sprain/strain with underlying degeneration with symptoms aggravated and was a consequence of the injury on September 17, 2014. Respondent's Exhibit 3 at 17, 23, 28.

Prior good health followed by a change immediately following an accident allows an inference that a subsequent condition of ill-being is a result of the accident. Navistar International Transportation Co. v. Industrial Commission, 315 Ill. App. 3d 1197, 1205 (2000). Petitioner testified that prior to September 17, 2014, he had no treatment to his lower back. His pain began at the time of the fall. O'Connor 12, 16.

Relying on the testimony of Petitioner, and the testimony of Dr. Mekhail and Dr. Phillips who are essentially in agreement on the issue, as noted by Dr. Mekhail, I find as a conclusion of law, Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to the accident. Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 17, 21.

Disputed issue J were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary; and has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services. An employer is liable for all necessary medical services and all necessary medical and hospital services thereafter incurred that are reasonably required to cure or relieve one from the effects of the accidental injury. 820 ILCS 305/8(a).

Causation having been found, a review of the medical records of Concentra, Dr. Khan, and Dr. Mekhail, as well as certain dates of treatment from Palos Community Hospital, appear to reflect diagnosis of Petitioner's condition and attempts to relieve his symptoms or cure his condition. There is no evidence the medical services were unusual or not customary treatment based on Petitioner's complaints and history as articulated to medical providers. As Dr. Mekhail noted, Petitioner's treatment was conservative. With the exception of a discogram, no evidence challenged the reasonableness or necessity of the services done by the aforementioned medical providers. A close reading of the opinions of Dr. Mekhail and Dr. Phillips suggest a distinction without a difference. In any event, it was done and proved of value to Dr. Mekhail. Petitioner's Exhibit 12 at 19-21, 28; Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 14, 33.

I find as a conclusion of law, the medical services provided to Petitioner from September 17, 2014, to the date of hearing by Concentra; Parkview Orthopedics; Athletico; and Radiology and Nuclear Consultants to be reasonable and necessary. Although no testimony or context was offered on the treatment rendered by Palos Community Hospital, based on a review of the records, I find the medical services provided to Petitioner on January 13, 2016, May 9, 2015, and May 23, 2017, to be reasonable and necessary. I further find the Respondent has not paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services.

Disputed issue K is, is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care.

Petitioner testified he has been recommended for fusion surgery at L3-4 and L4-L5 and wants the surgery. O'Connor at 31. Dr. Mekhail testified surgery at L3 to 5 is an option, as Petitioner has exhausted conservative treatment. He testified the success rate is not high, usually a patient's pain does not go away. Mekhail said smoking increases the risk of the bone not healing and he urged Petitioner to stop smoking. Mekhail testified an alternative to surgery is home exercise, pain control, and work with restrictions. Dr. Khan noted he discussed smoking cessation with Petitioner in detail and Petitioner indicated he was not ready to quit. O'Connor at 31; Petitioner's Exhibit 10 at 19, 30, 33, 18; Respondent's Exhibit 1 at 12.

Dr. Phillips testified Petitioner is not a candidate for fusion surgery, as fusion surgery is performed on persons with instability, significant spinal deformities, and advanced disc degeneration. He said with degeneration, fusion patients do poorly. He testified fusion surgery for back pain has mixed results and with Petitioner's clinical evaluation, the chances of success would be abysmal. Respondent's Exhibit 3 at 18,11; Respondent's Exhibit 2 at 15, 20.

Petitioner can function at a medium demand level. He testified he is actively looking for work and had been working prior to July 20, 2015. He testified to doing housework, yardwork and child care in addition to doing crafts. He takes over the counter medication.

I find as a conclusion of law, Petitioner is not entitled to fusion surgery. I find it not reasonable or necessary and would provide no real benefit to Petitioner. I rely on the testimony of Dr. Phillips and Dr. Mekhail and note the reluctance of Petitioner to stop smoking, which impacts on outcome of any surgery. I also note the present condition of Petitioner and his physical abilities.

I do note Petitioner's testimony that he still sees Dr. Mikhail, and given Mikhail's testimony on alternative treatment, further treatment by Mikhail is reasonable and necessary.

Disputed issue L is, what temporary benefits are in dispute. Here it is temporary total disability. Arbitrator's Exhibit 1. To be entitled to a temporary total disability award under the Act, an injured worker must prove not only he did not work but that he was unable to work. Ingalls Memorial Hospital v. Industrial Commission, 241 Ill. App3d 710 (1993). Such award exists from the time the injury incapacitates him from work until such time as he is recovered or restored as the permanent character of the injury will permit. Mount Olive Coal Company v. Industrial Commission,295 Ill. 429 (1920). Even when an employee is terminated, he is entitled to temporary total disability until he reaches MMI. See Interstate Scaffolding, Inc. v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 236 Ill. 2d 132 (2010).

Here the disputed entitlement beginning date is July 20, 2015. At that time Petitioner was being seen by Dr. Mekhail, who had him off work, having noted Petitioner was in significant distress, could barely move his back, and the pain was affecting the quality of life. Petitioner's Exhibit 9.

When Dr. Phillips examined Petitioner on August 7, 2015, he only anticipated Petitioner would be at MMI sometime in the future. He did not place Petitioner at MMI. Dr. Phillips placed Petitioner at MMI, April 1, 2016, yet allowed a return to work within the limitations of the FCE. Respondent's Exhibit 4. Dr. Mekhail agreed Petitioner could work with restrictions. Petitioner's Exhibit 9; Petitioner's Exhibit 10 at 25.

Having reviewed the testimony of Dr. Phillips and Dr. Mekhail, I find the opinions of Dr. Mekhail more persuasive. I do so based on Mekhail's extensive treatment of Petitioner. Phillips testified Petitioner was able to return to regular duty but did not know what kind of work Petitioner did. Phillips seemed to focus entirely on Petitioner not being a surgical candidate and his dismissal of the use of a discogram.

I find as a conclusion of law Petitioner is not recovered or restored as the permanent character of his injury will permit and is still in need of medical care, though not fusion surgery, and is entitled to temporary total disability benefits from July 20, 2015, through October19, 2018, at the rate of $330.48 per week. Although capable of performing medium demand work, the unrebutted evidence shows none is readily available to Petitioner.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim which alleged he sustained a repetitive trauma injury arising out of and in the course of his employment for Respondent. The Application alleged a date of accident (manifestation) of February 27, 2017, and that Petitioner sustained repetitive trauma to his right and left hands/wrists and right and left arms/elbows (Arbitrator's Exhibit 2). This case was tried in a 19(b) proceeding and Petitioner sought an order for payment of medical bills as well as prospective medical treatment. Respondent disputed liability on the basis of accident and causal relationship in regard to Petitioner's bilateral cubital tunnel syndrome. Respondent admitted liability in regard to Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

Petitioner became employed by Respondent in August, 2009, and worked as a correctional officer. Petitioner testified in detail regarding his job duties which included rapping bars, locking/unlocking doors with Folger Adams keys, cuffing/uncuffing inmates, performing shakedowns and restraining combative inmates.

Petitioner described the bar rapping as his using a 14 inch long steel rod and raking it across the bars in the gallery to make certain that the inmates had not tried to cut through them. Petitioner performed this task at the beginning of each shift. In regard to his use of the Folger Adams keys, Petitioner stated they would many times get stuck and have to be forcibly turned to unlock the doors.

Petitioner also testified that when the facility went on lockdown, the movement of the inmates was even more restricted than normal. When the facility was on lockdown, Petitioner stated he would use a gallery crank which was old and extremely difficult to operate.

Petitioner reviewed a Job Analysis of his position prepared by Corvel at the request of Respondent; a Post Description of the Duties of Cell House Officers prepared by Respondent; and a Demands of the Job form prepared by Respondent. Petitioner acknowledged that the information contained in the preceding documents was accurate. Further, Petitioner also testified he watched a DVD of other correctional officers performing various job duties which included bar rapping and using Folger Adams keys. Petitioner likewise agreed that this was an accurate depiction of his job duties as well (Petitioner's Exhibits 10, 11, 12 and 15).

All of the various preceding job duties of Petitioner required the active and repetitive use of both upper extremities. Petitioner testified that, over time, he began to experience symptoms of numbness and aching in both of his hands. Petitioner stated he frequently had the symptoms in both of his hands after he finished rapping the bars.

At trial, Petitioner testified he was 6 feet tall and weighed 300 pounds, but did not have diabetes, gout or hypothyroidism. Petitioner did state he had hypertension, but it was controlled with medication.

Petitioner initially sought medical treatment on January 23, 2017, from Dr. Joseph Molnar, his family physician. At that time, Petitioner complained of numbness/tingling in both arms. Dr. Molnar opined Petitioner had parasthesias in both hands, prescribed medication and ordered EMG/nerve conduction studies (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

On February 21, 2017, Petitioner was seen by Dr. James Goldring, who performed EMG/nerve conduction studies. The diagnostic tests were positive for bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome, more on the right than left. However, the tests did not reveal any abnormalities in regard to both ulnar nerves (Petitioner's Exhibit 4).

Petitioner was subsequently treated by Dr. Nathan Mall, an orthopedic surgeon, who initially saw Petitioner on March 10, 2017. Dr. Mall noted Petitioner had bilateral numbness/tingling in both the median and ulnar distribution which Petitioner specifically associated with bar rapping and key turning while at work. Dr. Mall's findings on examination were consistent with bilateral carpal tunnel and cubital tunnel syndrome. Dr. Mall noted that the EMG/nerve conduction studies revealed Petitioner had bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome, but were negative for cubital tunnel syndrome. He ordered another set of EMG/nerve conduction studies to be performed and referred Petitioner to Dr. Daniel Phillips (Petitioner's Exhibit 5).

When Dr. Mall saw Petitioner on that initial visit, he noted Petitioner had high blood pressure and was obese and that these were both risk factors for the development of carpal tunnel and cubital tunnel syndrome. However, Dr. Mall stated that Petitioner's bar rapping and key turning were factors in the development of both conditions. He also stated that Petitioner had cubital tunnel syndrome, and even if the new EMG/nerve conduction studies did not reveal ulnar neuropathy, Petitioner's hand symptoms were indicative of both nerve compression syndromes (Petitioner's Exhibit 5).

Dr. Mall saw Petitioner on April 6, 2017, and reviewed the EMG/nerve conduction studies that had been performed by Dr. Phillips on that same day. While he noted the diagnostic studies were negative for right ulnar nerve compression, he again opined Petitioner clearly had cubital tunnel syndrome. He recommended Petitioner undergo both a carpal tunnel release and cubital tunnel decompression/transposition surgery (Petitioner's Exhibit 5).

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Anthony Sudekum, a hand surgeon, on August 22, 2017. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Sudekum reviewed medical records and information regarding Petitioner's job duties provided to him by Respondent. Dr. Sudekum opined Petitioner had mild to moderate bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome, but that Petitioner did not have ulnar neuropathy on either side. He based this latter opinion upon the lack of any findings on his clinical examination (Respondent's Exhibit 3).

In regard to causality, Dr. Sudekum noted Petitioner had a number of other risk factors, specifically, Petitioner's age, morbid obesity, hypertension, fluid retention, smoking, arthritis and a history of diabetes. However, Dr. Sudekum also opined Petitioner's employment activities were a "...minor contributing factor" to the development of Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome. Although Dr. Sudekum did not diagnose Petitioner with cubital tunnel syndrome, he opined Petitioner's employment activities did not contribute to ulnar neuropathy on either side (Respondent's Exhibit 3).

Dr. Mall subsequently performed surgery on February 15, 2018, and the procedure consisted of a left carpal tunnel release and left elbow ulnar nerve decompression and transposition. On March 1, 2018, Dr. Mall performed surgery which consisted of a right carpal tunnel release and right elbow ulnar nerve decompression and transposition (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

Dr. Mall was deposed on October 23, 2017, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Mall's testimony was consistent with his medical records and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Dr. Mall testified that he diagnosed Petitioner with bilateral carpal tunnel and cubital tunnel syndrome for which he recommended surgery consisting of a carpal tunnel release and ulnar nerve transposition. In regard to the bilateral cubital tunnel syndrome, Dr. Mall made that diagnosis based upon his findings on examination. While he acknowledged that the diagnostic tests showed some compression of the ulnar nerve on the left, but not on the right, he testified that compression of elbow nerves is not always seen on nerve conduction studies. Dr. Mall specifically stated that on examination when he pushed on the ulnar nerve, Petitioner had immediate symptoms in the ulnar distribution (Petitioner's Exhibit 9; pp 9-11).

In regard to causality, Dr. Mall testified that he reviewed data regarding Petitioner's job duties and opined that Petitioner's upper extremity conditions were related to Petitioner's work activities. Dr. Mall did acknowledge Petitioner had other risk factors for the development of the conditions, specifically, obesity and hypertension (Petitioner's Exhibit 9; pp 10-16).

On cross-examination, Dr. Mall agreed that diabetes can also be a contributing factor to the development of carpal tunnel and cubital tunnel syndrome. However, he did not believe that smoking was such a contributing factor (Petitioner's Exhibit 9; pp 18-19).

Dr. Sudekum was deposed on January 25, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Sudekum's testimony was consistent with his medical report and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein, specifically, that Petitioner had mild/moderate carpal tunnel syndrome, but Petitioner did not have cubital tunnel syndrome on either side. Dr. Sudekum testified Petitioner had no findings on examination indicative of cubital tunnel syndrome. In regard to causality, Dr. Sudekum testified that Petitioner's work activities were a minor contributing factor to the development of Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome (Respondent's Exhibit 4; pp 22, 28-30).

At trial, Petitioner testified he is still being seen by Dr. Mall and had an appointment to be evaluated by him the following day. Petitioner stated he was continuing to work light duty, was doing home exercises but was not at MMI.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issues (C) and (F) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained a repetitive trauma injury arising out of and in the course of his employment for Respondent that manifested itself on February 27, 2017, and that his current condition of ill-being, specifically, his bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and bilateral cubital tunnel syndrome is causally related to same.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

There was no dispute that Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome was causally related to Petitioner's work activities because, at trial, Respondent stipulated that it was related. Further, Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Mall, opined it was related and Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Sudekum, opined that Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome was, at least, caused in part by Petitioner's work activities.

Dr. Mall's findings on examination were positive for bilateral cubital tunnel syndrome. Even though the EMG/nerve conduction studies were positive for left ulnar neuropathy, but negative for right ulnar neuropathy, Dr. Mall testified that individuals can have cubital tunnel syndrome even when the diagnostic tests are negative. Further, on examination, when Dr. Mall pressed the ulnar nerve, it immediately caused symptoms in the ulnar distribution.

While Dr. Sudekum stated there were no positive findings on examination indicative of cubital tunnel syndrome, Dr. Mall consistently found cubital tunnel syndrome based upon his findings on examination and he subsequently performed corrective surgery.

Based upon the preceding, the Arbitrator finds the opinion of Dr. Mall to be more persuasive than that of Dr. Sudekum.

In regard to disputed issue (J) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes that all of the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary and that Respondent is liable for payment of the medical bills incurred therewith.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule. Respondent shall be given a credit of amounts paid for medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to prospective reasonable and necessary medical treatment, recommended by Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Nathan Mall.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner is still being seen and treated by Dr. Mall and is not yet at MMI.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident,causal connection, medical expenses, temporary total disability,and nature and extent, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

Petitioner was employed as a ferry pilot by the Illinois Department of Transportation. On May 17, 2016 Petitioner was descending the stairs from the pilothouse leading to the deck of the ferry when he experienced a "pop" in his left knee. Petitioner went to the emergency department at Alton Memorial Hospital immediately following the accident. He underwent an MRI in June 2016 and subsequently had an arthroscopic debridement of the left medial meniscus, femoral chondroplasty, and chondroplasty of the of the medial facet of the patella, performed by Dr. Stirton on September 7, 2016. Petitioner testified at hearing that prior to the May 17, 2016 accident he did not have any symptoms in the left knee other than occasional stiffness.

By history Petitioner had sustained a previous work- related injury to his right knee in 2014 which required arthroscopic surgery. Petitioner testified that he had recovered from the right knee injury but acknowledged that subsequent to the surgery he had a cortisone injection in the right knee. The medical records pertaining to the right knee injury were not tendered into evidence.

Dr. Stilton ordered a course of physical therapy following the left knee arthroscopy. During physical therapy Petitioner complained of bilateral knee pain. Petitioner saw Dr. Stirton and expressed complaints of bilateral knee pain. Dr. Stirton administered steroid injections in both knees on November 30, 2016. At hearing, Petitioner testified that the pain in his right knee began shortly after the May 17, 2016 injury to his left knee because he was favoring his left knee.

Petitioner continued to have ongoing pain in his left knee and Dr. Stirton performed a second arthroscopic procedure on March 29, 2017 that involved shaving the posterior horn of the medial meniscus, chondroplasty of the patellofemoral joint, and removal of debris. Petitioner's complaints of bilateral knee pain continued and Dr. Stirton performed a total knee replacement of the right knee on August 9, 2017. Following this surgery Dr. Stirton ordered additional physical therapy and continued Petitioner's off work status which had been in effect since the May 17, 2016 accident.

The Arbitrator found that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being in his both his left and right knees were causally connected to the accident of May 17, 2016. He awarded medical expenses related to both knees, and the loss of use of 40% of the person as whole based upon that conclusion. The Commission views the evidence related to Petitioner's condition of ill-being in his right knee differently.

Dr. Stirton and Respondent's Section 12 examiner Dr. Lehman offered conflicting opinions on the issue of causal connection. The Commission notes that Petitioner had pre-existing pathology in the right knee that was significant enough to require surgical intervention followed by the need for a cortisone injection following surgery to treat residual pain. Dr. Lehman submitted a Section 12 report and testified that the current condition of ill-being in neither the left or right knees were related to the May 17, 2016 work injury but rather were related to pre-existing degenerative arthritis. The Commission disagrees with the finding of the Arbitrator as it relates to causal connection in the right knee and finds that, in light of Petitioner's medical history related to the right knee, the testimony of Dr. Lehman is more persuasive than Dr. Stirton's opinion. The Commission therefore vacates the finding of causal connection as it relates to Petitioner's right knee.

The Commission views the evidence differently with respect to Section 8.1(b) factor (v).

(v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records

In analyzing the evidence of disability, the Arbitrator determined that Petitioner underwent a total knee replacement of the right knee that was causally connected to the work injury to his left knee sustained on May 16, 2016. The Arbitrator made an award of 40% of the person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act premised on Petitioner's disability arising from injuries to both lower extremities. Petitioner testified at hearing that he sustained a prior work-related injury to his right knee in 2014 that required surgery followed by a cortisone injection. Petitioner had significant pre-existing degenerative arthritis in the right knee with varus osteoarthritis and near bone on bone evident in x-rays. The Commission finds Dr. Lehman's opinion that there was no causal connection with respect to the right knee persuasive.

JSTOR

Petitioner underwent two arthroscopic procedures on his left leg. The Commission finds that an award of 30% loss of use of the left leg pursuant to Section 8(e) of the Act to be the appropriate award.

Having weighed the evidence and analyzed the Section 8.1b (b) factors, the Commission find Petitioner sustained a 30% loss of use of the left leg under Section 8(e) of the Act.

Based upon the foregoing analysis the Commission vacates the award of medical expenses related to Petitioner's right knee. Having determined that there is no causal connection as to the right knee the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award of 40% loss of use of the person as whole pursuant to Section 8(e) of the Act. The Commission finds that Petitioner sustained the loss of use of 30% of the left leg pursuant to Section 8(e) of the Act.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $1,003.37 per week for a period of 125 1/7 weeks, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $755.22 per week for a period of 64.5 weeks, as provided in §8(e) of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused the loss of use of 30% of the left leg. The award of 40% loss of use of the person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act is hereby vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner medical expenses related to treatment of the left leg under §8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. The award of medical expenses related to treatment of Petitioner's right leg is hereby vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the award of benefits to Petitioner for permanent partial disability of the loss of use of 40% of the person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d) 2 of the Act is hereby vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is entitled to a credit of amounts paid under Section 8(j) of the Act.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim which alleged he sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment by Respondent on May 17, 2016. According to the Application, Petitioner "slipped down steps of ferry" and sustained an injury to his left knee (Arbitrator's Exhibit 2). Respondent disputed liability on the basis of accident and causal relationship (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

Petitioner worked for Respondent as a ferry pilot on the Brussels Ferry which transported cars across the Illinois River. The ferry could transport approximately 19 cars at the time. Petitioner described pilothouse as being an area of approximately seven feet by nine feet which was elevated 19 feet above the surface of the deck.

When Petitioner was in the pilothouse, he was seated while operating the controls. Because of the space limitation, Petitioner could not extend his legs and typically sat with his knees flexed with his lower legs and feet beneath the seat. Petitioner would usually sit in this position two to four hours at a time. Petitioner stated that he would experience pain/stiffness in his knees when he would get up after having been in that flexed knee position.

Petitioner had to access the pilothouse by using the stairs which lead from the deck of the ferry to the pilothouse. Petitioner testified the height of the steps varied and some were higher than others. At trial, Petitioner's counsel tendered into evidence photographs of the steps. Each step had a measuring tape adjacent to it. The Arbitrator reviewed the photographs and noted that the steps did vary in height from eight inches to 12 inches (Petitioner's Exhibit 5).

At trial, Petitioner testified he had been sitting in the pilothouse for approximately two hours and he was going to take a break in the lunchroom which is on land. As Petitioner was in the process of descending the stairs, he experienced a "pop" in his left knee. Petitioner was not certain which step he was on, but stated he did not fall because he caught himself using the hand rail. The accident was reported to Respondent immediately after it occurred.

Petitioner testified that prior to the accident he did not have any left knee symptoms other than a little bit of stiffness. However, Petitioner previously sustained an injury to the right knee which required arthroscopic surgery. The right knee injury was also work-related and occurred sometime in 2014. Petitioner recovered from that prior surgery, but stated he had received one cortisone shot afterward. None of the medical records regarding the prior right knee surgery were tendered into evidence at trial.

Subsequent to the accident of May 17, 2016, Petitioner was seen at the ER of Alton Memorial Hospital. At that time, Petitioner complained of left knee pain and stated he injured his left knee at work that same day while walking down steps (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Petitioner was evaluated by Dr. David Stirton on May 27, 2016. Dr. Stirton prescribed medication and ordered an MRI scan. He also authorized Petitioner to be off work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

The MRI was performed on June 23, 2016. According to the radiologist, the MRI revealed marrow edema in the subarticular aspect of the medial proximal tibia, degenerative changes within the posterior horn of the medial meniscus, a small tear in the medial aspect of the posterior horn of the medial meniscus, joint effusion and some fluid in the infrapatellar bursa (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Dr. Stirton saw Petitioner on June 23, 2016, and reviewed the MRI. He opined it revealed a tear of the medial meniscus and continued to authorize Petitioner to remain off work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Stirton performed arthroscopic surgery on Petitioner's left knee on September 7, 2016. The surgical procedure consisted of debridement of the medial meniscus, femoral chondroplasty and chondroplasty of the medial facet of the patella (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Stirton continued to treat Petitioner following surgery and ordered physical therapy. While in physical therapy, Petitioner complained of pain in both the left and right knees. When Dr. Stirton saw Petitioner on November 30, 2016, Petitioner complained of bilateral knee pain. At that time, Dr. Stirton administered steroid injections to both knees (Petitioner's Exhibit 2). At trial, Petitioner testified he began favoring the left leg after the injury and experienced right knee symptoms shortly thereafter.

Dr. Stirton continued to treat Petitioner and authorized him to remain off work. When Dr. Stirton saw Petitioner on February 16, 2017, he opined that it was "not likely" Petitioner would be able to return to work at full duty (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Because of Petitioner's continuing right knee symptoms, Dr. Stirton performed a right total knee replacement surgery on August 9, 2017. Following surgery, Dr. Stirton ordered physical therapy and continued to authorize Petitioner to remain off work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

At the request of Petitioner's counsel, Shane Callahan, a kinesiologist, reviewed the photographs of the steps to the pilothouse. Callahan's CV and reports were tendered into evidence at trial. Callahan opined the increased height of the steps resulted in a knee flexion increase of four percent (4%) to 12%, a torque increase to the knee joint of five percent (5%) to 15% and an absorbed power increase to the knee joint of 10% to 30% (Petitioner's Exhibit 4).

Dr. Stirton was deposed on December 15, 2017, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. Prior to being deposed, Dr. Stirton reviewed Callahan's report as well as the photographs of the steps leading to the pilothouse. Dr. Stirton testified he performed two arthroscopic surgeries on Petitioner's left knee and a total knee replacement surgery on the right knee. Dr. Stirton also noted Petitioner complained of right knee pain when he was recovering from left knee surgery (Petitioner's Exhibit 1; pp 6-10).

In regard to causality, Dr. Stirton testified he reviewed Callahan's report and he considered his opinion to be "worthwhile." Petitioner's counsel then asked Dr. Stirton a hypothetical question which included Petitioner having a history of degenerative arthritis in his knee, the fact that he had his knee in a flexed position for two to four hours while operating the ferry and the irregular height of the steps Petitioner was required to descend. Dr. Stirton opined the preceding could be causative factors in regard to Petitioner's left knee injury. Specifically, Dr. Stirton noted that having the knee joint immobilized in a high degree of flexion for a long period of time made the joint more susceptible to injury. He also stated the heightened steps also presented at an increased risk or loading in the knee (Petitioner's Exhibit 1; pp 10-13).

In regard to Petitioner's right knee condition, Dr. Stirton testified Petitioner was asymptomatic prior to the accident. Because of the immobilization of the left knee following surgery, the right knee became symptomatic and aggravated (Petitioner's Exhibit 1; pp 13-14).

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Richard Lehman, an orthopedic surgeon, on February 6, 2018. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Lehman reviewed medical records provided to him by Respondent. In regard to Petitioner's left knee, Dr. Lehman opined Petitioner had a tear of the meniscus, but the condition was related to pre-existing degenerative arthritis. In regard to Petitioner's right knee, Dr. Lehman opined the right knee condition was also related to pre-existing degenerative arthritis. He also opined Petitioner could return to work without restrictions other than no squatting and no kneeling (Respondent's Exhibit 1; Deposition Exhibit 2).

Dr. Lehman was deposed on July 19, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Lehman's testimony was consistent with his medical report and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Dr. Lehman testified Petitioner had pre-existing degenerative arthritis in both knees which was not related to the accident of May 17, 2016. In regard to the irregular height of the steps, Dr. Lehman testified the increased stress on the knee was absorbed by the knee cap, not the meniscus. In regard to Petitioner having to remain seated for a long period of time with his knees in a flexed position, Dr. Lehman agreed this would be uncomfortable, but that it would not predispose the knee to an injury because it put no rotational stress on the knee. Dr. Lehman also testified Petitioner's right knee had pre-existing degenerative arthritis and the total knee replacement was not because of overcompensation due to left knee pain (Respondent's Exhibit 1; pp 10-20).

Petitioner continued to be seen by Dr. Stirton for his bilateral knee condition. Dr. Stirton evaluated Petitioner on August 23, 2018, primarily for his right knee condition. At that time, he noted Petitioner had a strenuous job which required difficult positions of his leg and knee (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Stirton saw Petitioner on November 6, 2018, primarily for his left knee condition. At that time, he administered a cortisone injection in Petitioner's left knee (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Stirton prepared a report dated January 14, 2019, wherein he opined Petitioner had permanent restrictions of no climbing ladders, limited bending and no heavy lifting because of his knee condition. He also noted Petitioner could not return to work because the restrictions would not permit him to perform his normal job duties (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

At trial, Petitioner testified he continues to have pain in both knees and has not returned to work. Petitioner did not obtain an evaluation by a vocational rehabilitation specialist and was not seeking an award of permanent and total disability.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issue (C) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment by Respondent on May 17, 2016.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner's testimony that he was required to sit with his knees in a flexed position with his feet underneath the seat for a two to four hour time period while operating the controls to the ferry was unrebutted.

Petitioner testified he would experience pain/stiffness in his knees when he got up from the flexed position.

The evidence clearly revealed that the steps Petitioner had to go up/down varied in height from eight inches to 12 inches.

For Petitioner to prove that he sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment by Respondent, he must show that he was subjected to a risk of injury to a greater degree than that of the general public, Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Commission, 541 N.E.2d 665 (Ill. 1989).

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner having to sit for two to four hours with his knees flexed to where his feet were underneath the seat and his having to go up/down stairs that would vary in height from eight inches to 12 inches constituted a risk of injury to a greater degree than that of the general public.

In regard to disputed issue (E) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's current condition of ill-being in regard to his left knee and right knee is causally related to the accident of May 17, 2016.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

While Petitioner had pre-existing degenerative arthritis of both knees and a prior surgery on the right knee, he was able to work full duty as a ferry pilot prior to the accident of May 17, 2016.

As noted in disputed issue (C), Petitioner's testimony regarding the circumstances of the accident was unrebutted.

Prior to the accident, Petitioner only had some stiffness in the left knee, but other than that he had no left knee symptoms. In regard to the right knee, Petitioner previously underwent arthroscopic surgery, but had not received treatment for his right knee for a considerable period of time prior to the accident.

Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Stirton, opined that Petitioner's left knee condition was related to the accident of May 17, 2016, and his right knee condition was because of Petitioner's favoring his left knee subsequent to surgery. Dr. Stirton also had the benefit of Callahan's report.

The Arbitrator was not persuaded by Dr. Lehman's opinion that Petitioner's left and right knee conditions were not related to the accident of May 17, 2016, but were related to the pre-existing degenerative arthritis.

Based upon the preceding, the Arbitrator finds the opinion of Dr. Stirton to be more persuasive than that of Dr. Lehman in regard to causality.

In regard to disputed issue (J) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes that all of the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary and Respondent is liable for payment of the medical bills incurred therewith.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 6 as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule. Respondent shall be given a credit of amounts paid for medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

There was no dispute that the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to temporary total disability benefits of 125 1/7 weeks, commencing June 1, 2016, through August 23, 2018.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner was receiving medical treatment for his left and right knee conditions and was authorized to be off work. The Arbitrator finds Petitioner reached MMI as of August 23, 2018.

In regard to disputed issue (L) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner has sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 40% loss of use of the person as a whole.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Neither Petitioner nor Respondent tendered an AMA impairment rating. The Arbitrator gives this factor no weight.

At the time of the accident, Petitioner worked as a pilot of a ferry. As noted herein, Petitioner was not able to return to work because of the restrictions imposed by his treating physician, Dr. Stirton. The Arbitrator gives this factor significant weight.

Petitioner was 49 years old at the time of the accident and will have to live with the effects of this injury for the remainder of his natural life. The Arbitrator gives this factor moderate weight.

Petitioner chose not to seek other employment or vocational rehabilitation services. Accordingly, the Arbitrator cannot determine what, if any, effect the injury had on Petitioner's future earning capacity. The Arbitrator gives this factor no weight.

As a result of the accident, Petitioner underwent two arthroscopic surgeries on the left knee and a total knee replacement on the right knee. Petitioner also has degenerative arthritis in both knees. Dr. Stirton has imposed restrictions which preclude Petitioner from returning to work as a ferry pilot. The Arbitrator gives this factor significant weight.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by Petitioner herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issue of permanent disability and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

Petitioner, a right hand dominant streetlight repair person, testified that she worked for Respondent for 24 years. On January 3, 2017, while attempting to repair a circuit, Petitioner injured her right shoulder as she was opening a manhole cover. Ultimately, Petitioner was diagnosed with a rotator cuff tear and underwent surgery on May 10, 2017. Following a full-duty release, Petitioner returned to her regular job as a streetlight repair person in November of 2017, at the same rate of pay. Petitioner generally uses a bucket lift to perform her job, but occasionally needs to climb a ladder or use a line belt and hooks method of climbing.

The medical records in evidence show that on May 10, 2017, Dr. William Heller performed an arthroscopic repair of the rotator cuff, subacromial decompression, and extensive debridement of the glenohumeral joint. Postoperatively, he diagnosed a rotator cuff tear and long head biceps tenosynovitis and capsulitis. Petitioner's postoperative recovery was uneventful, and she progressively improved with physical therapy. The final physical therapy note, dated October 27, 2017, states the following assessment: "Pt demonstrating ability to perform work simulated tasks with wts ranging from 20-30#. Pt with some mechanical break down upon fatigue but is able to complete sets of 30 repetitions with exercises. Improvements of shoulder strength and ROM noted generally with some tightness to IR and EX due to post-tx session fatigue. Pt has surpassed the realm of skilled PT tx and is recommended for work conditioning program to further prepare her R UE for safe return to work duties." On November 7, 2017, Petitioner reported to Dr. Heller she was ready to return to work and requested a full duty discharge. Physical examination findings were as follows: "[T]he shoulder has no swelling. No deformity. Full active range of motion including forward flexion and abduction to 170. Internal/external rotation 80 degrees each. Good overhead strength. No scapular winging or compensation. No pain or weakness to isolated testing of supraspinatus or infraspinatus tendons." Dr. Heller found Petitioner "has done quite well" and released her to return to work full duty.

At the time of the arbitration hearing, Petitioner was 64 years old. Petitioner described her current condition as follows: "[E]very once in a while because of working outside and everything, like the dampness with the rain lately. And sometimes, like the last couple of months I've noticed that  it will throb once in a while if I sleep on it or just for no reason." The range of motion in the shoulder is "okay," "pretty close" to preinjury level, "but not quite." Petitioner "definitely" feels a loss of strength, without noticeable atrophy. Petitioner reiterated the shoulder occasionally hurts or throbs. The shoulder condition affects the way Petitioner performs her job, but does not affect her activities of daily living.

In determining permanent partial disability, the Commission considers the five factors enumerated in section 8.1b(b) of the Workers' Compensation Act (the Act): "(i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a); (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability." 820 ILCS 305/8.1b(b).

Regarding factor (i), the Commission notes no impairment rating has been submitted into evidence. The Commission therefore gives no weight to this factor.

Regarding factor (ii), the Commission notes Petitioner is a streetlight repair person, which is a physically demanding job. Petitioner generally uses a bucket lift to perform her job, but occasionally needs to climb a ladder or use a line belt and hooks method of climbing. The Commission notes the injury was to the dominant, right shoulder. Petitioner has returned to work full duty. The residual pain and loss of strength affect the way Petitioner performs her job. The Commission gives considerable weight to this factor.

Regarding factor (iii), the Commission notes Petitioner was 64 years old at the time of the arbitration hearing. The Commission gives less weight to this factor because Petitioner has recovered well from her injury and has a shorter work life ahead of her.

Regarding factor (iv), the Commission notes no decrease of earning capacity. The Commission gives no weight to this factor.

Regarding factor (v), the Commission again notes Petitioner has recovered well from her injury, but suffers from residual pain and loss of strength, which affect the way she performs her job, but not the activities of daily living. The Commission gives some weight to this factor.

Having carefully considered and weighed the foregoing factors, the Commission believes the proper measure of disability is 10 percent of the person as a whole.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed July 11, 2019, is hereby modified as stated herein and otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay to Petitioner the sum of $775.18 per week for a period of 50 weeks, as provided in §8(d)2 of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused the permanent disability to the extent of 10 percent of the person as a whole.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

No bond is required for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

Consolidated cases: _____

The only disputed issue is the nature and extent of the injury. An Application for Adjustment of Claim was filed in this matter, and a Notice of Hearing was mailed to each party. The matter was heard by the Honorable Thomas L. Ciecko, Arbitrator of the Commission, in the city of Chicago, on May 2, 2019. A record was made and the parties did not request a decision with finding of fact and conclusions of law. By stipulation, the parties agree:

On the date of accident, January 3, 2017, Respondent was operating under and subject to the provisions of the Act.

On this date, the relationship of employee and employer did exist between Petitioner and Respondent.

On this date, Petitioner sustained an accident that arose out of and in the course of employment.

Timely notice of this accident was given to Respondent.

Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to the accident.

In the year preceding the injury, Petitioner earned $100,263.94, and the average weekly wage was $1928.15.

At the time of injury, Petitioner was 62 years of age, single with 0 dependent children.

Necessary medical services and temporary compensation benefits have been provided by Respondent.

Respondent shall be given a credit of $51,052.72 for TTD, $0 for TPD, $0 for maintenance, and $0 for other benefits, for a total credit of $51,052.72.

After reviewing all of the evidence presented, this Arbitrator hereby makes findings regarding the nature and extent of the injury. I conclude the Petitioner suffered an injury to her right shoulder; three months of conservative treatment failed and Petitioner underwent surgery consisting of arthroscopic repair of right shoulder rotator cuff, arthroscopic subacromial decompression of the right shoulder, and right shoulder glenohumeral joint arthroscopy with extensive debridement; and extensive physical therapy. She returned to work full duty with no restrictions. Here permanent partial disability is established using the criteria found in 820 ILCS 305/8.1b. As to the level of permanent partial disability, this Arbitrator finds as follows.

With regard to subsection (i) of Section 8.1b(b) this Arbitrator notes that no permanent partial disability impairment report or opinion was submitted into evidence. I give this factor no weight in determining the level of disability.

With regard to subsection (ii) of Section 8.1b(b) the occupation of the employee, the record shows she was a streetlight repairman and returned to that occupation without restriction after being released from medical care November 7, 2017. I give this factor no weight in determining the level of disability.

With regard to subsection (iii) of Section 8.1b(b) the parties have stipulated Petitioner was 62 years old at the time of the injury. She will not heal as quickly at that age and I give this factor weight in determining the level of disability.

Regarding subsection (iv) of Section 8.1b(b) Petitioner's future earning capacity, Petitioner testified she returned to work at the same wages as before the accident. I give this factor no weight in determining the level of disability.

With regard to subsection (v) of Section 8.1b(b) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, Petitioner testified she has lost some strength since the accident, but the injury has no effect on her daily life. I give some weight to this factor in determining the level of disability.

ORDER

Permanent partial disability

Based on the factors in Section 8.1b(b) and the record taken as a whole, this Arbitrator finds Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 5% (25 weeks at $775.18 per week) loss of a person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petitions for Review having been filed by the parties herein and proper notice given, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, permanent disability and credit, and being advised of the facts and law, affirms and adopts with correction the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

With regard to the issue of credit, the Commission notes the Arbitrator awarded credit for the temporary total disability benefits paid, without correspondingly noting the parties' stipulation of Respondent's liability for the temporary total disability benefits. During the oral argument, the parties stipulated all temporary total disability benefits have been paid. As temporary total disability was not at issue, the Commission strikes the Arbitrator's award of credit therefor.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed April 2, 2018, is hereby corrected, affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that, except as stated above, the Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of the Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

No bond is required for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner testified that she works for Respondent's Physical Plant doing janitorial work. She testified that part of her job duties included cleaning the windows of campus buildings. She testified that on June 26, 2013, she was engaged in her duties as a janitor at Western Illinois University with four other employees washing windows on the outside of Olson Residence Hall. She testified that in order to access one of the windows, she had to climb over a railing at the entrance of the building and down onto the ground. She testified that she was then required to climb back up over a "ledge", which was a metal railing about 30 inches high at the top of the raised concrete entryway, carrying her supplies. She testified that as she climbed back over the railing, swinging her legs over the railing one at a time while holding onto the top of the railing, she was put into a bent-over position and that when she raised up, she struck the back and top of her head on a wall-mounted telephone booth that was attached to a concrete post next to the entry of the building. She testified that the telephone booth was wider than the post and projected out away from the building and was constructed of metal.

Petitioner testified that she experienced immediate sharp pain in the back of her head and felt dazed. She testified that the accident happened near the end of her shift and that she went to the breakroom and put ice on her head to try to relieve the pain. She testified that she filled out an accident report and went home after her shift and during the night continued to feel severe pain and experienced nausea, as well as pain into her neck and shoulders. She testified that she got up during the night and was sick to her stomach two or three times. She testified that the following day, a co-worker noticed that one of her pupils was larger than the other and advised her to report her ongoing complaints to her supervisor and advised she see her family physician, Dr. Stortzum.

Petitioner testified that she ultimately underwent a three-level cervical fusion followed by physical therapy. She testified that she returned to work following her medical treatment that was within her work restrictions. She testified that she is now earning more money per hour than prior to her injury. She testified that her arms now have limited mobility and that she has difficulty turning her head side-to-side and looking up. She testified that she has headaches every couple of days. She testified that she suffered from migraines prior to her injury. She testified that she has weakness in her arms. She testified that she is now 62 years old. She testified that she does not currently take any medication for her injury, but that she uses a heating pad nightly.

On cross examination, Petitioner described her work restrictions as 30 pounds of lifting as the heaviest, 7 pounds of lifting that can be done repeatedly and 17 pounds of lifting that can be done intermittently. She testified that she is able to do her job. She testified that she was a daily smoker. She agreed that she has a B-12 deficiency which has side effects which included numbness and tingling of the hands and feet. She also agreed that her doctor informed her that a B-12 deficiency could cause headaches, fatigue and dizziness. She testified that she had headaches prior to her injury, but that her headaches were now more frequent. She testified that she underwent two FCE tests, with the first test being invalid due to inconsistent test results.

On cross examination, Petitioner testified that none of the equipment that she was using the day of the incident was defective. She testified that she did not know of any defect in the telephone booth. She testified that she did not trip on anything prior to her hitting her head on the telephone booth. She testified that the weather was good and that it was not raining when she was injured. She further testified that she was not in a hurry when she was injured.

On cross examination, Petitioner testified that she would typically wash the windows by the entrance to Olson once a year. She testified that her supervisor did not instruct her how to wash the windows or where to stand to wash the windows.

The medical records of Family Practice Associates were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 1. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen on June 27, 2013, at which time it was noted that she hit the top of her head at work the day before, that it affected the left side of her head and her left eye and that she had left shoulder pain. It was noted that Petitioner hit her left posterior parietal head on a steel box, that she did not lose consciousness and that she felt dazed for a bit. It was noted that Petitioner's left eye felt swollen, that she was fatigued and that her left upper extremity felt a little weaker than the right. The assessment was noted to be that of contusion to the head causing neck muscle strain/spasm as well as very mild concussion. Petitioner was advised of the need for increased rest for the next couple of days and the need to avoid any excessive strenuous activity such as pushing, pulling or lifting as well as to avoid excessive heat for the next 2-3 days. It was noted that Petitioner was given a note excusing her from work through June 30th but that after that since her symptoms were mild, she could return without limitations. (PX1).

The records of Family Practice Associates reflect that Petitioner was seen on July 1, 2013, at which time it was noted that she complained of being sick to her stomach, that she had neck pain and headaches and that she hit her head at work on Thursday and had had a lot of pain since. The assessment was noted to be that of concussion with post-concussive syndrome and left neck trapezius strain secondary to recent head contusion. Petitioner was advised to try Phenergan for nausea and to use Ibuprofen for pain and inflammation. Petitioner was also recommended to use topical heat to the left posterior neck. It was noted that Petitioner was given a note excusing work absence that day and that she was to call tomorrow as to her progress. The records reflect that on July 2, 2013, Petitioner called indicating that she was still with left neck and shoulder pain that was causing a headache and that she was wondering about physical therapy and if she should return to work. The phone note entry dated July 9, 2013 noted that Petitioner called indicating that the physical therapist recommended that she be off work for two weeks. (PX1).

The records of Family Practice Associates reflect that Petitioner was seen on July 23, 2013, at which time it was noted that she had persistent neck and shoulder pain, among other issues. It was noted that Petitioner was not responding to physical therapy as hoped, that minimal activities were making it worse, that she was not using much Vicodin and that she was using Flexeril without much relief. The assessment was noted to be that of persistent neck muscle pain likely due to strain and spasm and detrusor instability. Petitioner was given a script for Skelaxen for muscle spasm, asked to remain off physical therapy for the next 4-5 days and to undergo cervical spine x-rays. At the time of the July 29, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner was feeling weak in her neck and shoulders, that the pain was better with the new medication but that she felt like a zombie and that she wanted to do more strength exercises and go back to physical therapy. The assessment was noted to be that of neck muscle strain and spasm, improving.

Petitioner was instructed to continue the muscle relaxants and to return to physical therapy. At the time of the August 6, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner was complaining of headaches, that she was taking the muscle relaxants as directed and that she had re-started physical therapy. It was noted that Petitioner was doing less and less activity because of the fear of making her symptoms worse. The assessment was noted to be that of persistent neck muscle strain and spasm. It was noted that due to the plateau of improvement and that since Petitioner had reproducible tender spots on the left column, they would consider trigger point injections along with continued physical therapy. Petitioner underwent trigger point injections on that date. (PX1).

The records of Family Practice Associates reflect that Petitioner was seen on August 15, 2013, at which time it was noted that she wanted to see about going to a neurologist and that she stated that physical therapy was making her do too much. It was noted that Petitioner was frustrated with the lack of progress and that she noted that any time she tried to do anything even moderately strenuous her upper back and neck caused severe pain and a headache that could last up to 24 hours. The assessment was noted to be that of persistent neck and upper back pain (cervicalgia). Petitioner was recommended to discontinue the Skelaxen and remain off the Flexeril. It was noted that due to the lack of progress, it was felt that further consultation likely with neurology would be beneficial. At the time of the August 23, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner was complaining of neck pain. The assessment was noted to be that of persistent neck and upper back pain (cervicalgia). It was noted that contact would be had with Petitioner's work comp caseworker to get the name of an in-network neurologist. It was noted that if a neurology referral were to take greater than 2-3 weeks, they would consider another course of physical therapy in a different office. (PX1).

Included within the records of Family Practice Associates was a note from Illinois CancerCare dated August 1, 2013, at which time it was noted that Petitioner had been struggling with intermittent migraine headaches and had certainly been tired, that she was working one job at 35 hours a week and felt that she needed a second one for income and that no other major new difficulties or problems had come up. It was noted that Petitioner had been on Elavil for control of her migraines but that she was advised to stop that several years ago. It was also noted that Petitioner had a fall hitting her head several weeks ago and was evaluated, that it was felt that she had whiplash but that over the last two weeks she had had no headaches at all, that she had a migraine lasting one day two weeks ago and no headaches a week before that and that the current headache only began two hours ago. The assessment was noted to be that of (1) carcinoma of the breast, unremarkable; (2) migraine headaches. It was noted that Petitioner would be given a few doses of Vicodin and would follow-up with her primary care physician. It was noted that there were no findings to suggest that this was a chronic process different from the intermittent migraines that she had had over the years and that she had had no signs or symptoms to suggest that the head trauma several weeks ago had had any relationship to the discomfort. (PX1).

The records of Family Practice Associates reflect that Petitioner was seen on October 28, 2013, at which time it was noted that she was seen in follow-up for her neck and back pain. It was noted that Petitioner had seen Dr. Fortin on October 15, 2013, had multiple trigger point injections and that she had begun to see some improvement. It was noted that Petitioner was still with daily pain in the right posterior neck that radiated to the right occiput. The assessment was noted to be that of persistent neck pain with component of cervicalgia, occipital neuralgia and likely myofascial component. It was noted that Petitioner had seen some improvement after the injections by Dr. Fortin but that she was still having a fair amount of discomfort. It was noted that Petitioner was advised to continue with physical therapy. At the time of the November 25, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner was getting persistent headaches and that she was not feeling better or worse after physical therapy. The assessment was noted to be that of (1) ongoing neck pain, currently in process of evaluation with neurology; (2) anxiety/depression with recent addition of Bupropion. Petitioner was prescribed medications and it was noted that an EMG was scheduled. (PX1).

The medical records of McDonough District Hospital were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 2. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen on September 25, 2015 with a sore throat, head congestion and chest tightness. The impression was noted to be that of viral pharyngitis. At the time of the June 6, 2015 visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that both thighs had been hurting but the prior Monday her pain increased in her left groin and had continued getting more painful. It was noted that Petitioner denied any trauma to the area but reported that she had been walking a lot. The impression was noted to be that of acute myofascial strain, malaise and fatigue. At the time of the December 8, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had had hot coffee drip onto her left hand and wrist. The impression was noted to be that of a 2nd degree burn to the left hand. (PX2).

The records of McDonough District Hospital reflect that Petitioner underwent physical therapy for the timeframe of October 15, 2012 through December 5, 2012 for the diagnosis of neck/shoulder muscle spasm. The "Personal Data Information_- Rehabilitation Services" form dated October 15, 2012 noted that Petitioner had migraines very often, that they seemed to start on the right side of her neck/shoulder and that they had started years ago. It was noted that Petitioner's goals for therapy were to establish ways to eliminate the headaches. The records further reflect that Petitioner underwent physical therapy for persistent back/neck muscle strain/spasm for the timeframe of September 24, 2013 through February 27, 2014. It was noted that Petitioner had multiple cancellations and no-shows during her scheduled course of treatment. (PX2).

The records of McDonough District Hospital reflect that Petitioner underwent an MRI of the cervical spine on November 9, 2013, which was interpreted as revealing (1) multilevel disc disease most marked at C4-C5 through C6-C7; there is mass effect on the left nerve root at C4-C5 from a focal protruding disk to the far left; (2) focal far right protruding disk at C6-C7 with mild mass effect on the right nerve root. The records reflect that Petitioner underwent x-rays of the cervical spine July 23, 2013, which were interpreted as revealing no significant neuroforaminal narrowing; no fracture or listhesis; degenerative intervertebral disc space narrowing at C4 through C6. The records reflect that Petitioner underwent additional physical therapy and work conditioning during the timeframe of August 7, 2015 through March 15, 2016. It was noted that Petitioner had multiple cancellations and no-shows during her scheduled course of treatment. (PX2).

The medical records of Springfield Clinic were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 3. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Stortzum on September 25, 2015 for an extreme sore throat and swollen glands. The assessment was noted to be that of fever and acute sinusitis. At the time of the visit with nurse practitioner Elvia Washington on September 24, 2015, it was noted that Petitioner was seen for her 12-week post-operative visit. It was noted that Petitioner stated that she was getting a lot of headaches, that she was also getting tingling in both hands, that she felt weak and that she would like more physical therapy. It was noted that Petitioner advised that she could not go back to work. The assessment was noted to be that of cervicalgia; cervical spinal stenosis; spondylosis of cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy; cervical radiculopathy. Petitioner was recommended to do daily work conditioning and to continue muscle relaxers and anti-inflammatory over-the-counter pain medication as needed. At the time of the visit with Dr. Stortzum on September 10, 2015, it was noted that Petitioner was complaining of a headache, pressure behind the right eye, neck pain and nausea. It was noted that Petitioner's headaches had been low grade for several days but starting about five hours ago, the intensity suddenly worsened. It was noted that Petitioner had been using Methocarbamol but was not sure that it was giving much relief and that she had just started physical therapy again about three weeks prior. The assessment was noted to be that of migraine headache; occipital neuralgia; anxiety. It was noted that Petitioner was encouraged to contact Dr. MacGregor's office to see if they wanted her to change her Methoocarbamol since she felt it was not giving much relief versus any further evaluation for her ongoing neck discomfort. It was noted that Dr. Stortzum believed that some of this was related to recent stressors and headache. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. MacGregor on July 23, 2015, at which time it was noted that she stated that she was uncomfortable/tense all the time, that she had been having headaches every now and then, that she had been having tense muscles in the neck and shoulders, that she stated that she had been wearing the collar 24/7, that she had numbness and tingling in the left hand and that she needed refills on pain medications and the muscle relaxer. The assessment was noted to be that of spondylosis of the cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy; cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis. It was noted that Petitioner may wean out of the collar and that she was to begin a course of physical therapy. At the time of the July 6, 2015 visit with Dr. Stortzum, it was noted that Petitioner had had a migraine and vomiting the day before and that she still had a mild headache and nausea. It was noted that Petitioner was also having increasing left ear and jaw pain in the last 2-3 days and that she had been wearing a neck immobilizing brace since her cervical spine surgery. It was noted that Petitioner had recently had her first migraine-type headache since surgery, that in the past they had had her keep a small supply of Phenergan available as she usually experienced a fair amount of nausea and that she had vomited on that date. The assessment was noted to be that of otalgia of the left ear; nausea with vomiting. It was noted that the ear pain was not from infection and may be related to mild TMJ, maybe secondary to her neck brace usage. Petitioner was instructed to use Tylenol or Motrin and possibly consult her dentist. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Nursing on June 23, 2015, at which time she stated that she was having difficulty swallowing. Petitioner was instructed to continue her pain medications as needed and that in regard to her swallowing difficulty, it was pretty common after cervical surgery and was related to post-operative swelling. At the time of the May 18, 2015 visit with Dr. MacGregor, it was noted that Petitioner stated that she was about the same as last time, that she had tenderness in the back of the neck and right shoulder and that she had numbness and tingling in her hands. The assessment was noted to be that of cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis; and spondylosis of the cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy. The records reflect that on April 30, 2015, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Stortzum for medical clearance for a planned anterior cervical fusion of C4 through C7 by Dr. MacGregor. It was noted that Petitioner's symptoms began in June 2013 with a work-related injury and that she had tried multiple conservative measures, which she had failed. It was noted that since that time, Petitioner had also had worsening of her underlying headache issue. The assessment was noted to be that of cervical spinal stenosis; cervical radiculopathy; hypothyroidism; COPD; breast cancer, left. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner called the Springfield Clinic Telenurse on March 12, 2015, at which time it was noted that she reported a headache for the last two days and that she had not noticed her right eye was bloodshot until coming to see her daughter that evening, who told her to call. It was noted that Petitioner did not remember doing anything strenuous to cause the eye to turn red and that she did sneeze, but did not think that it was enough to cause the eye to get bloodshot. It was noted that Petitioner was instructed that if her eye pain was more than mild, she should be seen for that that night and that if her pain was tolerable after taking over-the-counter Tylenol or Ibuprofen, she should call her primary care physician's office in the morning to get an appointment. The records reflect that Petitioner underwent a pre-operative history and physical by Dr. Stortzum on February 12, 2015 for a planned anterior cervical fusion of C4 through C7 by Dr. MacGregor on February 20, 2015. It was noted that Petitioner's symptoms began in June 2013 with a work-related injury and that she had tried multiple conservative measures, which she had failed. It was also noted that since that time, Petitioner had also had worsening of her underlying headache issue. The assessment was noted to be that of spondylosis of the cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy; hypothyroidism; COPD; migraine headache; anxiety; cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Stortzum on January 16, 2015, at which time it was noted that she had left knee pain and swelling for at least three weeks and that she had also been experiencing pain from the hip area to the left leg and foot. It was noted that there was no trauma at the onset of symptoms. Petitioner was instructed to undergo x-rays of the left hip and knee for further evaluation. At the time of the nurse practitioner visit on October 9, 2014, it was noted that Petitioner reported that on June 26, 2013 she was at work and bent over and that as she came up, she hit the top of her head on the bottom of a phone booth encasement. It was noted that Petitioner stated that she jarred her neck and head, that she reported neck pain, numbness and tingling in both arms and hands and that she had tenderness in the back of her neck and on the right-side shoulder. It was noted that Petitioner was concerned with the lack of use in her hands, that she could no longer do her normal daily activities and that she had decreased range of motion in her neck. The assessment was noted to be that of cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis; cervical spondylosis. It was noted that Petitioner was offered anterior cervical discectomy and fusion C3-4, C4-5 and C5-6 and that she had failed all conservative treatments up to that point. It was noted that it was not thought that epidural steroid injections would be beneficial. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Fortin on March 18, 2014, at which time it was noted that she needed some disability support forms filled out, that she was complaining of night sweats, that she had a rash on her arms after an EMG and that she had headaches and shoulder pain. The assessment was noted to be that of cervical radiculopathy; carpal tunnel syndrome. Petitioner was recommended to undergo physical therapy and a consultation with Dr. MacGregor in view of the EMG demonstrating a bilateral C6 radiculopathy and MRI demonstrating a protruding disc at C6-7. The records reflect that on February 28, 2014, Petitioner underwent EMG/NCV, at which time it was noted that she was a 58-year-old female, status post right median nerve release in the remote past not performed on the left, who had neck pain with radiation into both arms. The impression was noted to be that of (1) bilateral C6 radiculopathies, subacute to chronic in nature with evidence of reinnervation; (2) bilateral median neuropathies at the wrists, mild to moderate on the right, severe on the left, with neuropraxia seen bilaterally much worse on the left with sensory axonotmesis solely on the left. It was noted that a neurosurgical consultation would be arranged with Dr. MacGregor for purposes of evaluation of the carpal tunnel syndrome and cervical radiculopathies. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner underwent cervical spine x-rays on September 24, 2015, which were interpreted as revealing no interval change as compared to July 23, 2015. The history was noted to be that three-month post-operative follow-up; complaints of pain both sides of neck with numbness and tingling down both arms and headaches. The interpretive report for cervical spine x-rays performed on July 23, 2015 noted that the films were interpreted as revealing stable anterior cervical fusion of C4-C7 with stable hardware alignment. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Fortin on November 19, 2013, at which time it was noted that the previous trigger point injections and occipital nerve blocks worked minimally and only for 1-2 weeks. It was noted that NSAIDs had not helped the pain and that the MRI demonstrated degenerative joint disease at C5-6 and C6-7 with a herniated nucleus pulposus. The assessment was noted to be that of cervicalgia; cervical radiculopathy. Petitioner was recommended to undergo an EMG/NCV of the upper extremities. At the time of the October 15, 2013 consultation with Dr. Fortin, it was noted that Petitioner was seen for evaluation of neck and bilateral shoulder pain and also headaches. It was noted that Petitioner had a history of neck and occipital pain with radiation to her shoulders as well as slowly worsening lumbar pain. It was noted that Petitioner was bending over and then standing up, hitting her head on the back of a ledge while at work and that she immediately felt stunned and dazed when this occurred in June of 2013. It was noted that Petitioner initially was disoriented, light-headed and then began having pain and that the next day, she was noted to have asymmetric pupils. It was noted that Petitioner had a history of migraines since age 12, that she had had four severe headaches since June and that she had been off work since June. It was noted that physical therapy had helped and that a steroid injection and muscle relaxers had helped a bit. The assessment was noted to be that of common migraine (without aura) with intractable migraine; cervicalgia; occipital neuralgia. Petitioner was recommended to undergo bilateral occipital nerve blocks and trigger point injections, which were performed. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Stortzum on May 13, 2016, at which time it was noted that she had complaints of headache, neck pain, and head and chest congestion, among other issues. The assessment was noted to be that of acute sinusitis; seborrheic keratosis, inflamed, left shoulder and mid-back bra line. The records reflect that Petitioner underwent an EMG/nerve conduction study of the upper extremities on May 9, 2016. The impression was noted to be that of (1) bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome, mild on the right and moderately severe on the left; (2) no evidence of ulnar or radial neuropathy; (3) no evidence of cervical radiculopathy. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen by nurse practitioner Elvia Washington on May 9, 2016, at which time it was noted that she stated that she was still having headaches, that she was still having the numbness and tingling in her hands bilaterally and that she reported that her endurance was not that great. It was noted that Petitioner continued to smoke. The assessment was noted to be that of carpal tunnel syndrome; cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis; spondylosis of cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy. It was noted that Petitioner consented for left carpal tunnel release but that no surgical date would be given until she contacted the office pertaining to getting it approved by her insurance company. At the time of the March 25, 2016 visit with nurse practitioner Melissa Pounders, it was noted that Petitioner stated that a week ago she was sitting in her recliner, that she dropped something and reached over the arm of the chair and that she felt something pull/pop in her right-side ribcage. It was noted that the pain was fairly constant but increased in severity with certain twisting movements and that it felt muscular in nature. The assessment was noted to be that of a muscle strain. Petitioner was given prescriptions for a muscle relaxant and pain medication. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen on June 20, 2017 for pain in the lower abdomen of unknown etiology. At the time of the May 16, 2017 visit with Dr. Stortzum, it was noted that Petitioner had been out of work for four years, that her neck surgery was two years ago, that Dr. MacGregor left town and that Petitioner's job asked for an FCE to give her some permanent restrictions. It was noted that Dr. Stortzum noted that he would only give restrictions based off the FCE. It was noted that the FCE indicated that Petitioner's effort was inconsistent but that they felt she could at least do a Medium demand vocation. It was noted that Petitioner asked about range of motion of her neck and that she indicated that she could not fully extend it like she used to be able to do. It was noted that Petitioner was undoubtedly as good as she was ever going to get concerning her neck pain. The assessment was noted to be that of chronic neck pain. At the time of the May 2, 2017 visit, it was noted that Petitioner presented for suture removal from a biopsy on the right side of the nose done the week before. The assessment was noted to be that of melanocytic nevus of face. At the time of the April 25, 2017 visit, Petitioner presented for a punch biopsy of a mole lesion on the right side of the bridge of the nose. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen by Dr. Stortzum on April 10, 2017, at which time it was noted, among other things, that she felt like her heart was racing all of the time and that she felt short of breath moreso than normal. At the time of the January 23, 2017 visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported more headaches in the past week and that she noted that there was a lot of facial pain and pressure. The assessment was noted to be that of allergic rhinitis; depression; hypothyroidism; chronic sinusitis; right otitis media. Petitioner was given a script for antibiotics and Prednisone. At the time of the October 12, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had a loose tooth and that she thought it was causing her an infection as well as a complaint of significant productive cough with thick green sputum. The assessment was noted to be that of acute bronchitis; acute sinusitis. At the time of the September 21, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had complaints of a significant sore throat, nasal congestion and cough. The assessment was noted to be that of allergic rhinitis; acute URI. Petitioner was encouraged over-the-counter supportive and symptomatic care. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen on August 30, 2016, at which time it was noted that she had concerns over increased swelling and tightness in the feet, among other issues. The assessment was noted to be that of dyspnea on exertion; lower extremity edema; COPD. At the time of the July 11, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner presented with a complaint of numbness and tingling and a heavy feeling in her bilateral feet, legs, arms and hands, that it had been present for approximately three months and that it had been intermittent in nature. It was noted that Petitioner's foot symptoms began when she started physical therapy. It was noted that Petitioner had had cervical surgery and that she stated that the symptoms she was currently having in her upper extremities were different than the cervical radiculopathy she was having prior. The assessment was noted to be that of paresthesias/numbness. Petitioner was ordered to undergo labs to look for any deficiencies that may be causing paresthesias. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen on February 18, 2016, at which time it was noted that on February 12, 2016 she was diagnosed with radiation dermatitis and skin ulceration having recently completed radiation therapy. It was noted that there was good wound healing at that time. At the time of the February 12, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had just completed a course of radiation therapy on February 1, 2016. The assessment was noted to be that of radiation dermatitis. Petitioner was referred to the MDH Wound Clinic. At the time of the February 11, 2016 visit with Dr. MacGregor, it was noted that Petitioner stated that she was doing fine and had intermittent pain. It was noted that Petitioner noted that she had good and bad days in terms of pain severity, that she stated that she completed physical therapy but was getting headaches after physical therapy and that she complained of pain, numbness and tingling in her hands bilaterally. It was noted that Petitioner reported that she had not had carpal tunnel surgery at that point and that she stated that she recently underwent radiation treatment for right-sided breast cancer and suffered a severe radiation burn. The assessment was noted to be that of cervical radiculopathy; cervical spinal stenosis; spondylosis of the cervical region without myelopathy or radiculopathy. Petitioner was given a work note for upper extremity work restrictions, was recommended to undergo an EMG of the left upper extremity and to consider an EMG of the right upper extremity, and was recommended carpal tunnel syndrome release surgery. (PX3).

The records of Springfield Clinic reflect that Petitioner was seen on December 29, 2015 for left knee pain and swelling, that she thought she injured it in therapy the week before and that she also wanted a flu shot. It was noted that Petitioner was currently going through physical therapy for work hardening therapy. It was noted that Petitioner had also noticed that she was getting more headaches due to strain on her neck and shoulder muscles due to this and her sister's recent progressive health issues. The assessment was noted to be that of knee pain and need for influenza vaccination. It was noted that a call was placed to physical therapy and that they would try to reduce the weight load on Petitioner's squatting exercises and modified activity as tolerated but still keep on course for getting her ready to return to work. At the time of the November 24, 2015 visit with Dr. Stortzum, it was noted that Petitioner was having issues with a cough and nasal congestion. It was noted that Petitioner had a frontal headache and that she was also achy across the upper back and posterior neck. The assessment was noted to be that of acute left otitis media and acute frontal sinusitis and current every day smoker. Petitioner was prescribed antibiotics. (PX3).

The medical records of Memorial Medical Center were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 4. The Discharge Summary dated June 11, 2015 noted that Petitioner was admitted on June 9, 2015 for anterior cervical discectomy and fusion at C4-5, C5-6 and C6-7 for cervical stenosis and radiculopathy and that she underwent a normal fusion without any problems or complications. The Operative Report noted that Petitioner underwent anterior cervical decompression with arthrodesis, placement of machined interbody fusion device and plating at C45, C56, C67 by Dr.

MacGregor for pre- and post-operative diagnoses of cervical spinal stenosis, cervical spondylosis and cervical radiculopathy. (PX4).

The medical records of Orthopedic Center of Illinois were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 5. The records reflect that Petitioner underwent an FCE on September 12, 2017, at which time it was noted that she provided excellent effort throughout the testing process, that during the dynamic lifting she was cooperative but limited by her maximum safe effort and that she appropriately qualified at a Medium Physical Demand Classification. It was noted that lifts over five times per day at the Medium level would place Petitioner at significant medical risk and that, as a result, the safe recommended PDC was that of Medium with occasional lifting of 28 pounds, frequent lifting of 17.5 pounds and constant lifting of 7 pounds. (PX5).

The medical records of Orthopedic Group at Springfield Clinic were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 6. The records reflect that Dr. William Payne issued a "To Whom It May Concern" letter indicating that in his opinion, the new FCE should be considered a valid and reliable result; that he did not think that Petitioner should undergo any further work hardening and strengthening; that the new restrictions should be permanent and that Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement; and that permanent restrictions as of September 29, 2017 were that of Medium Demand Level job, lifts over five times per day at recommended demand levels; not recommended floor to knuckle, safe recommended occasional 28 pounds, frequent 17.5 pounds, constant 7 pounds. (PX6).

The Medical Bills Exhibit was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 7.

The December 11, 2017 IME Report of Dr. Timothy Payne was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 8. The report reflects that Petitioner was seen for an IME on December 11, 2017. It was noted that Petitioner stated that she underwent surgery, that she was a poor historian, that she stated that she had a 3-level fusion anteriorly and that she subsequently underwent therapy for an additional three months. It was noted that Petitioner was released to go back to work in October of 2017 and that she was currently released for light duty where she was mopping, cleaning toilets and cleaning rooms. It was noted that Petitioner stated that her neck was stiff, that she had weakness and tingling involving both arms, that she complained of stiffness around the neck, that she still had some headaches and that she complained of notch tightness in the left and right paracervical area. It was noted that Petitioner was not taking any medication except for applying Icy Hot ointment to the neck. (PX8).

The report reflects that Petitioner's exam and history indicated that she had degenerative changes of the cervical spine, particularly C4-5, C5-6 and C6-7. It was noted that Petitioner was a candidate for cervical fusion because she failed conservative treatment and that the aggravation was the result of the contusion to her head, aggravating the underlying cervical spondylosis, resulting in symptoms of cervical radiculitis. It was noted that medical treatment to date had been reasonable and necessary. It was noted that Petitioner should maintain a home exercise program but may work as she had been doing without restrictions and that she did not require further diagnostic studies. It was noted that Petitioner could perform her duty but should avoid repetitive overhead lifting activities and that she had reached maximum medical improvement. (PX8).

The CMS Workers' Compensation Packet was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 1.

The IME Report of Dr. Timothy Payne was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 2. The report reflects that Dr. Payne saw Petitioner on May 29, 2014, at which time she gave a history of an injury occurring to her head and neck on June 26, 2013. It was noted that Petitioner was washing windows in front of a building, that she was putting supplies into a cart and that as she came up, she hit her head on a shelf. It was noted that Petitioner complained of pain involving her neck, that it was greater on the right than the left side, that she complained of stiffness with motion of the cervical spine, that she had pain in the upper back and complained of trigger point-type pain or knots involving the upper back near the midline, that she complained of numbness and tingling involving her hands and that she noted that the numbness and tingling had been ongoing for a couple of months. (RX2).

The report reflects that Dr. Payne opined that Petitioner sustained a contusion to the neck and cervical spine, which resulted in the onset of cervical radiculitis. It was noted that the cervical spine arthritic changes pre-existed the injury but that the condition was exacerbated by her injury. It was noted that the carpal tunnel syndrome seemed to be an incidental finding but that it was noted in notes of post-treatment for her neck and head that she had weakness in her hands, that the complained of weakness in her hands was objectively supported by the findings on EMG but that it was impossible to determine whether the weakness was secondary to her cervical radiculitis or from her carpal tunnel syndrome. It was noted that the carpal tunnel syndrome was not related to her work-related injury of June 26, 2013. (RX2).

The report reflects that Dr. Payne opined that Petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement, that she required further treatment for the cervical spine and that she would benefit from pain management with assessment of a possible epidural injection to control the cervical spine complaints and that, if the symptoms were not controlled with the epidural injection, she may require neurosurgical evaluation regarding her cervical spine. It was noted that Petitioner was not able to work full duty as a janitor/cleaning person due to her ongoing complaints of neck and arm pain and that she could work modified duty with restrictions to include no overhead lifting, infrequent lifting to shoulder level and no repetitive turning of the neck. (RX2).

The FCE Report dated April 18, 2017 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 3. The records reflect that the overall classification of effort was invalid due to Petitioner performing inconsistently during a repeated measures protocol and that she met the material handling demands of Medium demand vocation per the Dictionary of Occupational Titles. It was noted that Petitioner failed to give maximum voluntary effort during the FCE and that it was undeterminable as to maximum lifting capabilities and/or other functional capabilities. (RX3).

A Picture of Olson Hall was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 4.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

With respect to disputed issue (C), the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner met her burden of proof in establishing that she sustained accidental injuries that arose out of and in the course of her employment with Respondent on June 26, 2013.

To obtain compensation under the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act, a claimant must show by a preponderance of the evidence that he has suffered a disabling injury arising out of and in the course of his employment. 820 ILCS 305/2; Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 407 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 1013 (2011); Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 129 Ill. 2d 52, 57 (1989). However, the fact that an injury arose "in the course of" the employment is not sufficient to impose liability, for to be compensable, the injury must also "arise out of" the employment. Id. at 58.

The "arising out of" component refers to an origin or cause of the injury that must be in some risk connected with or incident to the employment, so as to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury. Id. There are three categories of risk to which an employee may be exposed: (1) risks distinctly associated with the employment; (2) risks personal to the employee; and (3) neutral risks, which have no particular employment or personal characteristics. Springfield Urban League v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2103 IL App (4th) 120219WC, ¶ 27; Young v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2014 IL App (4th) 130392WC. Injuries resulting from a neutral risk are not generally compensable and do not arise out of the employment unless the employee was exposed to the risk to a greater degree than the general public. Id.

The "in the course of" component refers to the time, place and circumstances under which the accident occurred. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 131 Ill. 2d 478, 483 (1989). If an injury occurs within the time period of employment, at a place where the employee can reasonably be expected to be in the performance of her duties, and while she is performing those duties or doing something incidental thereto, the injuries are deemed to have been received in the course of the employment. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 129 Ill. 2d at 58. "Injuries sustained on an employer's premises, or at a place where the claimant might reasonably have been while performing his duties, and while a claimant is at work, or within a reasonable time before and after work, are generally deemed to have been received in the course of the employment." Johnson v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2011 IL App (2d) 100418WC, ¶21.

In the case at hand, the Arbitrator notes that Respondent has argued that no evidence was presented at trial that any hazard existed or that there was a defect of any kind, that the outdoor telephone booth was a neutral risk that had no particular employment or personal characteristics such as those that the general public is commonly exposed to and that Petitioner admitted that she was familiar with the area at issue. The Arbitrator notes, however, that Petitioner was required to climb over a railing while handing supplies to her co-workers, which placed her in an awkward, bent-over position next to a wall-mounted telephone booth that was hanging out over her as she maneuvered herself over the railing, and that her employment activities placed her in this awkward and precarious position leading to her having hit her head and having suffered injury. Although the area was admittedly open to the general public, the Arbitrator notes that the general public would generally not be expected to be climbing over the railing or have their attention diverted by handing supplies to others in the area.

As a result thereof, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner met her burden of proof in establishing that she sustained accidental injuries that arose out of and in the course of her employment with Respondent on June 26, 2013.

With respect to disputed issue (L) pertaining to the nature and extent of Petitioner's injury, and consistent with 820 ILCS 305/8.1b, permanent partial disability shall be established using the following criteria: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a) of Section 8.1b of the Act; (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. Id.

With respect to Subsection (i) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that no AMA rating was offered by either party in this matter. As a result thereof, the Arbitrator gives no weight to this factor.

With respect to Subsection (ii) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner continues to work for Respondent. The Arbitrator finds that the nature and demands of her position will likely have some affect on her permanent partial disability and, as such, the Arbitrator places greater weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (iii) of Section 8.1b(b), Petitioner was 57 years old on her date of accident. Given the age of Petitioner and the fact that she has been placed under permanent restrictions by Dr. Stortzum, the Arbitrator places greater weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (iv) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner has returned to work in a light duty capacity at her previous position, but there was the suggestion at the time of arbitration that Respondent may be unable to provide work within her restrictions in the summer months, which would thereby result in a reduction in her annual earnings. The Arbitrator places some weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (v) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner testified that her arms now have limited mobility and that she has difficulty turning her head side-to-side and looking up. Petitioner testified that she has headaches every couple of days. Petitioner testified that she has weakness in her arms. Petitioner further testified that she does not currently take any medication for her injury, but that she uses a heating pad nightly. At the time of the February 11, 2016 visit with Dr. MacGregor, it was noted that Petitioner stated that she was doing fine and had intermittent pain. It was noted that Petitioner noted that she had good and bad days in terms of pain severity, that she stated that she completed physical therapy but was getting headaches after physical therapy and that she complained of pain, numbness and tingling in her hands bilaterally. (PX3). The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner's evidence of disability at the time of arbitration, namely her continued complaints and purported limitations, were corroborated by her treating records at the conclusion of her treatment with Dr. MacGregor. The Arbitrator accordingly places greater weight on this factor in determining permanency.

The Arbitrator notes that the determination of permanent partial disability benefits is not simply a calculation, but an evaluation of all of the factors as stated in the Act in which consideration is not given to any single factor as the sole determinant. Based on the above factors and the record in its entirety, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 35% loss of use of the person-as-a-whole under Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

DISSENT

The Arbitrator found that Petitioner's September 16, 2015 accident resulted in a lumbar strain only. The Arbitrator further found that Petitioner reached maximum medical improvement in November 2015 and that his L4-L5 herniation and recommended fusion was not causally related.

I find that under the chain-of-events analysis, Petitioner's current condition is causally related to his September 16, 2015 accident and I would order the Respondent to provide and pay for prospective medical treatment.

Petitioner was a 41-year old maintenance worker at McDonald's with no prior history of back problems. On the above date, he slipped on a ladder and injured his low back. He reported the incident immediately to the store manager and was advised to go the doctor. Petitioner presented to Silver Cross Hospital that day complaining of an electrical type pain in the low back radiating primarily to the left side. Petitioner thereafter began to work light duty; however, he stated that he performed most of his regular duties.

Petitioner then underwent physical therapy with some relief. An MRI performed on December 7, 2015 showed a right-sided herniated disc at L4-L5 and a broad-based disc bulge/protrusion at L5-SI. Petitioner was then seen by Dr. Richard Koutsky, an orthopedist, on December 23, 2015 with complaints of pain down the left leg. The examination revealed a decreased pin prick sensation on the left, a positive straight leg raise on the left, tenderness and spasms to palpation, and limited range of motion. Dr. Koutsky reviewed the MRI and noted that it demonstrated a central disc herniation and extruded fragmented at L4-L5 with stenosis and nerve root impingement. Dr. Koutsky diagnosed Petitioner with left radiculopathy at L4-L5 and an extruded herniated disc.

From January 2016 through August 2016, Petitioner engaged in continuous conservative treatment including physical therapy and injections. In September 2016, Petitioner returned to regular duty and noticed an increase in his symptoms. Petitioner returned to Dr. Koutsky on September 15, 2016 and reported that his symptoms recurred severely. Petitioner was then seen by Dr. Sean Salehi, a neurosurgeon, on October 24, 2016. Dr. Salehi reviewed the MRI and noted that it revealed a moderate central to right paracentral herniated disc at L4-L5 with significant, right more than left, lateral recessed stenosis and moderate bilateral facet arthropathy at L4-L5. Dr. Salehi noted that Petitioner had mechanical back pain secondary to a permanent aggravation of disc disease at L4-L5 and an annular tear at L4-L5 due to a disc herniation causally related to the work injury. Dr. Salehi recommended an L4-L5 transforaminal lumbar interbody fusion as Petitioner failed conservative treatment.

Dr. Jay Levin performed a Section 12 exam on January 27, 2016. Though he found significant strength deficits and sensory changes, he opined that the Petitioner suffered a strain only which should have resolved in 4 to 6 weeks.

Petitioner worked at the Respondent's facility from the date of accident through May 5, 2017. He then went to work at another McDonald's.

I believe there is causation using the chain of events analysis. Respondent argues that the Petitioner may have injured his back after he left the job, and that the pain location changed from the right to the left leg throughout the period of treatment. The record establishes that Petitioner underwent treatment on a regular basis following the accident. The MRI revealed a moderate central to right paracentral herniated disc at L4-L5 with significant, right more than left, lateral recessed stenosis and moderate bilateral facet arthropathy at L4-L5. While Petitioner improved with treatment, his condition never fully healed following the accident. Petitioner then experienced a severe recurrence of his symptoms upon his return to regular duty. Petitioner was still working for the Respondent when the diagnosis and surgical recommendation was made.

The Majority and the Arbitrator relied on the opinion of Dr. Levin. I believe Dr. Levin's opinion is not persuasive. Dr. Levin's examination noted positive findings. His opinion that Petitioner sustained a strain only is contradicted by the record. Clearly the Petitioner did not have a strain, which resolved itself within a short period of time. Therefore, I would find causal connection and award the lumbar fusion as recommended by Dr. Salehi.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The petitioner testified through an interpreter. On direct examination he testified that on September 16, 2015, he had worked for McDonald's in Orland Park, for approximately six years and, while working at this McDonald's, he also worked at other McDonald's restaurants on a part-time basis. The petitioner was a maintenance man. His first job at the respondent's Orland Park location was in the kitchen - but, he was promoted to maintenance. His duties included cleaning and maintaining the refrigerators and other equipment, as well as basic maintenance.

On September 16, 2015, the petitioner was placing boxes for storage in a room above the bathrooms. While stepping up on a ladder, a box he was lifting was about to slip. He managed to hold onto the box and the ladder moved. Nothing fell, and the petitioner did not fall, but he felt pain in his back.

The petitioner testified that he reported the incident to the store manager. She told him that if he needed to go to the doctor to feel free to do so. Later that same day, he went to Silver Cross Hospital. He stated that he had electricity-like pain in his low back. He took medication, which he stated helped but not completely.

On October 2, 2015, the petitioner sought medical treatment at La Clinica. He received physical therapy and eventually was sent for MRI. From La Clinica he was referred to Dr. Koutsky at Elmhurst Orthopedics. Dr. Koutsky recommended injections in his back. He referred the petitioner to Dr. Husain who performed a series of three injections. The petitioner testified that these did not help very much.

Following the injections, the petitioner did not feel the same pain as he had on the date of accident. He testified that it was more intense. Specifically, it bothered him a lot more during activities. These included sleeping, moving side to side, and when he was bathing.

The petitioner testified that he returned to Dr. Koutsky following the injections and the doctor recommended surgery. The petitioner then saw Dr. Salehi for a second opinion. He also recommended surgery and the petitioner wants to have the surgery performed by Dr. Salehi. When asked if he was taking pain medication, the petitioner responded that he is taking Advil when the pain is very intense - at night and when he goes to sleep. When asked by his attorney more specifically how often he takes the Advil, he stated a couple of times a week.

The petitioner testified that he currently is working, but only one job now. Before the accident, he had a full-time job and a part-time job. He no longer works for the respondent McDonald's in Orland Park - but only works for the McDonald's in Lockport. He performs three days of maintenance there and the rest of the time he spends working in the kitchen.

The petitioner testified on cross-examination that he went to Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet following his accident and he lives in Joliet. He further described the pain he was experiencing in his back at that time as a sharp pain, like a shock or electricity. He described it as a great deal of pain. He did not recall being asked his symptoms when he was at the hospital. He did not recall telling them that he had experienced prior episodes of back pain on rare occasions. He testified that he did not have any prior injuries to his back. He stated that he went to Silver Cross in Joliet is because it is the only place he knew that was close by.

The petitioner testified that he went to La Clinica approximately two weeks later. He stated that Silver Cross gave him medication for two weeks. He testifed that La Clinica is located at 5738 South Pulaski Road in Chicago and he drove himself there. The petitioner testified that all his treatment has been in Cook County except for Dr. Koutsky, who is in Elmhurst. The petitioner drove himself to all his appointments.

The petitioner testified that he continued working both his full-time and part-time jobs following the accident. He admitted that he had to fill out a new application to work for SueCo on November 22, 2015, because ownership of the McDonald's had changed. When asked if SueCo's records show that he had worked for them from December of 2015, through December of 2017, without restrictions; the petitioner testified that would be inaccurate. He has restrictions and they know it.

The respondent called Ms. Kelly Glaeser. Ms. Glaeser has been employed by the respondent for almost 19 years. She works for the owners, the Freemans, and her current position is that of supervisor. As of July 25th, she will have been in that position for one year. Prior to this position, she was a general manager at the store at 159th and Wolf Road in Orland Park. She held that position for four years and her duties included basic operation of that location. This included running service and taking care of everything in the store. She also did scheduling. If someone had work restrictions, they brought them to her. In addition to her supervisory role, she also worked the store, which meant that she actually participated in the preparation of food and the activities at the store.

She testified that she knew the petitioner because he had worked for her, including in September of 2015. She was his boss until the time he left. If she was present at the time, he reported directly to her. Otherwise, he would report other managers.

She was aware of the petitioner's September 16, 2015, accident because he told her about it right after it occurred. She stated that she had additional conversations with him about his injury at later dates. Eventually, the petitioner began coming to work with notes, which were restrictions from doctors. The restrictions were honored through a modification of his prior position.

Ms. Glaeser testified that she had other conversations with the petitioner concerning his injuries. On October 26, 2016, Ms. Glaeser and the owner, Bob Freeman, had a conversation with the petitioner about how he was feeling. The petitioner stated that he was fine, his back was fine, the doctors wanted him to get surgery but he did not want it because he did not need it.

She testified that she did not notice anything unusual about his activities, any pain behaviors, while he was working light duty. He did bring a back brace with him to work and would bring it inside with him. However, it sat in their crew room on their table. She noticed this on a couple of occasions. She stated that the petitioner's last day of work was May 5, 2017.

Robert Freeman testified for the respondent. He testified that he owned McDonald's restaurants, including the one in Orland Park that was the subject of the testimony that day. He stated that he was aware of the petitioner's accident and was informed of it that day. He also kept informed of the petitioner's condition because he saw the doctor's notes that came in.

Mr. Freeman testified that when the petitioner was under restrictions they were followed 100%. He noticed on occasion that the petitioner would lift something that he should not, and he would have to tell him not to lift that while on restrictions. Mr. Freeman stated that he never had to use an interpreter to communicate with the petitioner.

Mr. Freeman also confirmed the conversation that the petitioner had with him and Ms. Glaeser on October 26, 2016, about not wanting to go for further treatment and feeling better. Mr. Freeman confirmed that RX7 documented what was told to them.

Mr. Freeman also testified that he learned later that the petitioner worked at another McDonald's - including work for the Corey's - for approximately a year to a year and a half prior to the time that he resigned from the respondent's location.

Sometime shortly before the petitioner resigned his employment with the respondent, Mr. Freeman learned that he was doing grill work and maintenance work at the Corey's McDonald's without restrictions. Mr. Freeman also testified that he had a conversation with another owner by the name of Sue, whose last name he could not recall because she had remarried. When he asked about the work that the petitioner was doing at Sue's McDonald's, the supervisor had to call him back. It was either the store manager or the general manager who confirmed that the petitioner was working for them at the time without any restrictions.

When asked on cross-examination about the physical nature of work at McDonald's, Mr. Freeman testified that the job of a maintenance worker involves heavy lifting. Again, Mr. Freeman stated that when the petitioner was working with restrictions for him they would often have to stop him from working beyond his restrictions. He stated that the petitioner generally was a good employee and a hard worker.

The petitioner testified in rebuttal that he did not wear the back brace because he was not able to work with it on. If he wore it while working, he could not breathe. Also, the doctor told him that he did not have to wear it all the time, only when he had pain.

MEDICAL

On September 16, 2015, the petitioner injured his low back while lifting a box at work. He initially sought care at Silver Cross Hospital in Joliet, where he told them that his preferred language was English and described his symptoms as "achy." He told them that he had prior episodes on rare occasions. With the exception of tenderness in the left lumbar area, his examination was normal. The petitioner was diagnosed with a lumbar strain and was referred to Dr. Mohammad Kahn, since he had no family physician. He was to be seen the following day.

The petitioner was seen two weeks later at La Clinica, a chiropractic and physical therapy practice located in Chicago, Illinois. The first visit was on October 2, 2015. He testified that he sought treatment there at the recommendation of a co-worker. The petitioner worked full duty up until this date. Once seen at La Clinica, he was given restrictions and placed on light duty beginning October 2nd.

The petitioner continued at La Clinica. On October 29, 2015, the petitioner told the doctor that he was having mild lower back pain - but, his condition was a lot better. He denied any numbness or tingling into his lower extremities. He stated that work did not affect his condition but bending still caused mild pain. He was not taking any pain medication. The doctor released him to full duty on that date.

The petitioner underwent MRI on December 7, 2015. The radiologist interpreted it as showing a right-sided herniated disc at L4-5 and a broad-based disc bulge/protrusion at L5-S1. The remainder of the spine appeared unremarkable. Three days later the petitioner underwent an EMG. The radiologist interpreted findings that he thought might be ascribed to early left-sided lumbosacral radiculopathy, as well as findings consistent with anterior tarsal tunnel syndrome.

The petitioner continued under the care of physicians at La Clinica. On December 23, 2015, he saw Dr. Richard Koutsky at the recommendation of Dr. Jao. Examination revealed decreased pin prick sensation on the left, as well as positive left-sided straight leg raising tests. There was some tenderness and spasm noted to palpation and limited range of motion. Dr. Koutsky interpreted the MRI to show a central disc herniation and extruded fragmented L4-5 with stenosis and nerve root impingement. Dr. Koutsky diagnosed a left L4-5 radiculopathy and extruded herniated disc. Trigger point injections were given.

The petitioner attended physical therapy at La Clinica on January 14, 2016, and he reported his pain level at 2/10 and that he was tolerating working full time without increased pain. On January 27, 2016, the petitioner was examined under section 12 of the Act by Dr. Jay Levin at Adult and Pediatric Orthopedics at the request of the respondent. Dr. Levin took a complete history, reviewed the medical records as well as the MRI and the EMG. Dr. Levin noted several non-anatomical findings. He reviewed the MRI study, which he indicated showed a central disc herniation at L4-5 as well as several degenerative conditions at the remaining lumbar levels to the sacrum. Dr. Levin thought that the MRI findings were consistent with the petitioner's age. He opined that the petitioner suffered a lumbar strain which appeared to have healed within four to six weeks of the injury. He indicated that it was appropriate for the petitioner to return to his full duty capacity, which he did within seven to ten days from his accident. He did not think that any further medical care was necessary for the petitioner.

The petitioner continued treatment at both La Clinica and with Dr. Koutsky. He last was seen at La Clinica in July of 2016. On August 11, 2016, Dr. Koutsky noted that the petitioner was anxious to return to work in a full duty capacity and that his therapy and injections were complete. Dr. Koutsky released him to return to full duty work and asked him to follow up in one month. The petitioner returned on September 15, 2016, and Dr. Koutsky noted that the petitioner's symptoms had recurred severely. Dr. Koutsky referred the petitioner to Dr. Geoffrey Dixon for a neurosurgical opinion.

In October of 2016, the petitioner was seen by Dr. Sean Salehi of Neurosurgical Surgery and Spine Surgery in Westchester, Illinois. Dr. Koutsky last found unchanged neurological examination with positive straight leg raising test on the left. Dr. Salehi's examination did not note this – but, it did reveal decreased sensation in the left calf and foot. Dr. Salehi reviewed the MRI studies and noted the findings at L4-5 – but, he interpreted these findings as showing a right paracentral herniated disc with significant right more than left recessed stenosis. Dr. Salehi recommended a spinal fusion. The petitioner saw Dr. Salehi last in November of 2017. Dr. Salehi continued to recommend a fusion.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Mr. Freeman, owner of the respondent McDonald's restaurant, testified that his discussions with the petitioner's other employers indicated that the petitioner worked at those other McDonald's restaurants, for other owners, without restrictions. While the petitioner denied this, stating that "he has restrictions and they know it," the records of his other employer, SueCo, do not support his testimony and corroborate Mr. Freeman's. (RX6) The evidence shows that the petitioner worked unrestricted the entire time at the other McDonald's for both the Coreys and SueCo.

The petitioner testified that immediately following the incident he felt electric like pain that later was a lot of pain or great pain. His records from Silver Cross Hospital the day of the accident indicate that the petitioner reported an achy-type pain. The petitioner testified that he currently is in pain severe enough that he wants to proceed with surgery. He takes only Advil a couple of times a week. The arbitrator did not observe the petitioner show any discomfort or pain behaviors during his several hour arbitration hearing which included his testimony and that of two other live witnesses.

In addition, the petitioner testified with the assistance of an interpreter. The respondent's witnesses both testified that they never had any difficulty communicating in English with the petitioner. The arbitrator realizes that the petitioner might have been nervous at hearing and preferred the comfort of an interpreter assisting him. Nevertheless, the arbitrator observed the petitioner repeatedly begin to answer counsels' questions with gestures, head nods and verbally, even before the question was finished let alone had the interpreter translated it.

The respondent's examiner under section 12 of the act, Dr. Levin, noted a disc herniation on MRI study, as did the other doctors. Dr. Levin did not note any findings indicating that the disc caused a surgical condition and he did not find any additional care warranted. Dr. Levin's findings and opinions are supported by the facts that the petitioner continued working without restrictions for McDonald's restaurants other than the respondent's, the petitioner's testimony that he takes Advil for pain a few times per week, his sporadic complaints of pain and subjective responses to clinical testing by his doctors, and the absence of any sign of discomfort during a hearing that lasted several hours.

When last Dr. Koutsky saw the petitioner, he released him from care to return to work full duty. The petitioner then returned a month later with such dramatic change that Dr. Koutsky referred him. This coincided with Dr. Levin's section 12 examination.

At that time, Dr. Koutsky noted a herniated disc with primarily left-sided radiculopathy that he later termed as bilateral radiculopathy and a positive SLR test on the left during the time of his treatment of the petitioner. Dr. Salehi noted straight leg raising causing back pain only and MRI which showed primarily right-sided problems with only mechanical back pain, no radiculopathy.

CAUSAL CONNECTION

The Arbitrator finds that on September 16, 2015, the petitioner sustained an accident arising out of an in the course of his employment with the respondent for which compensation is payable. He sustained a lumbar strain injury.

Although all doctors found that the petitioner's MRI showed a disc herniation, as noted above, Drs. Koutsky and Salehi contradicted each other as to whether it was a right sided disc or one causing problems on the left and whether any radiculopathy resulted from this disc pathology. In turn, this evidence supports Dr. Levin's opinion that the disc is not causing any problems requiring treatment. Additionally, the records from LaClinica, in which the petitioner reported that he had minimal pain, as well as the petitioner's ability to continue work without restrictions, all support Dr. Levin's opinions regarding the petitioner's ability to return to full unrestricted duty with no further treatment. Dr. Levin opined that the petitioner would reach MMI within six weeks.

MEDICAL

The petitioner submitted medical bills into evidence for payment. Based on the above finding on causation and the related finding that the petitioner reached MMI by early November 2015, the Arbitrator denies all bills submitted, as being incurred for treatment after the petitioner reached MMI.

Finally, based on the above findings on causation and maximum medical improvement, the Arbitrator denies the petitioner's request for prospective medical care.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petitions for Review having been filed by both the Petitioner and Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, medical expenses, temporary total disability, Section 19(d) of the Act, permanent disability and Respondent's credit and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

The underlying claim arises out of an accident[1] involving Petitioner's right ankle on March 13, 2012. Petitioner claimed that she was injured when, hurrying to a class, she tripped on stripping between carpet and tile. Petitioner tumbled forward landing on her hands and knees with her ankles and feet turned underneath her. Several witnesses testified regarding the school and condition of the flooring. The Arbitrator ultimately found that the stripping was higher than the carpet and tile and that Petitioner did sustain an injury arising out of and in the course of her employment with Respondent on March 13, 2012 as a result. He determined that Petitioner suffered a right ankle sprain which aggravated her pre-existing arthritis and accelerated her need for a right ankle fusion performed on April 5, 2013. However, the Arbitrator concluded that Petitioner was noncompliant with treatment after her surgery severing causal connection effective April 16, 2013 pursuant to Section 19(d) of the Act. He awarded benefits commensurate with his conclusions of law. Thereafter, Petitioner and Respondent filed cross petitions for review of the arbitration decision filed on July 5, 2018.

1 The parties' request for hearing form at arbitration included both case numbers, but only referenced the March 13, 2012 accident claimed in Case No. 13 WC 31793. At the hearing, Petitioner testified that she suffered a second accident affecting the right ankle on November 12, 2012 (as claimed in Case No. 14 WC 21613). The Arbitrator did not reach any conclusions in his decision related to the second claimed accident. Neither party appealed the lack of findings or conclusions in the arbitration decision for the consolidated cases related to the latter November 12, 2012 accident claim.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Background

Petitioner was employed by Respondent as an Individual Aide at the time of her March 13, 2012 accident. In this position she taught special education students one-on-one ensuring their work was completed and that the students had the proper books and made it to their classes. If the child was disabled, Petitioner would have to feed him or her, change diapers, and lift the child from the floor to a chair and vice versa. Petitioner would also accompany students on field trips. Depending on what school she was assigned to, she may have to traverse three flights of stairs. Petitioner worked 23 years for Respondent.

Prior to her employment with Respondent, Petitioner had obtained a high school diploma, an associate in arts degree from Rend Lake College, and took several nursing classes. Her degree and nursing classes were completed in the 1970's. Petitioner also held several waitress jobs, nurse's aide jobs at two hospitals, and worked at a day care center.

Petitioner owns a computer but testified that she only used it for social media and searching the internet. She has no training in Microsoft or Excel and does not consider herself to be a good typist. While working for Respondent, Petitioner used a computer when working with 6th and 7th grade students.

B. Accident

On March 13, 2012, Petitioner was at Casey Middle School. She was walking to the science building where her student was located. Just inside the doors of the science building was a transition from carpet to tile flooring. A transition strip was used to separate the carpet and tile. While hurrying back to her child's class, Petitioner tripped on the strip, tumbled forward and landed on her hands and knees with her ankles and feet turned underneath her. Petitioner felt pain in her hands, wrists, knees and ankles. She was not carrying anything at the time.

Petitioner testified that she reported the injury to the Nurse, Lisa Tucker. Petitioner knew there would be a video recording of her fall because there was a camera at the end of the hall recording everything that came through the area. She requested to see a playback of the incident on video, which was granted by the substitute secretary. The video was requested by Petitioner's Counsel but was never provided.

Petitioner had pain and swelling in her feet and ankles prior to the accident. However, she testified that her right ankle became more swollen and painful following the accident.

C. Pre-injury Medical Treatment

Prior to the accident, Petitioner sought right ankle treatment with Dr. Gunzel in February of 2011 due to neuropathy and swelling in her feet and arthritic ankles. Petitioner also testified regarding prior treatment with a pain doctor, Dr. Juergens, for her feet on one occasion in February 2012.

On February 4, 2011, Petitioner presented to Dr. Gunzel for bilateral foot and right ankle pain, gradually worsening. She informed Dr. Gunzel that she had been diagnosed with osteoarthritis approximately 10 years ago. Petitioner's diagnosis included pain in the joint involving the ankle and foot, and osteoarthritis localized primarily involving the ankle and foot.

On May 20, 2011, Petitioner indicated to Dr. Gunzel that her foot pain had not improved. She received bilateral injections at the tarsal sinus and was placed on restrictions of no walking more than one block or standing over 20 minutes at a time. At this time her diagnoses included degenerative joint disease, unspecified inflammatory or toxic neuropathy, metatarsalgia bilateral, hallux limitus left, valgus bilateral and bunion deformity bilateral.

On December 9, 2011, Petitioner informed Dr. Gunzel that her condition was worsening. Another injection was performed, and shoe selection was discussed to minimize discomfort. Petitioner was told to follow up in four weeks. However, Petitioner cancelled her January 6, 2012 visit and her records were sent to Dr. Juergens.

On February 29, 2012, Petitioner's complaints to Dr. Juergens included pain in her neck, bilateral shoulders, bilateral hands, low back and bilateral feet. She was able to stand on her heels and toes bilaterally. Petitioner was diagnosed with unspecified hereditary or idiopathic peripheral neuropathy, prescribed medication and recommended to follow-up with a neurologist.

An October 2012 report by Section 12 examiner Dr. Schmidt later indicated that Petitioner denied any trauma or injury to her right ankle prior to March 2012.

D. Post-injury Treatment, Section 12 Examinations and Employment

On March 13, 2012, Petitioner presented at the Good Samaritan Hospital emergency room ("ER") with complaints of injury to her knees bilaterally and right ankle and foot. Abrasions were noted on the left knee and ankle and there was tenderness and swelling to her right foot and ankle. Bilateral knee x-rays revealed moderate osteoarthritic changes of the left knee. Right ankle x-rays revealed extensive soft tissue swelling and osteochondral defect and impacted fracture of the talus of indeterminate age and etiology, a healed displaced fracture of the anterior aspect of the tibia of indeterminate age, degenerative changes of the tarsal bones, and enthesophyte at the insertion of the plantar aponeurosis in the calcaneus. Right foot x-rays revealed a question of bony demineralization and osteonecrosis of the talus, and arthritic changes at the first metatarsophalangeal joint. Prescription medication was provided, and Petitioner was given an ace bandage and crutches. She was taken off work for three days.

Petitioner then presented to Dr. Freehill at the Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois on March 27, 2012. She indicated that she had tripped over loose stripping on the floor and fell on both knees, both hands and her feet were bent underneath her. Petitioner had significant swelling over her lateral ankle ligaments. After a physical exam and review of x-rays, she was diagnosed with an acute right ankle sprain with evidence of old injury. Physical therapy was ordered and pain medication and a lace up brace were prescribed after Petitioner indicated she did not want a CAM walker boot. Petitioner was placed on light duty and was to avoid prolonged standing and walking.

On May 1, 2012, Dr. Freehill diagnosed Petitioner with a right ankle sprain with persistent pain and swelling. He was concerned about the swelling and possible osteonecrosis of the talus. Petitioner was also concerned that her cervical fusion with hardware would interfere with an MRI, thus she was sent for continued therapy while on light duty restrictions instead. The prescribed therapy at Physical Rehab Center in May and June of 2012 was unsuccessful and ultimately put on hold pending a follow up with Dr. Freehill due to Petitioner's persistent ankle pain. However, she was able to complete her work that school year.

On June 12, 2012, Dr. Freehill still noted a large amount of swelling over the lateral ankle ligaments, with tenderness over the ankle, ankle ligaments and tightness in the achilles tendon. Therapy was discontinued, and Petitioner was referred to an ankle specialist.

Petitioner also testified that she returned to work for the school year, but was working with a high functioning, older autistic child who did not require much physical aid. Petitioner still had pain and swelling and kept her ankle propped up on a chair during the school day.

Upon Dr. Freehill's recommendation, Petitioner underwent a right ankle MRI on September 17, 2012. On September 28, 2012 Dr. Freehill noted that the MRI revealed evidence of central collapse of the central and lateral talar articular cortex, degenerative changes of the anterior and posterior tibia and tibiotalar joint effusion with loose bodies. Petitioner was again referred to a foot and ankle specialist.

Petitioner underwent a Section 12 examination at Respondent's request with Dr. Schmidt, an orthopedic surgeon, on October 22, 2012. Petitioner complained of a painful and swollen right ankle and indicated difficulty with prolonged standing, walking and driving. A physical exam showed the circumference of her right ankle at the malleolar to be 31cm, while it was 29cm on the left side. Petitioner was unable to do a double-limb heel rise. Dr. Schmidt reviewed Petitioner's x-rays and diagnosed osteochondral lesion, osteonecrosis of the talus and osteoarthritis of the ankle. Dr. Schmidt agreed that Petitioner's current condition was related to the accident in question and recommended a CT scan. Dr. Schmidt further opined that Petitioner would likely require an ankle replacement.

Dr. Schmidt offered deposition testimony on December 20, 2017. He testified that Petitioner told him she spent 85% of her day lying down. He stated that his objective findings supported Petitioner's objective complaints, and that Petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement ("MMI") at that time. Dr. Schmidt testified that his causal connection opinion was due to an absence of previous trauma to Petitioner's ankle. He stated Petitioner's osteochondral lesion and osteoarthritis were long-standing but had been accentuated by the accident in question.

Petitioner suffered a second accident[2] affecting the right ankle on November 12, 2012. Petitioner testified that at the end of a class period some students were horse-playing. One student was then pushed into Petitioner's right ankle and kicked it. Petitioner felt pain and reported it to the Assistant Principal. Petitioner testified that she underwent x-rays at Good Samaritan and followed up with Dr. Freehill, who referred her to Dr. Klein at Washington University.

On November 21, 2012, Petitioner presented to another orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Aubuchon, for a second opinion. He noted significant right ankle swelling along with significant grinding with flexion and extension of the ankle. He diagnosed end stage arthritis of the ankle and recommended an ankle fusion and restricted Petitioner to sedentary work through December 1, 2012.

Petitioner testified that her student moved over Christmas Break of that school year. Upon returning in January, Petitioner was assigned to a child at the Early Childhood Center. This child was wheelchair-bound and could not speak. The child was the size of a 5 or 6-year-old, and Petitioner was tasked with lifting her regularly. Petitioner worked with the child for three days before deciding her ankle was too painful to assist this child. Petitioner spoke with the Superintendent about being assigned a new child, but none was available. Subsequently, Petitioner did not receive temporary total disability ("TTD") benefits, was denied disability benefits through the school district and ultimately went on FMLA. She did not receive payment, however, as she had no sick time available.

On January 18, 2013, Petitioner returned to Dr. Freehill who noted her persistent pain. He diagnosed right ankle arthritis and talar collapse and recommended an ankle fusion. Petitioner was placed on light duty and referred to Dr. Klein.

Petitioner underwent a second Section 12 examination at Respondent's request with Dr. Schmidt on February 4, 2013. Dr. Schmidt noted the November 12, 2012 injury, but maintained his prior causal connection opinions as unchanged.

Petitioner then began treatment with Dr. Klein on February 12, 2013. Severe pain and swelling were noted in her right ankle and a physical exam revealed a severely antalgic gait as well as Petitioner having difficulty bearing weight on her right foot. Dr. Klein reviewed x-rays and diagnosed severe right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity and idiopathic peripheral neuropathy. He also recommended a CT scan and explained to Petitioner that if she were to undergo surgery, she would be required to use a cast and boot. Dr. Klein cautioned against surgery if Petitioner did not think she would be able to adhere to post-operative restrictions.

The CT scan performed on February 28, 2013 revealed a large osteochondral lesion of the lateral right talar dome with articular collapse involving 2/3 of the talar articular surface, severe secondary right tibiotalar and tibiofibular joint osteoarthritis and mild right posterior subtalar joint osteoarthritis.

[2] The Arbitrator made no ruling relative to this accident in his Decision and the accident was not raised as an issue on appeal to the Commission.

On February 28, 2013, Petitioner also presented to Dr. Klein who noted Petitioner's difficulty with wearing a walking boot in the past, as well as Petitioner's concern about surgical recovery. Dr. Klein indicated that post surgically Petitioner would be non-weight bearing in a cast for six weeks, followed by four weeks in a weight-bearing cast. After that, Petitioner would be allowed to bear weight in a walking boot.

On March 28, 2013, Petitioner returned to Dr. Klein for a pre-operative follow-up and was apprised of the risks and benefits of surgery. Dr. Klein recommended that Petitioner practice non-weight bearing at home prior to surgery.

Regarding her employment, Petitioner testified that she decided to retire effective April 10, 2013. She sent an e-mail to that effect on April 2, 2013, three days prior to her scheduled surgery date. Prior to e-mailing her resignation, Petitioner testified that she phoned the school district and informed them that she did not want to retire, but she had to due to financial reasons. She has not been employed since. Had she continued her employment, Petitioner explained that she would have been taken off work for at least six months to recover.

On April 5, 2013, Petitioner underwent surgery. Specifically, Dr. Klein performed a right ankle complex arthrodesis with interposition wedge allograft and a right iliac crest bone graft. The post-operative diagnosis was right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity, and obesity.

Post-operatively, Petitioner saw Dr. Klein on April 16, 2013. She reported that she was "doing her best" to non-weight bear. Dr. Klein noted it sounded like "she is putting her foot on the ground several times" and she reiterated the importance of non-weight bearing to give her the best chance for success. Petitioner was placed in a short leg non-weight bearing cast.

At the hearing, Petitioner denied putting full weight on her foot and testified that she was only putting her foot down to rest it due to the heaviness of her cast. Petitioner acknowledged that Dr. Klein was adamant about how she was to protect her ankle after undergoing surgery. She testified that there would be occasions where she put her foot down, but only to balance, which she explained Dr. Klein allowed. She testified that she did not walk on it and testified that the surgery decreased, but did not eliminate, her pain and swelling. She also testified that she followed post-operative orders not to walk on her ankle and she explained that she hopped around on her left foot using a walker.

The medical records reflect that on May 16, 2013, Petitioner again followed up with Dr. Klein who noted that it sounded like Petitioner had been walking on her foot somewhat. Dr. Klein noted the lengthy prior discussions with Petitioner about post-surgical restrictions, including the recommendation that Petitioner refuse surgery if she was not willing to avoid weight bearing. Dr. Klein again stressed the importance of Petitioner complying with post-surgical restrictions in order to have a successful recovery. Notwithstanding, no evidence of hardware loosening or failure was present in Petitioner's x-rays. Petitioner was placed in a short weight-bearing cast and told that she could place weight on the extremity. She explained to Petitioner that she could weight bear but should stop walking if painful. Dr. Klein remained concerned with Petitioner's ability to comply and warned that Petitioner risked a non-union, which could lead to chronic pain.

On June 13, 2013, Petitioner still had clinical pain and had been weight bearing in the cast. An x-ray revealed stable hardware and a progressive fusion of the ankle joint line. Dr. Klein wanted to ease Petitioner into using a walking boot and noted that her radiographs looked good. Dr. Klein also allowed Petitioner to weight bear as tolerated in her boot and instructed not to walk without it. Dr. Klein further noted that Petitioner's "previous cast became somewhat loose because of calf atrophy. That may be why the ankle has been so sore." If she had discomfort, Petitioner was also advised to use her crutches and walker to keep weight off her foot.

On June 20, 2013, Petitioner presented to the Good Samaritan emergency room with right ankle pain status post fusion. A nurse practitioner noted the mechanism of injury that Petitioner "stepped wrong, possible twist." She also noted that Petitioner had a "(recent fracture repair, cast taken off about 1 week ago)." Petitioner's right ankle was swollen and tender, and she reported pain with ambulation in the boot. When she went in for x-rays, Petitioner was "wearing a boot [reporting p]ain shooting from ankle off leg." X-rays revealed an oblique fracture with mild displacement of the distal fibula. Petitioner was released from the emergency room with medication and follow up care instructions.

A telephone note from Dr. Klein's office on June 24, 2013 indicated Petitioner called requesting pain medication after being diagnosed with a fibular fracture the previous week. Dr. Klein believed the fracture was actually an osteotomy that was done during surgery. The following day during her scheduled appointment with Dr. Klein's nurse practitioner, Petitioner complained of increased pain at the right lateral ankle. Contrary to the fracture diagnosis at the emergency room, Petitioner's x-rays revealed no new fracture. She was placed in a short leg non-weight bearing cast.

On July 11, 2013, Petitioner reported to Dr. Klein that she was having good days and bad days with complaints of moderate swelling and tenderness to palpation around her ankle. Dr. Klein noted that Petitioner "came in a couple of weeks ago complaining of a lot of pain. I'm not sure what caused it." Dr. Klein was concerned that Petitioner was developing non-union due to her pain complaints. A CT scan was recommended.

On August 1, 2013, Dr. Klein reviewed Petitioner's CT scan taken August 1, 2013, which revealed a non-union of the right ankle arthrodesis, non-union of the distal fibular osteotomy, and mild subtular osteoarthritis. A bone stimulator was ordered. In a telephone note from that day, Dr. Klein restated Petitioner's post-surgical history and restrictions and told Petitioner that her arthrodesis had not healed. Dr. Klein did not restrict Petitioner from bearing weight and placed her in a boot allowing her to bear weight as tolerated. Dr. Klein allowed Petitioner to remove it to bathe and shower and indicated that she did not need to wear it to sleep.

On August 23, 2013, Petitioner returned to the emergency room at Good Samaritan after falling in her kitchen two weeks prior with worsened pain since then. Ankle x-rays revealed no changes.

On September 26, 2013, Petitioner underwent x-rays. Dr. Klein noted early signs of non-union in Petitioner's ankle joint. Petitioner was to transition to a solid molded AFO at the ankle to help her get back into a shoe and out of a boot. Bone stimulator usage was to continue.

As of January 16, 2014, x-rays revealed evidence of a non-union including a broken screw and a loose screw and plate fixation of the talus. A CT scan several months later on April 2, 2014 confirmed the non-union. On April 4, 2014 Petitioner was told that a revision surgery was the next step. Petitioner requested time to consider her options.

Petitioner testified that Dr. Klein informed her that her ankle was not healing properly and discussed possible additional surgery. Petitioner testified that she was given the option to forego surgery and simply deal with the symptoms. She ultimately decided to forego another surgery.

Petitioner presented then presented for an independent medical examination ("IME") with Dr. Krause on June 30, 2014, which was scheduled at her attorney's request. Dr. Krause, an orthopedic surgeon, opined that without evidence to the contrary he did not dispute the causation opinions by Drs. Schmidt and Freehill, indicating Petitioner's need for a right ankle fusion was causally related to her March 2012 accident. Dr. Krause noted a non-union of Petitioner's ankle but did not recommend another surgery at that time and placed Petitioner at MMI. Dr. Krause opined that Petitioner could work at a sedentary capacity with intermittent standing.

At a deposition on June 2, 2017, Dr. Krause acknowledged that Petitioner did not tell him about any significant problems with her ankle prior to the accident. Had she done so, Dr. Krause's opinions could have changed regarding causal connection. However, he ultimately acknowledged the possibility that the accident in question accelerated Petitioner's need for the surgery performed by Dr. Klein. Dr. Krause testified that, despite his opinions regarding treatment, Petitioner probably could not stand 8-10 hours daily.

Dr. Krause also noted that Petitioner's eventual post-surgical non-union was most commonly caused by smoking. He mentioned other common causes including premature weight-bearing and a big piece of allograft bone inserted (which Petitioner had). Notwithstanding other common or possible causes, Dr. Krause testified that Petitioner could have been at risk for a non-union regardless of weight-bearing although he opined that premature weight-bearing contributed to Petitioner's non-union in some way. Dr. Krause also testified relative to Petitioner's complaint of a twisted ankle after being placed in a boot in June of 2013. He opined that this injury suggested Petitioner was not wearing her boot at the time, as instructed by Dr. Klein.

In an October 10, 2016 addendum report, Dr. Krause noted his review of additional records dating back to 2010 but indicated that they did not provide any significant additional information. His opinions from the June 2014 IME remained unchanged.

In a July 24, 2017 addendum report, Dr. Schmidt noted his review of additional medical records received from Respondent's counsel. Therein, he opined that, although Petitioner had right ankle difficulty prior to the accident in question, he believed her condition did deteriorate due to the accident in question. As evidence, he noted that prior to the accident on February 29, 2012 Dr. Juergens indicated that Petitioner was able to lift on her toes. Conversely, during Dr. Schmidt's first examination of Petitioner on October 22, 2012, she was unable to do the same.

In his addendum report, Dr. Schmidt noted that Petitioner had been weight-bearing post-operatively in direct contradiction to Dr. Klein's recommendations. He also opined that Petitioner's non-compliance "would directly relate to her developing a non-union, especially what appears as an atrophic non-union as described in the further notes." He stated it was imperative that the ankle be non-stressed so that proper healing can take place. In his deposition, Dr. Schmidt confirmed his opinion that early weight-bearing and non-compliance would be a contributing factor to a non-union.

Notwithstanding, Dr. Schmidt admitted in his deposition that it was possible for a person to have a non-union even if they did not bear weight on a fusion. He also acknowledged that staying off a foot is very difficult for an ankle surgery patient to do, especially when that patient also has neuropathy. Dr. Schmidt also testified that he was not informed by Petitioner of her pre-accident treatment with Dr. Gunzel but testified that he likely treated Petitioner's right ankle arthritis. Ultimately, Dr. Schmidt maintained his causal connection opinion that the accident accelerated Petitioner's need for surgery, which remained unchanged.

E. Accident Investigation and Work Accommodations – Ms. Clark, Ms. McGreer, Mr. Green and Ms. Herzing

Petitioner testified that on August 9, 2012, she returned to the school so her co-employee Terri Clark could take several photographs of the stripping, which was loose where it met the tile. PX 16, Tr. 36. Petitioner testified the carpet was still in the same condition as it was at the time of accident. She stuck a ruler underneath the stripping to show how loose it was and explained that one could only see the raised area of carpet by bending down, not standing over it. She testified that the photos are not of good quality and make it seem as though the ruler is propped up. Petitioner stated that it only seems that the ruler is propped up due to the incline of the floor. She further testified that by the time the new school year started the stripping had been repaired.

Petitioner called Terri Clark as a witness. Ms. Clark is now retired, but previously served as Respondent's Committee Liaison. In 2012 she was the president of the Mt. Vernon Association of Classified Employees, the support staff union for the district.

Contemporaneous to the accident in question Ms. Clark heard about Petitioner's incident. In August 2012 Petitioner called her, and Ms. Clark suggested she take photos. Ms. Clark accompanied Petitioner to the school and took photos of the accident location. Ms. Clark testified that she could tell the carpet was loose where it joined the tile. The tack strip was not adhered to the carpet, which is why they were able to slide a ruler underneath it.

Respondent called Mary McGreer as a witness. Ms. McGreer is the Principal at Casey

Middle School and was so employed on the dates in question. Ms. McGreer was notified of Petitioner's March 2012 accident by the school nurse. She did not see Petitioner that day.

Ms. McGreer testified that the hallway where Petitioner's trip and fall took place is open to the general school population, staff and faculty. Groups of 75 students would traverse the hallway, as well as classes of 6th, 7th and 8th grade students, between 12 and 18 students per class. Visiting parents also had hallway access.

Ms. McGreer also completed an accident report on March 21, 2012 including a handwritten attachment from Petitioner describing the accident. Petitioner testified that the handwritten portion was drafted on the date of accident, so she would not forget any details, and she acknowledged that the report did not mention any defects on the floor, but she attributed this to drafting the note prior to going back and inspecting the floor later on the date of accident. Ms. McGreer testified that she examined the hallway and noted that the stripping was not loose. She stated that the hallway does have an incline, and after the incline the carpet continues for quite a while before the stripping and change to tile. Had there been any work repair orders between the accident date and March 21, 2012, Ms. McGreer would have signed it.

During the summer after the March 2012 accident, the school underwent some construction. Everything was pulled out of every classroom and placed in the hallway so that rooms could be cleaned including desks, chairs, and filing cabinets. In the process, she acknowledged that it is possible that damage could have been done to the hallway. Ms. McGreer was shown a photo of the hallway from May of 2012 and did not see any defect in the carpet. She testified that custodians maintain the hallway and, when a repair is necessary, she completes a work order and maintenance is called. Ms. McGreer testified that she is very paranoid about safety, so she inspects her school closely. However, she acknowledged that if there were small, inexpensive repairs necessary over the summer she would not be notified, and no work order would be necessary.

Ms. McGreer further testified that, as a first-year principal in 2012 and a self-proclaimed techie, she believed the school video system was grainy and antiquated. The system has since been updated, but at the time the server had a small memory, so recordings would only stay for 2-3 days. The cameras were motion-sensored so the more traffic went through, the quicker the memory would get used up. Ms. McGreer did not view the video and stated that if the substitute secretary alluded to by Petitioner showed Petitioner the video of the fall, that would be against Ms. McGreer's instructions. She only wanted herself and her usual secretary looking at video.

Ms. McGreer was also apprised of the November 12, 2012 incident by her assistant principal, as Ms. McGreer was away at meetings on the alleged date. She was unaware of any requests for professional accommodations made by Petitioner.

Respondent also called Michael Green as a witness. Mr. Green served as Respondent's Superintendent from July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2015. Prior to that he served as the Casey Middle School principal from 2006 to 2011. He testified that Petitioner was a very good employee.

One or two days after the incident, Mr. Green visited the school and had the head of maintenance show him the incident location. Mr. Green examined the location and noted that it appeared normal to him. Upon viewing Ms. Clark's photo of the hallway, Mr. Green stated that it did not look anything like that when he inspected the location. Mr. Green testified that the hallway in question was open to students, staff and faculty, as well as parents and other individuals who were authorized admission into the school.

When Mr. Green returned to work after spring break in 2013 he spoke with Petitioner who informed him that she was going to retire. He testified that Petitioner did not mention her reasons, however. After retiring Petitioner never contacted Mr. Green about employment that could accommodate her restrictions. Mr. Green testified that it would be difficult for Respondent to accommodate a person with Petitioner's restrictions due to the steps in the schools.

When Petitioner determined that she was physically unable to work with her newly assigned student in January 2013, Mr. Green testified that she did not ask him to assign her a new student. Mr. Green stated that such a request would definitely have been looked into.

In contrast, Petitioner testified that she had two meetings with Mr. Green regarding child assignment (one prior to Christmas break and one after), and she was told that there were no alternative children available. Petitioner acknowledged being told that there could be an opportunity to aid a new child, but no timeline could be placed on it. She reiterated that she did inform Mr. Green that she did not want to retire, but that it was her last resort due to financial needs.

Respondent called Nancy Herzing as a witness. Ms. Herzing was employed by Respondent through May 2017 as its Director of Business and is now retired. She performed all initial paperwork for workers' compensation claims and received Petitioner's papers for two claims, as well as retirement papers at some point. It was her understanding that Petitioner's retirement was voluntary.

F. Vocational Rehabilitation

On September 24, 2014, Petitioner presented to Stephen Dolan for a vocational evaluation. Petitioner had a cane and stated that she used it outside of the house. During the assessment Mr. Dolan noted that, after one hour and fifteen minutes, Petitioner had to elevate her right leg to waist level on another chair where she kept it elevated for the remainder of the evaluation.

Vocational testing revealed Petitioner had good word recognition and sentence comprehension and could spell above the high school level. Her math was at a ninth-grade level and her reading and spelling were in line with her education. A depression screening indicated a moderate depression level. Mr. Dolan opined that Petitioner had no specific vocational skills for a sedentary job, or a sedentary job that would allow intermittent standing. Mr. Dolan also noted Dr. Krause's restrictions placed on Petitioner of working in a sitting capacity with intermittent standing. These restrictions in conjunction with Petitioner's age, academic skills, work history and treating records from Dr. Klein led Mr. Dolan to conclude that there was no reasonably stable labor market for Petitioner.

At his deposition on June 20, 2017, Mr. Dolan indicated he had been a vocational rehabilitation counselor since 1972. He testified that Petitioner informed him that if she did not elevate her leg during the evaluation, her ankle would turn red. Mr. Dolan found this to be credible. He testified that Petitioner indicated she could only stand for five minutes before experiencing increased pain, could only walk five to ten minutes, stooping increased her pain, and she could not crouch or kneel. Mr. Dolan testified that Petitioner informed him that she avoided stairs and was otherwise dependent on handrails, and she had fallen four times since her ankle surgery.

Mr. Dolan also testified that Petitioner had rudimentary computer skills and knew how to use e-mail, the internet and had some word processing experience. She also had superior organizational skills, good interpersonal skills, and possessed the ability to take, give and implement instructions. Mr. Dolan testified that these skills would assist someone with experience gain employment. Petitioner did not, however, have any spreadsheet software or bookkeeping software experience. Based on his testing, Petitioner would have good skills to take courses at a community college. Mr. Dolan testified that Petitioner's vocational profile was of a 60-year-old woman approaching retirement age with community college education.

Given Petitioner's limitations and complaints, Mr. Dolan testified that an employer would be more likely to hire another candidate with more vocational skills. He acknowledged that he did not check any resources for job availability in Petitioner's area, stating that he was already familiar with said availability there. Mr. Dolan testified that if he called several employers and asked if they would be willing to hire someone who needs to elevate a foot at waist-high level for much of the day, he would already know the answer. Considering all of this, in conjunction with Petitioner's medical restrictions, Mr. Dolan testified that Petitioner was not employable in the open labor market.

On cross examination, Mr. Dolan acknowledged that having an associate degree or any higher-level education makes a person more marketable in the open labor market. He also acknowledged that Petitioner's complaints regarding her symptoms and restrictions were not reflected in Dr. Krause's June 30, 2014 IME report; thus Mr. Dolan's recitation of Petitioner's complaints were based on her subjective reports. Mr. Dolan acknowledged that there were available jobs within Petitioner's restrictions, but he doubted an employer would hire an unskilled or semi-skilled worker with said restrictions.

G. Current Condition

Regarding her current condition of ill-being, Petitioner testified that she has right ankle range of motion issues. She does not feel comfortable driving anymore, and also has pain and neuropathy in her feet, so she has stopped driving. Petitioner experiences pain daily, which worsens if she stands for too long, walks too much or moves her ankle back and forth. She also props her foot up whenever she is seated to relieve swelling. Petitioner uses a cane or walker when walking and loses her balance when lifting things, although she testified that her use of the walker is not related to her right ankle. Petitioner no longer goes grocery shopping and has limited her housekeeping. After her surgery, Petitioner was given Vicodin and then Ibuprofen until she began having kidney problems, so now she just deals with the pain.

Petitioner testified that that she suffered a temporary setback when she twisted her ankle in June of 2013 getting out of bed too quickly. Another incident saw Petitioner fall while in her kitchen, but there were no significant consequences to this fall. Petitioner testified that at no point after her ankle fusion did she attempt to return to work for Respondent, nor did she apply for any other employment. Petitioner testified that she did not believe she could work any job after her surgery. She explained that she had to prop her leg on a chair to reduce swelling most of the time and did not believe any employer would approve that. Petitioner currently receives social security disability.

II. CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A. Accident

The Arbitrator found that Petitioner sustained an accident that arose out of and in the course of employment. "To obtain compensation under the Act, a claimant bears the burden of showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he has suffered a disabling injury which arose out of and in the course of his employment." Sisbro, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 207 Ill. 2d 193, 203 (2003). An injury "arises out of" employment when "the injury had its origin in some risk connected with, or incidental to, the employment so as to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury." Sisbro, 207 Ill. 2d at 203.

The question of whether a claimant's injury arose out of his or her employment depends upon the type of risk to which he or she was exposed. Baldwin v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 409 Ill. App. 3d 472, 478 (2011). "There are three categories of risk to which an employee may be exposed: (1) risks that are distinctly associated with one's employment, (2) risks that are personal to the employee, such as idiopathic falls, and (3) neutral risks that have no particular employment or personal characteristics, such as those to which the general public is commonly exposed." Dukich v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 31.

"By itself, the act of walking across a floor at the employer's place of business does not establish a risk greater than that faced by the general public." First Cash Financial Services v. Industrial Comm'n, 367 Ill. App. 3d 102, 105 (2006). "Accordingly, for an injury caused by a fall to arise out of the employment, a claimant must present evidence which supports a reasonable inference that the fall stemmed from a risk associated with her employment." Id. at 106. Employment-related risks associated with injuries sustained as a consequence of a fall are those to which the general public is not exposed, including the risk of tripping on a defect at the employer's premises, or performing some work-related task which contributes to the risk of falling. Id.

In this case, as the Arbitrator found, the hallway where the accident occurred was not open to the general public but was open to students, staff, faculty, parents and other authorized individuals. Based on this record, the Commission agrees with the Arbitrator that Petitioner's presence in Respondent's hallway was both incidental to her employment and in the course of her employment.

The Arbitrator also concluded it was unnecessary to consider whether the stripping was defective. The Commission agrees, to the extent that the "defect" nomenclature does not entirely address the issue. "The presence of a 'hazardous condition' on the employer's premises renders the risk of injury a risk incidental to employment; accordingly, a claimant who is injured by such a hazardous condition may recover benefits without having to prove that she was exposed to the risk of that hazard to a greater extent than are members of the general public." Dukich, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 40. Thus, for example, in University of Illinois v. Industrial Comm'n, 365 Ill. App. 3d 906, 911 (2006), the Commission found that the claimant tripped over a metal strip connecting the employer's parking structure to a walkway into the employer's outpatient care facility and that the height of the strip constituted a hazardous condition. The Illinois Appellate Court ruled that the Commission's finding was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. Id. at 912.

In this case, Petitioner testified that she tripped on the stripping meant to hold the carpet down and tumbled forward while hurrying back to her child's class. She also explained that one could only see the raised area of carpet by bending down, not standing over it. Petitioner also submitted an exhibit of photographs depicting the loose, raised stripping. Ms. Clark also testified that she could tell the carpet was loose where it joined the tile. Ms. McGreer testified that she examined the hallway and noted that the stripping was not loose, while Mr. Green testified that the accident location appeared normal to him days later. The record does not indicate that Ms. McGreer or Mr. Green examined the area by bending down as Petitioner did. As the Arbitrator found, all witnesses agreed the stripping was higher than the carpet and tile.

Given the record as a whole, the Commission finds that Petitioner was engaged in a work-related task at the time of her fall and the hazardous condition of the stripping contributed to or caused Petitioner's fall. Accordingly, the Commission concludes that Petitioner's accident and injury arose out of and in the course of her employment.

B. Causal Connection/Section 19(d) of the Act

The Arbitrator found the opinions of Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Schmidt, to be more persuasive than those of Petitioner's independent medical examiner, Dr. Krause. In so concluding, the Arbitrator noted that Dr. Krause was unable to state whether Petitioner's accident aggravated or accelerated Petitioner's need for surgery. He further noted that Dr. Krause did not, like Dr. Schmidt, distinguish the localization of Petitioner's medical treatment prior to her accident and after her accident. The Arbitrator, thus, found the opinions of Dr. Schmidt to be more compelling and credible than those of Dr. Krause finding a causal connection. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator that Petitioner established a causal connection and finds ample evidence in the record, including the opinions of Dr. Schmidt, supporting a causal connection between Petitioner's post-accident condition of ill-being and her accident on March 13, 2012.

However, the Arbitrator also found that causal connection was severed pursuant to section 19(d) of the Act. In so concluding, the Arbitrator noted that the Act does not require that an injurious practice be the sole cause of a claimant's condition of ill-being for the Commission to reduce or deny compensation. He noted that several physicians indicated that Petitioner's ongoing pain and permanent restrictions were related to the non-union that developed after her ankle fusion surgery. The Arbitrator found that Petitioner's post-surgical non-compliance with Dr. Klein's recommendations rose to the level of an injurious practice and contributed to the non-union. Pursuant to section 19(d) of the Act, all benefits were denied including treatment, TTD and maintenance subsequent to April 16, 2013.

Section 19(d) of the Act reads:

> If any employee shall persist in insanitary or injurious practices which tend to either imperil or retard his recovery or shall refuse to submit to such medical, surgical, or hospital treatment as is reasonably essential to promote his recovery, the Commission may, in its discretion, reduce or suspend the compensation of any such injured employee. 820 ILCS 305/19(d).

The Commission disagrees with the Arbitrator that Petitioner engaged in an injurious practice that should terminate her entitlement to benefits. There is no evidence in this record that Petitioner deliberately attempted to impede her recovery in any of her actions post-operatively. The cases in which section 19(d) of the Act has been invoked distinguish the intent of the conduct to determine if it is obstructing recovery. See e.g., Global Prods. v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 392 Ill. App. 3d 408, 412-13 (2009) (finding no evidence that the claimant smoked cigarettes for the purpose of retarding his recovery and, specifically, that he smoked "in spite of its potential impact on his recovery, not because of it."). The acts involved must rise above mere negligence. Larson's Workers' Compensation Treatise provides additional insight stating: "The degree of claimant misconduct required to break the chain of causation should therefore be not mere negligence, but intentional conduct that is clearly unreasonable. Larson's Workers' Compensation-Desk Edition, Section 10.10[1] at 10-34 (2018).

The record reflects that Dr. Klein was pre-operatively concerned with Petitioner's ability to comply with weight-bearing restrictions for optimal recovery. Petitioner was admittedly warned about the risks that might cause a non-union. Drs. Klein, Krause and Schmidt all stated that non-weight bearing was critical to recovery, and that the risk of non-union increases with premature weight-bearing. The physicians further agreed that weight-bearing and smoking were the two main factors causing a non-union of an ankle fusion. Petitioner was not a smoker, so the remaining issue rested with whether she bore weight on her foot too early in her recovery process. Petitioner maintained to both Dr. Klein and at the hearing that she would only put her foot down to balance when her cast got too heavy, which Dr. Klein characterized as weight bearing in her records.

It is reasonable that Petitioner, in particular, would have difficulty fully complying with her treating physician's instructions not to bear any weight for a time. She had been counseled by Dr. Klein pre-operatively to practice non-weight bearing to increase the likelihood of a successful surgical outcome. Dr. Schmidt also understood that it would be difficult for a neuropathic patient to fully comply with complete non-weight bearing restrictions throughout recovery. Indeed, he specified that it was harder for a neuropathic patient to do so because it doesn't hurt as much. Moreover, while the Arbitrator found that it was no coincidence that Petitioner's fusion did not take, with ample evidence in the medical records of non-compliance, no attention was paid to normal post-operative issues including an ill-fitting boot which may have contributed to Petitioner's discomfort, weight bearing, and need for emergency room care. The June 13, 2013 note from Dr. Klein, before Petitioner presented to the emergency room, reflects that Petitioner's "previous cast became somewhat loose because of calf atrophy[, which Dr. Klein believed] may be why the ankle has been so sore."

The evidence simply does not establish that Petitioner intentionally bore weight to impede her recovery, much less to do harm to herself, such that her conduct rises to the level of an injurious practice requiring a termination of benefits. Accordingly, the Commission reverses the Arbitrator's ruling on this issue.

The Commission further finds that Petitioner's conduct does not rise to the level of an intervening cause severing Respondent's liability. The inquiry here is whether the evidence establishes that Petitioner's condition of ill-being was related, in whole or in part, to her accident. See Dunteman v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2016 IL App (4th) 150543WC, ¶ 44 ("As long as there is a 'but-for' relationship between the work-related injury and subsequent condition of ill-being, the employer remains liable." [citation omitted]). Moreover, "an employer takes his employees as he finds them." Global Prods., 392 Ill. App. 3d at 412 (quoting Bocian v. Industrial Comm'n, 282 Ill. App. 3d 519, 528 (1996)).

In this case, Petitioner suffered from neuropathy and degenerative conditions in the right ankle that pre-dated her accident but did not prevent her from working. The ankle fusion recommendation came only after her March 13, 2012 accident following unsuccessful treatment modalities. Petitioner eventually underwent an ankle fusion with Dr. Klein, which Respondent's examiner, Dr. Schmidt, repeatedly found necessary and related to her accident. Even if Petitioner developed a non-union, in part, as a result of premature post-operative weight bearing, her need for medical treatment including the ankle fusion would not have occurred "but for" her March 13, 2012 accident at work. See Dunteman, 2016 IL App (4th) 150543WC, ¶ 45. More specifically, "but for" the occupational injury there would have been no need for an ankle fusion and post-operative care of Petitioner's further debilitated right ankle. See Id. Thus, the Commission finds that Petitioner's employment remains a cause of her current condition of ill-being and that any premature post-operative weight bearing does not sever causal connection.

C. Medical Expenses

The Arbitrator awarded medical expenses, but only through April 16, 2013, based on his Section 19(d) analysis. In keeping with the ruling on causal connection, the Commission also modifies the Arbitrator's medical expenses award, which terminated Respondent's liability on April 16, 2013. Since the Commission has found causal connection and reversed the Arbitrator's section 19(d) ruling, it also awards all claimed reasonable and necessary medical expenses to Petitioner, pursuant to sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act.

D. Temporary Total Disability

The Arbitrator awarded TTD benefits from April 5, 2013 through April 16, 2013. Benefits were denied from January 11, 2013 through April 4, 2013, and from April 17, 2013 through April 4, 2014.

Regarding the period of January 11, 2013 through April 4, 2013, the Arbitrator reasoned that Petitioner voluntarily abandoned a job that was assigned to her within her restrictions. The Arbitrator noted that Petitioner was restricted to sit-down work only through December 1, 2012. Subsequently she was unrestricted until January 18, 2013, when Dr. Freehill recommended she do "absolutely no twisting, squatting, kneeling, standing, long periods of walking." However, beginning one week prior to that, the Arbitrator noted that Petitioner voluntarily removed herself from the workforce, indicating that she was unable to physically care for the new student to whom she had been assigned after Christmas break. Respondent argues that Petitioner's voluntary removal from the workforce, coupled with Mr. Green's testimony that Respondent would have tried to accommodate any restrictions Petitioner brought to them (which he asserted Petitioner did not), thereby precludes Petitioner from receiving TTD benefits.

A claimant's stabilization is the determinative inquiry for deciding entitlement to TTD benefits. Interstate Scaffolding, Inc. v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 236 Ill. 2d 132, 149 (2010). However, the supreme court recognizes three exceptions allowing termination or suspension of TTD benefits. Sharwarko v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2015 IL App (1st) 131733WC, ¶ 47 (citing Interstate Scaffolding, Inc., 236 Ill. 2d at 146-47). The relevant exception to the case at bar is the third, which states TTD benefits may be suspended or terminated if the employee refuses work falling within the physical prescriptions prescribed by his doctor. See Sharwarko, 2015 IL App (1st) 131733WC, ¶ 47. Respondent argues that when Petitioner left her job in January of 2013 she triggered this third exception.

The Commission finds that the facts in Sharwarko are distinguishable from the case at bar. In Sharwarko, the employer was capable of accommodating the claimant's restrictions. Id. ¶ 48. In the case at bar, Petitioner wanted to work past January 10, 2013, but was physically unable to perform the job offered by Respondent. A review of Dr. Freehill's restrictions clearly suggests Petitioner was unable to work with a 5 or 6-year-old wheelchair bound child who required frequent lifting. The Commission notes the difficulty in attempting to lift a 5-year-old child alone without twisting and squatting. The Commission also notes that on February 8, 2013 Dr. Schmidt placed Petitioner on restrictions of no standing or walking greater than 2 hours without 15 minutes off her feet. While these restrictions may seem less cumbersome than Dr. Freehill's, it does not circumvent the fact that Respondent had no available work for Petitioner. Mr. Green testified that it would be difficult for Respondent to accommodate a person with Petitioner's restrictions due to the steps in the schools. A March 15, 2013 e-mail from Respondent's Assistant Superintendent indicated Petitioner's desire to return to work when capable. This taken in conjunction with Mr. Green's testimony regarding Petitioner's lack of employability corroborates Petitioner's testimony that her retirement arose out of financial necessity rather than a voluntary removal. Accordingly, the Commission finds that Petitioner does not fall into any of the exceptions to Interstate Scaffolding, and since her condition had not stabilized during this period she remained entitled to TTD benefits.

The Arbitrator denied TTD benefits from April 17, 2013 through April 4, 2014 based on his section 19(d) analysis. In keeping with its causal connection finding and reversal of the section 19(d) ruling, the Commission modifies the TTD award and awards benefits for this period as well. Petitioner did not reach maximum medical improvement post-operatively and was not offered work within her restrictions by Respondent. Respondent argues that, even if Petitioner was entitled to TTD benefits while off work, she failed to meet her burden to prove the period in which she could not work as she provided no off work slips from providers. However, determining the TTD period is a question of fact for the Commission and its decision should not be disturbed unless it is against the manifest weight of the evidence. Ming Auto Body/Ming of Decatur, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 387 Ill. App. 3d 244, 256 (2008).

The Commission finds no evidence in Petitioner's treatment records that Petitioner's condition between April 17, 2013 and April 4, 2014 would have allowed her to work for Respondent. The Commission also notes the June 30, 2014 report or Dr. Krause supporting the proposition that Petitioner could not perform her duties for Respondent. Accordingly, the Commission finds that Petitioner is entitled to additional TTD benefits as claimed for the period of April 17, 2013 through April 4, 2014.

E. Permanent Disability

Despite Petitioner's argument for odd-lot permanent and total disability benefits, the Arbitrator found that Petitioner suffered a 25% loss of use of her right ankle. The Arbitrator agreed with Respondent finding that Petitioner did not meet her burden of proof for odd-lot permanent and total disablement. In so doing, the Arbitrator noted that Petitioner did not perform any job searches, nor did she look for employment after surgery. The Commission views the evidence differently and finds that Petitioner has established her entitlement to permanent and total disability benefits under an odd-lot theory.

An employee is totally and permanently disabled when she is unable to make some contribution to industry sufficient to justify the payment of wages. A.M.T.C. of Illinois v. Industrial Comm'n, 77 Ill. 2d 482, 487 (1979). If a claimant's disability is of such a nature that she is not obviously unemployable, or there is no medical evidence to support a claim of total disability, the burden is upon the claimant to prove that she fits into an "odd lot" category; that being an individual who, although not altogether incapacitated, is so handicapped that she is not regularly employable in any well-known branch of the labor market. Valley Mold & Iron Co. v. Industrial Comm'n., 84 Ill. 2d 538, 546-47 (1981).

A claimant seeking "odd lot" status must establish it by a preponderance of the evidence. City of Chicago v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 373 Ill. App. 3d 1080, 1091 (2007). A claimant can satisfy the burden of proving she falls into the odd-lot category in one of two ways; (1) by showing diligent but unsuccessful attempts to find work, or (2) by showing that because of her age, skills, training, and work history, she will not be regularly employed in a well-known branch of the labor market. Alano v. Industrial Comm'n, 282 Ill. App. 3d 531, 534 (1996); Westin Hotel v. Industrial Comm'n, 372 Ill. App. 3d 527, 544 (2007). Once a claimant meets her burden of proving she falls into the "odd-lot" category, the burden then shifts to the employer to prove the claimant is employable in a stable labor market and that such market exists. Waldorf Corp. v. Industrial Comm'n, 303 Ill. App. 3d 477, 484 (1999); Westin Hotel, 372 Ill. App. 3d at 544.

Under this analysis, Petitioner is eligible for PTD benefits. Petitioner was 57 years old at the time of her accident and is currently over the age of 65. She had an associate degree obtained in the 1970's and a remote work history performing duties other than those performed for Respondent in recent decades. Respondent submitted into evidence a labor market survey prepared by an individual who had never met Petitioner nor reviewed her medical records outside of the June 30, 2014 report of Dr. Krause. The survey revealed nine (9) jobs within a 50-mile radius fitting within restrictions identified by Dr. Krause. Some required the ability to type 30-40 wpm, word processing experience, excel experience, collection experience, data entry and audit experience. Petitioner did not possess most of these skills.

Contrary to the conclusions in Respondent's labor market survey, Petitioner's vocational rehabilitation counselor, Mr. Dolan, opined that Petitioner was unemployable. He admitted that he did not perform his own labor market survey, but he testified that he did not need to do so because of his familiarity with the jobs in the area and his knowledge of Petitioner's medical condition/vocational profile. He further testified regarding the positions identified in Respondent's labor market survey and explained that Petitioner would require better skills to perform sedentary office work. Petitioner's computer skills were basic, she was not a good typist, and she had never prepared reports, used a spreadsheet, or used bookkeeping software.

Petitioner did have personal care skills that Mr. Dolan indicated were transferable, but he explained that the jobs looking for these skills (home attendant, certified nursing, etc.) were ones that she could not physically perform. Mr. Dolan also noted that Petitioner would be competing with younger applicants with more recent training, without physical restrictions, making her a less desirable candidate. Additionally, Petitioner experienced daily ankle pain and difficulty with range of motion. She had difficulty driving and climbing stairs, and she could not walk for extended periods. Petitioner also experienced swelling on a daily basis that frequently required her to sit with her foot elevated. Indeed, Mr. Dolan noted that Petitioner had to elevate her foot during his meeting with her, which he found to be credible.

Ultimately, Mr. Dolan opined that there was no reasonably stable labor market for Petitioner. He explained that she would be competing with younger applicants with more recent training and who do not have restrictions. Given Petitioner's age, skills, training, and work history, the Commission finds, as Mr. Dolan opined, that Petitioner will not be regularly employable in a well-known branch of the labor market and that no stable labor market exists for Petitioner.

Respondent also asserts that Petitioner never contacted Respondent for placement any time after surgery. Respondent relies on Sharwarko for the proposition that employers should not be liable for benefits if accommodations could have been made but for the employee voluntarily removing himself from employment. Sharwarko v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2015 IL App (1st) 131733WC, ¶ 49 (2015). The Commission is not persuaded by Respondent's assertion, or its claim that it would be able to accommodate Petitioner's restrictions. Respondent's witness, Mr. Green, admitted that it would be difficult to accommodate Petitioner.

Based on the totality of evidence, the Commission finds the opinions of Mr. Dolan to be persuasive. The Commission thus finds that Petitioner is permanently and totally disabled under an odd-lot theory pursuant to section 8(f) of the Act.

All else is affirmed.

IT IS THEREFORE FOUND BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner proved she sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment with Respondent on March 13, 2012.

IT IS FURTHER FOUND BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner has met her burden of proof in relation to causal connection to her work accident suffered on March 13, 2012. Moreover, the Commission finds that Petitioner did not engage in any injurious practices pursuant to section 19(d) of the Act which would limit the duration of the causal connection period.

IT IS ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $345.33 per week from January 11, 2013 through April 4, 2013, and from April 17, 2013 through April 4, 2014, in addition to the period already awarded by the Arbitrator from April 5, 2013 through April 16, 2013. These being the periods of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner all reasonable and necessary medical expenses claimed by Petitioner in relation to her right ankle condition pursuant to sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $483.36 (minimum rate) per week for life, beginning April 5, 2014 as provided in section 8(f) of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused Petitioner to be permanently and totally disabled.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

No county, city, town, township, incorporated village, school district, body politic or municipal corporation is required to file a bond to secure the payment of the award and the costs of the proceedings in the court to authorize the court to issue such summons. 820 ILCS 305/19(f)(2). Based upon the named Respondent herein, no bond is set by the Commission. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

ORDER

The Arbitrator finds that the petitioner sustained an accident which arose out of and in the course of her employment on November 12, 2012. The petitioner also proved by a preponderance of the evidence that as a result of that injury, she suffered a right ankle contusion that resolved without treatment, and the causal connection for the right ankle contusion ended on November 12, 2012.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services, pursuant to the medical fee schedule, of $816.00for treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital on November 12, 2013. All other bills are not causally related to the November 12, 2013 accident, and therefore denied.

Arbitrator finds that petitioner did not sustain any permanent disability as a result of the November 12, 2012 injury.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The parties agreed to bring this matter to trial on April 6, 2018, in Mt. Vernon. At trial, a Motion to Consolidate cases 12 WC 31793 and 14 WC 21613 was made on the record without objection by either party. Accordingly, the Motion was granted. The issues in dispute are accident, causal connection, reasonable and necessary medical, temporary total disability, and the nature and extent of the injuries. The parties also stipulated that if any medical bills were awarded, that they would be paid per the applicable fee schedule and that the respondent would get a credit pursuant to Section 8(j) for any payments made pursuant to that Section.

Trial Testimony of Elizabeth McAlexander

The petitioner testified that she currently lives in Mt. Vernon, Illinois, and her date of birth is July 19, 1954, making her 63 years old. (Tr. 10) She has an Associate's Degree in Arts from Rend Lake College and had started in a nursing program at Rend Lake College but did not complete it. (Tr. 11) Her prior work history included working as a waitress, a nurse's aid, work at a daycare center, and then her last job as an individual aid at Mt. Vernon District #80. (Tr. 11-12) The petitioner owns a computer, and she uses it for Facebook and searching things on the internet. (Tr. 12) Petitioner testified that she did not have any training in Microsoft or Excel, and did not consider herself a good typist. (Tr. 12)

She described her job as a teacher's aid as one-on-one interaction with students with special needs. (Tr. 14) As an individual aid, she worked with one child at a time and assisted that student with their work, staying on task, with their assignment, getting to class, etc. (Tr. 14) The physical aspects of the job depended on the student's physical capabilities that she was working with. (Tr. 15) She also described that depending on the child, she sometimes had to change diapers, transfer the student from the floor to their wheelchair, help feed them, and helped them in PE. (Tr. 15-16)

The petitioner testified that on March 13, 2012, she was at Casey Middle School in the science building. (Tr. 17) She described that there was a section of carpet that transitioned into tile with a strip that holds the carpet and the tile down at the transition. (Tr. 18) She was walking down the hall and her foot got "tripped up" on the stripping causing her to tumble forward falling on her hands and knees with her ankles and feet turned underneath her. (Tr. 19) The petitioner testified that at the time of her fall, she was not carrying anything. (Tr. 20) Immediately after the accident, she felt pain in her hands, wrists, both her knees, and her ankles. (Tr. 20)

She reported the injury to the nurse, Lisa Tucker, who had come out of her office to assist her. (Tr. 20) The petitioner testified that she was wearing sandals that laced across the top of her foot, but she did not believe that her shoes had anything to do with her fall. (Tr. 21) The petitioner testified that there was a camera at the end of the hall and a substitute secretary named Sandy Duncan showed it to her. (Tr. 21-22)

Petitioner sought medical treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital on the same day as the alleged accident where she underwent x-rays to her knees and ankles, was given pain medication and taken off work for three days. (Tr. 25-26) Her main complaint was her right ankle, and she continued to have pain and swelling at that location. (Tr. 27)

After three days off, petitioner returned to work. (Tr. 27) Petitioner testified that she had trouble walking, and subsequently saw Dr. Freehill at the Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois on March 27, 2012 for her right ankle. (Tr. 28) Dr. Freehill ordered the petitioner physical therapy and gave her pain medication. (Tr. 29)

The petitioner started physical therapy at Physical Rehab Center, but the physical therapy did not help her. (Tr. 29) During this time, she continued to work and continued treatment with Dr. Freehill. (Tr. 29)

The petitioner finished out the 2011-2012 school year and then had the summer off but continued having problems with her right ankle. (Tr. 31) After summer break, she continued working with the same student as the prior year until that student moved away during Christmas break. (Tr. 30) After Christmas break, she was assigned to another student but after three days she had to stop because she could not physically do the job. (Tr. 30) The petitioner identified Petitioner's Exhibit 15 as her swollen right ankle stating that the picture was taken on August 2, 2012. (Tr. 32) Petitioner testified that she continued to have pain and swelling in her right ankle, and she would have to keep her right ankle propped up on a chair while at work. (Tr. 34)

Petitioner testified that she had gone back to look at the strip that she tripped over with Terri Clark, and took pictures of it on August 9, 2012. (Tr. 35, 37) She identified Petitioner's Exhibit 16 as the pictures taken by Terri Clark showing the stripping to be loose. (Tr. 35-36)

The petitioner also had an accident on November 12, 2012. (Tr. 38) She described that she was standing with her student outside of a class waiting for the hallway traffic to pass when a student fell into her right ankle, and "kind of kicked it." (Tr. 38) Petitioner was worried that there may have been more damage to her ankle and sought treatment at Good Samaritan ER where she was told that she had a new fracture. (Tr. 38) She was then referred to Dr. Aubuchon by Dr. Freehill. (Tr. 40) She was also seen Dr. Schmidt on two occasions, and was then referred to Dr. Klein at Washington University. (Tr. 40)

The petitioner eventually underwent an ankle fusion on her right ankle on April 5, 2013. (Tr. 41-42) She testified that the surgery to her right ankle helped, and the ankle was less painful but still painful. (Tr. 42)

Petitioner testified that she did not believe she had been non-compliant with the Dr. Klein's instructions after her surgery. (Tr. 43) She acknowledged that she was told not to put any weight on her right ankle, and she took care to make sure that she did not. (Tr. 43-44) Petitioner testified that sometimes as she would hop around with her walker, and when she would get tired, she would touch her right foot to the floor without putting any weight on it. (Tr. 44)

The petitioner acknowledged that she went to the ER in June 2013 after an incident when she was getting out of bed. (Tr. 45) She thought she got out of bed too fast, and had turned her ankle. (Tr. 45) She testified that she had her boot on at that point. (Tr. 45-46) During that time, she continued to follow up with Dr. Klein. (Tr. 47) Eventually, Dr. Klein thought that her ankle was not fusing and told her that she may need a second surgery. (Tr. 47-48) Petitioner did not have the second surgery as she did not want to go through "all that again." (Tr. 48)

The petitioner testified that after the child she had been working with moved away during Christmas break, she was assigned to a child in a wheelchair in the Early Childhood Center. (Tr. 49) She testified that the child was the size of a 5 or 6 year old, and that she would have to lift that student for everything. (Tr. 49-50) After trying to work with that student for three days, she had to stop as she could not do it physically. (Tr. 50) She testified that she had discussions with Michael Green and Aletta Lawrence to determine whether or not there was any other child she could work with, but the school district did not have one available. (Tr. 51-52) During this time, the petitioner did not receive any temporary total disability from the workers' compensation carrier and was not awarded disability through the school district. (Tr. 53) Eventually, petitioner went on FMLA. (Tr. 54) Petitioner testified that she decided to retire after her FMLA ran out because she needed income, but she had not planned on retiring for at least two more years. (Tr. 54) She testified that she called and talked to Mike Green about her retirement, and told him the reasons why she was retiring. (Tr. 55) Petitioner testified that her retirement was before her surgery, and she has not been employed by anyone else since leaving the school district, has not been offered a job by any other businesses or the school district , and has not applied for any jobs as she did not believe that there was any job available that she could do. (Tr. 55-56)

Currently petitioner has difficulty with range of motion, testified that her ankle does not move anymore, and because of that she does not feel comfortable driving. (Tr. 57-58) She also testified that she had neuropathy in her feet, which also made it hard for her to tell where her feet were as far as the pedals go. (Tr. 58) She complained of still having pain every day that increases with activities, and testified that if she is on her feet too long, if she walks too much or tries to move her ankle, does any exercises that involve her ankles moving back and forth, her pain increases. (Tr. 58-59) Petitioner testified that her right ankle swells, and she tries to keep her foot propped up from keeping it from turning red and to lessen the swelling. (Tr. 59) She testified she uses a cane whenever she walks. (Tr. 60) She testified that she has problems with lifting as she loses her balance and she has trouble walking up and down stairs. (Tr. 60-61) She no longer does any of the shopping and does limited housekeeping tasks. (Tr. 61)

She testified that she likes going to her grandkids' activities, but only goes if her husband takes her. (Tr. 62) The petitioner testified that more recently she's had surgery to her hip, and uses a walker for that surgery. (Tr. 63-64)

Petitioner testified that prior to her March 2012 injury, she had gone to Dr. Gunzel for various conditions including her right ankle. (Tr. 65) She testified that her main problem was neuropathy in her feet and arthritis in her ankles. (Tr. 65) She also saw a pain doctor, and it was regarding several sources of pain throughout her body. (Tr. 67) Petitioner, however, stated that her pain was different after her fall in March 2012, and her ankle became more painful and swollen. (Tr. 68)

On cross-examination, the petitioner acknowledged that she specifically wrote on the intake information at Dr. Gunzel's office that her chief complaint included pain in her right ankle. (Tr. 104-105) She further admitted that Dr. Gunzel had injected her foot on at least two occasions. (Tr. 105) The petitioner also acknowledged that there was swelling in both her ankles, but it was more prominent in her right. (Tr. 106) Petitioner acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel put her on restrictions. (Tr. 107) The petitioner admitted that she had swelling, pain, and osteoarthritis, prior to her March 2012 accident, and the swelling was around the outside ball of her right ankle in the same area seen in Petitioner's Exhibit 15. (Tr. 109-110)

Petitioner testified that Dr. Klein had explained to her the importance of non-weightbearing at a pre-operative visit on March 28, 2013 and further explained to her what she meant by non-weightbearing and why it was important. (Tr. 112-113)

When asked specifically about Dr. Klein's statement in her first post-operative note that the petitioner was putting her foot down on the ground several times, the petitioner testified that she may have told the doctor that, but she did not mean she was weightbearing. (Tr. 113) Petitioner further testified that despite what Dr. Klein's records stated, the she complied with Dr. Klein's instructions. (Tr. 114-115)

The petitioner acknowledged that she does not remember getting any permanent restrictions from any doctors after her surgery, except for Dr. Krause. (Tr. 119) She further acknowledged that she did not believe she had any permanent restrictions on her at the time of her evaluation with Mr. Dolan on September 14, 2014. (Tr. 120) The petitioner further acknowledged that she retired from the school district before she underwent her surgery and never went back to the school district to try to work after her surgery. (Tr. 121)

The petitioner testified that her email resignation did not mention the reason for her retirement, but claimed that she had made a telephone call to the school district first and talked to Michael Green about it. (Tr. 122) The petitioner acknowledged that the photo of the stripping and her ankle were both taken several months after her alleged injury in March 2012. (Tr. 124)

The petitioner testified that she had neuropathy in both her feet prior to her accident. (Tr. 126) She also admitted that she had pain and swelling in her right ankle prior to the 2012 accidents, was put on restrictions limiting her standing and walking prior to the 2012 accidents, and the use of her walker on the date of trial was not related to her right ankle. (Tr. 127)

Petitioner was asked about the handwritten description she gave along with the accident reporting form to the school district. She testified that on the date of the accident, she wrote down what had happened because she did not want to forget. (Tr. 128) After she handwrote it down, she testified then she got the injury form later on and filled it out and attached the handwritten notes. (Tr. 128) The petitioner was specifically asked why she did not mention that there was damage to the strip in her handwritten description immediately after her accident, and she testified that she did not realize there was damage until later on in the day when she went back and looked at it but did not writ it down in her handwritten description. (Tr. 129-131)

On redirect examination, petitioner testified that she associated the prior problems in her feet with her neuropathy but also acknowledged she had pain and swelling in both her ankles although it was worse in her right ankle after her March 2012 accident. (Tr. 133-134)

Regarding whether or not the petitioner was compliant with Dr. Klein's instructions after surgery, the following exchange took place between the petitioner's attorney and the petitioner:

> Q: Okay. All right. And if I understand your testimony correctly, there would be times you would put your foot down, but it would be a balancing sort of action where you didn't actually walk on it when you were not supposed to?
> A: Yes.

(Tr. 136)

The petitioner was also called back to the witness stand after Ms. McGreer, Ms. Clark and Mr. Green testified. She testified that her recollection was different from Mr. Green's, and she remembered having two meetings with Mr. Green and Aletta Lawrence after school resumed after Christmas break in which they discussed her restrictions and what kind of work she could do. (Tr. 194) The petitioner acknowledged that while that was the only child available for her to work with at that time, she could potentially have been moved to another child if one became available. (Tr. 194) She further testified that per her recollection, she had called Mr. Green and expressed that she did not want to retire, that was her last resort, and if Mr. Green could not find her another student she would have no choice but to retire because of financial needs. (Tr. 195-196)

On cross-examination, the petitioner acknowledged that she was assigned with a child to work with, and that Mr. Green and Ms. Lawrence had told her that if another opportunity or student came available in the future they would move her to that student. (Tr. 197) The petitioner admitted that after she retired, she did not have any other conversations with Mr. Green or Ms. Lawrence. (Tr. 199)

Trial Testimony of Terri Clark

Ms. Clark testified on behalf of the petitioner. Ms. Clark testified that in 2012 she was the community liaison for the district and she was also the president of the Mt. Vernon Association of Classified Employees in 2012. (Tr. 145-146) As president of the union, she handled any problems that arose between staff and the administration. (Tr. 147)

Ms. Clark testified that she became aware of the petitioner's alleged accident as she heard it "through the grapevine" that she had fallen. (Tr. 148) Ms. Clark testified that in August 2012 after talking to petitioner, she recommended that they go to the location of her accident to take pictures of the stripping. (Tr. 148) Ms. Clark testified that she examined the stripping, took pictures, took measurements and prepared a statement. (Tr. 149) She testified that she observed the carpet being loose where it joined with the tile, and slid a ruler under the stripping to demonstrating it was loose. (Tr. 150-151)

Upon cross-examination, Ms. Clark admitted that she had not observed the area prior to August 2012. (Tr. 155) Accordingly, she testified that any knowledge of the condition of the stripping was based on what she observed in August 2012 or what the petitioner told her was the condition before hand. (Tr. 156)

Trial Testimony of Mary McGreer

Ms. McGreer testified on behalf of the respondent. She testified that she was the principal at Casey Middle School in March and November 2012. (Tr. 72) As principal, she was in charge of supervising the campus, doing evaluations of staff, and she was in charge of all safety and security issues of the campus. (Tr. 72) Ms. McGreer had known the petitioner since before she was a principle in her position as Special Education Director, and then as principle at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 72-73)

Ms. McGreer testified that petitioner's March 13, 2012 injury, took place in the science building hallway which housed the science and the social studies classrooms, math classroom, language arts classroom, a nurse, and a Spanish classroom. (Tr. 74) She testified that the hallway was regularly used by all the students, and was open to the general school population including the students, faculty, staff and any other person authorized to be on the grounds. (Tr. 75) Ms. McGreer testified that the hallway in question was one that she used as part of her job on a daily basis. (Tr. 75) She testified that on the March 13, 2012, nurse Lisa Tucker let Ms. McGreer know that the petitioner had taken a fall and was going to the hospital. (Tr. 76-77)

She testified that she received an official accident report from the petitioner on or about March 21, 2012 and that the injury report had a separate sheet with handwritten notes written by petitioner. (Tr. 78) Ms. McGreer testified that after receiving the report, she examined the area where the alleged accident took place. (Tr. 78) Ms. McGreer described that there was an incline in that hallway, and the carpet kept going past the incline for quite a bit of while, then transitioned to tile with a strip in that transition. (Tr. 79-80) She testified that when she observed the area, she did not notice any of the carpet coming up, and did not notice any of the trim coming loose. (Tr. 80)

Ms. McGreer testified that although she had not looked at the area on the date of accident, to her knowledge, no one else had indicated any defect in the transition in that hallway and if there was a maintenance order, it would have gone through Ms. McGreer. (Tr. 80-81)

She testified that the petitioner continued to work after the March 13, 2012 injury, to the end of the school year in 2012, and then after the summer break came back to work in the fall. (Tr. 82) Ms. McGreer testified that the petitioner had never requested any accommodations for permanent restrictions after her retirement. (Tr. 82)

Ms. McGreer testified that there was a video system in place when she became principal but that the system was antiquated and the video was very granular. (Tr. 84) She testified that, in her opinion, it was not very good video, and she did not utilize it a lot as principal because she thought it was not very useful. (Tr. 84) She described that at the time, the software they used would save video on it for just a couple days. (Tr. 84-85) Ms. McGreer testified that in the terms of access to the video, she only had access for herself because of student records. (Tr. 85) She testified that the individual the petitioner stated showed her the video was a substitute secretary at the time, and if she did show her the video, it would have been against Ms. McGreer's instructions. (Tr. 86)

Ms. McGreer was asked about the pictures that were taken of the transition in August 2012, and testified that during the summers there was general summer maintenance where everything was pulled out of every classroom, floors were stripped and waxed, and carpets shampooed. (Tr. 86-87) She further testified that during that summer, there was some construction going on in the hallway and in the building in general for preparations for a major construction project to renovate the building. (Tr. 87) Ms. McGreer testified that although she had examined the area on March 21, 2012 and had not noticed any defect, it was possible that the transition could have been damaged during the summer. (Tr. 88-89)

On cross-examination, Ms. McGreer clarified that the hallway was not open to the general public, but it was open to the general school population and authorized visitors including students from other schools who came for extra-curricular activities and special events. (Tr. 91-92) Further, Ms. McGreer testified that she did not dispute that the petitioner had a fall in that hallway on March 13, 2012

Ms. McGreer testified that although she could not remember exactly how she observed the stripping when she observed it, her general practice is to try to kick the area in question around to see if something was loose and if she did not notice anything, she would have gotten down and tugged at it to see if it was. (Tr. 97-98) She testified that she took safety very seriously, and was in fact, a little bit paranoid about it. (Tr. 98)

Mrs. McGreer testified that prior to the alleged accidents, the petitioner did not have any problems completing her job duties. (Tr. 101)

Trial Testimony of Michael Green

Michael Green testified on behalf of the respondent. He testified that in 2012 he was the superintendent for the Mt. Vernon District 80 school district, and retired as of June 30, 2015. (Tr. 159-160) Mr. Green testified that as superintendent, he was overall the CEO of the district. (Tr. 160) He testified that he was familiar with the petitioner as he was the principal at Casey Middle School from 2006 through 2011 and the petitioner was a very good employee and was very dependable and a good individual aid. (Tr. 160-161) She had great relationships with the kids she worked with, was very professional, and followed the IEP. (Tr. 161)

Mr. Green was familiar with the accident from March 13, 2012, and testified that he performed some investigation on it. (Tr. 161) He described that he heard at the district office that the petitioner had fallen in the hallway at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 161) A day or two days after the date of accident, he went over to the school, met with Greg Lievers (the head of maintenance) to look at the area where the petitioner fell. (Tr. 162) Mr. Green testified that the area looked normal to him, and it looked like a normal strip between the tile and the carpet. (Tr. 162) Mr. Green testified that he observed it from approximately two feet away, he squatted down, he took his fingers and rubbed over it, and asked Mr. Lievers if there was any recent work done to the area, to which Mr. Lievers responded "No." (Tr. 162-163)

Mr. Green testified that the hallway was open to the general student, staff, and faculty population, and specifically noted that the school has over 440-450 children, and that's where the 7th grade was housed. (Tr. 163) He testified that there was a lot of activity in that area every day. (Tr. 163)

Mr. Green was asked to look at Petitioner's Exhibit 16, and testified that the pictures did not depict the condition of the stripping as he observed it a day or two after the alleged work accident. (Tr. 164) Mr. Green testified that summer was unique at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 165) Mr. Green testified that the Board of Education had approved the building of a $6.5 million expansion to the campus to add 10 classrooms, there was a lot of construction and renovation taking place outside and inside the school that summer, and there were a lot of construction crews in that hallway. (Tr. 165) He further testified that there was also just normal cleaning activity in preparation for the new school year, where all the desks were taken out of classrooms and taken into the hallway. (Tr. 165) He further testified that the traffic in that hallway during that specific summer was more than what would usually be expected during summer break. (Tr. 166)

Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, he testified he did some investigation of that as well, but did not have any further discussions or conversations with the petitioner regarding it. (Tr. 168)

Mr. Green testified that he remembered in March 2013, he had talked to the petitioner when he came back from spring break. (Tr. 168) He testified that the petitioner had left him a message during spring break to call her, that she was going to retire and that she did not given a reason for her retirement in that message. (Tr. 168-169) Mr. Green returned the petitioner's phone call the same morning he received it, and described that the petitioner and him discussed her retirement and the benefits that she was entitled to. (Tr. 169-170) Mr. Green testified that the conversation did not include any reasons as to why the petitioner was retiring. (Tr. 171)

Mr. Green reviewed Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, and acknowledged that was an email correspondence from the petitioner to him informing him and the Board of Education that she was retiring effective April 10, 2013 and that it did not describe any reasons as to why she was retiring. (Tr. 171) Mr. Green testified that after the petitioner retired, he did not have any further conversations with the petitioner regarding coming back to work, nor did the petitioner ever contact him about accommodating certain restrictions that she may have had. (Tr. 173)

Mr. Green confirmed that prior to the surgery and her retirement, there had been conversations about the restrictions that the petitioner was on, and the restrictions were accommodated per his recollection. (Tr. 174) Mr. Green testified that if an employee came to the school district with permanent work restrictions and wanted accommodations, it was his policy to try to accommodate them. (Tr. 174-175)

On cross-examination, Mr. Green testified that he did not know if the petitioner had fallen or not as he had not witnessed the accident. (Tr. 180) He further admitted that he did not prepare any report after looking at the area specifically. (Tr. 180) Mr. Green also acknowledged that the strip between the carpet and the tile was a little bit higher than the carpet and the tile themselves. (Tr. 180)

Mr. Green acknowledged that he could not remember if there were any other children that the petitioner could aid after the three days she tried to aid the young child at the Franklin School and afterwards the petitioner had applied for FMLA during which she was not provided pay. (Tr. 183-184) However, Mr. Green reiterated that he did not have any conversation with the petitioner regarding the reason she had to retire, and specifically whether or not she was retiring because she needed a paycheck. (Tr. 186) He testified that, although it was possible that the petitioner could have told him that and he had forgotten it, he believed that he would have remembered something like that. (Tr. 186)

On redirect examination, Mr. Green reiterated that after the petitioner worked three days at the beginning of 2013, she never came back to him and asked to be moved to a different student. (Tr. 190) If she had, he would have looked into whether or not there were other students she could work with. (Tr. 190)

On re-cross, Mr. Green acknowledged that if an individual had difficulty going up and down stairs, had difficulty walking, had to elevate their leg, that it would be hard to accommodate those particular restrictions. (Tr. 192)

Medical Evidence

was "neuropathy, swelling, pain in feet, and right ankle." Dr. Gunzel stated in his report that the petitioner had pain in both feet, and the right foot was worse than the left. The petitioner told Dr. Gunzel she had been diagnosed with osteoarthritis approximately 10 years ago, and Dr. Gunzel noted that the petitioner presented for an initial evaluation of ankle pain, located at the lateral malleolus on the right and the back of the ankle with flexion of the foot. The petitioner told Dr. Gunzel that the condition was gradually worsening over time. Physical examination showed swelling at the right lateral malleolus, in the dorsum of the left mid foot, lateral aspect of the right ankle, and the MTP joints. Dr. Gunzel also specifically noted that the dorsum of the right mid foot, anterior aspect of the right ankle, the right ankle medially, and right Achilles tendon showed evidence of mild pain on palpation. The petitioner's diagnosis included pain in the joint involving the ankle and foot, osteoarthritis localized primarily involving the ankle and foot. She was given medication for Mobic and Lyrica at that point, and told to follow up in one month. (PX 12)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Gunzel on May 20, 2011. The petitioner noted to Dr. Gunzel that the condition of her feet had not improved, and the medication she was taking was not particularly helpful. The petitioner diagnosis at that visit included degenerative joint disease. She was given an injection of corticosteroids in the tarsal sinus bilaterally, and placed on restrictions of no walking greater than one block and no standing more than 20 minutes at a time. The doctor recommended reduced activity at that point and told her to follow up in four weeks. (PX 12)

Petitioner's next follow up with Dr. Gunzel was on December 9, 2011. The petitioner noted to Dr. Gunzel that her condition had been worsening, and asked for another injection at that point as the last one helped her. Dr. Gunzel provided her with a corticosteroid injection, and discussed the type of shoes that the petitioner should be wearing to minimize her discomfort. She was told to follow up again in 4 weeks. However, Dr. Gunzel's notes indicate that the petitioner cancelled her visit on January 6, 2012, and Dr. Gunzel's medical records were subsequently sent to Dr. Juergens. (PX 12)

The petitioner then had her alleged accident on March 13, 2012. She was seen at the Good Samaritan Hospital Emergency Room on that date, and her chief complaints noted injury to the right and left knee, right ankle, and foot. Abrasions were noted on the left knee and left ankle, and she had tenderness and swelling to her right foot/ankle. X-rays of the bilateral knees, the right ankle, and the right foot were taken at that time. The right ankle x-ray showed soft tissue swelling, osteochondral defect and impacted fracture of the talus of indeterminate age and etiology, a healed displaced fracture of the anterior aspect of the tibia of indeterminate age, degenerative changes of the tarsal bones, enthesophyte at the insertion of the plantar aponeurosis in the calcaneus. She was provided with some medications, and recommended to undergo an MRI of her left knee. She was also given a work excuse for three days. (PX 1)

Petitioner then followed up with Dr. Freehill at the Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois. On the intake form, the petitioner stated that she had tripped over stripping on the floor that was loose and fell on both her knees, both her hands, and her feet were bent underneath her. She complained of right ankle pain and swelling since the date of accident. It was noted that the petitioner had significant swelling over her lateral ankle ligaments, but she was non-tender at the forefoot, midfoot and hindfoot. She was tender at the distal fibula, but non-tender at the medial malleolus and deltoid ligaments. X-rays from the Emergency Room were reviewed, and the doctor noted an old anterior tibial fracture that had healed in a slightly displaced manner, and anterior lateral talar changes consistent with osteochondral injury or possibly even osteonecrosis, but no evidence of any acute fracture. She was diagnosed with a right acute ankle sprain. The doctor recommended conservative care, and recommended a CAM walker boot but after the petitioner expressed not wanting that, Dr. Freehill recommended an ASO brace and an athletic shoe. She was placed on light duty, and told to avoid prolonged standing and walking. She was also referred to physical therapy. (PX 2)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on May 1, 2012. The doctor diagnosed the petitioner with right ankle sprain with persistent pain and swelling, and noted she was concerned about the swelling and possible osteonecrosis of the talus. There was consideration for an MRI, but petitioner was concerned about her cervical fusion with hardware would interfere with it. Therefore, the MRI was put off, she was sent for physical therapy, and told to continue her light duty at that point. (PX 2)

The petitioner had her initial visit with Physical Rehabilitation Center on May 21, 2012. The patient was to undergo physical therapy two times per week for three weeks. (PX 3) After 5 visits, petitioner had a reevaluation on June 11, 2012. Throughout physical therapy, petitioner continued to complain of pain in the right ankle without improvement. As of the reevaluation, the physical therapist recommended that further therapy be placed on hold pending follow up with the doctor. (PX 3)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on June 12, 2012. Dr. Freehill noted the petitioner had completed physical therapy, but had increased pain the previous day. Dr. Freehill continued to observe large amount of swelling over the lateral ankle ligaments, tenderness over the lateral ankle, tenderness over the anterolateral ankle ligament, and tightness of the Achilles tendon. The petitioner was recommended to see an ankle specialist, discontinue physical therapy, and be seen back in the office on an as-needed basis. The petitioner continued to not want an MRI at that point. (PX 2)

The petitioner had another follow up with Dr. Freehill on August 28, 2012. The doctor recommended an MRI of the right ankle again. The petitioner was to follow up after her MRI. (PX 2)

The petitioner underwent the MRI of the right ankle on September 17, 2012. The MRI revealed the following:

1. Chronic mild collapse of the central to lateral talar articular cortex with prominent diffuse subcortical degenerative changes.
2. Small to moderate ununited fracture of the anterior to anterolateral tibial plafond.
3. Ununited comminuted fracture distal and anterior aspect of the fibula with disruption of the anterior talofibular ligament.
4. Moderate degenerative changes in the anterior and posterior tibial plafond.
5. Moderate diffuse anterolateral capsular inflammation.
6. Small talotibial effusion with multiple very small ossific loose bodies within the anterior aspect.
7. Mild to moderate diffuse midfoot degenerative change.

(PX 3)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on September 28, 2012. Dr. Freehill noted the MRI showed that the petitioner had evidence of central collapse of the central and lateral talar articular cortex, had degenerative changes of the anterior and posterior tibia, and had tibiotalar joint effusion with loose bodies. Dr. Freehill again referred her to a foot and ankle specialist. The petitioner was to follow up on an as-needed basis at that point. (PX 3)

The petitioner was seen for an independent medical evaluation by Dr. Schmidt on October 22, 2012, at the request of the respondent. Petitioner gave Dr. Schmidt a consistent history of her March 13, 2012 accident. At the time of the evaluation, the petitioner reported a painful and swollen right ankle, and reported having trouble with prolonged standing, walking, and driving. She had crepitus in her ankle, and rated her pain at 5/10.

Physical examination showed the circumference of her right ankle at the malleolar to be 31 cm while on the left it was 29 cm. She was tender throughout her anterolateral ankle and had pain with deep palpation. The doctor noted that the point of maximum tenderness was the anterolateral ankle over the talar dome. Per his review of the x-rays, he found that petitioner had an osteochondral lesion over the talar dome encompassing almost the entire lateral talus and osteophytes with an old healed anterior tibial fracture at the tibial plafond along with severe osteoarthritis of the ankle and bone spurring anteriorly, and an old healed fracture of the anterior tibia. He diagnosed the petitioner with osteochondral lesion, osteonecrosis of the talus, and osteoarthritis of the ankle. (PX 9)

Dr. Schmidt believed that the current condition was related to her March 13, 2012, injury, and petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement. He recommended a CT scan of the ankle, and noted that she would probably need an ankle replacement. (PX 9)

The petitioner then alleges a second injury on November 12, 2012. She was again seen at Good Samaritan Hospital Emergency Room on that same date. An x-ray of the right ankle was taken at that time, and was read to show a new acute avulsion fracture of the distal fibula. (PX 1)

The petitioner was then referred to Dr. Aubuchon, and saw him on November 21, 2012. The petitioner complained that her ankle was very painful and swollen. Upon physical examination, Dr. Aubuchon noted significant swelling at her right ankle, along with significant grinding with flexion and extension of the ankle. Dr. Aubuchon reviewed the MRI and the x-rays, and diagnosed the petitioner with end stage arthritis of the ankle. He advised that her options included a salvage procedure if she did not want a brace, or the other option would be a fusion of the ankle or an ankle replacement. Dr. Aubuchon recommended an ankle fusion and gave petitioner restrictions of sit down work only through December 1, 2012. (PX 4)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on January 18, 2013. Dr. Freehill noted that the petitioner's pain was ongoing and she could not walk or stand for long periods of time. She diagnosed petitioner with right ankle arthritis and talar collapse, recommended an ankle fusion, and placed petitioner on restrictions of light duty with no twisting, squatting, kneeling, standing, or long periods of walking. She referred petitioner to Dr. Klein. (PX 5)

The petitioner then underwent a second independent medical evaluation by Dr. Schmidt at the request of the employer on February 8, 2013. Dr. Schmidt noted the second injury on November 12, 2012. Dr. Schmidt reviewed the x-ray from November 12, 2012 and did not see any evidence of an avulsion fracture. Dr. Schmidt noted his opinions remained unchanged, and he believed that the November 12, 2012, injury only caused a contusion and petitioner was at MMI for that injury. He continued to believe that the petitioner's ankle needed to be replaced, and that was related to the March 13, 2012, accident. (PX 9)

The petitioner saw Dr. Klein at Washington University Orthopedics on February 12, 2013. Dr. Klein noted petitioner's pain and swelling in her right ankle. Physical exam showed that the petitioner's gait was severely antalgic and she had a difficult time weight bearing on the right foot. Dr. Klein noted mild hindfoot valgus on the right compared to the left, and severe swelling of the right ankle. Dr. Klein also noted that the petitioner had severe pain with range of motion, and was tender to palpation around the ankle joint. Dr. Klein reviewed x-rays and diagnosed the petitioner with severe right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity, and idiopathic peripheral neuropathy. She recommended the petitioner undergo a CT scan. Dr. Klein explained to petitioner that if she had surgery, she would be required to use a boot post-operatively, and would also be in a cast. She further urged the petitioner to consider that because Dr. Klein specifically stated that she did not recommend surgery if the petitioner did not think she could comply with post-operative treatment. (PX 5)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein on that same date. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner's condition was unchanged at that point, and the petitioner had returned following her CT scan. Dr. Klein's diagnosis was the same, and treatment options were discussed. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner had a difficult time wearing a boot in the past, and she was a little bit worried about surgical recovery. Dr. Klein advised that the petitioner would be non-weight bearing in the cast for six weeks followed by four weeks in a weight bearing cast. After that, the petitioner would be in a boot which would allow the petitioner to weight bear. (PX 5)

The petitioner had a pre-operative follow up with Dr. Klein on March 28, 2013. Dr. Klein discussed the risks and benefits with the petitioner at that time, and Dr. Klein specifically noted that she advised the petitioner to practice non-weight bearing at home prior to the surgery. (PX 5)

The petitioner underwent surgery on April 5, 2013. The pre-operative and post-operative diagnoses were right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity, and obesity. A right ankle complex arthrodesis with interposition wedge allograft and a right iliac crest bone graft were performed on the petitioner. In the operative report itself, Dr. Klein again stated that she had conversations with the petitioner regarding the importance of remaining non-weight bearing post-operatively.

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein for her first post-operative visit on April 16, 2013. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner stated that she had been "doing her best" to keep her weight off the foot, but, "It sounds like she is putting it down on the ground several times." Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner denied putting her full weight on it, but Dr. Klein again discussed with the petitioner the importance of remaining non-weight bearing. Sutures were removed at that visit, and the petitioner was placed in a short leg non-weight bearing cast made of synthetic materials. Dr. Klein noted the petitioner would remain non-weight bearing and will continue to ice and elevate the right leg for comfort. Dr. Klein stated at the end of the note, "I discussed the importance of compliance with her once again. She should remain non-weight bearing. I think this gives her the best opportunity for success." (PX 5)

The petitioner had a follow up on May 16, 2013. X-rays did not show any evidence of hardware loosening or failure. Dr. Klein again stated, "It sounds like she has been walking on it somewhat." Dr. Klein noted the long discussions she had with the petitioner prior to surgery, even indicating to her that the petitioner should not consider surgery if she was not willing to be non-weight bearing. Dr. Klein explained to the petitioner again that if she wanted surgery to be successful, she needed to comply with the post-operative regimen. Dr. Klein placed the petitioner in a short leg weight bearing cast made of synthetic materials, and noted that she could place weight on the extremity of the cast. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner would remain in the cast for four more weeks, but she was concerned about the petitioner's compliance. Dr. Klein had a discussion with the petitioner again extensively, and explained to the petitioner that she could weight bear, but she should not continue to walk on it if it was painful. Dr. Klein specifically stated that she would run the risk of non-union, which could lead to chronic pain. (PX 5)

The petitioner's next followed up with Dr. Klein was on June 13, 2013. At that time, the petitioner again underwent a right ankle x-ray, and the x-ray showed stable hardware with what the doctor characterized as progressive fusion of the ankle joint line. Dr. Klein stated that the radiographs looked good, but the petitioner was still having pain clinically. Dr. Klein advised the petitioner to try to ease into her boot. She advised that the petitioner could weight bear as tolerated in the boot, but she should not walk without it on. Dr. Klein also noted that the petitioner was to use her crutches and walker to keep the weight off the foot as needed for discomfort. (PX 5)

On June 20, 2013, the petitioner presented at the Emergency Room at Good Samaritan Hospital. In the history portion, the petitioner advised the ER that she had right ankle pain, and had her cast removed approximately one week ago. The petitioner stated that she twisted her ankle that morning when she stepped wrong and possibly twisted it. An x-ray taken at that time showed possible oblique fracture with mild displacement of the distal fibula. Petitioner was given some pain medication at that point. (PX 1)

In a telephone note dated June 24, 2013, from Dr. Klein's office, the petitioner called requesting pain medication, noting that she had gone to the ER the previous week and was diagnosed with a fibular fracture. The nurse talked to Dr. Klein who advised that she believed that the fracture seen in the Emergency Room was actually an osteotomy that was done during surgery. Dr. Klein stated that she would not prescribe any pain medication at that point, and that the petitioner needed to keep her already scheduled appointment with the nurse practitioner on June 25, 2013. (PX 5)

Petitioner had the follow up appointment with Dr. Klein's nurse practitioner on June 25, 2013. The petitioner noted increased pain at that time of the right lateral ankle. Physical examination did show mild tenderness to palpation on the right lateral fibula, but no redness, bruising or swelling was noted. X-rays ordered on that same day were reviewed, and did not show any new fracture. The petitioner was put in a short leg non-weight bearing cast. The petitioner was noted to have asked for some pain medication, but the nurse practitioner told her they would be unable to refill the pain medication for her at this point. (PX 5)

The petitioner next had an appointment with Dr. Klein on July 11, 2013. Petitioner was feeling somewhat better, and stated she had good and bad days. She had moderate swelling of her ankle, it was improved, but she remained tender to palpation around her ankle. At that visit, the petitioner was placed in a short leg weight bearing cast. The doctor was not sure as to why the petitioner's pain had increased a couple weeks ago as her x-rays and exam looked pretty good. The doctor was concerned that the petitioner was developing non-union because of her pain, and she recommended a CT scan prior to her next visit.

On August 1, 2013, the petitioner had a follow up with Dr. Klein. The petitioner was placed in a boot, and told that she could weight bear as tolerated. Dr. Klein stated that if the CT scan showed the joint healing, they would progress her out of the boot. (PX 5)

The petitioner underwent the CT scan on August 1, 2013, which showed non-union of her right ankle arthrodesis, non-union of the distal fibular osteotomy, and mild subtalar osteoarthritis. (PX 7)

In a telephone note from August 13, 2013, Dr. Klein reviewed the CT scan with petitioner telling her that the arthrodesis had not healed. Dr. Klein further stated that pre-operatively she and the petitioner had discussed the need to remain non-weight bearing, and the petitioner suspected that it would be difficult for her to do that but despite that she chose to proceed with surgery. Since surgery, Dr. Klein noted that it had been very difficult for the petitioner to stay off of her right ankle. She stated, "As a result, we discussed the possibility of trying a bone stimulator." A bone stimulator was ordered at that point, and the petitioner was to follow up in six weeks. (PX 5)

On August 23, 2013, the petitioner presented at Good Samaritan Emergency Room again. The petitioner stated she had fallen in her kitchen two weeks ago, and since then, her pain had worsened. X-rays were taken of the ankle, and it was noted there was no change relative to the previous x-rays that had been taken. The petitioner was given Hydrocodone and Naproxen at that time. (PX 1)

The petitioner followed up for an x-ray and a visit with Dr. Klein on September 26, 2013. The x-ray continued to show a non-union of the tibiotalar and distal tibiofibular joints, and a non-union of the distal fibular osteotomy. Dr. Klein stated that the petitioner had early signs of non-union in her ankle joint, and the petitioner was to transition into a solid molded AFO at the ankle to help her get back into a shoe and perhaps out of a boot. The petitioner was to continue her bone stimulator and to follow up in eight weeks. Dr. Klein hoped that there would be some bony healing at that point. (PX 5)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein and for x-rays on January 16, 2014. The x-ray was unchanged at that point. Dr. Klein noted that the x-ray showed a broken screw as well as a loose screw and plate fixation of the talus. Dr. Klein stated that she had evidence of non-union. Dr. Klein stated that the petitioner needed to decide if she wanted to continue to monitor or proceed with some sort of revision. (PX 7)

The petitioner followed up for a CT scan on April 2, 2014. The CT scan confirmed non-union. Following the CT scan, Dr. Klein's office had a telephone conversation with the petitioner on April 4, 2014 and advised that the fusion had not healed and the next step would be a revision surgery. The petitioner wanted to think about that option, and the doctor's office cancelled the petitioner's follow up appointment in May. The petitioner was to call back if she wanted to discuss surgery at that point. (PX 7)

Subsequently, the petitioner was sent for an independent medical evaluation by her attorney with Dr. Krause. The petitioner gave a consistent history of her March 12, 2012 and November 12, 2012 injuries. At the time of the visit with Dr. Krause, the petitioner reported her pain was not severe enough to undergo another surgery. Dr. Krause stated that without evidence to the contrary, he did not dispute the causation opinions by Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Freehill as it pertained to the March 13, 2012 injury. Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, Dr. Krause stated that the petitioner had a minor ankle contusion that had resolved. Based on that, he believed that the petitioner's need for surgery was related to the March 12, 2012, accident. Dr. Krause stated that petitioner had a non-union of the ankle, but he would not recommend another surgical procedure at that point. The petitioner was at maximum medical improvement regarding the injury on March 12, 2012. Dr. Krause stated that the petitioner could work at sedentary capacity with intermittent standing, and that the petitioner had excellent hindfoot motion and plantigrade foot. He further advised that the petitioner sustained permanency from the March 12, 2012, injury, and had not sustained any permanency from the November 12, 2012, injury. (PX 10)

Approximately three months after her visit with Dr. Krause, the petitioner was sent to see Stephen Dolan for a vocational evaluation. Mr. Dolan noted that the petitioner came to the evaluation using a cane, and the petitioner stated to Mr. Dolan that she used a cane when she was outside of her house. Mr. Dolan further observed that during the assessment, and after an hour and fifteen minutes, she had to elevate her right leg to the waist level on another chair, and then she kept it elevated for the rest of the evaluation. (PX 11)

The petitioner was receiving $671.00 per month from the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, and $900.00 per month from Social Security Disability. The petitioner's work history included work as a waitress, work as a nurse's aid, and then work as a teacher's aid since 1990. Mr. Dolan noted that Dr. Krause was the only doctor who placed restrictions on the petitioner, and stated that she would need work in a sitting capacity with intermittent standing. (PX 11)

Subjectively, the petitioner told Mr. Dolan that after sitting for an hour, if she did not elevate her right ankle, it would turn red. She further stated she could only stand for five minutes before increased pain. She complained that she could only walk five to ten minutes, but every step hurt her right ankle. She complained that stooping increased right ankle, knee and back pain, and that she could not crouch or kneel. She avoided stairs and was otherwise dependent on handrails. She stated that she could lift a gallon of milk, but lifting a bag of groceries was too much weight on her right ankle. She further complained that carrying a gallon of milk was difficult for her. (PX 11)

Testing results showed that the petitioner had good word recognition and sentence comprehension, and spelled above the high school level. Her math was at a ninth grade level, and her reading and spelling were noted to be in line with her education. She scored a 28 on the depression screening, which Mr. Dolan stated was indicative of moderate level depression. (PX 11)

Mr. Dolan stated that based on the non-fusion of the right ankle, he found statements that she needed to elevate her foot as much as possible to be credible. The petitioner had no specific vocational skills for a sedentary job or a sedentary job that she was able to stand intermittently in. Mr. Dolan ultimately concluded that petitioner did not have any access to a reasonably stable labor market. (PX 11)

On October 10, 2016, Dr. Krause provided an addendum report at the request of petitioner's attorney. He was provided additional medical records dating back to 2010. Dr. Krause stated that the additional records did not provide him with anything significant regarding the injury in question, and that the additional records did not change his opinions from his prior IME on June 30, 2014. (PX 10)

An addendum report was also issued by Dr. Schmidt dated July 24, 2017. Dr. Schmidt also reviewed additional medical records and stated it was obvious that the petitioner had right ankle difficulty prior to her March 13, 2012, accident. However, the petitioner was found by Dr. Juergens to be able to walk on her toes which she was unable to do during Dr. Schmidt's evaluation. Therefore, he stated that, "One would feel that she did deteriorate, and, therefore, even though she did have what seems like preexisting ankle arthritis, her fall with catching her foot on the carpet seemed to accentuate the arthritic condition and necessitate further treatment as was outlined in my reports." Dr. Schmidt stated that it appeared that petitioner's ankle had not fused, and that she might have collapsed further as her alignment, in his reports, was listed as neutral. Dr. Schmidt ultimately stated that even with the records available to him, he believed that the fall on March 13, 2012, severely exacerbated the petitioner's preexisting arthritic condition. (PX 9)

Dr. Schmidt, however, noted that in the initial two post-operative notes from Dr. Klein, the petitioner was weight bearing when Dr. Klein had clearly required the petitioner to be non-weight bearing. He opined her non-compliance "would directly relate to her developing a non-union, especially what appears as an atrophic non-union as described in the further notes." He went on to state, "Therefore, I think her early weight bearing and non-compliance with her surgery has a direct effect on developing a non-union in her ankle. It is imperative that the ankle be non-stressed during the healing process so that proper healing can take place. Stressing the construct will contribute to developing a non-union." (PX 9)

Deposition of Dr. Schmidt

Dr. Schmidt's deposition was taken on December 20, 2017. Dr. Schmidt testified that he is an orthopedic surgeon specializing in foot and ankle, and he has been board certified since 1999. Dr. Schmidt testified that he actively treated patients on a daily basis and has performed surgeries for the last 22 years. (PX 14, 4-5)

Dr. Schmidt testified that he first saw the petitioner on October 22, 2012, and his first report was dated October 30, 2012. He was requested to evaluate the petitioner at the request of the Workers' Compensation carrier for an independent medical evaluation. (PX 14, 6) Dr. Schmidt testified consistently as to the history of the petitioner's accident on March 13, 2013 and the medical treatment she underwent after. (PX 14, 7)

The petitioner described to Dr. Schmidt that she had immediate symptoms of pain and swelling in the right ankle, and her current symptoms included continued pain and swelling in the right ankle, trouble with prolonged standing, walking, driving, and crepitus in the right ankle. She stated that her pain gets worse as the day goes on, and she felt she was losing her ability to drive, stand, walk, lift, carry, bend, push, pull, climb, squat, and kneel. (PX 14, 8)

Dr. Schmidt testified that the petitioner did not describe any past medical history that was significant to his evaluation. The petitioner reported to Dr. Schmidt that 85% of her day was spent sitting or lying down, and she did not do any sporting activities or hobbies. (PX 14, 9)

Dr. Schmidt testified as to what his physical examination showed consistently as reported in his report. Dr. Schmidt also reviewed an x-ray done on October 15, 2012 which showed that she had an osteochondral lesion over the talar dome and what appeared to be an old anterior tibial fracture. (PX 14, 9-10) The x-rays that he performed at his office were similar. He diagnosed the petitioner with an osteochondral lesion, osteoarthritis of her ankle, and osteonecrosis of her talus. (PX 14, 10-12)

Dr. Schmidt testified that the osteochondral lesion and the osteoarthritis had been around for a long time, and the fall may have accentuated that. He testified that the objective findings supported the subjective complaints of pain and limitations, and he felt that the petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement. (PX 14, 12-13)

He recommended the petitioner undergo additional testing, and anticipated that the petitioner was a candidate for a total ankle arthroplasty. Dr. Schmidt testified that within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, need for future treatment was necessitated by the work injury, and his reasoning was because the petitioner did not describe any previous trauma or previous records indicating such. (PX 14, 13) He recommended that the petitioner could work in a light duty capacity. (PX 14, 14)

Dr. Schmidt saw the petitioner again on February 4, 2013, at the request of the Workers' Compensation carrier again. At that point, her chief complaint continued to be right ankle pain, and she described another injury on November 12, 2012. Dr. Schmidt reviewed the medical records from the Emergency Room of November 12, 2012, and performed a physical examination. The physical examination was pretty consistent with his previous one. The x-ray from November 12, 2012, was compared to the x-ray from October 22, 2012, and Dr. Schmidt did not see a big difference. He also did not see a fracture in the x-ray taken at the Emergency Room on November 12, 2012. (PX 14, 15-17)

Dr. Schmidt testified that his second evaluation did not change his opinion regarding the effects of the March 2012 accident, and he continued to believe that the March injury accentuated a preexisting condition necessitating further treatment. He further testified that the November 12, 2012, injury was a contusion to her ankle and had gone on to heal and placed her at maximum medical improvement for the November injury, but not for the March injury. (PX 14, 17-18)

Dr. Schmidt testified that he received additional medical records from respondent's attorney on or about June 20, 2017. Dr. Schmidt testified that the records indicated that the petitioner had been seen previous to her injury, and noted a couple years worth of pain in her feet and ankles. He specifically noted that Dr. Gunzel did not order an x-ray of the ankle, and she was treated with injections to the sinus tarsi, which was not the same as an injection in the ankle. After review of the additional medical records, Dr. Schmidt stated that he did not believe his diagnosis needed to be changed. (PX 14, 19-22)

Dr. Schmidt also testified that he thought it was significant that at the time of Dr. Juergens' evaluation in February 2012, the petitioner was able to get on to her toes. At Dr. Schmidt's initial evaluation, the petitioner could not do the same thing and that showed some deterioration. Dr. Schmidt testified that his opinion did not change as to the petitioner's need for an ankle replacement. (PX 14, 23-24)

Dr. Schmidt testified that early weight bearing after a fusion was detrimental to the fusion taking. Dr. Schmidt further explained that it was possible to have a non-union even if a person was completely non-weight bearing. (PX 14, 28-30) The petitioner's attorney and Dr. Schmidt had the following exchange:

> Q: She advised that there were times when she had to check her balance, and she put weight on her toes to support her foot because the boot was heavy and it would be hard to stabilize herself. She said there were also times she had to hop, and there were times when she had to touch her right foot to the ground. Otherwise, she only walked on her foot when she was advised by Dr. Klein that she could. If those activities as described are true, were those alone sufficient to create a non-union with a fusion?
> A: Indeed it may be. (PX 14, 32)

Dr. Schmidt also testified the atrophy that was noted in the petitioner's right calf was not an indication of her non-use of the leg and right foot. The petitioner's attorney and Dr. Schmidt had the following exchange:

> Q: Would it be true that you couldn't say within a reasonable degree of medical certainty that any weight bearing by Mrs. McAlexander was the cause of her non-union?
> A: I wouldn't say you could say it's the cause of the non-union; but if you certainly have somebody with a large osteochondral lesion that you have to do a big bone graft on that may have some neuropathy, they ain't helping their cause any by weight bearing on it, that's for sure. And you really want them to really stay off of it because they already have a few strikes against them. (PX 14, 33)

On cross-examination, Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that given the timeframe, the loose bodies that were found and removed in surgery had probably been there prior to the March 2012 accident. Dr. Schmidt also acknowledged that the osteoarthritis, osteochondral lesion, osteonecrosis were all preexisting to the work accident. (PX 14, 35-36)

Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that the petitioner had not told him about the prior treatment she received in her right foot. Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel had noted swelling in the petitioner's right ankle, along with pain. He also agreed that in hindsight, he might be able to say that given the fact that in March she had an x-ray showing arthritis, that the treatment Dr. Gunzel provided was at least in part for the arthritic condition. (PX 14, 39-40)

Dr. Schmidt further acknowledged that the petitioner showed weakness throughout her foot and ankle, global in nature, and evidence of swelling in the lateral malleolus, which was the outside of the ankle. He further testified that based on the picture that the petitioner's attorney had shown him, the swelling seen was on the outside of the ankle as well. Dr. Schmidt also acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel's notes included descriptions of pain in the ankle with limited range of motion. (PX 14, 45-46)

Dr. Schmidt agreed that Dr. Klein counseled the petitioner on the importance of non-weight bearing at points before and after the operation, and it appeared that the petitioner had been weight bearing in several notes after the operation as well. He further testified that he thought it was very important for someone to be non-weight bearing after an ankle fusion. Dr. Schmidt testified that while weight bearing may not be a 100% cause of the non-union, it certainly made it more likely. He testified that the weight bearing contributed to the non-fusion, and was indirectly related to the ongoing complaints of pain. (PX 14, 51-53)

On redirect examination, He confirmed that he had not changed any of his opinions regarding the March 12, 2012, injury being the aggravating or accelerating factor to the need for surgery. (PX 14, 56-58)

Deposition of Dr. Krause

Dr. Krause's deposition was taken on June 2, 2017. Dr. Krause testified that he was an orthopedic surgeon and board certified in orthopedic surgery. His primary practice was to the lower extremities, including the knees, feet, and ankles. (PX 10, 5-6) Dr. Krause first saw the petitioner on June 30, 2014, on referral by the petitioner's attorney. (PX 10, 6)

Dr. Krause testified as to the history given to him by petitioner and described the medical records he reviewed, including Dr. Freehill's. He testified that her diagnosis was an osteochondral injury and osteonecrosis of the lateral talus. The petitioner was eventually seen by Dr. Gary Schmidt on October 30, 2012. At that time, Dr. Schmidt noted a limited ankle range of motion, and diagnosed the petitioner with osteonecrosis of the talus with osteoarthritis. Dr. Schmidt related that to the March 13, 2012, accident, and recommended a CT scan. (PX 10, 9)

Dr. Krause noted the petitioner's second injury on November 12, 2012, and she was treated at St. Mary's Good Samaritan Regional Health Center on that day for what was thought to be a fibular avulsion fracture. Subsequently, the petitioner was seen by Dr. Aubuchon on November 21, 2012 and Dr. Klein in February 2013, and both doctors recommended a right ankle fusion. (PX 10, 10-11)

Dr. Krause testified that based on his review of medical records, Dr. Klein performed a right ankle arthrodesis on April 5, 2013, and the petitioner had routine post-operative care in a cast, then a boot, and non-weight bearing initially. He noted that the petitioner had several falls post-operatively, and she presented for several visits to the Emergency Room. He testified that it looked like she had some difficulty healing, and was eventually given a bone stimulator. Subsequently, Dr. Klein diagnosed the petitioner with a non-healed fusion. (PX 10, 12)

Dr. Krause testified as to the physical exam findings at this visit consistently with what was reported in his report. Dr. Krause testified that upon his review of the CT scan from April 2014, it confirmed the diagnosis of non-union of the ankle arthrodesis with the hardware. (PX 10, 13) Based on that, he diagnosed the petitioner with a history of lateral talar osteochondral lesion versus osteonecrosis with a history of a right ankle arthrodesis non-union. Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, he diagnosed the petitioner with a right ankle contusion which had resolved. (PX 10, 14)

Dr. Krause further testified that the injury on March 13, 2012, resulting in a contusion or strain of the ankle, worsened her preexisting osteochondral injury to her talus. It was his opinion the petitioner's subsequent surgery was related to the March 13, 2012, accident, and that the petitioner suffered a minor contusion on November 12, 2012, that she did not need treatment for. He further testified that the petitioner had reached maximum medical improvement for the November 12, 2012, accident. (PX 10, 15-16) Dr. Krause testified he did not think the petitioner needed surgery at this point, and that she was at maximum medical improvement for her March 2012 injury. He anticipated that the petitioner could work in a sitting capacity with intermittent standing, but probably could not tolerate standing for 8-10 hours per day. Dr. Krause did not believe the petitioner suffered any permanency from the November injury, but did sustain permanency as a result of the March 12, 2012, injury. (PX 10, 17-18)

Dr. Krause testified that the loose body that Dr. Klein referred to in the operative report was not necessarily objective evidence of injury, and it could come from a non-traumatic cause. (PX 10, 18-19) Dr. Krause reviewed photographs admitted into evidence petitioner's exhibit 15, agreed that there was significant swelling on the outside portion of the petitioner's right ankle, and that the swelling was in the same location that the loose bodies were retrieved during surgery. Dr. Krause further agreed that swelling could be objective evidence of injury, along with lack of range of motion. (PX 10, 19-20)

Dr. Krause testified that after his initial examination, he was also provided additional medical records to review, and after that review, he issued a report dated October 10, 2016 in which he stated that the additional records did not change his opinion from his original report. (PX 10, 21-25)

On cross-examination, Dr. Krause noted that the petitioner did not tell him about any significant problems with her ankle prior to the date of accident in March 2012, nor mentioned any preexisting conditions on the intake form prior to his independent medical evaluation. Accordingly, he agreed that the history that was given to him on June 30, 2014, was not consistent with the medical records he subsequently saw, and he also acknowledged the medical history taken from the petitioner would have played a large role in his opinions and his reporting. (PX 10, 28-29)

Dr. Krause testified that he had seen the x-ray film from March 13, 2012, and the osteochondral fracture of the talus was clearly old. Dr. Krause testified that the x-ray taken on March 13, 2012, indicated that the osteochondral fracture predated the March 13, 2012, alleged accident and that he thought that the petitioner's collapse and chronic changes came over the course of several months, if not years. (PX 10, 29-31) Dr. Krause testified that the findings from the MRI did not show any acute occurrence and were consistent with the x-ray findings from March 13, 2012 and the CT scan from February 2013. He testified that they all showed a long-standing degenerative osteonecrosis, and did not have any indications of an acute injury. (PX 10, 32-36)

Dr. Krause testified petitioner was eventually diagnosed with a non-union in her right ankle, and that the most common causes for non-union after an ankle fusion is if the patient smokes or the patient puts weight on the ankle too early. (PX 10, 40) Dr. Krause acknowledged that the records from Dr. Klein indicate that the petitioner was weight bearing in the follow ups after her surgery within 6-8 weeks after surgery. He further testified that weight being at that point can lead to a non-union. Dr. Krause also acknowledged that on June 13, 2013, the petitioner was given a boot to wear, but also instructed not to walk at all on the ankle without the boot on. He acknowledged that subsequently on June 20, 2013, the petitioner went to the ER, stating she had sprained her ankle. Dr. Krause stated if the petitioner had been wearing the boot, she would not have been able to twist her ankle, and therefore, he agreed that the petitioner was not being compliant with the doctor's instructions at that point either. (PX 10, 40-43)

Dr. Krause testified that considering the petitioner's weight bearing after her surgery, it was safe to say that the weight bearing contributed to the non-union to some degree. (PX 10, 44)

Dr. Krause acknowledged that an individual can have an injury that can exacerbate a condition without significantly altering a natural course of preexisting condition. He further acknowledged that inflammation in the ankle could be a sign of an ankle sprain as opposed to anything significant to the actual bone. (PX 10, 45-46) Dr. Krause did testify the MRI was done 6 months after the accident and any findings at that time would have been chronic, but also admitted that the MRI taken in September 2012 was consistent with the March 2012 x-ray showing chronic conditions. (PX 10, 46-48)

Dr. Krause admitted that the petitioner's diagnosis started before the March 2012 accident. However, he also stated, "The question is did the injury worsen that or change that? Again, we don't have any evidence that it did or didn't, but Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Freehill had their opinions that it did. I don't have evidence one way or the other, so I'm not going against them. I'm just saying I don't have evidence that it did or it didn't." (PX 10, 48) When asked specifically for his opinion, Dr. Krause testified that everything he saw showed that the petitioner's condition in her right ankle was chronic, and there was no evidence to show that it was acute. (PX 10, 49)

Upon further questioning regarding Dr. Gunzel's records, Dr. Krause testified that the petitioner had injections done in May 2011 and December 2011. He further testified that the regular course of treatment for arthritis in any joint is to start with conservative care, including less weight bearing, physical therapy, and bracing. The next step is injections. The third step, if injections were not helpful, would then be consideration for an ankle fusion. (PX 10, 49-51)

The following exchange took place between the respondent's attorney and Dr. Krause:

> Q: In seeing that she progressed from conservative treatment with physical therapy and some bracing, then to injections, and then had this alleged injury in March, then eventually had a fusion, wouldn't you agree that even without the alleged injury, that would pretty much be a natural course of the type of condition that she had?
> A: Absolutely.
> Q: Doctor, taking all that into consideration, what exactly did the injury - - or how exactly did the injury accelerate this natural, progressive, degenerative condition that eventually lead to a fusion?
> A: It's hard to know if there's no objective evidence that it did.
> Q: So can you say, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the March 13, 2012, (sic) injury in any way accelerated or aggravated the chronic conditions in the right ankle that eventually lead to the ankle fusion?
> A: I couldn't. (PX 10, 54-56)

Upon redirect testimony, Dr. Krause testified that the March 2013 injury could have made the preexisting conditions worse, and could have accelerated the need for surgery. Furthermore, Dr. Krause testified that the petitioner's alleged injury could have further accelerated the collapse of the ankle and the need for surgery. Dr. Krause also acknowledged that the petitioner could have been at risk for a non-union regardless of the occasions of non-weight bearing, but also stated that the biggest risk, other than smoking, would be premature weight bearing for a non-fusion. (PX 10, 60-62)

On re-cross examination, the following exchange took place between the respondent's attorney and Dr. Krause:

> Q: Is it still your position, as you testified on cross-examination, that based on the medical evidence that you've seen, physical examination, history and everything, that you cannot say one way or the other, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the accident on March 13, 2012, aggravated, accelerated, or altered the natural course of the preexisting osteonecrosis and osteoarthritis?
> A: There's no evidence to suggest that it accelerated or exacerbated or worsened it.
> Q: Just so we're clear, so what you are saying is you cannot state, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether the accident in March 2012 accelerated, altered, or changed the natural progression of that degenerative condition?
> A: I cannot say that with any certainty.
> Q: Since you cannot say that with any degree of medical certainty, is it > true that you also cannot state within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the eventual and subsequent ankle fusion she underwent is causally related to the March 13, 2012, accident?
> A: I cannot say that with any certainty.

Deposition of Mr. Stephen Dolan

Stephen Dolan testified on behalf of the petitioner on June 20, 2017. He testified that he was a vocational rehabilitation counsel, and has been working in the field since 1972. He left private practice in 1994. Currently, 20% of his practice is as a vocational expert with the Social Security Administration, and his other vocational expert work is split 50/50 between the petitioner's side and the respondent's side. (PX 11, 5-7)

Mr. Dolan further testified that 80% of his practice right now is vocational assessments in litigation, while 20% is as a vocational expert to the Social Security Administration office. He testified that over the last 10 years, he has probably had up to 60 cases with petitioner's attorney's firm, and that law firm was a firm that he was familiar with. Mr. Dolan further testified that at this point, he does about one to two job placements per year, and the rest of his practice is either vocational reports for litigation or work for the Social Security Administration office. (PX 11, 53-55)

The petitioner was evaluated by Mr. Dolan on September 24, 2014. Mr. Dolan testified consistently with the history of the accident, medical treatment, the petitioner's educational background, and work history. Mr. Dolan noted that the petitioner sat elevating her leg during about half the assessment. (PX 11, 8-10)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner told him if she sat too long, her right ankle swelled and hurt, and she would have to elevate her right ankle to the waist height. She further told him that she could only stand for five minutes before pain increased in the right ankle and the back. She stated that she could only walk for five or ten minutes, and every step hurt her ankle and increased pain. She stated that pain in the right ankle got worse if she stood longer. She testified that stooping increased her right ankle, knee, and back pain. She could not crouch and she could not kneel. The petitioner further stated that she could not crawl and avoided stairs. If she has to maneuver stairs, she stated that she holds the handrail with both hands and takes one step at a time. She stated that she could lift a gallon of milk, but she could not lift a bag of groceries as that was too much weight on her right ankle. She told Mr. Dolan that she had fallen four times since her ankle surgery. (PX 11, 14-16)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner had rudimentary computer skills, knows how to do email and internet, and has some word processing experiencing. She does not have any spreadsheet software or bookkeeping software experience. Based on her testing, he found that the petitioner spelled above a high school level, and did math at the 9th grade level, almost 10th grade. He testified that the reading and spelling scores were in line with her education, but the math score was below the level of education. He noted with the scoring and testing, the petitioner would have good skills to take courses at a community college. (PX 11, 18-19)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner's current vocational profile was that of a 60-year old woman approaching retirement age with community college education. She read and spelled above the high school level, but did math at the 9th grade level. She had worked as an individual aid from 1990-2013, and based on Dr. Krause's restrictions, she needed a sit-down job where she could stand intermittently. However, according to her own description of her problems, she needed to keep her right foot elevated above the waist level much of the time while sitting to keep down pain and edema. Taking all that into consideration, Mr. Dolan testified that it was his conclusion that the petitioner was not employable in the open labor market. He further testified that he did not believe that the petitioner had access to a reasonably stable labor market. (PX 11, 21-23)

On cross-examination, Mr. Dolan acknowledged that having an Associates Degree or any higher level education makes an individual more marketable in the open labor market than someone who does not have one. (PX 11, 27-28)

Mr. Dolan was questioned regarding his statements in his report that the petitioner has not been able to do her job since her last ankle injury primarily because the fusion did not fuse. Mr. Dolan acknowledged that that was what he stated in his report, and he also admitted that the petitioner's fusion actually took place after the petitioner retired from her job in 2013. Mr. Dolan also admitted that the petitioner retired before she knew there was going to be a non-union of the fusion and before she was given any permanent restrictions by Dr. Krause. Mr. Dolan also admitted that the petitioner had never gone back to her job with the school district with her permanent restrictions to see if they would accommodate them. He admitted that he did not know whether or not the petitioner would have gone back to the school district even if her right ankle had fused. (PX 11, 30-32) In terms of number 1 of his conclusions, Mr. Dolan admitted that it was solely his assumption that the petitioner did not go back to work based on the fusion and non-fusion. (PX 11, 33-34)

Mr. Dolan was also asked specifically regarding the IME report performed by Dr. Krause on June 30, 2014. Mr. Dolan acknowledged that the petitioner had not made any comments to Dr. Krause about elevating her right ankle, having problems with standing more than five minutes, with walking more than 5-10 minutes, or any problems with lifting a bag of groceries. Mr. Dolan also admitted that although Dr. Krause provided restrictions of sedentary intermittent standing, there were no lifting restrictions or restrictions regarding pushing or pulling on the petitioner. Mr. Dolan admitted that the complaints that the petitioner told him about as described on page 5 through page 6 of his report were all subjective and based on the petitioner's own reporting. (PX 11, 37-39)

Regarding number 2 of his conclusions section, Mr. Dolan acknowledged and admitted that he was not a medical doctor, did not treat ankle and foot problems, was not an orthopedic surgeon, did not do surgeries, and did not have any expertise from a medical standpoint in terms of whether or not she would need to lift her ankle at all. He further acknowledged that his statement in number 2 of his conclusion section was based on his assumption of her credibility. Mr. Dolan further admitted that none of the medical doctors had opined or determined that the petitioner needed a permanent restriction for the need to elevate her foot as needed. He testified:

> Q: Okay. And based on your direct testimony, you specifically stated that her need to elevate her foot which based on what you're testifying now is subjective, ... is a primary reason as to why she would not be able to return to a stable labor market, correct?
> A: That is correct.
> Q: Okay. So your opinion in terms of her ability to return to a stable labor market is based primarily on her own subjective complaints?
> A: Which I found credible, yes.
> Q: Okay. But it's not based on any of the medical records?
> A: That's correct. (PX 11, 41-43)

Mr. Dolan also admitted on cross-examination that based on the petitioner's job evaluations as shown him, the petitioner did appear to have superior organizational skills, the ability to take and give instructions, implement instructions, and good interpersonal skills which would then help someone in terms of experience to gain other employment. (PX 11, 49-52)

Mr. Dolan testified that he did not provide Ms. McAlexander with any recommendation as to computer courses or training that she could take to improve her computer skills, he did not recommend any types of courses or training that Ms. McAlexander could do to become more employable, and he did not offer the petitioner any resources she could consult with in terms of finding work. Mr. Dolan further admitted that the petitioner did not present to him any job searches she had conducted, and also acknowledged that he did not look at area classified ads, Indeed.com, Monster.com, or any other job placement or job posting websites or newspapers. Mr. Dolan did not consult any outside resources that would indicate if the type of transferrable skills the petitioner had and the type of experience would translate into any other sort of jobs. (PX 11, 55-58)

On redirect examination, Mr. Dolan testified that he had no basis to question the petitioner's credibility, and that she did appear entirely credible to him. Mr. Dolan testified that with the petitioner's limitations and complaints, assuming they are true, an employer would be more likely to hire someone without those limitations, and would be more likely to hire someone who is younger with more vocational skills. He testified that employers generally prefer someone without restrictions or physical problems versus someone who has them. (PX 11, 59-61)

Mr. Dolan further testified that it was his feeling that it would have been a waste of time for him to check outside sources as to job availability, and he was familiar with the types of jobs available in her area. (PX 11, 61)

On re-cross examination, Mr. Dolan acknowledged that as part of the ADA, employers are not supposed to inquire as to physical limitations or disabilities that are not essential to job functions. (PX 11, 62-63)

Mr. Dolan admitted that the job of a receptionist was primarily a sedentary job, and if the petitioner took computer classes, word processing classes, and typing classes, that would improve the petitioner's efficiency in word processing and would be the type of job the petitioner would be able to do within Dr. Krause's recommended restrictions. (PX 11, 66-67) Mr. Dolan testified that he knew that there were jobs available that met Dr. Krause's restrictions. He was asked the following:

> Q: Without doing any sort of labor market survey, how do you even know that there aren't any other types of sedentary-type work that are within Dr. Krause's recommended restrictions that would even be available?
> A: Well, I know that there are jobs available that meet Dr. Krause's restrictions. (PX 11, 71)

Respondent's Exhibits

Respondent admitted exhibits 1-7 into evidence without objection from the petitioner's attorney. Exhibit 1 was a copy of the petitioner's wage statement. Per the Request for Hearing Sheet for both cases, the parties agreed to an average weekly wage of $517.99.

Respondent's exhibit 2 consisted of a medical pay log from the Sandner Group Claims Management showing that $161.52 was paid by the insurance company towards the petitioner's medical costs.

Respondent's exhibit 3 consisted of the deposition transcript of Nancy Herzing. Nancy Herzing's deposition was taken on September 26, 2017, on behalf of the respondent. Ms. Herzing testified that she was employed by the Mt. Vernon School District at the time of the petitioner's alleged accidents, and had been through May 2017 as the School District's Director of Business. She testified that she retired as of May 19, 2017. (RX 3, 4)

As the Director of Business, Ms. Herzing's job duties included supervising the accounting positions at the School District, doing all of the state and federal reporting, and she was also assigned responsibilities of workers' compensation reporting and filling out paperwork regarding workers' compensation claims. She testified that her process for handling workers' compensation injuries started with receiving a personnel injury report. At that point, she would fill out the Form 45, and submit it to Bushue HR. Bushue HR would then review it, and send the information on to the workers' compensation carrier. (PX 3, 5) Ms. Herzing testified that although she did not do the investigation of any accidents, she was the one who was in charge of doing the initial paperwork, obtain the signed releases, and collecting all reporting documents. (RX 3, 5-6)

Ms. Herzing testified that she had filled out two workers' compensation claims on behalf of the petitioner, and she never had any direct face-to-face communications with the petitioner. (RX 3, 6) Ms. Herzing primarily testified to the workers' compensation files that she kept and maintained on behalf of the School District regarding the petitioner's two alleged accidents. She also recalled receiving some information and paperwork from IMRF regarding the petitioner's retirement at some point in April 2013. Based on her own personal knowledge, it was her understanding that the retirement was voluntary in nature. (RX 3, 13-15)

Respondent's exhibits 4 and 5 were the workers' compensation files from the School District for the March 13, 2012, date of injury and the November 12, 2012, date of injury, respectively.

Respondent's exhibit 6 was a labor market survey done in the fall of 2017 by Natasha Charleston. Ms. Charleston reviewed Mr. Dolan's counseling report dated January 15, 2015, and Dr. Krause's report dated June 30, 2014, stating that the petitioner was at maximum medical improvement and could work at a sedentary-type job with intermittent standing. Based on the labor market survey, Ms. Charleston found a total of nine jobs that would fall within the petitioner's return to work restrictions or with employers willing to make reasonable accommodations. She noted that the positions were all within a 50 mile radius of the petitioner's home in Mt. Vernon, Illinois. She also recommended that the petitioner obtain computer and typing skills training as-needed. (RX 6)

Respondent's exhibit 7 were email communications between Michael Green and the petitioner regarding her retirement.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

With respect to issue (C), did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of the petitioner's employment by the respondent, the arbitrator finds as follows:

Respondent did not present any evidence refuting petitioner's alleged injury on November 12, 2012. Accordingly, Arbitrator finds that petitioner suffered a compensable injury under the Act on that day.

With respect to issue (F), is the petitioner's present condition of ill-being causally related to the injury, the arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator notes that both Dr. Krause and Dr. Schmidt stated that they did not see a fracture in the x-rays from the ER visit on November 12, 2012. Accordingly, both doctors opined that at most the petitioner suffered a minor contusion, and Dr. Krause further testified that petitioner did not suffer any permanency from it. Accordingly, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner suffered a minor contusion to her right ankle in this injury that resolved without any treatment. Accordingly, the Arbitrator finds that petitioner present condition of ill0being is not causally related to the November 12, 2012 work accident.

With respect to issue (J), were the medical services provided to petitioner reasonable and necessary, and has respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services, the arbitrator finds as follows:

Based on the testimonies of Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Krause, petitioner suffered a minor contusion that resolved without much treatment. Dr. Krause further testified that the contusion resolved without the need of treatment. Accordingly, the Arbitrator finds that only petitioner's initial treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital

ER on November 12, 2012 was reasonable and necessary to cure and relieve the effects of this injury. The Arbitrator finds that all other treatment petitioner received to her right ankle is not causally related to the accident on November 12, 2012.

With respect to issue (K), what amount of compensation is due for temporary total disability, temporary partial disability and/or maintenance, the arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator does not find that the petitioner is entitled to any temporary total disability, temporary partial disability, and/or maintenance.

With respect to issue (L), what is the nature and extent of the injury, the arbitrator finds as follows:

Based on the testimony of the doctors, petitioner suffered a minor contusion in this accident. Dr. Krause testified that petitioner did not suffer any permanency from this accident, while Dr. Schmidt was silent on the matter.

Pursuant to Section 8.1(b) of the Act, in determining permanent partial disability for all injuries on or after September 1, 2011, an arbitrator must weigh five factors, including an AMA impairment rating prepared by a physician licensed to practice medicine pursuant to the American Medical Association's guides to evaluation of permanent impairment most current edition; the occupation of the injured employee; the age of the employee at the time of the injury; the employee's future earning capacity; and evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records.

The parties did not submit an impairment rating for either one of the injuries and this factor was given no weight.

The petitioner was employed as an individual aid for the school district, and testified that her job duties required a lot of walking, and occasionally lifting of students, depending on how disabled they were. The Arbitrator put little weight on this factor considering the amount of walking petitioner had to do.

At the time of her accidents, the petitioner was 57 years old. The Arbitrator put little weight on this factor.

The medical records from the ER on November 12, 2013 initially indicated petitioner had a new fracture in her right ankle. However, Dr. Krause and Dr. Schmidt both reviewed the x-ray taken on November 12, 2013 and stated that they did not see a fracture. Instead, both doctors testified that petitioner at most suffered a contusion that resolved with minimal treatment if any at all. Dr. Krause testified that petitioner did not suffer any disability from this accident. The Arbitrator put great weight on this factor.

After considering the factors under Section 8.1b, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner did not suffer any permanent partial disability as a result of this injury.

ORDER

The Arbitrator finds that the petitioner sustained an accident which arose out of and in the course of her employment on March 13, 2012. The petitioner also proved by a preponderance of the evidence that as a result of that injury, she suffered a right ankle sprain that aggravated pre-existing arthritis in her right ankle accelerating the need for a right ankle fusion. However, pursuant to Section 19(d) of the Act, the Arbitrator finds that that causal connection ended on April 16, 2013.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services, pursuant to the medical fee schedule, of $2,446.11 for treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital on March 13, 2012, $3,290.00 for treatment at Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois/Physical Rehabilitation Center for treatment from March 27, 2012 through January 18, 2013, $277.00 for treatment with Dr. Craig Aubuchon on November 21, 2012, $12,977.00 for treatment with Dr. Klein/Washington University Physicians up to April 16, 2013, $41,895.00 for treatment at Barnes Jewish Hospital up to April 16, 2013 and $167.28 for bills from Mid-America Radiology for testing on March 13, 2012, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. All other bills are not causally related to the March 13, 2012 accident, and therefore denied.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner temporary total disability benefits at a rate of $345.33 per week for 1 and 5/7ths weeks that have accrued from April 5, 2013 through April 16, 2013 for a total of $591.99.

Respondent shall pay petitioner permanent partial disability benefits of $310.79 per week for 41.75 weeks, because the injury sustained as a result of this accident caused 25% loss of the right ankle at the 167 week level, as provided in Section 8(e) of the Act. Respondent shall pay petitioner compensation that has accrued from June 12, 2012 through April 6, 2018, and shall pay the remainder of the award, if any, in weekly payments.

RULES REGARDING APPEALS Unless a party files a Petition for Review within 30 days after receipt of this decision, and perfects a review in accordance with the Act and Rules, then this decision shall be entered as the decision of the Commission.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST RATE If the Commission reviews this award, interest at the rate set forth on the Notice of Decision of Arbitrator shall accrue from the date listed below to the day before the date of payment; however, if an employee's appeal results in either no change or a decrease in this award, interest shall not accrue.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The parties agreed to bring this matter to trial on April 6, 2018, in Mt. Vernon. At trial, a Motion to Consolidate cases 12 WC 31793 and 14 WC 21613 was made on the record without objection by either party. Accordingly, the Motion was granted. The issues in dispute are accident, causal connection, reasonable and necessary medical, temporary total disability, and the nature and extent of the injuries. The parties also stipulated that if any medical bills were awarded, that they would be paid per the applicable fee schedule and that the respondent would get a credit pursuant to Section 8(j) for any payments made pursuant to that Section.

Trial Testimony of Elizabeth McAlexander

The petitioner testified that she currently lives in Mt. Vernon, Illinois, and her date of birth is July 19, 1954, making her 63 years old. (Tr. 10) She has an Associate's Degree in Arts from Rend Lake College and had started in a nursing program at Rend Lake College but did not complete it. (Tr. 11) Her prior work history included working as a waitress, a nurse's aid, work at a daycare center, and then her last job as an individual aid at Mt. Vernon District #80. (Tr. 11-12) The petitioner owns a computer, and she uses it for Facebook and searching things on the internet. (Tr. 12) Petitioner testified that she did not have any training in Microsoft or Excel, and did not consider herself a good typist. (Tr. 12)

She described her job as a teacher's aid as one-on-one interaction with students with special needs. (Tr. 14) As an individual aid, she worked with one child at a time and assisted that student with their work, staying on task, with their assignment, getting to class, etc. (Tr. 14) The physical aspects of the job depended on the student's physical capabilities that she was working with. (Tr. 15) She also described that depending on the child, she sometimes had to change diapers, transfer the student from the floor to their wheelchair, help feed them, and helped them in PE. (Tr. 15-16)

The petitioner testified that on March 13, 2012, she was at Casey Middle School in the science building. (Tr. 17) She described that there was a section of carpet that transitioned into tile with a strip that holds the carpet and the tile down at the transition. (Tr. 18) She was walking down the hall and her foot got "tripped up" on the stripping causing her to tumble forward falling on her hands and knees with her ankles and feet turned underneath her. (Tr. 19) The petitioner testified that at the time of her fall, she was not carrying anything. (Tr. 20) Immediately after the accident, she felt pain in her hands, wrists, both her knees, and her ankles. (Tr. 20)

She reported the injury to the nurse, Lisa Tucker, who had come out of her office to assist her. (Tr. 20) The petitioner testified that she was wearing sandals that laced across the top of her foot, but she did not believe that her shoes had anything to do with her fall. (Tr. 21) The petitioner testified that there was a camera at the end of the hall and a substitute secretary named Sandy Duncan showed it to her. (Tr. 21-22)

Petitioner sought medical treatment at Good Samaritan Hospital on the same day as the alleged accident where she underwent x-rays to her knees and ankles, was given pain medication and taken off work for three days. (Tr. 25-26) Her main complaint was her right ankle, and she continued to have pain and swelling at that location. (Tr. 27)

After three days off, petitioner returned to work. (Tr. 27) Petitioner testified that she had trouble walking, and subsequently saw Dr. Freehill at the Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois on March 27, 2012 for her right ankle. (Tr. 28) Dr. Freehill ordered the petitioner physical therapy and gave her pain medication. (Tr. 29)

The petitioner started physical therapy at Physical Rehab Center, but the physical therapy did not help her. (Tr. 29) During this time, she continued to work and continued treatment with Dr. Freehill. (Tr. 29)

The petitioner finished out the 2011-2012 school year and then had the summer off but continued having problems with her right ankle. (Tr. 31) After summer break, she continued working with the same student as the prior year until that student moved away during Christmas break. (Tr. 30) After Christmas break, she was assigned to another student but after three days she had to stop because she could not physically do the job. (Tr. 30) The petitioner identified Petitioner's Exhibit 15 as her swollen right ankle stating that the picture was taken on August 2, 2012. (Tr. 32) Petitioner testified that she continued to have pain and swelling in her right ankle, and she would have to keep her right ankle propped up on a chair while at work. (Tr. 34)

Petitioner testified that she had gone back to look at the strip that she tripped over with Terri Clark, and took pictures of it on August 9, 2012. (Tr. 35, 37) She identified Petitioner's Exhibit 16 as the pictures taken by Terri Clark showing the stripping to be loose. (Tr. 35-36)

The petitioner also had an accident on November 12, 2012. (Tr. 38) She described that she was standing with her student outside of a class waiting for the hallway traffic to pass when a student fell into her right ankle, and "kind of kicked it." (Tr. 38) Petitioner was worried that there may have been more damage to her ankle and sought treatment at Good Samaritan ER where she was told that she had a new fracture. (Tr. 38) She was then referred to Dr. Aubuchon by Dr. Freehill. (Tr. 40) She was also seen Dr. Schmidt on two occasions, and was then referred to Dr. Klein at Washington University. (Tr. 40)

The petitioner eventually underwent an ankle fusion on her right ankle on April 5, 2013. (Tr. 41-42) She testified that the surgery to her right ankle helped, and the ankle was less painful but still painful. (Tr. 42)

Petitioner testified that she did not believe she had been non-compliant with the Dr. Klein's instructions after her surgery. (Tr. 43) She acknowledged that she was told not to put any weight on her right ankle, and she took care to make sure that she did not. (Tr. 43-44) Petitioner testified that sometimes as she would hop around with her walker, and when she would get tired, she would touch her right foot to the floor without putting any weight on it. (Tr. 44)

The petitioner acknowledged that she went to the ER in June 2013 after an incident when she was getting out of bed. (Tr. 45) She thought she got out of bed too fast, and had turned her ankle. (Tr. 45) She testified that she had her boot on at that point. (Tr. 45-46) During that time, she continued to follow up with Dr. Klein. (Tr. 47) Eventually, Dr. Klein thought that her ankle was not fusing and told her that she may need a second surgery. (Tr. 47-48) Petitioner did not have the second surgery as she did not want to go through "all that again." (Tr. 48)

The petitioner testified that after the child she had been working with moved away during Christmas break, she was assigned to a child in a wheelchair in the Early Childhood Center. (Tr. 49) She testified that the child was the size of a 5 or 6 year old, and that she would have to lift that student for everything. (Tr. 49-50) After trying to work with that student for three days, she had to stop as she could not do it physically. (Tr. 50) She testified that she had discussions with Michael Green and Aletta Lawrence to determine whether or not there was any other child she could work with, but the school district did not have one available. (Tr. 51-52) During this time, the petitioner did not receive any temporary total disability from the workers' compensation carrier and was not awarded disability through the school district. (Tr. 53) Eventually, petitioner went on FMLA. (Tr. 54) Petitioner testified that she decided to retire after her FMLA ran out because she needed income, but she had not planned on retiring for at least two more years. (Tr. 54) She testified that she called and talked to Mike Green about her retirement, and told him the reasons why she was retiring. (Tr. 55) Petitioner testified that her retirement was before her surgery, and she has not been employed by anyone else since leaving the school district, has not been offered a job by any other businesses or the school district , and has not applied for any jobs as she did not believe that there was any job available that she could do. (Tr. 55-56)

Currently petitioner has difficulty with range of motion, testified that her ankle does not move anymore, and because of that she does not feel comfortable driving. (Tr. 57-58) She also testified that she had neuropathy in her feet, which also made it hard for her to tell where her feet were as far as the pedals go. (Tr. 58) She complained of still having pain every day that increases with activities, and testified that if she is on her feet too long, if she walks too much or tries to move her ankle, does any exercises that involve her ankles moving back and forth, her pain increases. (Tr. 58-59) Petitioner testified that her right ankle swells, and she tries to keep her foot propped up from keeping it from turning red and to lessen the swelling. (Tr. 59) She testified she uses a cane whenever she walks. (Tr. 60) She testified that she has problems with lifting as she loses her balance and she has trouble walking up and down stairs. (Tr. 60-61) She no longer does any of the shopping and does limited housekeeping tasks. (Tr. 61)

She testified that she likes going to her grandkids' activities, but only goes if her husband takes her. (Tr. 62) The petitioner testified that more recently she's had surgery to her hip, and uses a walker for that surgery. (Tr. 63-64)

Petitioner testified that prior to her March 2012 injury, she had gone to Dr. Gunzel for various conditions including her right ankle. (Tr. 65) She testified that her main problem was neuropathy in her feet and arthritis in her ankles. (Tr. 65) She also saw a pain doctor, and it was regarding several sources of pain throughout her body. (Tr. 67) Petitioner, however, stated that her pain was different after her fall in March 2012, and her ankle became more painful and swollen. (Tr. 68)

On cross-examination, the petitioner acknowledged that she specifically wrote on the intake information at Dr. Gunzel's office that her chief complaint included pain in her right ankle. (Tr. 104-105) She further admitted that Dr. Gunzel had injected her foot on at least two occasions. (Tr. 105) The petitioner also acknowledged that there was swelling in both her ankles, but it was more prominent in her right. (Tr. 106) Petitioner acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel put her on restrictions. (Tr. 107) The petitioner admitted that she had swelling, pain, and osteoarthritis, prior to her March 2012 accident, and the swelling was around the outside ball of her right ankle in the same area seen in Petitioner's Exhibit 15. (Tr. 109-110)

Petitioner testified that Dr. Klein had explained to her the importance of non-weightbearing at a pre-operative visit on March 28, 2013 and further explained to her what she meant by non-weightbearing and why it was important. (Tr. 112-113)

When asked specifically about Dr. Klein's statement in her first post-operative note that the petitioner was putting her foot down on the ground several times, the petitioner testified that she may have told the doctor that, but she did not mean she was weightbearing. (Tr. 113) Petitioner further testified that despite what Dr. Klein's records stated, the she complied with Dr. Klein's instructions. (Tr. 114-115)

The petitioner acknowledged that she does not remember getting any permanent restrictions from any doctors after her surgery, except for Dr. Krause. (Tr. 119) She further acknowledged that she did not believe she had any permanent restrictions on her at the time of her evaluation with Mr. Dolan on September 14, 2014. (Tr. 120) The petitioner further acknowledged that she retired from the school district before she underwent her surgery and never went back to the school district to try to work after her surgery. (Tr. 121)

The petitioner testified that her email resignation did not mention the reason for her retirement, but claimed that she had made a telephone call to the school district first and talked to Michael Green about it. (Tr. 122) The petitioner acknowledged that the photo of the stripping and her ankle were both taken several months after her alleged injury in March 2012. (Tr. 124)

The petitioner testified that she had neuropathy in both her feet prior to her accident. (Tr. 126) She also admitted that she had pain and swelling in her right ankle prior to the 2012 accidents, was put on restrictions limiting her standing and walking prior to the 2012 accidents, and the use of her walker on the date of trial was not related to her right ankle. (Tr. 127)

Petitioner was asked about the handwritten description she gave along with the accident reporting form to the school district. She testified that on the date of the accident, she wrote down what had happened because she did not want to forget. (Tr. 128) After she handwrote it down, she testified then she got the injury form later on and filled it out and attached the handwritten notes. (Tr. 128) The petitioner was specifically asked why she did not mention that there was damage to the strip in her handwritten description immediately after her accident, and she testified that she did not realize there was damage until later on in the day when she went back and looked at it but did not writ it down in her handwritten description. (Tr. 129-131)

On redirect examination, petitioner testified that she associated the prior problems in her feet with her neuropathy but also acknowledged she had pain and swelling in both her ankles although it was worse in her right ankle after her March 2012 accident. (Tr. 133-134)

Regarding whether or not the petitioner was compliant with Dr. Klein's instructions after surgery, the following exchange took place between the petitioner's attorney and the petitioner:

> Q: Okay. All right. And if I understand your testimony correctly, there would be times you would put your foot down, but it would be a balancing sort of action where you didn't actually walk on it when you were not supposed to?
> A: Yes.

(Tr. 136)

The petitioner was also called back to the witness stand after Ms. McGreer, Ms. Clark and Mr. Green testified. She testified that her recollection was different from Mr. Green's, and she remembered having two meetings with Mr. Green and Aletta Lawrence after school resumed after Christmas break in which they discussed her restrictions and what kind of work she could do. (Tr. 194) The petitioner acknowledged that while that was the only child available for her to work with at that time, she could potentially have been moved to another child if one became available. (Tr. 194) She further testified that per her recollection, she had called Mr. Green and expressed that she did not want to retire, that was her last resort, and if Mr. Green could not find her another student she would have no choice but to retire because of financial needs. (Tr. 195-196)

On cross-examination, the petitioner acknowledged that she was assigned with a child to work with, and that Mr. Green and Ms. Lawrence had told her that if another opportunity or student came available in the future they would move her to that student. (Tr. 197) The petitioner admitted that after she retired, she did not have any other conversations with Mr. Green or Ms. Lawrence. (Tr. 199)

Trial Testimony of Terri Clark

Ms. Clark testified on behalf of the petitioner. Ms. Clark testified that in 2012 she was the community liaison for the district and she was also the president of the Mt. Vernon Association of Classified Employees in 2012. (Tr. 145-146) As president of the union, she handled any problems that arose between staff and the administration. (Tr. 147)

Ms. Clark testified that she became aware of the petitioner's alleged accident as she heard it "through the grapevine" that she had fallen. (Tr. 148) Ms. Clark testified that in August 2012 after talking to petitioner, she recommended that they go to the location of her accident to take pictures of the stripping. (Tr. 148) Ms. Clark testified that she examined the stripping, took pictures, took measurements and prepared a statement. (Tr. 149) She testified that she observed the carpet being loose where it joined with the tile, and slid a ruler under the stripping to demonstrating it was loose. (Tr. 150-151)

Upon cross-examination, Ms. Clark admitted that she had not observed the area prior to August 2012. (Tr. 155) Accordingly, she testified that any knowledge of the condition of the stripping was based on what she observed in August 2012 or what the petitioner told her was the condition before hand. (Tr. 156)

Trial Testimony of Mary McGreer

Ms. McGreer testified on behalf of the respondent. She testified that she was the principal at Casey Middle School in March and November 2012. (Tr. 72) As principal, she was in charge of supervising the campus, doing evaluations of staff, and she was in charge of all safety and security issues of the campus. (Tr. 72) Ms. McGreer had known the petitioner since before she was a principle in her position as Special Education Director, and then as principle at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 72-73)

Ms. McGreer testified that petitioner's March 13, 2012 injury, took place in the science building hallway which housed the science and the social studies classrooms, math classroom, language arts classroom, a nurse, and a Spanish classroom. (Tr. 74) She testified that the hallway was regularly used by all the students, and was open to the general school population including the students, faculty, staff and any other person authorized to be on the grounds. (Tr. 75) Ms. McGreer testified that the hallway in question was one that she used as part of her job on a daily basis. (Tr. 75) She testified that on the March 13, 2012, nurse Lisa Tucker let Ms. McGreer know that the petitioner had taken a fall and was going to the hospital. (Tr. 76-77)

She testified that she received an official accident report from the petitioner on or about March 21, 2012 and that the injury report had a separate sheet with handwritten notes written by petitioner. (Tr. 78) Ms. McGreer testified that after receiving the report, she examined the area where the alleged accident took place. (Tr. 78) Ms. McGreer described that there was an incline in that hallway, and the carpet kept going past the incline for quite a bit of while, then transitioned to tile with a strip in that transition. (Tr. 79-80) She testified that when she observed the area, she did not notice any of the carpet coming up, and did not notice any of the trim coming loose. (Tr. 80)

Ms. McGreer testified that although she had not looked at the area on the date of accident, to her knowledge, no one else had indicated any defect in the transition in that hallway and if there was a maintenance order, it would have gone through Ms. McGreer. (Tr. 80-81)

She testified that the petitioner continued to work after the March 13, 2012 injury, to the end of the school year in 2012, and then after the summer break came back to work in the fall. (Tr. 82) Ms. McGreer testified that the petitioner had never requested any accommodations for permanent restrictions after her retirement. (Tr. 82)

Ms. McGreer testified that there was a video system in place when she became principal but that the system was antiquated and the video was very granular. (Tr. 84) She testified that, in her opinion, it was not very good video, and she did not utilize it a lot as principal because she thought it was not very useful. (Tr. 84) She described that at the time, the software they used would save video on it for just a couple days. (Tr. 84-85) Ms. McGreer testified that in the terms of access to the video, she only had access for herself because of student records. (Tr. 85) She testified that the individual the petitioner stated showed her the video was a substitute secretary at the time, and if she did show her the video, it would have been against Ms. McGreer's instructions. (Tr. 86)

Ms. McGreer was asked about the pictures that were taken of the transition in August 2012, and testified that during the summers there was general summer maintenance where everything was pulled out of every classroom, floors were stripped and waxed, and carpets shampooed. (Tr. 86-87) She further testified that during that summer, there was some construction going on in the hallway and in the building in general for preparations for a major construction project to renovate the building. (Tr. 87) Ms. McGreer testified that although she had examined the area on March 21, 2012 and had not noticed any defect, it was possible that the transition could have been damaged during the summer. (Tr. 88-89)

On cross-examination, Ms. McGreer clarified that the hallway was not open to the general public, but it was open to the general school population and authorized visitors including students from other schools who came for extra-curricular activities and special events. (Tr. 91-92) Further, Ms. McGreer testified that she did not dispute that the petitioner had a fall in that hallway on March 13, 2012

Ms. McGreer testified that although she could not remember exactly how she observed the stripping when she observed it, her general practice is to try to kick the area in question around to see if something was loose and if she did not notice anything, she would have gotten down and tugged at it to see if it was. (Tr. 97-98) She testified that she took safety very seriously, and was in fact, a little bit paranoid about it. (Tr. 98)

Mrs. McGreer testified that prior to the alleged accidents, the petitioner did not have any problems completing her job duties. (Tr. 101)

Trial Testimony of Michael Green

Michael Green testified on behalf of the respondent. He testified that in 2012 he was the superintendent for the Mt. Vernon District 80 school district, and retired as of June 30, 2015. (Tr. 159-160) Mr. Green testified that as superintendent, he was overall the CEO of the district. (Tr. 160) He testified that he was familiar with the petitioner as he was the principal at Casey Middle School from 2006 through 2011 and the petitioner was a very good employee and was very dependable and a good individual aid. (Tr. 160-161) She had great relationships with the kids she worked with, was very professional, and followed the IEP. (Tr. 161)

Mr. Green was familiar with the accident from March 13, 2012, and testified that he performed some investigation on it. (Tr. 161) He described that he heard at the district office that the petitioner had fallen in the hallway at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 161) A day or two days after the date of accident, he went over to the school, met with Greg Lievers (the head of maintenance) to look at the area where the petitioner fell. (Tr. 162) Mr. Green testified that the area looked normal to him, and it looked like a normal strip between the tile and the carpet. (Tr. 162) Mr. Green testified that he observed it from approximately two feet away, he squatted down, he took his fingers and rubbed over it, and asked Mr. Lievers if there was any recent work done to the area, to which Mr. Lievers responded "No." (Tr. 162-163)

Mr. Green testified that the hallway was open to the general student, staff, and faculty population, and specifically noted that the school has over 440-450 children, and that's where the 7th grade was housed. (Tr. 163) He testified that there was a lot of activity in that area every day. (Tr. 163)

Mr. Green was asked to look at Petitioner's Exhibit 16, and testified that the pictures did not depict the condition of the stripping as he observed it a day or two after the alleged work accident. (Tr. 164) Mr. Green testified that summer was unique at Casey Middle School. (Tr. 165) Mr. Green testified that the Board of Education had approved the building of a $6.5 million expansion to the campus to add 10 classrooms, there was a lot of construction and renovation taking place outside and inside the school that summer, and there were a lot of construction crews in that hallway. (Tr. 165) He further testified that there was also just normal cleaning activity in preparation for the new school year, where all the desks were taken out of classrooms and taken into the hallway. (Tr. 165) He further testified that the traffic in that hallway during that specific summer was more than what would usually be expected during summer break. (Tr. 166)

Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, he testified he did some investigation of that as well, but did not have any further discussions or conversations with the petitioner regarding it. (Tr. 168)

Mr. Green testified that he remembered in March 2013, he had talked to the petitioner when he came back from spring break. (Tr. 168) He testified that the petitioner had left him a message during spring break to call her, that she was going to retire and that she did not given a reason for her retirement in that message. (Tr. 168-169) Mr. Green returned the petitioner's phone call the same morning he received it, and described that the petitioner and him discussed her retirement and the benefits that she was entitled to. (Tr. 169-170) Mr. Green testified that the conversation did not include any reasons as to why the petitioner was retiring. (Tr. 171)

Mr. Green reviewed Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, and acknowledged that was an email correspondence from the petitioner to him informing him and the Board of Education that she was retiring effective April 10, 2013 and that it did not describe any reasons as to why she was retiring. (Tr. 171) Mr. Green testified that after the petitioner retired, he did not have any further conversations with the petitioner regarding coming back to work, nor did the petitioner ever contact him about accommodating certain restrictions that she may have had. (Tr. 173)

Mr. Green confirmed that prior to the surgery and her retirement, there had been conversations about the restrictions that the petitioner was on, and the restrictions were accommodated per his recollection. (Tr. 174) Mr. Green testified that if an employee came to the school district with permanent work restrictions and wanted accommodations, it was his policy to try to accommodate them. (Tr. 174-175)

On cross-examination, Mr. Green testified that he did not know if the petitioner had fallen or not as he had not witnessed the accident. (Tr. 180) He further admitted that he did not prepare any report after looking at the area specifically. (Tr. 180) Mr. Green also acknowledged that the strip between the carpet and the tile was a little bit higher than the carpet and the tile themselves. (Tr. 180)

Mr. Green acknowledged that he could not remember if there were any other children that the petitioner could aid after the three days she tried to aid the young child at the Franklin School and afterwards the petitioner had applied for FMLA during which she was not provided pay. (Tr. 183-184) However, Mr. Green reiterated that he did not have any conversation with the petitioner regarding the reason she had to retire, and specifically whether or not she was retiring because she needed a paycheck. (Tr. 186) He testified that, although it was possible that the petitioner could have told him that and he had forgotten it, he believed that he would have remembered something like that. (Tr. 186)

On redirect examination, Mr. Green reiterated that after the petitioner worked three days at the beginning of 2013, she never came back to him and asked to be moved to a different student. (Tr. 190) If she had, he would have looked into whether or not there were other students she could work with. (Tr. 190)

On re-cross, Mr. Green acknowledged that if an individual had difficulty going up and down stairs, had difficulty walking, had to elevate their leg, that it would be hard to accommodate those particular restrictions. (Tr. 192)

Medical Evidence

Petitioner treated for right ankle pain dating back to February 4, 2011, with Southern Illinois Foot and Ankle – Dr. Gunzel. Intake information filled out by the petitioner stated that her chief complaint at the time was "neuropathy, swelling, pain in feet, and right ankle." Dr. Gunzel stated in his report that the petitioner had pain in both feet, and the right foot was worse than the left. The petitioner told Dr. Gunzel she had been diagnosed with osteoarthritis approximately 10 years ago, and Dr. Gunzel noted that the petitioner presented for an initial evaluation of ankle pain, located at the lateral malleolus on the right and the back of the ankle with flexion of the foot. The petitioner told Dr. Gunzel that the condition was gradually worsening over time. Physical examination showed swelling at the right lateral malleolus, in the dorsum of the left mid foot, lateral aspect of the right ankle, and the MTP joints. Dr. Gunzel also specifically noted that the dorsum of the right mid foot, anterior aspect of the right ankle, the right ankle medially, and right Achilles tendon showed evidence of mild pain on palpation. The petitioner's diagnosis included pain in the joint involving the ankle and foot, osteoarthritis localized primarily involving the ankle and foot. She was given medication for Mobic and Lyrica at that point, and told to follow up in one month. (PX 12)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Gunzel on May 20, 2011. The petitioner noted to Dr. Gunzel that the condition of her feet had not improved, and the medication she was taking was not particularly helpful. The petitioner diagnosis at that visit included degenerative joint disease. She was given an injection of corticosteroids in the tarsal sinus bilaterally, and placed on restrictions of no walking greater than one block and no standing more than 20 minutes at a time. The doctor recommended reduced activity at that point and told her to follow up in four weeks. (PX 12)

Petitioner's next follow up with Dr. Gunzel was on December 9, 2011. The petitioner noted to Dr. Gunzel that her condition had been worsening, and asked for another injection at that point as the last one helped her. Dr. Gunzel provided her with a corticosteroid injection, and discussed the type of shoes that the petitioner should be wearing to minimize her discomfort. She was told to follow up again in 4 weeks. However, Dr. Gunzel's notes indicate that the petitioner cancelled her visit on January 6, 2012, and Dr. Gunzel's medical records were subsequently sent to Dr. Juergens. (PX 12)

The right ankle x-ray showed soft tissue swelling, osteochondral defect and impacted fracture of the talus of indeterminate age and etiology, a healed displaced fracture of the anterior aspect of the tibia of indeterminate age, degenerative changes of the tarsal bones, enthesophyte at the insertion of the plantar aponeurosis in the calcaneus. She was provided with some medications, and recommended to undergo an MRI of her left knee. She was also given a work excuse for three days. (PX 1)

Petitioner then followed up with Dr. Freehill at the Orthopedic Center of Southern Illinois. On the intake form, the petitioner stated that she had tripped over stripping on the floor that was loose and fell on both her knees, both her hands, and her feet were bent underneath her. She complained of right ankle pain and swelling since the date of accident. It was noted that the petitioner had significant swelling over her lateral ankle ligaments, but she was non-tender at the forefoot, midfoot and hindfoot. She was tender at the distal fibula, but non-tender at the medial malleolus and deltoid ligaments. X-rays from the Emergency Room were reviewed, and the doctor noted an old anterior tibial fracture that had healed in a slightly displaced manner, and anterior lateral talar changes consistent with osteochondral injury or possibly even osteonecrosis, but no evidence of any acute fracture. She was diagnosed with a right acute ankle sprain. The doctor recommended conservative care, and recommended a CAM walker boot but after the petitioner expressed not wanting that, Dr. Freehill recommended an ASO brace and an athletic shoe. She was placed on light duty, and told to avoid prolonged standing and walking. She was also referred to physical therapy. (PX 2)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on May 1, 2012. The doctor diagnosed the petitioner with right ankle sprain with persistent pain and swelling, and noted she was concerned about the swelling and possible osteonecrosis of the talus. There was consideration for an MRI, but petitioner was concerned about her cervical fusion with hardware would interfere with it. Therefore, the MRI was put off, she was sent for physical therapy, and told to continue her light duty at that point. (PX 2)

The petitioner had her initial visit with Physical Rehabilitation Center on May 21, 2012. The patient was to undergo physical therapy two times per week for three weeks. (PX 3) After 5 visits, petitioner had a reevaluation on June 11, 2012. Throughout physical therapy, petitioner continued to complain of pain in the right ankle without improvement. As of the reevaluation, the physical therapist recommended that further therapy be placed on hold pending follow up with the doctor. (PX 3)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on June 12, 2012. Dr. Freehill noted the petitioner had completed physical therapy, but had increased pain the previous day. Dr. Freehill continued to observe large amount of swelling over the lateral ankle ligaments, tenderness over the lateral ankle, tenderness over the anterolateral ankle ligament, and tightness of the Achilles tendon. The petitioner was recommended to see an ankle specialist, discontinue physical therapy, and be seen back in the office on an as-needed basis. The petitioner continued to not want an MRI at that point. (PX 2)

The petitioner had another follow up with Dr. Freehill on August 28, 2012. The doctor recommended an MRI of the right ankle again. The petitioner was to follow up after her MRI. (PX 2)

The petitioner underwent the MRI of the right ankle on September 17, 2012. The MRI revealed the following:

1. Chronic mild collapse of the central to lateral talar articular cortex with prominent diffuse subcortical degenerative changes.
2. Small to moderate ununited fracture of the anterior to anterolateral tibial plafond.
3. Ununited comminuted fracture distal and anterior aspect of the fibula with disruption of the anterior talofibular ligament.
4. Moderate degenerative changes in the anterior and posterior tibial plafond.

5. Moderate diffuse anterolateral capsular inflammation.
6. Small talotibial effusion with multiple very small ossific loose bodies within the anterior aspect.
7. Mild to moderate diffuse midfoot degenerative change.

(PX 3)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on September 28, 2012. Dr. Freehill noted the MRI showed that the petitioner had evidence of central collapse of the central and lateral talar articular cortex, had degenerative changes of the anterior and posterior tibia, and had tibiotalar joint effusion with loose bodies. Dr. Freehill again referred her to a foot and ankle specialist. The petitioner was to follow up on an as-needed basis at that point. (PX 3)

The petitioner was seen for an independent medical evaluation by Dr. Schmidt on October 22, 2012, at the request of the respondent. Petitioner gave Dr. Schmidt a consistent history of her March 13, 2012 accident. At the time of the evaluation, the petitioner reported a painful and swollen right ankle, and reported having trouble with prolonged standing, walking, and driving. She had crepitus in her ankle, and rated her pain at 5/10. Physical examination showed the circumference of her right ankle at the malleolar to be 31 cm while on the left it was 29 cm. She was tender throughout her anterolateral ankle and had pain with deep palpation. The doctor noted that the point of maximum tenderness was the anterolateral ankle over the talar dome. Per his review of the x-rays, he found that petitioner had an osteochondral lesion over the talar dome encompassing almost the entire lateral talus and osteophytes with an old healed anterior tibial fracture at the tibial plafond along with severe osteoarthritis of the ankle and bone spurring anteriorly, and an old healed fracture of the anterior tibia. He diagnosed the petitioner with osteochondral lesion, osteonecrosis of the talus, and osteoarthritis of the ankle. (PX 9)

Dr. Schmidt believed that the current condition was related to her March 13, 2012, injury, and petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement. He recommended a CT scan of the ankle, and noted that she would probably need an ankle replacement. (PX 9)

The petitioner then alleges a second injury on November 12, 2012. She was again seen at Good Samaritan Hospital Emergency Room on that same date. An x-ray of the right ankle was taken at that time, and was read to show a new acute avulsion fracture of the distal fibula. (PX 1)

The petitioner was then referred to Dr. Aubuchon, and saw him on November 21, 2012. The petitioner complained that her ankle was very painful and swollen. Upon physical examination, Dr. Aubuchon noted significant swelling at her right ankle, along with significant grinding with flexion and extension of the ankle. Dr. Aubuchon reviewed the MRI and the x-rays, and diagnosed the petitioner with end stage arthritis of the ankle. He advised that her options included a salvage procedure if she did not want a brace, or the other option would be a fusion of the ankle or an ankle replacement. Dr. Aubuchon recommended an ankle fusion and gave petitioner restrictions of sit down work only through December 1, 2012. (PX 4)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Freehill on January 18, 2013. Dr. Freehill noted that the petitioner's pain was ongoing and she could not walk or stand for long periods of time. She diagnosed petitioner with right ankle arthritis and talar collapse, recommended an ankle fusion, and placed petitioner on restrictions of light duty with no twisting, squatting, kneeling, standing, or long periods of walking. She referred petitioner to Dr. Klein. (PX 5)

The petitioner then underwent a second independent medical evaluation by Dr. Schmidt at the request of the employer on February 8, 2013. Dr. Schmidt noted the second injury on November 12, 2012. Dr. Schmidt reviewed the x-ray from November 12, 2012 and did not see any evidence of an avulsion fracture. Dr. Schmidt noted his opinions remained unchanged, and he believed that the November 12, 2012, injury only caused a contusion and petitioner was at MMI for that injury. He continued to believe that the petitioner's ankle needed to be replaced, and that was related to the March 13, 2012, accident. (PX 9)

The petitioner saw Dr. Klein at Washington University Orthopedics on February 12, 2013. Dr. Klein noted petitioner's pain and swelling in her right ankle. Physical exam showed that the petitioner's gait was severely antalgic and she had a difficult time weight bearing on the right foot. Dr. Klein noted mild hindfoot valgus on the right compared to the left, and severe swelling of the right ankle. Dr. Klein also noted that the petitioner had severe pain with range of motion, and was tender to palpation around the ankle joint. Dr. Klein reviewed x-rays and diagnosed the petitioner with severe right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity, and idiopathic peripheral neuropathy. She recommended the petitioner undergo a CT scan. Dr. Klein explained to petitioner that if she had surgery, she would be required to use a boot post-operatively, and would also be in a cast. She further urged the petitioner to consider that because Dr. Klein specifically stated that she did not recommend surgery if the petitioner did not think she could comply with post-operative treatment. (PX 5)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein on that same date. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner's condition was unchanged at that point, and the petitioner had returned following her CT scan. Dr. Klein's diagnosis was the same, and treatment options were discussed. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner had a difficult time wearing a boot in the past, and she was a little bit worried about surgical recovery. Dr. Klein advised that the petitioner would be non-weight bearing in the cast for six weeks followed by four weeks in a weight bearing cast. After that, the petitioner would be in a boot which would allow the petitioner to weight bear. (PX 5)

The petitioner had a pre-operative follow up with Dr. Klein on March 28, 2013. Dr. Klein discussed the risks and benefits with the petitioner at that time, and Dr. Klein specifically noted that she advised the petitioner to practice non-weight bearing at home prior to the surgery. (PX 5)

The petitioner underwent surgery on April 5, 2013. The pre-operative and post-operative diagnoses were right ankle arthritis, right ankle valgus deformity, and obesity. A right ankle complex arthrodesis with interposition wedge allograft and a right iliac crest bone graft were performed on the petitioner. In the operative report itself, Dr. Klein again stated that she had conversations with the petitioner regarding the importance of remaining non-weight bearing post-operatively.

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein for her first post-operative visit on April 16, 2013. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner stated that she had been "doing her best" to keep her weight off the foot, but, "It sounds like she is putting it down on the ground several times." Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner denied putting her full weight on it, but Dr. Klein again discussed with the petitioner the importance of remaining non-weight bearing. Sutures were removed at that visit, and the petitioner was placed in a short leg non-weight bearing cast made of synthetic materials. Dr. Klein noted the petitioner would remain non-weight bearing and will continue to ice and elevate the right leg for comfort. Dr. Klein stated at the end of the note, "I discussed the importance of compliance with her once again. She should remain non-weight bearing. I think this gives her the best opportunity for success." (PX 5)

The petitioner had a follow up on May 16, 2013. X-rays did not show any evidence of hardware loosening or failure. Dr. Klein again stated, "It sounds like she has been walking on it somewhat." Dr. Klein noted the long discussions she had with the petitioner prior to surgery, even indicating to her that the petitioner should not consider surgery if she was not willing to be non-weight bearing. Dr. Klein explained to the petitioner again that if she wanted surgery to be successful, she needed to comply with the post-operative regimen. Dr. Klein placed the petitioner in a short leg weight bearing cast made of synthetic materials, and noted that she could place weight on the extremity of the cast. Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner would remain in the cast for four more weeks, but she was concerned about the petitioner's compliance. Dr. Klein had a discussion with the petitioner again extensively, and explained to the petitioner that she could weight bear, but she should not continue to walk on it if it was painful. Dr. Klein specifically stated that she would run the risk of non-union, which could lead to chronic pain. (PX 5)

The petitioner's next followed up with Dr. Klein was on June 13, 2013. At that time, the petitioner again underwent a right ankle x-ray, and the x-ray showed stable hardware with what the doctor characterized as progressive fusion of the ankle joint line. Dr. Klein stated that the radiographs looked good, but the petitioner was still having pain clinically. Dr. Klein advised the petitioner to try to ease into her boot. She advised that the petitioner could weight bear as tolerated in the boot, but she should not walk without it on. Dr. Klein also noted that the petitioner was to use her crutches and walker to keep the weight off the foot as needed for discomfort. (PX 5)

On June 20, 2013, the petitioner presented at the Emergency Room at Good Samaritan Hospital. In the history portion, the petitioner advised the ER that she had right ankle pain, and had her cast removed approximately one week ago. The petitioner stated that she twisted her ankle that morning when she stepped wrong and possibly twisted it. An x-ray taken at that time showed possible oblique fracture with mild displacement of the distal fibula. Petitioner was given some pain medication at that point. (PX 1)

In a telephone note dated June 24, 2013, from Dr. Klein's office, the petitioner called requesting pain medication, noting that she had gone to the ER the previous week and was diagnosed with a fibular fracture. The nurse talked to Dr. Klein who advised that she believed that the fracture seen in the Emergency Room was actually an osteotomy that was done during surgery. Dr. Klein stated that she would not prescribe any pain medication at that point, and that the petitioner needed to keep her already scheduled appointment with the nurse practitioner on June 25, 2013. (PX 5)

Petitioner had the follow up appointment with Dr. Klein's nurse practitioner on June 25, 2013. The petitioner noted increased pain at that time of the right lateral ankle. Physical examination did show mild tenderness to palpation on the right lateral fibula, but no redness, bruising or swelling was noted. X-rays ordered on that same day were reviewed, and did not show any new fracture. The petitioner was put in a short leg non-weight bearing cast. The petitioner was noted to have asked for some pain medication, but the nurse practitioner told her they would be unable to refill the pain medication for her at this point. (PX 5)

The petitioner next had an appointment with Dr. Klein on July 11, 2013. Petitioner was feeling somewhat better, and stated she had good and bad days. She had moderate swelling of her ankle, it was improved, but she remained tender to palpation around her ankle. At that visit, the petitioner was placed in a short leg weight bearing cast. The doctor was not sure as to why the petitioner's pain had increased a couple weeks ago as her x-rays and exam looked pretty good. The doctor was concerned that the petitioner was developing non-union because of her pain, and she recommended a CT scan prior to her next visit.

On August 1, 2013, the petitioner had a follow up with Dr. Klein. The petitioner was placed in a boot, and told that she could weight bear as tolerated. Dr. Klein stated that if the CT scan showed the joint healing, they would progress her out of the boot. (PX 5)

The petitioner underwent the CT scan on August 1, 2013, which showed non-union of her right ankle arthrodesis, non-union of the distal fibular osteotomy, and mild subtalar osteoarthritis. (PX 7)

In a telephone note from August 13, 2013, Dr. Klein reviewed the CT scan with petitioner telling her that the arthrodesis had not healed. Dr. Klein further stated that pre-operatively she and the petitioner had discussed the need to remain non-weight bearing, and the petitioner suspected that it would be difficult for her to do that but despite that she chose to proceed with surgery. Since surgery, Dr. Klein noted that it had been very difficult for the petitioner to stay off of her right ankle. She stated, "As a result, we discussed the possibility of trying a bone stimulator." A bone stimulator was ordered at that point, and the petitioner was to follow up in six weeks. (PX 5)

On August 23, 2013, the petitioner presented at Good Samaritan Emergency Room again. The petitioner stated she had fallen in her kitchen two weeks ago, and since then, her pain had worsened. X-rays were taken of the ankle, and it was noted there was no change relative to the previous x-rays that had been taken. The petitioner was given Hydrocodone and Naproxen at that time. (PX 1)

The petitioner followed up for an x-ray and a visit with Dr. Klein on September 26, 2013. The x-ray continued to show a non-union of the tibiotalar and distal tibiofibular joints, and a non-union of the distal fibular osteotomy. Dr. Klein stated that the petitioner had early signs of non-union in her ankle joint, and the petitioner was to transition into a solid molded AFO at the ankle to help her get back into a shoe and perhaps out of a boot. The petitioner was to continue her bone stimulator and to follow up in eight weeks. Dr. Klein hoped that there would be some bony healing at that point. (PX 5)

The petitioner followed up with Dr. Klein and for x-rays on January 16, 2014. The x-ray was unchanged at that point. Dr. Klein noted that the x-ray showed a broken screw as well as a loose screw and plate fixation of the talus. Dr. Klein stated that she had evidence of non-union. Dr. Klein stated that the petitioner needed to decide if she wanted to continue to monitor or proceed with some sort of revision. (PX 7)

The petitioner followed up for a CT scan on April 2, 2014. The CT scan confirmed non-union. Following the CT scan, Dr. Klein's office had a telephone conversation with the petitioner on April 4, 2014 and advised that the fusion had not healed and the next step would be a revision surgery. The petitioner wanted to think about that option, and the doctor's office cancelled the petitioner's follow up appointment in May. The petitioner was to call back if she wanted to discuss surgery at that point. (PX 7)

Subsequently, the petitioner was sent for an independent medical evaluation by her attorney with Dr. Krause. The petitioner gave a consistent history of her March 12, 2012 and November 12, 2012 injuries. At the time of the visit with Dr. Krause, the petitioner reported her pain was not severe enough to undergo another surgery. Dr. Krause stated that without evidence to the contrary, he did not dispute the causation opinions by Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Freehill as it pertained to the March 13, 2012 injury. Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, Dr. Krause stated that the petitioner had a minor ankle contusion that had resolved. Based on that, he believed that the petitioner's need for surgery was related to the March 12, 2012, accident. Dr. Krause stated that petitioner had a non-union of the ankle, but he would not recommend another surgical procedure at that point. The petitioner was at maximum medical improvement regarding the injury on March 12, 2012. Dr. Krause stated that the petitioner could work at sedentary capacity with intermittent standing, and that the petitioner had excellent hindfoot motion and plantigrade foot. He further advised that the petitioner sustained permanency from the March 12, 2012, injury, and had not sustained any permanency from the November 12, 2012, injury. (PX 10)

Approximately three months after her visit with Dr. Krause, the petitioner was sent to see Stephen Dolan for a vocational evaluation. Mr. Dolan noted that the petitioner came to the evaluation using a cane, and the petitioner stated to Mr. Dolan that she used a cane when she was outside of her house. Mr. Dolan further observed that during the assessment, and after an hour and fifteen minutes, she had to elevate her right leg to the waist level on another chair, and then she kept it elevated for the rest of the evaluation. (PX 11)

The petitioner was receiving $671.00 per month from the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, and $900.00 per month from Social Security Disability. The petitioner's work history included work as a waitress, work as a nurse's aid, and then work as a teacher's aid since 1990. Mr. Dolan noted that Dr. Krause was the only doctor who placed restrictions on the petitioner, and stated that she would need work in a sitting capacity with intermittent standing. (PX 11)

Subjectively, the petitioner told Mr. Dolan that after sitting for an hour, if she did not elevate her right ankle, it would turn red. She further stated she could only stand for five minutes before increased pain. She complained that she could only walk five to ten minutes, but every step hurt her right ankle. She complained that stooping increased right ankle, knee and back pain, and that she could not crouch or kneel. She avoided stairs and was otherwise dependent on handrails. She stated that she could lift a gallon of milk, but lifting a bag of groceries was too much weight on her right ankle. She further complained that carrying a gallon of milk was difficult for her. (PX 11)

Testing results showed that the petitioner had good word recognition and sentence comprehension, and spelled above the high school level. Her math was at a ninth grade level, and her reading and spelling were noted to be in line with her education. She scored a 28 on the depression screening, which Mr. Dolan stated was indicative of moderate level depression. (PX 11)

Mr. Dolan stated that based on the non-fusion of the right ankle, he found statements that she needed to elevate her foot as much as possible to be credible. The petitioner had no specific vocational skills for a sedentary job or a sedentary job that she was able to stand intermittently in. Mr. Dolan ultimately concluded that petitioner did not have any access to a reasonably stable labor market. (PX 11)

On October 10, 2016, Dr. Krause provided an addendum report at the request of petitioner's attorney. He was provided additional medical records dating back to 2010. Dr. Krause stated that the additional records did not provide him with anything significant regarding the injury in question, and that the additional records did not change his opinions from his prior IME on June 30, 2014. (PX 10)

An addendum report was also issued by Dr. Schmidt dated July 24, 2017. Dr. Schmidt also reviewed additional medical records and stated it was obvious that the petitioner had right ankle difficulty prior to her March 13, 2012, accident. However, the petitioner was found by Dr. Juergens to be able to walk on her toes which she was unable to do during Dr. Schmidt's evaluation. Therefore, he stated that, "One would feel that she did deteriorate, and, therefore, even though she did have what seems like preexisting ankle arthritis, her fall with catching her foot on the carpet seemed to accentuate the arthritic condition and necessitate further treatment as was outlined in my reports." Dr. Schmidt stated that it appeared that petitioner's ankle had not fused, and that she might have collapsed further as her alignment, in his reports, was listed as neutral. Dr. Schmidt ultimately stated that even with the records available to him, he believed that the fall on March 13, 2012, severely exacerbated the petitioner's preexisting arthritic condition. (PX 9)

Dr. Schmidt, however, noted that in the initial two post-operative notes from Dr. Klein, the petitioner was weight bearing when Dr. Klein had clearly required the petitioner to be non-weight bearing. He opined her non-compliance "would directly relate to her developing a non-union, especially what appears as an atrophic non-union as described in the further notes." He went on to state, "Therefore, I think her early weight bearing and non-compliance with her surgery has a direct effect on developing a non-union in her ankle. It is imperative that the ankle be non-stressed during the healing process so that proper healing can take place. Stressing the construct will contribute to developing a non-union." (PX 9)

Deposition of Dr. Schmidt

Dr. Schmidt's deposition was taken on December 20, 2017. Dr. Schmidt testified that he is an orthopedic surgeon specializing in foot and ankle, and he has been board certified since 1999. Dr. Schmidt testified that he actively treated patients on a daily basis and has performed surgeries for the last 22 years. (PX 14, 4-5)

Dr. Schmidt testified that he first saw the petitioner on October 22, 2012, and his first report was dated October 30, 2012. He was requested to evaluate the petitioner at the request of the Workers' Compensation carrier for an independent medical evaluation. (PX 14, 6) Dr. Schmidt testified consistently as to the history of the petitioner's accident on March 13, 2013 and the medical treatment she underwent after. (PX 14, 7)

The petitioner described to Dr. Schmidt that she had immediate symptoms of pain and swelling in the right ankle, and her current symptoms included continued pain and swelling in the right ankle, trouble with prolonged standing, walking, driving, and crepitus in the right ankle. She stated that her pain gets worse as the day goes on, and she felt she was losing her ability to drive, stand, walk, lift, carry, bend, push, pull, climb, squat, and kneel. (PX 14, 8)

Dr. Schmidt testified that the petitioner did not describe any past medical history that was significant to his evaluation. The petitioner reported to Dr. Schmidt that 85% of her day was spent sitting or lying down, and she did not do any sporting activities or hobbies. (PX 14, 9)

Dr. Schmidt testified as to what his physical examination showed consistently as reported in his report. Dr. Schmidt also reviewed an x-ray done on October 15, 2012 which showed that she had an osteochondral lesion over the talar dome and what appeared to be an old anterior tibial fracture. (PX 14, 9-10) The x-rays that he performed at his office were similar. He diagnosed the petitioner with an osteochondral lesion, osteoarthritis of her ankle, and osteonecrosis of her talus. (PX 14, 10-12)

Dr. Schmidt testified that the osteochondral lesion and the osteoarthritis had been around for a long time, and the fall may have accentuated that. He testified that the objective findings supported the subjective complaints of pain and limitations, and he felt that the petitioner had not reached maximum medical improvement. (PX 14, 12-13)

He recommended the petitioner undergo additional testing, and anticipated that the petitioner was a candidate for a total ankle arthroplasty. Dr. Schmidt testified that within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, need for future treatment was necessitated by the work injury, and his reasoning was because the petitioner did not describe any previous trauma or previous records indicating such. (PX 14, 13) He recommended that the petitioner could work in a light duty capacity. (PX 14, 14)

Dr. Schmidt saw the petitioner again on February 4, 2013, at the request of the Workers' Compensation carrier again. At that point, her chief complaint continued to be right ankle pain, and she described another injury on November 12, 2012. Dr. Schmidt reviewed the medical records from the Emergency Room of November 12, 2012, and performed a physical examination. The physical examination was pretty consistent with his previous one. The x-ray from November 12, 2012, was compared to the x-ray from October 22, 2012, and Dr. Schmidt did not see a big difference. He also did not see a fracture in the x-ray taken at the Emergency Room on November 12, 2012. (PX 14, 15-17)

Dr. Schmidt testified that his second evaluation did not change his opinion regarding the effects of the March 2012 accident, and he continued to believe that the March injury accentuated a preexisting condition necessitating further treatment. He further testified that the November 12, 2012, injury was a contusion to her ankle and had gone on to heal and placed her at maximum medical improvement for the November injury, but not for the March injury. (PX 14, 17-18)

Dr. Schmidt testified that he received additional medical records from respondent's attorney on or about June 20, 2017. Dr. Schmidt testified that the records indicated that the petitioner had been seen previous to her injury, and noted a couple years worth of pain in her feet and ankles. He specifically noted that Dr. Gunzel did not order an x-ray of the ankle, and she was treated with injections to the sinus tarsi, which was not the same as an injection in the ankle. After review of the additional medical records, Dr. Schmidt stated that he did not believe his diagnosis needed to be changed. (PX 14, 19-22)

Dr. Schmidt also testified that he thought it was significant that at the time of Dr. Juergens' evaluation in February 2012, the petitioner was able to get on to her toes. At Dr. Schmidt's initial evaluation, the petitioner could not do the same thing and that showed some deterioration. Dr. Schmidt testified that his opinion did not change as to the petitioner's need for an ankle replacement. (PX 14, 23-24)

Dr. Schmidt testified that early weight bearing after a fusion was detrimental to the fusion taking. Dr. Schmidt further explained that it was possible to have a non-union even if a person was completely non-weight bearing. (PX 14, 28-30) The petitioner's attorney and Dr. Schmidt had the following exchange:

> Q: She advised that there were times when she had to check her balance, and she put weight on her toes to support her foot because the boot was heavy and it would be hard to stabilize herself. She said there were also times she had to hop, and there were times when she had to touch her right foot to the ground. Otherwise, she only walked on her foot when she was advised by Dr. Klein that she could. If those activities as described are true, were those alone sufficient to create a non-union with a fusion?
> A: Indeed it may be. (PX 14, 32)

Dr. Schmidt also testified the atrophy that was noted in the petitioner's right calf was not an indication of her non-use of the leg and right foot. The petitioner's attorney and Dr. Schmidt had the following exchange:

> Q: Would it be true that you couldn't say within a reasonable degree of medical certainty that any weight bearing by Mrs. McAlexander was the cause of her non-union?
> A: I wouldn't say you could say it's the cause of the non-union; but if you certainly have somebody with a large osteochondral lesion that you have to do a big bone graft on that may have some neuropathy, they ain't helping their cause any by weight bearing on it, that's for sure. And you really want them to really stay off of it because they already have a few strikes against them. (PX 14, 33)

On cross-examination, Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that given the timeframe, the loose bodies that were found and removed in surgery had probably been there prior to the March 2012 accident. Dr. Schmidt also acknowledged that the osteoarthritis, osteochondral lesion, osteonecrosis were all preexisting to the work accident. (PX 14, 35-36)

Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that the petitioner had not told him about the prior treatment she received in her right foot. Dr. Schmidt acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel had noted swelling in the petitioner's right ankle, along with pain. He also agreed that in hindsight, he might be able to say that given the fact that in March she had an x-ray showing arthritis, that the treatment Dr. Gunzel provided was at least in part for the arthritic condition. (PX 14, 39-40)

Dr. Schmidt further acknowledged that the petitioner showed weakness throughout her foot and ankle, global in nature, and evidence of swelling in the lateral malleolus, which was the outside of the ankle. He further testified that based on the picture that the petitioner's attorney had shown him, the swelling seen was on the outside of the ankle as well. Dr. Schmidt also acknowledged that Dr. Gunzel's notes included descriptions of pain in the ankle with limited range of motion. (PX 14, 45-46)

Dr. Schmidt agreed that Dr. Klein counseled the petitioner on the importance of non-weight bearing at points before and after the operation, and it appeared that the petitioner had been weight bearing in several notes after the operation as well. He further testified that he thought it was very important for someone to be non-weight bearing after an ankle fusion. Dr. Schmidt testified that while weight bearing may not be a 100% cause of the non-union, it certainly made it more likely. He testified that the weight bearing contributed to the non-fusion, and was indirectly related to the ongoing complaints of pain. (PX 14, 51-53)

On redirect examination, He confirmed that he had not changed any of his opinions regarding the March 12, 2012, injury being the aggravating or accelerating factor to the need for surgery. (PX 14, 56-58)

Deposition of Dr. Krause

Dr. Krause's deposition was taken on June 2, 2017. Dr. Krause testified that he was an orthopedic surgeon and board certified in orthopedic surgery. His primary practice was to the lower extremities, including the knees, feet, and ankles. (PX 10, 5-6) Dr. Krause first saw the petitioner on June 30, 2014, on referral by the petitioner's attorney. (PX 10, 6)

Dr. Krause testified as to the history given to him by petitioner and described the medical records he reviewed, including Dr. Freehill's. He testified that her diagnosis was an osteochondral injury and osteonecrosis of the lateral talus. The petitioner was eventually seen by Dr. Gary Schmidt on October 30, 2012. At that time, Dr. Schmidt noted a limited ankle range of motion, and diagnosed the petitioner with osteonecrosis of the talus with osteoarthritis. Dr. Schmidt related that to the March 13, 2012, accident, and recommended a CT scan. (PX 10, 9)

Dr. Krause noted the petitioner's second injury on November 12, 2012, and she was treated at St. Mary's Good Samaritan Regional Health Center on that day for what was thought to be a fibular avulsion fracture. Subsequently, the petitioner was seen by Dr. Aubuchon on November 21, 2012 and Dr. Klein in February 2013, and both doctors recommended a right ankle fusion. (PX 10, 10-11)

Dr. Krause testified that based on his review of medical records, Dr. Klein performed a right ankle arthrodesis on April 5, 2013, and the petitioner had routine post-operative care in a cast, then a boot, and non-weight bearing initially. He noted that the petitioner had several falls post-operatively, and she presented for several visits to the Emergency Room. He testified that it looked like she had some difficulty healing, and was eventually given a bone stimulator. Subsequently, Dr. Klein diagnosed the petitioner with a non-healed fusion. (PX 10, 12)

Dr. Krause testified as to the physical exam findings at this visit consistently with what was reported in his report. Dr. Krause testified that upon his review of the CT scan from April 2014, it confirmed the diagnosis of non-union of the ankle arthrodesis with the hardware. (PX 10, 13) Based on that, he diagnosed the petitioner with a history of lateral talar osteochondral lesion versus osteonecrosis with a history of a right ankle arthrodesis non-union. Regarding the November 12, 2012, accident, he diagnosed the petitioner with a right ankle contusion which had resolved. (PX 10, 14)

Dr. Krause further testified that the injury on March 13, 2012, resulting in a contusion or strain of the ankle, worsened her preexisting osteochondral injury to her talus. It was his opinion the petitioner's subsequent surgery was related to the March 13, 2012, accident, and that the petitioner suffered a minor contusion on November 12, 2012, that she did not need treatment for. He further testified that the petitioner had reached maximum medical improvement for the November 12, 2012, accident. (PX 10, 15-16) Dr. Krause testified he did not think the petitioner needed surgery at this point, and that she was at maximum medical improvement for her March 2012 injury. He anticipated that the petitioner could work in a sitting capacity with intermittent standing, but probably could not tolerate standing for 8-10 hours per day. Dr. Krause did not believe the petitioner suffered any permanency from the November injury, but did sustain permanency as a result of the March 12, 2012, injury. (PX 10, 17-18)

Dr. Krause testified that the loose body that Dr. Klein referred to in the operative report was not necessarily objective evidence of injury, and it could come from a non-traumatic cause. (PX 10, 18-19) Dr. Krause reviewed photographs admitted into evidence petitioner's exhibit 15, agreed that there was significant swelling on the outside portion of the petitioner's right ankle, and that the swelling was in the same location that the loose bodies were retrieved during surgery. Dr. Krause further agreed that swelling could be objective evidence of injury, along with lack of range of motion. (PX 10, 19-20)

Dr. Krause testified that after his initial examination, he was also provided additional medical records to review, and after that review, he issued a report dated October 10, 2016 in which he stated that the additional records did not change his opinion from his original report. (PX 10, 21-25)

On cross-examination, Dr. Krause noted that the petitioner did not tell him about any significant problems with her ankle prior to the date of accident in March 2012, nor mentioned any preexisting conditions on the intake form prior to his independent medical evaluation. Accordingly, he agreed that the history that was given to him on June 30, 2014, was not consistent with the medical records he subsequently saw, and he also acknowledged the medical history taken from the petitioner would have played a large role in his opinions and his reporting. (PX 10, 28-29)

Dr. Krause testified that he had seen the x-ray film from March 13, 2012, and the osteochondral fracture of the talus was clearly old. Dr. Krause testified that the x-ray taken on March 13, 2012, indicated that the osteochondral fracture predated the March 13, 2012, alleged accident and that he thought that the petitioner's collapse and chronic changes came over the course of several months, if not years. (PX 10, 29-31) Dr. Krause testified that the findings from the MRI did not show any acute occurrence and were consistent with the x-ray findings from March 13, 2012 and the CT scan from February 2013. He testified that they all showed a long-standing degenerative osteonecrosis, and did not have any indications of an acute injury. (PX 10, 32-36)

Dr. Krause testified petitioner was eventually diagnosed with a non-union in her right ankle, and that the most common causes for non-union after an ankle fusion is if the patient smokes or the patient puts weight on the ankle too early. (PX 10, 40) Dr. Krause acknowledged that the records from Dr. Klein indicate that the petitioner was weight bearing in the follow ups after her surgery within 6-8 weeks after surgery. He further testified that weight being at that point can lead to a non-union. Dr. Krause also acknowledged that on June 13, 2013, the petitioner was given a boot to wear, but also instructed not to walk at all on the ankle without the boot on. He acknowledged that subsequently on June 20, 2013, the petitioner went to the ER, stating she had sprained her ankle. Dr. Krause stated if the petitioner had been wearing the boot, she would not have been able to twist her ankle, and therefore, he agreed that the petitioner was not being compliant with the doctor's instructions at that point either. (PX 10, 40-43)

Dr. Krause testified that considering the petitioner's weight bearing after her surgery, it was safe to say that the weight bearing contributed to the non-union to some degree. (PX 10, 44)

Dr. Krause acknowledged that an individual can have an injury that can exacerbate a condition without significantly altering a natural course of preexisting condition. He further acknowledged that inflammation in the ankle could be a sign of an ankle sprain as opposed to anything significant to the actual bone. (PX 10, 45-46) Dr. Krause did testify the MRI was done 6 months after the accident and any findings at that time would have been chronic, but also admitted that the MRI taken in September 2012 was consistent with the March 2012 x-ray showing chronic conditions. (PX 10, 46-48)

Dr. Krause admitted that the petitioner's diagnosis started before the March 2012 accident. However, he also stated, "The question is did the injury worsen that or change that? Again, we don't have any evidence that it did or didn't, but Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Freehill had their opinions that it did. I don't have evidence one way or the other, so I'm not going against them. I'm just saying I don't have evidence that it did or it didn't." (PX 10, 48) When asked specifically for his opinion, Dr. Krause testified that everything he saw showed that the petitioner's condition in her right ankle was chronic, and there was no evidence to show that it was acute. (PX 10, 49)

Upon further questioning regarding Dr. Gunzel's records, Dr. Krause testified that the petitioner had injections done in May 2011 and December 2011. He further testified that the regular course of treatment for arthritis in any joint is to start with conservative care, including less weight bearing, physical therapy, and bracing. The next step is injections. The third step, if injections were not helpful, would then be consideration for an ankle fusion. (PX 10, 49-51)

The following exchange took place between the respondent's attorney and Dr. Krause:

> Q: In seeing that she progressed from conservative treatment with physical therapy and some bracing, then to injections, and then had this alleged injury in March, then eventually had a fusion, wouldn't you agree that even without the alleged injury, that would pretty much be a natural course of the type of condition that she had?
> A: Absolutely.
> Q: Doctor, taking all that into consideration, what exactly did the injury - - or how exactly did the injury accelerate this natural, progressive, degenerative condition that eventually lead to a fusion?
> A: It's hard to know if there's no objective evidence that it did.
> Q: So can you say, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the March 13, 2012, (sic) injury in any way accelerated or aggravated the chronic conditions in the right ankle that eventually lead to the ankle fusion?
> A: I couldn't. (PX 10, 54-56)

Upon redirect testimony, Dr. Krause testified that the March 2013 injury could have made the preexisting conditions worse, and could have accelerated the need for surgery. Furthermore, Dr. Krause testified that the petitioner's alleged injury could have further accelerated the collapse of the ankle and the need for surgery. Dr. Krause also acknowledged that the petitioner could have been at risk for a non-union regardless of the occasions of non-weight bearing, but also stated that the biggest risk, other than smoking, would be premature weight bearing for a non-fusion. (PX 10, 60-62)

On re-cross examination, the following exchange took place between the respondent's attorney and Dr. Krause:

> Q: Is it still your position, as you testified on cross-examination, that based on the medical evidence that you've seen, physical examination, history and everything, that you cannot say one way or the other, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the accident on March 13, 2012, aggravated, accelerated, or altered the natural course of the preexisting osteonecrosis and osteoarthritis?

A: There's no evidence to suggest that it accelerated or exacerbated or worsened it.
Q: Just so we're clear, so what you are saying is you cannot state, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether the accident in March 2012 accelerated, altered, or changed the natural progression of that degenerative condition?
A: I cannot say that with any certainty.
Q: Since you cannot say that with any degree of medical certainty, is it true that you also cannot state within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, whether or not the eventual and subsequent ankle fusion she underwent is causally related to the March 13, 2012, accident?
A: I cannot say that with any certainty.

Deposition of Mr. Stephen Dolan

Stephen Dolan testified on behalf of the petitioner on June 20, 2017. He testified that he was a vocational rehabilitation counsel, and has been working in the field since 1972. He left private practice in 1994. Currently, 20% of his practice is as a vocational expert with the Social Security Administration, and his other vocational expert work is split 50/50 between the petitioner's side and the respondent's side. (PX 11, 5-7)

Mr. Dolan further testified that 80% of his practice right now is vocational assessments in litigation, while 20% is as a vocational expert to the Social Security Administration office. He testified that over the last 10 years, he has probably had up to 60 cases with petitioner's attorney's firm, and that law firm was a firm that he was familiar with. Mr. Dolan further testified that at this point, he does about one to two job placements per year, and the rest of his practice is either vocational reports for litigation or work for the Social Security Administration office. (PX 11, 53-55)

The petitioner was evaluated by Mr. Dolan on September 24, 2014. Mr. Dolan testified consistently with the history of the accident, medical treatment, the petitioner's educational background, and work history. Mr. Dolan noted that the petitioner sat elevating her leg during about half the assessment. (PX 11, 8-10)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner told him if she sat too long, her right ankle swelled and hurt, and she would have to elevate her right ankle to the waist height. She further told him that she could only stand for five minutes before pain increased in the right ankle and the back. She stated that she could only walk for five or ten minutes, and every step hurt her ankle and increased pain. She stated that pain in the right ankle got worse if she stood longer. She testified that stooping increased her right ankle, knee, and back pain. She could not crouch and she could not kneel. The petitioner further stated that she could not crawl and avoided stairs. If she has to maneuver stairs, she stated that she holds the handrail with both hands and takes one step at a time. She stated that she could lift a gallon of milk, but she could not lift a bag of groceries as that was too much weight on her right ankle. She told Mr. Dolan that she had fallen four times since her ankle surgery. (PX 11, 14-16)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner had rudimentary computer skills, knows how to do email and internet, and has some word processing experiencing. She does not have any spreadsheet software or bookkeeping software experience. Based on her testing, he found that the petitioner spelled above a high school level, and did math at the 9th grade level, almost 10th grade. He testified that the reading and spelling scores were in line with her education, but the math score was below the level of education. He noted with the scoring and testing, the petitioner would have good skills to take courses at a community college. (PX 11, 18-19)

Mr. Dolan testified that the petitioner's current vocational profile was that of a 60-year old woman approaching retirement age with community college education. She read and spelled above the high school level, but did math at the 9th grade level. She had worked as an individual aid from 1990-2013, and based on Dr. Krause's restrictions, she needed a sit-down job where she could stand intermittently. However, according to her own description of her problems, she needed to keep her right foot elevated above the waist level much of the time while sitting to keep down pain and edema. Taking all that into consideration, Mr. Dolan testified that it was his conclusion that the petitioner was not employable in the open labor market. He further testified that he did not believe that the petitioner had access to a reasonably stable labor market. (PX 11, 21-23)

On cross-examination, Mr. Dolan acknowledged that having an Associates Degree or any higher level education makes an individual more marketable in the open labor market than someone who does not have one. (PX 11, 27-28)

Mr. Dolan was questioned regarding his statements in his report that the petitioner has not been able to do her job since her last ankle injury primarily because the fusion did not fuse. Mr. Dolan acknowledged that that was what he stated in his report, and he also admitted that the petitioner's fusion actually took place after the petitioner retired from her job in 2013. Mr. Dolan also admitted that the petitioner retired before she knew there was going to be a non-union of the fusion and before she was given any permanent restrictions by Dr. Krause. Mr. Dolan also admitted that the petitioner had never gone back to her job with the school district with her permanent restrictions to see if they would accommodate them. He admitted that he did not know whether or not the petitioner would have gone back to the school district even if her right ankle had fused. (PX 11, 30-32) In terms of number 1 of his conclusions, Mr. Dolan admitted that it was solely his assumption that the petitioner did not go back to work based on the fusion and non-fusion. (PX 11, 33-34)

Mr. Dolan was also asked specifically regarding the IME report performed by Dr. Krause on June 30, 2014. Mr. Dolan acknowledged that the petitioner had not made any comments to Dr. Krause about elevating her right ankle, having problems with standing more than five minutes, with walking more than 5-10 minutes, or any problems with lifting a bag of groceries. Mr. Dolan also admitted that although Dr. Krause provided restrictions of sedentary intermittent standing, there were no lifting restrictions or restrictions regarding pushing or pulling on the petitioner. Mr. Dolan admitted that the complaints that the petitioner told him about as described on page 5 through page 6 of his report were all subjective and based on the petitioner's own reporting. (PX 11, 37-39)

Regarding number 2 of his conclusions section, Mr. Dolan acknowledged and admitted that he was not a medical doctor, did not treat ankle and foot problems, was not an orthopedic surgeon, did not do surgeries, and did not have any expertise from a medical standpoint in terms of whether or not she would need to lift her ankle at all. He further acknowledged that his statement in number 2 of his conclusion section was based on his assumption of her credibility. Mr. Dolan further admitted that none of the medical doctors had opined or determined that the petitioner needed a permanent restriction for the need to elevate her foot as needed. He testified:

> Q: Okay. And based on your direct testimony, you specifically stated that her need to elevate her foot which based on what you're testifying now is subjective, ... is a primary reason as to why she would not be able to return to a stable labor market, correct?
> A: That is correct.
> Q: Okay. So your opinion in terms of her ability to return to a stable labor market is based primarily on her own subjective complaints?
> A: Which I found credible, yes.
> Q: Okay. But it's not based on any of the medical records?
> A: That's correct. (PX 11, 41-43)

Mr. Dolan also admitted on cross-examination that based on the petitioner's job evaluations as shown him, the petitioner did appear to have superior organizational skills, the ability to take and give instructions, implement instructions, and good interpersonal skills which would then help someone in terms of experience to gain other employment. (PX 11, 49-52)

Mr. Dolan testified that he did not provide Ms. McAlexander with any recommendation as to computer courses or training that she could take to improve her computer skills, he did not recommend any types of courses or training that Ms. McAlexander could do to become more employable, and he did not offer the petitioner any resources she could consult with in terms of finding work. Mr. Dolan further admitted that the petitioner did not present to him any job searches she had conducted, and also acknowledged that he did not look at area classified ads, Indeed.com, Monster.com, or any other job placement or job posting websites or newspapers. Mr. Dolan did not consult any outside resources that would indicate if the type of transferrable skills the petitioner had and the type of experience would translate into any other sort of jobs. (PX 11, 55-58)

On redirect examination, Mr. Dolan testified that he had no basis to question the petitioner's credibility, and that she did appear entirely credible to him. Mr. Dolan testified that with the petitioner's limitations and complaints, assuming they are true, an employer would be more likely to hire someone without those limitations, and would be more likely to hire someone who is younger with more vocational skills. He testified that employers generally prefer someone without restrictions or physical problems versus someone who has them. (PX 11, 59-61)

Mr. Dolan further testified that it was his feeling that it would have been a waste of time for him to check outside sources as to job availability, and he was familiar with the types of jobs available in her area. (PX 11, 61)

On re-cross examination, Mr. Dolan acknowledged that as part of the ADA, employers are not supposed to inquire as to physical limitations or disabilities that are not essential to job functions. (PX 11, 62-63)

Mr. Dolan admitted that the job of a receptionist was primarily a sedentary job, and if the petitioner took computer classes, word processing classes, and typing classes, that would improve the petitioner's efficiency in word processing and would be the type of job the petitioner would be able to do within Dr. Krause's recommended restrictions. (PX 11, 66-67) Mr. Dolan testified that he knew that there were jobs available that met Dr. Krause's restrictions. He was asked the following:

> Q: Without doing any sort of labor market survey, how do you even know that there aren't any other types of sedentary-type work that are within Dr. Krause's recommended restrictions that would even be available?
> A: Well, I know that there are jobs available that meet Dr. Krause's restrictions. (PX 11, 71)

Respondent's Exhibits

Respondent admitted exhibits 1-7 into evidence without objection from the petitioner's attorney. Exhibit 1 was a copy of the petitioner's wage statement. Per the Request for Hearing Sheet for both cases, the parties agreed to an average weekly wage of $517.99.

Respondent's exhibit 2 consisted of a medical pay log from the Sandner Group Claims Management showing that $161.52 was paid by the insurance company towards the petitioner's medical costs.

Respondent's exhibit 3 consisted of the deposition transcript of Nancy Herzing. Nancy Herzing's deposition was taken on September 26, 2017, on behalf of the respondent. Ms. Herzing testified that she was employed by the Mt. Vernon School District at the time of the petitioner's alleged accidents, and had been through May 2017 as the School District's Director of Business. She testified that she retired as of May 19, 2017. (RX 3, 4)

As the Director of Business, Ms. Herzing's job duties included supervising the accounting positions at the School District, doing all of the state and federal reporting, and she was also assigned responsibilities of workers' compensation reporting and filling out paperwork regarding workers' compensation claims. She testified that her process for handling workers' compensation injuries started with receiving a personnel injury report. At that point, she would fill out the Form 45, and submit it to Bushue HR. Bushue HR would then review it, and send the information on to the workers' compensation carrier. (PX 3, 5) Ms. Herzing testified that although she did not do the investigation of any accidents, she was the one who was in charge of doing the initial paperwork, obtain the signed releases, and collecting all reporting documents. (RX 3, 5-6)

Ms. Herzing testified that she had filled out two workers' compensation claims on behalf of the petitioner, and she never had any direct face-to-face communications with the petitioner. (RX 3, 6) Ms. Herzing primarily testified to the workers' compensation files that she kept and maintained on behalf of the School District regarding the petitioner's two alleged accidents. She also recalled receiving some information and paperwork from IMRF regarding the petitioner's retirement at some point in April 2013. Based on her own personal knowledge, it was her understanding that the retirement was voluntary in nature. (RX 3, 13-15)

Respondent's exhibits 4 and 5 were the workers' compensation files from the School District for the March 13, 2012, date of injury and the November 12, 2012, date of injury, respectively.

Respondent's exhibit 6 was a labor market survey done in the fall of 2017 by Natasha Charleston. Ms. Charleston reviewed Mr. Dolan's counseling report dated January 15, 2015, and Dr. Krause's report dated June 30, 2014, stating that the petitioner was at maximum medical improvement and could work at a sedentary-type job with intermittent standing. Based on the labor market survey, Ms. Charleston found a total of nine jobs that would fall within the petitioner's return to work restrictions or with employers willing to make reasonable accommodations. She noted that the positions were all within a 50 mile radius of the petitioner's home in Mt. Vernon, Illinois. She also recommended that the petitioner obtain computer and typing skills training as-needed. (RX 6)

Respondent's exhibit 7 were email communications between Michael Green and the petitioner regarding her retirement.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

With respect to issue (C), did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of the petitioner's employment by the respondent, the arbitrator finds as follows:

The petitioner bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that her injury arose out of and in the course of the employment. 820 ILCS 305/2 (West 2002). The petitioner must show both elements in order to justify a compensable case. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 131 Ill. 2d 478, 483, 546 N.E. 2d 603, 137 Ill.Dec. 658 (1989).

An injury arises out of employment when "the injury has its origin in some risk connected with, or incidental to the employment so as to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury." William G. Ceas & Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 261 Ill.App. 3d 630, 636, 633 N.E. 2d 994, 199 Ill.Dec.

198 (1994). The general rule is that an injury arises out of an individual's employment if one was performing acts she was instructed to perform by her employer, acts which she had a common law or statutory duty to perform, or acts which the employee would be reasonably expected to perform that are incidental to her assigned duties. Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 129 Ill. 2d 52, 58, 541 N.E. 2d 665, 667, 133 Ill.Dec. 545 (989). Furthermore, a risk is noted to be incidental to an individual's employment when it is connected with what the employee has to do to fulfill their duties. Id. Employment related risks associated with injuries sustained as a consequence of a fall due to a defect at the employer's premises is a risk to which the general public is not exposed to. Nabisco Brands, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 266 Ill.App. 3d 1103, 1107, 641 N.E.2d 578, 204 Ill.Dec. 354 (1994)

In this case, we do not need to consider whether the stripping in the hallway in question was defective causing the petitioner's fall. The hallway in question is inherently not open to the general public as Ms. McGreer testified that the school premises was not open to the general public and was only open to individuals authorized to be on the premises. As such, the petitioner presence in that hallway was incidental to her employment.

Furthermore, the petitioner testified that her student had class in that hallway and that was why she was walking in that hallway. Respondent did not offer any evidence refuting that. Furthermore, the witnesses all agreed that the stripping, whether defective or not, was higher up than the carpet and tile.

As the petitioner had to traverse that hallway to fulfill her duties as an individual aid, and as the stripping itself was raised higher than the carpeting and tile, the petitioner was inherently exposed to a risk that was incidental to her employment and connected with what the petitioner had to do to fulfill her job duties. Accordingly, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner suffered a compensable injury on March 13, 2012.

With respect to issue (F), is the petitioner's present condition of ill-being causally related to the injury, the arbitrator finds as follows:

With regard to causal relationship, the arbitrator finds Dr. Schmidt's testimony more compelling than Dr. Krause's. Therefore, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner's need for an ankle fusion was causally related to her work accident on March 13, 2012.

Dr. Krause initially stated that he believed the petitioner's March 13, 2012, accident was causally related to her need for an ankle fusion. However, during his testimony, Dr. Krause conceded that with the additional medical records predating this accident, he could not say within a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the petitioner's work accident on March 13, 2012, changed the natural course, aggravated, or accelerated the preexisting degenerative process in the petitioner's right ankle that subsequently necessitated the ankle fusion. The basis of his change in opinion was the fact that the petitioner had a symptomatic right ankle, the fact that the x-ray taken on March 13, 2012, was consistent with the MRI taken in September 2012 and the CT scan taken in February 2013. Dr. Krause stated that all three diagnostic exams showed a long-standing degenerative process that was well advanced by March 13, 2012. While Dr. Krause testified that the accident might or could have aggravated the preexisting condition, he stated multiple times that he could not say within a reasonable degree of medical certainty if the accident actually had.

Dr. Schmidt provided a different opinion in his report and in his testimony. Dr. Schmidt's independent medical evaluations were closer in time to the March 13, 2012, accident and was before the ankle fusion surgery. Dr. Schmidt was in a much better positon to appreciate and determine if the physical examination showed a condition that had worsened after the date of accident.

Dr. Schmidt testified that in Dr. Juergens' report from February 2012, the petitioner was able to walk on her toes, while the petitioner was unable to do so in Dr. Schmidt's examination. Furthermore, he stated that Dr. Klein's reports indicated that the petitioner lined up in valgus, which indicated further collapse of her talus from what was seen during Dr. Schmidt's evaluation. He testified that with that, the fusion would have been more appropriate than the ankle replacement. Dr. Schmidt also noted that the corticosteroid injections that Dr. Gunzel had provided to the petitioner prior to her March 13, 2012, accident were in her tarsi and not the ankle, and therefore did not show any treatment directly for ankle arthritis. Dr. Krause did not make this distinction.

Finally, while Dr. Krause testified that he could not state within a reasonable degree of medical certainty whether or not the accident aggravated or accelerated the preexisting condition, he was essentially saying that he did not know one way or the other whether or not the accident had any effect on the condition. Dr. Schmidt, however, testified that in his opinion, within a reasonable degree of medical certainty, the accident on March 13, 2012, did aggravate the preexisting arthritis. He did not hedge on that opinion, and he supported it by making distinctions between the treatment records and physical condition as noted in medical records prior to the March 13, 2012, accident versus the physical examination and condition seen in the medical records after. Accordingly, I find Dr. Schmidt's testimony more compelling and credible than Dr. Krause's.

With that being said, the respondent also argues that the petitioner was non-compliant with treatment after her ankle fusion on April 5, 2013, and due to that, she developed a non-union of the right ankle which then lead to chronic pain, permanent restrictions, and a continued diagnosis of non-union of a right ankle fusion.

Section 19(d) of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act states:

> "If any employee shall persist in insanitary or injurious practices which tend to either imperil or retard his recovery or shall refuse to submit to such medical, surgical, or hospital treatment as is reasonably essential to promote his recovery, the Commission may, in its discretion, reduce or suspend the compensation of any such injured employee."

Under Section 19(d) of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act, the Commission may, in its discretion, reduce an award in whole or in part if it finds that a claimant did acted in a way to to retard her recovery. There is no requirement that an injurious practice be the sole cause of the claimant's condition of ill-being for the Commission to reduce or deny compensation.

Dr. Klein's medical records prior to the petitioner's surgery on April 5, 2013, clearly showed Dr. Klein counseled the petitioner on the importance of non-weight bearing after her surgery. The petitioner even expressed some concern that she would not be able to non-weight bear after surgery, and Dr. Klein told petitioner to practice non-weight bearing if she wanted to go forward with the surgery. During her testimony, the petitioner acknowledged that Dr. Klein had counseled her on the importance of non-weight bearing after surgery and the potential risk if she was not compliant with that.

In the first post-operative visit, Dr. Klein stated that it sounded like the petitioner was putting it down on the ground several times. The petitioner, however, denied to Dr. Klein that she was putting any weight on it, and also testified to that effect at trial. However, per the petitioner's own testimony, she admitted that she would put her right foot down when her leg would get tired from the weight of the cast, and upon further questioning by her own attorney, stated she would use the right foot occasionally to balance herself. If the petitioner was using the right foot to occasionally balance herself by putting it down, that in and of itself indicates that the petitioner was putting some weight on the ankle as opposed to remaining non-weight bearing. Dr. Klein thought it was significant enough to again discuss the importance of non-weight bearing with the petitioner again.

Despite the warnings, Dr. Klein noted that the petitioner sounded like she had been walking on her right ankle at the next follow up. Dr. Klein was concerned enough that she reiterated that she had counseled petitioner not to consider surgery if she could not be non-weight bearing. Dr. Klein noted that she was specifically concerned with the petitioner's compliance, and also warned the petitioner that she ran the risk of non-union which would lead to chronic pain. She even noted to the petitioner that if she could not comply with the post-operative regimen now then a revision surgery would not be a good option for her.Dr. At that point, the petitioner was placed in a short leg weight bearing cast, and told that she could weight bear, but she could not continue to walk on it if it was painful.

At follow up on June 13, 2013, she was transitioned to a boot, and told that she could weight bear in it but not to walk on it with the boot on. Seven days after that visit, the petitioner presented to Good Samaritan Hospital stating she had twisted her ankle that morning at home. The petitioner testified that she was wearing her boot. As Dr. Krause testified, the petitioner would not have been able to twist her ankle on June 20, 2013.

Dr. Klein, Dr. Krause, and Dr. Schmidt all stated, that non-weight bearing was essential to the recovery from an ankle fusion. All three of the doctors noted that the risk of non-union of the fusion increases significantly if patient weight bears after the surgery. Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Krause both agreed that the two main factors in non-union of an ankle fusion were if the patient smoked or if the patient bore weight on the surgically repaired ankle. The petitioner was not a smoker, but she clearly bore weight on her ankle.

The petitioner may have had other factors that could have caused a non-union and non-union of a fusion is certainly a risk of that surgery, but the Arbitrator finds that it is no coincidence that petitioner's fusion did not take when there is ample evidence in the medical records that she was not compliant with the treating doctor's instructions after surgery.

The Act does not require that the injurious practice be the sole cause of the claimant's condition of ill-being for the Commission to reduce or deny compensation. The evidence shows that Dr. Klein, Dr. Krause and Dr. Schmidt all thought petitioner's weight-bearing particularly within 6-8 weeks after surgery was a contributing factor in the non-union of the ankle fusion. The doctors also testified that petitioner's ongoing pain and permanent restrictions from Dr. Krause are related to that non-union Accordingly, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner engaged in an injurious practice which imperiled and retarded her recovery from her ankle fusion surgery ultimately contributing to the non-union of the right ankle, and pursuant to Section 19(d) of the Act denies all benefits, including treatment and any temporary total disability or maintenance benefits, subsequent to April 16, 2013.

With respect to issue (K), what amount of compensation is due for temporary total disability, temporary partial disability and/or maintenance, the arbitrator finds as follows:

The petitioner was taken off work for three days following the March 13, 2012, accident. After that point, she finished out the school year, and returned to work the following school year in August. She worked continuously through the end of that semester. At that point, the student she was aiding left the school district, and she was assigned to another student after discussing her limitations and restrictions with Mr. Green and Ms. Lawrence. She aided that student for three days at the start of the spring semester of 2013, after which she took FMLA and then eventually voluntarily retired.

Based on the medical records, on November 21, 2012, Dr. Aubuchon gave the petitioner restrictions of sit down work only through December 1, 2012. The next indication of any restrictions were from January 18, 2013, at which point Dr. Freehill placed the petitioner on restrictions limiting her from standing or walking for long periods, from any squatting or kneeling, and clarifying that the petitioner could not get up from a kneeling position. It is unclear if these restrictions were placed on petitioner after she left her job with the District or before. Furthermore, on February 8, 2013, the petitioner was placed on work restrictions of no standing or walking greater than two hours without 15 minutes off her feet by Dr. Schmidt. Per the petitioner's own testimony, after having a discussion with Mr. Green and Mrs. Lawrence regarding her restrictions and limitations, the petitioner returned back to work aiding another student. Mr. Green testified that the school district assigned her accommodating her restrictions. However, petitioner stopped aiding that student after 3 days. As petitioner abandoned a job that was assigned accommodating restrictions, I do not find that the petitioner was entitled to any temporary total disability from March 13, 2012, through April 5, 2013.

The petitioner underwent the ankle fusion on April 5, 2013 and was told to be completely non-weightbearing until May 16, 2013. Presumably, the petitioner was expected to be off work during that time as well even though Dr. Klein did not issue any work slips throughout petitioner's treatment with her. Under normal circumstances, the petitioner would be owed temporary total disability for the time she was complete taken off work even if she had voluntarily resigned or abandoned an accommodated position. As she voluntarily retired from her job however, if petitioner was released with restrictions that could have been accommodated by her employer but for her retirement, the respondent would not own temporary total disability during that time frame. However, in this case, all benefits after April 16, 2013, have been denied pursuant to Section 19(d). Accordingly, any temporary total disability benefits the petitioner may have been entitled to after April 16, 2013 have been denied. The petitioner is not claiming any maintenance benefits after her last visit with Dr. Klein on April 4, 2014.

Therefore, the Arbitrator finds that the only period of time that the respondent owes temporary total disability to the petitioner is from April 5, 2013, through April 16, 2013 as it relates to the March 13, 2012 injury.

With respect to issue (L), what is the nature and extent of the injury, the arbitrator finds as follows:

The petitioner claims that there is no stable labor market for her in her current condition, and accordingly she is not employable in the open labor market. The Arbitrator finds that the petitioner has not proved by a preponderance of the evidence that she is permanently and totally disabled and not employable in the open labor market.

Petitioner did not perform any job searches, and admitted that she had not looked for any employment after her surgery. Petitioner presented testimony from Mr. Stephen Dolan, a vocational expert, stating that there was no stable labor market in which the petitioner could work. However, Mr. Dolan admitted that he had not performed a labor market survey, and the primary reason that he opined that there was no stable labor market for the petitioner was because of her need to elevate her right ankle at waist level due to pain. Mr. Dolan further admitted that was a subjective limitation from the petitioner as opposed to a physical restriction placed on her by medical professional. The only permanent restrictions were from Dr. Krause, and Mr. Dolan testified that he knew that there were jobs available for the petitioner within those restrictions.

The Arbitrator also finds it questionable that at the time of her visit with Dr. Krause in June 2014, the petitioner relayed to Dr. Krause that she was having mild symptoms in the right ankle, while only three months later she told Mr. Dolan about rather severe pain complaints and limitations. The petitioner testified that she may not have told Dr. Krause about those symptoms as he never specifically asked her. The Arbitrator does not find that testimony credible as Dr. Krause must have asked the petitioner what her current pain complaints were as Dr. Krause specifically noted and testified that her complaints at the time of the evaluation were mild in nature.

The respondent admitted into evidence a labor market survey, which showed several jobs that fit within Dr. Krause's restrictions that the petitioner could potentially work at. The labor market survey indicated that the petitioner would most likely need some additional computer training to be more marketable on the open labor market, but it certainly identified some jobs that were readily available to the petitioner within Dr. Krause's restrictions.

Therefore, the evidence shows that the only restrictions that were placed on petitioner by any medical professional were from Dr. Krause. Mr. Dolan testified that he knew there were jobs available within those restrictions in the open labor market, and the labor market survey supported that statement. The petitioner has not done any job searches and testified that she has not sought any jobs on her own. With those facts alone, the petitioner has not met her burden to show by a preponderance of the evidence that she is permanently and totally disabled.

Additionally, petitioner retired from the school district in March 2013, prior to her ankle fusion, prior to the non-union of that fusion, and prior to any potential restrictions that were placed on her permanently. Although she testified that she had told Mike Green specifically that she was retiring because she could not do the job, Mr. Green testified credibly that she never had that discussion with him. Even if she did, it is clear that she was never asked to retire or leave her employment, nor did she ever return to the school district after surgery to see if they would accommodate her restrictions even though the petitioner and Mr. Green both testified that it had in the past. Mr. Green further testified that it was regular course for the school district under his leadership to try to work with employees to accommodate any work restrictions that they had.

In Sharwarko v. Illinois Workers Compensation Comm'n, 2015 IL App (1st) 131733WC, the Court found that if a claimant voluntarily retires before ever reaching maximum medical improvement and there is evidence that the employer would have accommodated restrictions had the petitioner not retired, TTD benefits would be denied. The logic of Sharwarko rests on the concept that employers should not have to pay temporary benefits if restrictions could have been accommodated but for the employee voluntarily removing themselves from the labor market. Similarly, if we follow that ruling to its logical conclusion, if an employee voluntarily retires and is subsequently released with permanent restrictions that could have been accommodated by the employer but for the employee's voluntary retirement, can the employee show that she is not employable in the open labor market? It is a long settled practice that employers have the first chance to accommodate the employee with a good faith job offer for a position of need within permanent restrictions. Employers cannot make up jobs for the employee or offer a "sham" job just to reduce exposure, but they get the first chance to employ that employee. Mr. Green testified that the district would have made every attempt to do so, but the petitioner retired and admittedly never approached the district again looking for employment within her permanent restrictions. Furthermore, petitioner testified that she has not made any attempts at all to re-enter the labor market since her surgery.

Accordingly, based on the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator finds that petitioner failed to meet her burden of showing that she is permanently and totally disabled from the open labor market.

The Arbitrator has found that petitioner's pre-existing advanced arthritis was aggravated by this injury and accelerated the need for the eventual right ankle fusion causing some permanent disability in petitioner's right ankle.

Pursuant to Section 8.1(b) of the Act, in determining permanent partial disability for all injuries on or after September 1, 2011, an arbitrator must weigh five factors, including an AMA impairment rating prepared by a physician licensed to practice medicine pursuant to the American Medical Association's guides to evaluation of permanent impairment most current edition; the occupation of the injured employee; the age of the employee at the time of the injury; the employee's future earning capacity; and evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records.

The parties did not submit an impairment rating for either one of the injuries and this factor was given no weight.

The petitioner was employed as an individual aid for the school district, and testified that her job duties required a lot of walking, and occasionally lifting of students, depending on how disabled they were. The Arbitrator put some weight on this factor considering the amount of walking petitioner had to do.

At the time of her accidents, the petitioner was 57 years old. The Arbitrator put some weight on this factor.

The medical records indicate that the petitioner had a long-standing preexisting condition of the right ankle, and the testimonies of Dr. Krause and Dr. Schmidt support that. However, Dr. Schmidt testified that there was deterioration of petitioner's right ankle condition after the March 13, 2012 accident accelerating the need for the ankle fusion. Medical records from Dr. Klein, the doctor who performed the ankle fusion, notes petitioner was not compliant with treatment instructions after surgery by weight-bearing on her right ankle, and Dr. Klein, Dr. Schmidt and Dr. Krause all agreed that the noncompliance contributed to the petitioner's ultimate diagnosis of a non-union of her fusion and the subsequent symptoms and problems that she has had. The Arbitrator put great weight on this factor.

Therefore, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner suffered 25% permanent partial disability of her right ankle.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority. The majority modified the Decision of the Arbitrator to award all medical bills incurred, to increase TTD from 1&5/7 weeks to 64&2/7 weeks, and to increase the PPD award from 25% loss of use of the right "ankle" [foot] to declare Petitioner permanently and totally disabled as of April 5, 2014. I would have affirmed the Decision of the Arbitrator in which he found that Petitioner's proved compensable accident caused the condition of ill-being of her right ankle, that such causation ceased after April 16, 2016, awarded TTD and medical expenses to that date, and awarded 41.75 weeks of PPD representing loss of the use of 25% of the right foot. The Arbitrator held that causation ceased on April 16, 2016 pursuant to Section 19(d) of the Act because he found Petitioner engaged in injurious practices.

Petitioner sustained a fall at work on March 13, 2012. The Arbitrator found that the accident was compensable, that it aggravated Petitioner's underlying pre-existing arthritis, and caused the need for ankle fusion surgery. The surgery was performed on April 5, 2013. Prior to surgery, her surgeon, Dr. Klein, counseled Petitioner on the need to be completely non-weight bearing after the surgery. She even indicated that she would not proceed with the surgery if Petitioner would not comply with that directive. In the initial post-surgical visit, Dr. Klein noted that it appeared to her that Petitioner was not completely complying with her non-weight bearing direction. Dr. Klein considered that to be of sufficient importance to again admonish Petitioner about the necessity of avoiding all weight bearing. She advised Petitioner that bearing weight could lead to non-fusion and chronic pain. Dr. Klein continued such admonishments in later visits. While Petitioner denied that she bore weight to Dr. Klein at the time of her visit, she acknowledged in her testimony that she was repeatedly admonished to avoid all weight bearing and that she occasionally put weight on her right foot when it became tired from the weight of the cast or to balance herself. Respondent's Section 12 medical examiners, Dr. Krause and Dr. Schmidt, concurred with Dr. Klein that avoiding weight bearing is absolutely essential to recovery from ankle-fusion surgery.

On June 13, 2013, Petitioner was put in a walking boot. She was advised that she could bear some weight on the right foot while wearing the boot. Seven days later, Petitioner presented to the emergency department at Good Samaritan Hospital reporting that she had twisted her right ankle. Dr. Krause specifically testified that it would be impossible for Petitioner to have twisted her ankle if she were wearing the boot. Thereafter, Petitioner's fusion failed resulting to a non-fusion. The non-fusion resulted in a significantly increased period of time she was off work and significantly increased permanent partial disability. As correctly noted by the Arbitrator, Section 19(d) does not mandate that the injurious practice be the sole cause of a claimant's condition of ill-being to deny benefits.

For the reasons stated above, I would have affirmed the Decision of the Arbitrator in which he found Petitioner's failure to comply with treatment directives from her treating surgeon aggravated her work-related condition of ill-being and resulted in cessation of causation. Therefore, I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, temporary total disability, medical expenses, partial permanent disability, and penalties, and being advised of the facts and law, reverses the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Background

On December 30, 2015, Petitioner was employed by Respondent as a Maintenance Worker II. Petitioner testified he had been employed by Respondent for approximately 17 years. Petitioner stated his job duties included general maintenance, snow removal, light electrical and plumbing work, and cleaning. Petitioner added that he was available to assist others or fill in for unavailable co-workers. Petitioner was 56 years old at the time of his injury.

On December 30, 2015, Petitioner was generally assigned to the DeKalb County Courthouse. He could not recall how long he had been assigned to the courthouse but estimated it had been a couple of years. Petitioner testified the campus of Respondent in Sycamore, Illinois included the courthouse at the corner of State and Main, along with the Public Safety Building (commonly known as the jail), the Legislative Center and the Administration Building. According to Petitioner, the jail was across Main Street, directly east of the courthouse, while the Legislative Center and Administrative Building were north of the courthouse. Petitioner described the campus as an L-shape, with the Administration building at the top or furthest north, with the courthouse to the west. Petitioner acknowledged there is metered parking on the public streets surrounding the courthouse.

TOMCOATS

Petitioner testified that prior to December 30, 2015, there had been a substantial improvement of the courthouse, including an addition to the north side. He later clarified that the improvements were constructed years earlier and there was no ongoing construction. Petitioner stated that after the addition was completed, additional parking was created on the north side of the building, directly adjacent to the addition. He testified that part of the street was taken as in-line parking for the courthouse. He described the parking as angled spaces just off the street, generally reserved for courthouse employees from 8:00 or 8:30 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. Petitioner stated that his department (facilities management) maintained those parking stalls, including snow removal, ice removal, salting and the like.

Petitioner also testified that the public entered the courthouse only through the main entrance on the south side of the building but there were four other entrances available for employees. According to Petitioner, there was a main employee entrance on the north side of the courthouse, as well as entrances at the east side, northwest corner, and the west side. Petitioner stated the employee entrances required entering a code into a keypad.

B. Accident

Petitioner testified that on December 30, 2015, his shift was from 7:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. He stated he arrived on the campus that day at approximately 6:45 to 6:50 a.m. Petitioner acknowledged he was not called into work early and was not paid for the time before his shift.

Petitioner testified he parked in one of the spaces on the north side of the courthouse. According to Petitioner, these spaces were reserved for particular employees, including judges. Petitioner stated that other employees generally parked in the main parking lot east of the Legislative Center, but to his knowledge, they were not required to do so.

Petitioner explained that he parked in a space reserved for another county employee to drop off his lunch and coffee; he wanted to avoid carrying it across the campus because he generally ate lunch at the courthouse. He explained that his coffee would have become cold carrying it from the main lot to the Public Safety Building to sign in for work before going to the courthouse. Petitioner stated he typically would deposit his lunch, drive to and park in the main lot, and enter the Public Safety Building to sign in on his time sheet.

SIFOCOMIGI

Petitioner acknowledged he could have parked elsewhere and was not required to eat lunch at the courthouse. He later added that he had occasionally been telephoned to respond to emergencies while off-site during lunch.

Petitioner testified that after parking, he entered the courthouse through the northwest entrance and dropped off his lunch in the shop area. He stated that while entering the building, he noticed there was a thin layer of ice covering the parking lot, but the sidewalk seemed clear. According to Petitioner, it did not appear that anyone had cleared ice or snow, or salted the parking lot, but he observed ice melt on the sidewalk. Petitioner acknowledged it was icy throughout the city and there was snow around. He also acknowledged that he walked through snow to reach the public sidewalk and his shoes may have become wet.

Petitioner testified that after dropping off his lunch, he exited the building. Petitioner stated that as he was returning to his car, he slipped and fell in the parking area, approximately five or six feet away from his car. He added that his feet came out from under him and he landed heavily on his left shoulder and arm. Petitioner agreed there was no crack or defect in the sidewalk, or anything other than ice that caused him to fall.

According to Petitioner, he experienced extreme pain in his left shoulder and further examination revealed very limited mobility of the arm with extreme pain. Petitioner also testified that prior to his fall, he had never injured or received medical treatment involving his left shoulder and arm. Petitioner testified he notified his supervisor of the incident and drove himself to the emergency room at Kishwaukee Hospital.

C. Medical Treatment

On December 30, 2015, Petitioner presented to the emergency department at Kishwaukee Hospital. The medical records indicate Petitioner informed the staff he was outside at work and slipped on the ice, landing on the left shoulder/humerus; he denied any head injury, neck pain, chest pain, abdominal pain, or syncope. According to the records, two X-rays of the left shoulder showed no fracture, dislocation, focal bony abnormality or degenerative changes. Two X-rays of the left humerus showed similar results. A report on a CT scan of the head indicated no evidence of acute intracranial abnormality. Another report on a CT scan of the cervical spine indicated: no fractures; straightening of the normal cervical lordosis, which may be secondary to patient positioning or can be seen with muscle spasm; and multilevel cervical spondylosis.

Petitioner was diagnosed with a left shoulder contusion, with the notation of no obvious fracture or dislocation. The patient summary report also indicates instructions were given for a shoulder sprain. Petitioner was discharged to home care with instructions for rest, heat, ice and a shoulder sling as needed.

On January 4, 2016, Petitioner was seen at the Midwest Orthopedic Institute by Marcus Roman, assistant to Dr. Tony Choi. After providing a history of the incident, Petitioner complained of pain with sleeping, especially on the left shoulder. Petitioner also complained of pain with overhead movements. Roman noted Petitioner previously had a right rotator cuff repair performed by Dr. Choi.

Roman's physical examination indicated the range of motion on both shoulders actively was 160/60/T9. Roman noted that on the left, he could forward elevate Petitioner to 160 degrees with a little pain. Strength was 4/5 in forward elevation on the left, 5/5 with external rotation but with pain, and 5/5 with internal rotation. Roman's impression was left shoulder pain, with suspicion of a rotator cuff tear. Roman recommended obtaining an MRI to rule out a rotator cuff tear. Roman also issued a work note stating Petitioner could not return to work.

The MRI of Petitioner's left shoulder was performed on January 7, 2016. The interpreting radiologist's impressions were: (1) complete full-thickness tear supraspinatus tendon and full-thickness tear of the anterior-most infraspinatus tendon with more mild diffuse infraspinatus tendinosis; (2) full-thickness tear of the cephalad 2/3 subscapularis tendon; (3) moderately severe acromioclavicular degenerative change; and (4) moderately large hemarthrosis freely communicating with the subacromial-subdeltoid bursa.

On January 11, 2016, Roman reviewed the MRI results and recommended surgical fixation for Petitioner's acute rotator cuff tears, to which Petitioner agreed. Roman noted that Dr. Choi also reviewed the MRI. On February 5, 2016, Petitioner saw Dr. Choi, whose notes confirm he reviewed the MRI and recommended arthroscopic rotator cuff surgery (as opposed to open surgery).

On February 11, 2016, Dr. Choi performed a left shoulder arthroscopic double row subscapularis repair and supraspinatus repair, subacromial decompression and biceps tenodesis. Dr. Choi's pre- and post-operative diagnoses were the same: left shoulder massive rotator cuff tear supraspinatus, infraspinatus, subscapularis. Petitioner was also referred to Dr. Manav Salwan on this date for post-operative medical management and diabetic management.

On February 12, 2016, Dr. Choi noted Petitioner was doing well and the plan would be to discharge him home. The doctor also noted he was trying to arrange home health therapy, as Petitioner had troubles with transportation due to living alone.

On February 19, 2016, Petitioner followed up with Roman, rating his pain at 1/10 at rest and 6/10 with activity. Petitioner also reported his pain was moderately controlled with Norco. Roman scheduled another visit in a week to remove Petitioner's sutures. Roman noted Petitioner would continue physical therapy and transition from home health to outpatient therapy the next week. Roman also continued Petitioner's use of a sling and abductor wedge. On February 24, 2016, Petitioner began twice-weekly occupational therapy. On February 26, 2016, Roman continued therapy, as well as the sling and abductor wedge, scheduling a visit with Dr. Choi in two weeks.

SIYOOSHIGI

On March 11, 2016, Petitioner saw Dr. Choi, reporting his physical therapy was going well. Petitioner reported he was not taking Norco most days but would occasionally for neck pain. Dr. Choi noted Petitioner externally rotated passively relatively easy to 45 degrees with forward elevation of approximately 90 degrees. The doctor noted Petitioner was progressing well and removed the abduction portion of the sling. He also scheduled a follow-up visit with Roman in four weeks.

Petitioner saw Roman again on April 8, 2016. The record indicates Petitioner complained of some left shoulder pain at night. Roman's physical examination showed an active range of motion for the left shoulder of 90/45/L5, while the passive range of motion was 140/50/L5. The range of motion for the right shoulder was 170/60/T10. Roman continued Petitioner's physical therapy and ordered a follow-up visit in four weeks.

On May 6, 2016, Petitioner's only complaint to Roman was of left shoulder pain in the mornings, which improved with exercises and extra-strength Tylenol. Roman's examination showed the range of motion of the left shoulder was 150/60/L1, while the right shoulder was 170/60/T10. Petitioner's strength in forward elevation was 4/5, while his strength in internal and external rotation was 5/5. Roman again continued Petitioner's physical therapy and scheduled a visit in four weeks.

On June 3, 2016, Petitioner reported to Roman that he had no change in his shoulder pain, but felt his left shoulder was getting a little stiff. The range of motion and strength measurements were the same as his prior visit. Roman noted that in that morning's therapy, Petitioner only reached 130 degrees in forward elevation, but was able to get to 150 degrees when tested at the clinic. Roman extended Petitioner's physical therapy and scheduled another monthly visit, noting Petitioner would remain off work because there was no light duty work available.

Petitioner saw Dr. Choi on July 1, 2016. The record indicates Petitioner's range of motion for his left shoulder remained the same, but the strength in forward elevation was 4+/5. Dr. Choi noted Petitioner was still weak in forward elevation, but gradually improving. The doctor ordered continued physical therapy, with a follow-up in four weeks.

On July 9, 2016, Petitioner complained to Dr. Choi that earlier in the week, he was exercising during physical therapy and felt a pop in his neck/trapezius region, resulting in soreness around the neck which made it difficult to progress in the protocol. Dr. Choi found Petitioner's range of motion in the left shoulder was 160/60/T11, while strength in forward elevation remained 4+/5. Dr. Choi noted that Petitioner may have strained something and recommended possible deep tissue massage in addition to physical therapy. The doctor also recommended continuing strengthening exercises for endurance.

On August 26, 2016, Petitioner reported some remaining weakness to Dr. Choi, but stated the physical therapy was going well. Dr. Choi's examination found Petitioner's range of motion in the left shoulder was 160/60/T9, while strength in forward elevation was 5-/5. Dr. Choi noted that Petitioner's residual weakness should improve with further endurance strengthening in physical therapy. The doctor also discussed work with Petitioner, who stated his boss would not let him return until he reached 100 percent. Dr. Choi hoped to return Petitioner to work after another four-week evaluation.

On September 30, 2016, Dr. Choi found Petitioner's range of motion in the left shoulder was 160/60/T9, while strength in forward elevation was 5/5. Dr. Choi noted that Petitioner still had a little endurance-limited weakness but was able to hold against forward elevation for quite some time before he fatigued. As Petitioner was not experiencing pain and his strength was near normal, Dr. Choi believed he would advance Petitioner to full-duty work and consider placing him at MMI in four weeks.

Petitioner last visited Dr. Choi on October 28, 2016. Petitioner's range of motion in the left shoulder and strength in forward elevation remained the same. Dr. Choi noted he sent Petitioner back to work after the prior visit and Petitioner reported tolerating it well, with little to no discomfort. Dr. Choi placed Petitioner at MMI and indicated he would see Petitioner on an as-needed basis.

D. Narrative Report by Dr. Choi

On June 29, 2016, Dr. Choi wrote a two-page report on his treatment of Petitioner. In the report, Dr. Choi briefly recounts Petitioner's history, the MRI results, the surgery, and the post-operative follow-up visits. Dr. Choi then opined with a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the fall on December 30, 2015 in the workplace parking lot did cause the acute rotator cuff tear on Petitioner's left shoulder.

E. Section 12 Examination by Dr. Weiss

On February 8, 2017, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Stephen Weiss, an orthopedic surgeon, at Respondent's request. Dr. Weiss prepared a report on February 17, 2017 wherein, following a review of Petitioner's medical records and a physical examination, Dr. Weiss diagnosed Petitioner with a full-thickness rotator cuff tear of the left shoulder, and a right shoulder rotator cuff repair by history (approximately seven years prior). Dr. Weiss also provided ratings according to the AMA Guides of a 7% upper extremity impairment, equivalent to a 4% whole person impairment.

F. Additional Information

Petitioner testified that between December 30, 2015 and October 3, 2016, he did not return to work, excepting a half-day on January 2 or 3, 2016. Petitioner also testified that $92,699.94 was paid by his group health insurer for treatment of his left shoulder injury, and that after his $225.00 out-of-pocket payments, there was an outstanding balance of $12,172.74.

Petitioner further testified he has returned to his full job as a maintenance worker, earning slightly more than he did prior to his injury. Petitioner stated he is right arm dominant.

Regarding his current condition of ill-being, Petitioner testified that upon returning to work for Respondent, he has had to self-modify his work to compensate for lifting and moving heavy objects such as file boxes, copy paper, and bags of ice melt or water softener salt. Petitioner acknowledged he lifts items weighing over 50 pounds himself but is more careful about how he balances the load and stacks items. Petitioner added that climbing vertical ladders on the roof of the Public Safety Building (where he now works) to check the roof and exhaust fans is difficult; shoveling snow can be painful. Petitioner testified he has continued to exercise at home, though it was not prescribed.

II. CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A. Petitioner's Work-Related Accident

The Arbitrator found Petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that he sustained an accident that arose out of and in the course of his employment which resulted in a disabling injury. The Arbitrator concluded the danger of slipping on the ice was not peculiar to his work and his exposure to the risk was not greater than that of the general public.

The issue of whether an injury arose out of and in the course of employment is generally a question of fact. Suter v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2013 IL App (4th) 130049WC, ¶ 15. "However, when the facts are undisputed and susceptible to but a single inference, the question is one of law subject to de novo review." Id. In this case, the material facts are not susceptible to a single inference, the chief examples being whether the parking lot at issue is a public lot or provided to Respondent's employees when its use is restricted to particular employees for much of the day. Accordingly, the issue remains a question of fact.

"To obtain compensation under the Act, a claimant bears the burden of showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he has suffered a disabling injury which arose out of and in the course of his employment." Sisbro, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 207 Ill. 2d 193, 203 (2003). An injury "arises out of" employment when "the injury had its origin in some risk connected with, or incidental to, the employment so as to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury." Sisbro, 207 Ill. 2d at 203.

The question of whether a claimant's injury arose out of his or her employment depends upon the type of risk to which he or she was exposed. Baldwin v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 409 Ill. App. 3d 472, 478 (2011). "There are three categories of risk to which an employee may be exposed: (1) risks that are distinctly associated with one's employment, (2) risks that are personal to the employee, such as idiopathic falls, and (3) neutral risks that have no particular employment or personal characteristics, such as those to which the general public is commonly exposed." Dukich v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 31.

"[B]oth our supreme court and our appellate court have repeatedly held that accidental injuries sustained on property that is either owned or controlled by an employer within a reasonable time before or after work are generally deemed to arise out of and in the course of employment when the claimant's injury was sustained as a result of the hazardous condition of the employer's premises." Dukich, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 40 (and cases cited therein); see also Mores-Harvey v. Industrial Comm'n, 345 Ill. App. 3d 1034, 1038 (2004) (and cases cited therein). "The presence of a 'hazardous condition' on the employer's premises renders the risk of injury a risk incidental to employment; accordingly, a claimant who is injured by such a hazardous condition may recover benefits without having to prove that she was exposed to the risk of that hazard to a greater extent than are members of the general public." Dukich, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 40. "In other words, such injuries are not analyzed under 'neutral risk' principles; rather they are deemed to be risks 'distinctly associated' with the employment." Id.

The Arbitrator, in focusing on whether Petitioner's exposure to the risk of the ice was greater than that of the general public, appears to have analyzed this case as a "neutral risk" situation and did not consider whether it was a "hazardous condition" situation. The "hazardous condition" cases generally involve injuries caused by the natural accumulation of snow or ice in a parking lot or other outdoor space owned or controlled by the employer. Dukich, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 41; see also Mores-Harvey v. Industrial Comm'n, 345 Ill. App. 3d 1034, 1038 (2004) (and cases cited therein).

In this case, the unrebutted evidence shows that Petitioner was injured after falling due to ice and show in a parking area controlled by Respondent. Indeed, Petitioner's department was responsible for ice and snow removal in this parking area. Therefore, it cannot be said that Petitioner would never be expected to be in this parking area in the course of his work duties. Moreover, Respondent controlled when the parking lot was to be used solely by employees and when it was open to other members of the public.

Respondent argues that Petitioner fell in a public parking lot and not one designated for employees. This is not strictly true. The parking area at issue is restricted to particular courthouse employees from 8:00 or 8:30 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. Respondent also permits members of the public to park in this area during "non-business" hours, including at the time of the injury in this case. However, in Mores-Harvey, our appellate court considered that dual usage of a parking lot was not the issue:

> "Whether a parking lot is used primarily by employees or by the general public, the proper inquiry is whether the employer maintains and provides the lot for its employees' use. If this is the case, then the lot constitutes part of the employer's premises. The presence of a hazardous condition on the employer's premises that causes a claimant's injury supports the finding of a compensable claim." Mores-

Harvey, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1040 (citing Archer Daniels Midland Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 91 Ill. 2d 210, 216 (1982)).

In Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 326 Ill. App. 3d 438 (2001), however, the appellate court reversed an award based in part on the fact that the employer's parking lot was open to both employees and the public. See id. at 445 (distinguishing Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 41 Ill. 2d 429, 430-31 (1968), and American Electric Cordsets v. Industrial Comm'n, 198 Ill. App. 3d 87, 91(1990)). Respondent also notes that the Mores-Harvey court, relying in part on Homerding v. Industrial Comm'n, 327 Ill. App. 3d 1050 (2002), ruled in favor of the claimant in part because "the general public was free to park anywhere in the lot, [but] claimant's choices were restricted. Therefore, claimant's exposure to risk was necessarily greater than that of the general public." Mores-Harvey, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1042.

Respondent overlooks that the Mores-Harvey court, after concluding that a hazardous condition in the parking lot supported finding a compensable claim, discussed Wal-Mart Stores and Homerding as cases which considered only the second exception to the "general premises" rule. See Mores-Harvey, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1040. This second exception permits recovery for off-premises injuries where "'the employee's presence at the place where the accident occurred was required in the performance of his duties and the employee is exposed to a risk common to the general public to a greater degree than other persons.'" Id. at 1038 (quoting Illinois Bell Telephone Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 131 Ill. 2d 478, 484 (1989)). The Mores-Harvey court concluded the claimant would also recover under the second exception. Mores-Harvey, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1042. But it was not required to do so, having already concluded the first exception applied because the parking lot, even if dual-use, was maintained and provided for employees' use.[1]

Respondent contends Petitioner was also required to prove he had begun his work day, and that he was required to park in the lot where the injury occurred. The latter asserted requirement is based on the discussion of Homerding in Mores-Harvey. The former asserted requirement is not entirely accurate. Rather, the injury must be sustained "within a reasonable time before or after work." Dukich, 2017 IL App (2d) 160351WC, ¶ 40; see also Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 41 Ill. 2d 429 (1968) (affirming award where employee arrived 40-50 minutes early and slipped in parking lot before proceeding to breakfast at a nearby café). In this case, Petitioner's shift began at 7:00 a.m. He arrived on Respondent's campus at approximately 6:45 to 6:50 a.m. A gap of 10 to 15 minutes is within a reasonable time before or after Petitioner's shift.

[1] This first exception was recently discussed by the Illinois Appellate Court in Walker Brothers, Inc. v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2019 IL App (1st) 181519WC. The Walker Brothers court observed that "'[t]he decisive issue in parking lot cases usually is whether or not the lot is owned by the employer, or controlled by the employer, or is a route required by the employer.'" Id. ¶ 22 (quoting Maxim's of Illinois, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 35 Ill. 2d 601, 604 (1966)). Here, the lot was controlled by Respondent.

Respondent notes Petitioner was not required to keep his lunch or coffee in the courthouse. This objection is consistent with Respondent's reliance on Illinois Bell Telephone Co., but, as noted above, that case involved the second exception to the "general premises" rule, not the first. In a "hazardous condition" case, "[t]he rationale for awarding compensation is that the employer-provided parking lot is considered part of the employer's premises." Mores-Harvey, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1038 (citing L. Larson, Larson's Workers' Compensation Law § 13.04[2][a], [b], at 13--40-13--41 (2002)).

The amount of control Respondent exercised over Petitioner's lunch arrangements, however, is relevant to establish that Petitioner's depositing of his lunch and coffee in the courthouse before parking in the main lot was a reasonably necessary act of personal comfort.

The personal comfort doctrine provides:

> "'Employees who, within the time and space limits of their employment, engage in acts which minister to personal comfort do not thereby leave the course of employment, unless the * * * method chosen is so unusual and unreasonable that the conduct cannot be considered an incident of the employment.'" Karastamatis v. Industrial Comm'n, 306 Ill. App. 3d 206, 211 (1999) (quoting 2 A. Larson & L. Larson, Workers' Compensation Law § 21.00, at 5-5 (1998)).

Moreover:

> "'If the employee voluntarily and in an unexpected manner exposes himself to a risk outside any reasonable exercise of his duties, the resultant injury will not be deemed to have occurred within the course of the employment. [Citation.] The employer may, nevertheless, still be held liable for injuries resulting from an unreasonable and unnecessary risk if the employer has knowledge of or has acquiesced in the practice or custom,'" Karastamatis, 306 Ill. App. 3d at 211 (quoting Eagle Discount Supermarket v. Industrial Comm'n, 82 Ill. 2d 331, 340 (1980)).

The personal comfort doctrine generally encompasses acts such as eating and drinking, obtaining fresh air, seeking relief from heat or cold, showering, resting, and smoking. Karastamatis, 306 Ill. App. 3d at 211 (citing 2 A. Larson & L. Larson, Workers' Compensation Law § 21.10, at 5-5 (1998)).

In this case, Petitioner sought relief from the cold for himself, his coffee and food during the short period before his shift. Using the nearest dual-use parking lot was foreseeable, not unreasonable or unexpected; parking south or west of the courthouse was metered while the east side was bounded by a major thoroughfare with no parking. The risk of ice in the area is not outside any reasonable exercise of Petitioner's duties; his department is responsible for clearing snow and ice in the parking area. Petitioner's morning routine was not so unusual and unreasonable that the conduct cannot be considered an incident of the employment. Rather, it was a reasonably foreseeable act of personal comfort.

Lastly, Respondent argues Petitioner was not exposed to a risk greater than that to which the general public was exposed. This is again either dependent on Illinois Bell Telephone Co. (which involved the common area of a mall, not a parking lot controlled by an employer) or on characterizing this case as involving a "neutral risk." Accordingly, the Commission rejects the argument for the reasons stated above. Moreover, as Petitioner notes, he was accessing the courthouse using an employee entrance from an area where the public also was permitted to park, but would not be expected to park, given that the public entrance was on the other side of the courthouse.

For all of the aforementioned reasons, the Commission concludes that Petitioner proved by a preponderance of evidence that he sustained an accident which arose out of and in the course of his employment.

B. Causal Connection

The Commission next considers whether Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to the accident. In his narrative report, Dr. Choi opined with a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the fall on December 30, 2015 in the workplace parking lot did cause the acute rotator cuff tear on Petitioner's left shoulder. In his IME report, Dr. Weiss does not offer a contrary view. Petitioner testified regarding his continuing weakness and limitations at work. Given this record, the Commission concludes Petitioner's current condition is causally connected to the accident.

C. Temporary Total Disability

Petitioner claims he was entitled to temporary total disability benefits in the amount of $508.39 per week for the 39-week period from January 4, 2016 through October 3, 2016, pursuant to §8(b) of the Act. The parties stipulated in the Request for Hearing that Petitioner's average weekly wage, calculated pursuant to section 10 of the Act, was $762.59. Accordingly, Petitioner's claim represents the statutory two-thirds of his average weekly wage. See 820 ILCS 305/8(b)1 (West 2018). Respondent disputed this claim by denying the accident arose out of the course of Petitioner's employment. Having found Petitioner's accident compensable, the Commission awards Petitioner the claimed temporary total disability benefits.

D. Medical Expenses

Petitioner claims Respondent should pay outstanding reasonable and necessary medical expenses of $12,172.74 pursuant to the fee schedule and reimburse him $225.00 for out-of-pocket medical expenses pursuant to §§8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. Petitioner also acknowledges Respondent should be given a credit of $92,699.94 for medical benefits paid by its group medical carrier and hold Respondent harmless for any claims for which it receives credit, pursuant to §8(j) of the Act. Respondent again disputed this claim by denying the accident arose out of the course of Petitioner's employment. Having found Petitioner's accident arose out of his employment, the Commission awards Petitioner the claimed medical expenses, and awards Respondent the credit under §8(j) of the Act as stipulated by the parties in the Request for Hearing.

1911000212

E. Permanent Partial Disability

Petitioner further seeks permanent partial disability benefits representing a 15% loss of the person as a whole. Subsection (b) of section 8.1b of the Act lists five factors upon which the Commission must base its determination of the level of permanent partial disability benefits to which a claimant is entitled, including: (i) the level of impairment contained within a permanent partial disability impairment report; (ii) the claimant's occupation; (iii) the claimant's age at the time of injury; (iv) the claimant's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b(b) (West 2018). However, "[n]o single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability." Id. § 305/8.1b(b)(v).

Regarding the level of impairment contained within a permanent partial disability impairment report, the Section 12 examiner, Dr. Weiss, provided ratings according to the AMA guidelines of a 7% upper extremity impairment, equivalent to a 4% whole person impairment. Petitioner did not submit an impairment rating. The Commission gives some weight to this factor.

Regarding the claimant's occupation, Petitioner is employed by Respondent as a maintenance worker, a position which involves lifting and moving heavy objects such as file boxes, copy paper, and bags of ice melt or water softener salt. Some of these items weigh over 50 pounds. Petitioner's occupation also involves climbing vertical ladders to perform maintenance checks. Petitioner additionally performs light plumbing and electrical work, and shovels snow. The Commission places greater weight on this factor.

As for the claimant's age, Petitioner was 56 years old at the time of his injury. This is an age at which it may be expected that not only is Petitioner truly at MMI and unlikely to recover further, but also young enough that he may be expected to work for a number of years with lingering symptoms and the limitations he has imposed upon himself to complete his job duties. The Commission places some weight on this factor.

The claimant's future earning capacity appears to be undiminished. Petitioner has returned to his full job as a maintenance worker, earning slightly more than he did prior to his injury. Accordingly, the Commission places some weight on this factor.

Lastly, the Commission considers the evidence of Petitioner's disability corroborated by the treating medical records. Petitioner was diagnosed by Dr. Choi with left shoulder massive rotator cuff tear supraspinatus, infraspinatus, subscapularis. Dr. Weiss also diagnosed Petitioner with a full-thickness rotator cuff tear of the left shoulder. To treat this condition, Petitioner underwent a left shoulder arthroscopic double row subscapularis repair and supraspinatus repair, subacromial decompression and biceps tenodesis. Petitioner then participated in approximately eight months of physical therapy and rehabilitation. Petitioner's medical records are entirely consistent with his lingering difficulty with job duties which include lifting and moving heavy objects, climbing vertical ladders, and shoveling snow. The Commission places greater weight on this factor.

Weighing the five factors pursuant to Section 8.1b of the Act, which does not simply require a calculation, but rather a measured evaluation of which no single factor is conclusive on the issue of permanency, the Commission agrees that Petitioner sustained a 15% loss of use of the whole person.

F. Penalties and Fees

Petitioner sought penalties from Respondent under section 19(k) of the Act, which provides:

> "In case[s] where there has been any unreasonable or vexatious delay of payment or intentional underpayment of compensation  then the Commission may award compensation additional to that otherwise payable under the Act equal to 50% of the amount payable at the time of such award." 820 ILCS 305/19(k) (West 2018).

Petitioner also sought an award of attorney fees pursuant to Section 16 of the Act which provides for an award of attorney fees when an award of additional compensation under section 19(k) is appropriate. 820 ILCS 305/16 (West 2018). Section 19(k) penalties and section 16 fees are intended to address situations where the delay is deliberate or the result of bad faith or improper purpose. Jacobo v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2011 IL App (3d) 100807WC, ¶ 24. The imposition of penalties under section 19(k) and fees under section 16 is discretionary. Id.

The Commission has in the past vacated an award of penalties and fees where the Respondent had a good faith argument regarding liability for a fall in a parking lot, in part due to the sometimes confusing state of the law regarding such injuries. See, e.g., Plucinski v. White Castle Systems, Inc., 5 IWCC 456. Given the record in this case, Respondent had a good faith argument regarding liability. Accordingly, the Commission declines to award penalties and fees in this case.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed June 14, 2017, is hereby reversed for the reasons stated above.

SIGCOMM:

19IWCC0712

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner proved he sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment with Respondent on December 30, 2015.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner proved his current condition of ill-being is causally connected to the accident.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay Petitioner the temporary total disability benefits that have accrued from January 4, 2016 through October 3, 2016 at the rate of $508.39 per week, pursuant to §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is liable to pay Petitioner's outstanding reasonable and necessary medical expenses of $12,172.74 pursuant to the fee schedule and also to reimburse Petitioner $225.00 for out-of-pocket medical expenses pursuant to §§8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. Respondent is awarded a credit of $92,699.94 for medical benefits paid by its group medical carrier and is held harmless for any claims for which it receives credit, pursuant to §8(j) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

No county, city, town, township, incorporated village, school district, body politic or municipal corporation is required to file a bond to secure the payment of the award and the costs of the proceedings in the court to authorize the court to issue such summons. 820 ILCS 305/19(f)(2). Based upon the named Respondent herein, no bond is set by the Commission. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

FINDINGS OF FACT

This claim involves a Petitioner alleging injuries sustained while working for the Respondent on December 30, 2015. Respondent disputes Petitioner's claims raising the following issues: 1) accident; 2) causation; 3) medical expenses; 4) TTD; 5) nature and extent; and 6) penalties and attorney fees.

Petitioner worked for Respondent as a maintenance worker. His job duties consisted of building maintenance and snow removal. His work hours were from 7:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. On December 30, 2015 he was assigned generally to the DeKalb County courthouse, however he could be called to assist others or fill in at other locations.

The courthouse is on a town square surrounded on four sides by a public sidewalk and roads. Respondent Exhibit #2 depicts the lay out of the courthouse, and surrounding areas. Two sides of the court have metered parking and another side has an open non-metered parking lot. The non-metered lot is open to the public until approximately 8:00- 8:30 a.m., and then after 4:30 p.m. During other times, it is restricted to court house personnel, such as the judges. The Petitioner is not allowed to park in that lot during his work hours. Snow removal, ice removal, and salting of the lots was performed by the facilities department which involved plowing snow, shoveling, and putting down ice melt.

On December 30, 2015, the Petitioner drove from his home to work, and stopped to drop his lunch and coffee off at the courthouse. At approximately 6:45-6:50 a.m. the Petitioner parked his vehicle in the north side parking area (non-metered) of the courthouse, which at the time was open to the public. When he got out of his vehicle he was able to walk across the parking lot without any problem. He then crossed the curb area and public sidewalk. He believes his shoes got wet on the area between the parking lot and the public sidewalk. He entered the courthouse at the northwest entrance, which is an employee only entrance controlled by a code keypad. The building also has an entrance on the south side, which is open to the public, which was also available to the Petitioner. After the Petitioner went into the building, he dropped off his lunch and coffee, and returned to the parking lot. As he walked over the same area he used going in, he slipped on ice in the parking stall. His feet came out from under him and he landed heavily on his left shoulder and arm. He noticed nothing other than the ice that caused him to fall. There was no crack or defect in the parking stall that caused the fall. He was not carrying anything at the time of the fall.

The weather the morning of December 30, 2015 was cold and icy. There was a thin layer of ice over the parking lot pavement. It did not appear that the lot had been salted. Ice Melt had been applied to the sidewalks. It was icy through the city. The general public was exposed to the same cold, icy conditions throughout the city that day.

The Petitioner was not in a designated parking spot at the time of the accident, and he had not been instructed to be there. The lot he was in was open to the public, and he could have parked in any public lot and used any entrance at the time of the accident. There were other public parking spaces open at the time of the accident.

He testified he had not been called into work early, nor had he begun work at the time of the accident. He was not paid for that time.

East of the courthouse, and across the street are the legislative building, and public safety building. The Petitioner normally parked his vehicle for the workday in the main public lot located behind the legislative building near the public safety building. The maintenance office is not located in the courthouse, but rather in the public safety building.

His normal routine was to park in the lot behind the legislation building, go the maintenance office to fill out his time card around 7:00 a.m., and then walk over to the courthouse. The Petitioner testified that he could have taken his lunch and coffee with him while he did this. It was his personal preference not to. It was his preference to routinely drop these off at the courthouse, because his coffee would be cold by the time he got around to drinking it.

Petitioner generally ate lunch at 12:30-1:00 at the courthouse. He can eat lunch wherever he wanted, and does not have to stay on County property. He can go to a restaurant. He on occasion eats in his car, or the maintenance break room in the public safety building.

After the slip and fall, the Petitioner noticed pain in his left shoulder and went to the emergency room. He was seen for follow up at Midwest Orthopaedic Institute on January 4, 2016. He had left shoulder surgery on February 11, 2016, which consisted of arthroscopic double row subscapular and supraspinatus repair, subacromial decompression and biceps tenodesis. (PX.1 at pgs. 47-48). He was taken off work from January 4, 2016 through October 3, 2016. After surgery he was seen for follow up treatment, including physical therapy before he was ultimately discharged to return to work without restrictions on October 3, 2016. He was last seen for treatment on October 28, 2016, and at that time he had been back to work and had little to no discomfort.

The Petitioner returned to work as a maintenance worker, and is currently earning slightly more than he did prior to the accident. He is right arm dominant. He testified that as a result of the injury to the left shoulder he has difficulty performing job duties that require lifting and moving things weighing fifty pounds or more; such as stacking cases of copy paper, lifting salt bags, and placing boxes on high shelves. He also has difficulty climbing ladders, and pain with shoveling snow. The Petitioner described his difficulties as self-limiting. As a result, he has made accommodations to his job by making sure that loads are balanced, and that he puts heavier boxes on lower shelves. He confirmed he performs his job duties on his own, without assistance.

He was seen for an independent medical examination on February 13, 2017 by orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Stephen Weiss and was given an AMA rating of 7% upper extremity impairment, equivalent to 4% whole person impairment. (RX. 1).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. With regard to the issue of accident, the Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner has not met his burden of proof. In support of this finding, the Arbitrator relies on the Petitioner's testimony, the investigative information placed into evidence, and the relevant case law. The Illinois Supreme Court has found that an employee may be in the course of his employment if he is in the employer's parking lot within a reasonable time before or after work, however the mere presence of the employee in the parking lot alone does not establish that the accident in question arose out of the employment. See Rogers v. Industrial Comm'n, 83 Ill.2d 221, 223 (Il S.Ct. 1980); Kimes v. Illinois Department Transportation, 14 W.C. 17750, 16 I.W.C.C. 0473 (July 13, 2016). To prove the accidental injuries arose out of the petitioner's employment, he must show the accident resulted from a risk incidental to the employment. See Rogers v. Industrial Comm'n, 83 Ill.2d 221, 223 (Il S.Ct. 1980); See also, Quarant v. Industrial Comm'n, 38 Ill.2d 490,492, 231 N.E.2d 397 (1976). An injury does not arise out of the employment unless the danger causing the injury is peculiar to the work, and the exposure to the risk is greater than that for which the general public is exposed. See Piercy v. Royal Oaks Nissan, 97 Il.W.C. 9109, 2001 95708 (2001); Kimes v. Illinois Department Transportation, 14 W.C. 17750, 16 I.W.C.C. 0473 (July 13, 2016).

In the present case, Petitioner's fall occurred before he started his work shift. He was not acting in the furtherance of his job duties or performing activities incidental to his job at the time of the accident. As part of his normal routine, the Petitioner parked in a lot located behind the legislation building for the workday, and then went to the maintenance office to fill out his time card around 7:00 a.m. After doing so, he walked over to the courthouse. The Petitioner testified that he could have taken his lunch and coffee with him while he did this, but it was his personal preference not to. In explaining why he stopped at the courthouse to drop off his lunch and coffee before going to the maintenance office to fill out his time card, Petitioner stated his coffee would be cold by the time he got around to drinking it. He was not in a designated parking spot at the time of the accident, nor had he not been instructed to be there. Although he testified that he routinely stopped and dropped his lunch and coffee off at the courthouse, this was simply his personal preference. He was not required to take lunch at the location, but rather he was free to leave work for lunch.

There is no dispute that the Petitioner was in a lot maintained by the Respondent at the time he slipped and fell on the ice. Although the lot is restricted at times, it was open to the public at the time of the accident. There was no evidence that the parking lot in question was more prone to icy conditions, as the Petitioner testified that the general public was exposed to the same cold, and icy conditions not only in that parking lot, but throughout the City on the morning of the accident. The Petitioner did not identify any cracks or other pavement defects that contributed to or caused the accident. Further, he was not carrying anything work related at the time of the fall. Therefore general public was exposed to the same risk of slipping and falling as the Petitioner.

Based on the above, the Arbitrator concludes that the Petitioner failed to prove that he sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment with Respondent on December 30, 2015.

2. Based on the Arbitrator's findings with regard to the issue of accident, all other issues are rendered moot.

Joseph Kocovsky,

Petitioner,

vs. No. 06 WC 32024

Elkay Manufacturing Company,

Respondent.

ORDER

This matter comes before the Commission on Petitioner's petition for penalties and attorney fees, with due notice given. For the reasons that follow, the Commission is of the opinion that penalties and attorney fees are not appropriate under the circumstances of the instant case.

This matter was previously before us on Petitioner's motion to enforce a settlement contract, which an arbitrator approved on April 2, 2013. The settlement contract, for a lump sum of $90,000.00 plus a Medicare set-aside, states Respondent has not paid all medical bills. The contract further states no unpaid medical bills were known and "[t]he petitioner agrees to assume liability for  all past medical and hospital expenses not specifically authorized by the Respondent's third party administrator." Subsequently, Petitioner discovered unpaid medical bills in excess of $17,000.00 for spinal injections and related treatment he underwent in 2007 through 2009. Petitioner, who was 70 years old, testified during the prior hearing that when he reviewed the settlement contract before signing it, he "read it incorrectly that all bills had been paid which they hadn't been." The reason Petitioner believed all bills had been paid was because he understood from speaking with the doctor's office the injections "were covered by insurance" and he "was able to get the shots." The Commission ruled it did not have jurisdiction and the matter belonged in the circuit court.

During the pendency of this matter on review in the circuit court, the appellate court issued a decision in Millennium Knickerbocker Hotel v. Guzman, 2017 IL App (1st) 161027WC, holding that while the Commission has jurisdiction to assess penalties and attorney fees for failure to comply with the terms of a final settlement contract, the Commission lacks jurisdiction to enforce payment of a settlement or award. The appellate court disapproved of "a procedure whereby a party may seek before the Commission the enforcement of a final award in conjunction with a petition for attorney fees and penalties pursuant to sections 16, 19(k), and 19(l) of the Act." Millennium Knickerbocker Hotel, 2017 IL App (1st) 161027WC, ¶ 29. "Rather, the only method to enforce a final award of the Commission is in the circuit court pursuant to section 19(g) of the Act." Millennium Knickerbocker Hotel, 2017 IL App (1st) 161027WC, ¶ 22. The circuit court in the instant case confirmed the Commission's order, further stating: "Nothing contained in this Order of the Circuit Court shall preclude the Plaintiff from filing a Petition for Penalties before the Workers' Compensation Commission pursuant to Section 19(k) of the Workers' Compensation Act." Petitioner then promptly filed a petition for penalties and attorney fees for failure to pay the medical bills.

On September 19, 2018 and April 17, 2019, Commissioner Stephen Mathis held a hearing on the petition for penalties and attorney fees. Petitioner testified as follows:

> "Q. What was your understanding of the approval process for the payment of your medical bills in your Workers' Compensation case?
> A. I was scheduled for certain treatments, and those treatments were several weeks in series; and I called to verify if these are okay for me to come in, and I was told by the clinic, DuPage Medical, that yes, come on in and we will give you the treatments.
> Q. And what was your understanding of the statements, the alleged statements made to you by the medical providers when they would say come on in for the treatment? What was your understanding of what that meant?
> A. That they weren't covered because it was over a year of Workmen's Comp coverage and it was the same illness or the same injury.
> Q.  [D]id you ever have a situation where any one of these medical providers ever told you not to come in?
> A. No.
> Q. And just to confirm, ultimately when you were provided with medical treatment, what was your understanding of what that meant in terms of the treatment being approved?
> A. If it wasn't covered, they wouldn't treat me. It was as simple as that. That's all I understood, that they said come on in and it was covered."

In his brief in support of the petition for penalties and attorney fees, Petitioner maintains the parties intended for Respondent to pay the medical bills, as "[t]here is no evidence that the bills were 'not specifically authorized' before the fact. Based on his understanding of the procedure involved, [Petitioner] himself thought that these services had been authorized, otherwise the providers would not have provided the medical services." Respondent counters that the settlement contract clearly states Respondent has not paid all medical bills and places responsibility for unpaid medical bills on Petitioner.

We turn for guidance to the appellate court's decision in Paluch v. UPS, 2014 IL App

(1st) 130621, wherein the court noted that a workers' compensation settlement agreement is a release governed by contract law. If the words in the contract are clear and unambiguous, we must give them their plain, ordinary and popular meaning. However, if as here the language of the contract is ambiguous, we may look to extrinsic evidence to determine the parties' intent. Paluch, 2014 IL App (1st) 130621, ¶ 13. The evidence before us demonstrates Respondent drafted the settlement contract incorrectly, failing to list unpaid medical bills. Petitioner then read the settlement contract incorrectly ("that all bills had been paid") and signed it based on his belief that Respondent had authorized the treatment and paid the medical bills. Thus, there was no meeting of the minds regarding the subject medical bills. In determining whether Respondent acted wrongfully, Paluch directs us to consider whether the contract leaves room for good-faith disagreement as to the amount of the payments owed. Paluch, 2014 IL App (1st) 130621, ¶ 12. Here, where there was no meeting of the minds, we cannot award penalties and attorney fees.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's petition for penalties and attorney fees is denied.

No bond is required for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

BEFORE THE ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

Richard Grubb,

Petitioner,

vs.

NO: 09 WC 47900
11 WC 38035

Peacock Colors, Inc.,

Respondent.

ORDER

A Petition for Attorney's Fees having been presented by Petitioner herein, due notice having been given, this cause came before Commissioner Thomas J. Tyrrell for hearing on October 15, 2019, in Chicago, Illinois. The Commission, being fully advised in the premises, hereby grants Grauer & Kriegel's petition for the following reasons.

On November 20, 2009, Grauer & Kriegel, LLC f/k/a Paul W. Grauer & Associates filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim ("Application") alleging a July 14, 2009, date of accident. On October 3, 2011, the firm filed an Application on Petitioner's behalf alleging a January 6, 2010, date of accident. Attorneys Paul W. Grauer and Andrew J. Kriegel were the handling attorneys on Petitioner's cases. Respondent disputed Petitioner's claims and Grauer & Kriegel diligently worked to obtain compensation for Petitioner. Over the years, Grauer & Kriegel filed multiple 19(b) petitions, obtained and reviewed copious medical records, and attended vocational rehabilitation meetings and depositions in these matters.

The parties eventually proceeded to hearing in 2016. In July 2016, after considering the evidence, the arbitrator determined Petitioner is permanently and totally disabled due to his work injuries. Both parties filed Petitions for Review. In November 2017, the Commission affirmed and adopted the Decision of the Arbitrator. Pursuant to the Commission Decision, Petitioner is entitled to permanent total disability benefits in the amount of $469.72 per week for the remainder of his life as well as open medical benefits. Subsequently, the parties entered protracted negotiations and eventually reached an agreement that required Respondent to pay to Petitioner $340,000.00 and to fund a Medicare Set-Aside for prospective medical in the amount of $230,436.00.

Generally, attorneys are entitled to fees in the amount of 20% of the amount of compensation paid to Petitioner. However, pursuant to Section 16a(B), in total disability cases an attorney's fees shall not exceed "...20% of the sum which would be due under this Act for 364 weeks of permanent total disability...unless further fees shall be allowed to the attorney upon a hearing by the Commission fixing fees." Thus, Grauer & Kriegel is statutorily entitled to attorney's fees in the amount of $34,195.62 absent the Commission awarding additional fees. Grauer & Kriegel's petition requests fees in excess of the statutory maximum pursuant to Section 16a of the Act. The firm seeks fees in the amount of $68,000.00 which is 20% of the total settlement amount of $340,000.00. On September 26, 2019, Commissioner Tyrrell approved settlement contracts in this matter. As Grauer & Kriegel's attorney's fee petition was still pending, the Commission also entered an order allowing the dispersal of the statutory attorney's fees in the amount of $34,195.62 and further ordered the firm to hold the additional $33,804.38 in proposed fees in its client trust account.

On October 15, 2019, Commissioner Tyrrell held a hearing regarding the firm's pending request for additional attorney's fees. Petitioner was present as well as Mr. Grauer and Mr. Kriegel. A record was made, and Mr. Grauer presented the numerous boxes that represented the firm's internal case file as a visual example of how much work the firm performed on behalf of Petitioner since November 2009. Grauer & Kriegel's petition included affidavits submitted by both attorneys and Petitioner attesting to the amount of work performed on Petitioner's behalf during the life of the case. During the hearing, the attorneys elaborated in great detail on the extensive time and efforts they made during the past decade to ensure Petitioner received the necessary workers' compensation benefits. Petitioner testified passionately about the diligent efforts the firm made on his behalf. These efforts included the attorneys' constant communication with Petitioner and their tireless efforts to resolve countless disputes with Respondent. Petitioner emphatically testified that his attorneys more than earned the additional $33,804.38 in attorney's fees.

After carefully considering the pending motion, the Commission finds Grauer & Kriegel diligently prosecuted Petitioner's claims. The firm went above and beyond in trying to obtain the best outcome for Petitioner possible for a decade. The firm's efforts resulted in the Commission awarding permanent total disability benefits to Petitioner. The firm then successfully negotiated a settlement that is very favorable to Petitioner. Given the evidence of the amount of work Grauer & Kriegel performed on behalf of Petitioner as well as Petitioner's testimony that his attorneys more than earned the requested additional attorney's fees in the amount of $33,804.38, the Commission finds the firm met its burden of proving an entitlement to the additional attorney's fees. This award of attorney's fees above the statutory limit compensates the law firm for its tireless work while still adequately compensating Petitioner for his permanent disability.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commission grants Grauer & Kriegel's Petition for Attorney's Fees.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Grauer & Kriegel, LLC's Petition for Attorney's Fees is hereby granted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Grauer & Kriegel, LLC, is entitled to attorney's fees in the amount of $68,000.00. Grauer & Kriegel has already received fees in the amount of $34,195.62. The firm is entitled to the additional attorney's fees in the amount of $33,804.38 currently held in its client trust account.

The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

BEFORE THE ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

JENNIFER WILLIAMS,
Petitioner,

vs. NO: 15 WC 035422

VAN MATRE HEALTH SOUTH REHABILITATION,
Respondent.

ORDER

This matter came before Commissioner Barbara N. Flores on November 14, 2019, pursuant to Respondent's Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Petition for Review. Both parties submitted briefs and presented their arguments to Commissioner Flores. Those arguments were made available for the Commission to review by means of a transcript of proceedings. After reviewing the transcript as well as the parties' respective pleadings, the Commission denies Respondent's Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Petition for Review.

The record indicates that the Arbitrator filed a Decision in this matter on June 5, 2019. Counsel for Petitioner and Respondent both represented that they received the Decision by email on the same date.

Respondent filed a Petition for Review of the Decision on June 12, 2019. Counsel for Respondent represented that he also filed a Notice of Motion and Motion to Correct a Clerical Error pursuant to section 19(f) of the Act on the same date. Specifically, Respondent's counsel represented that the Arbitrator had incorrectly inserted the word "not" into a sentence.

On June 26, 2019, Petitioner received a letter dated June 20, 2019 from the Commission by regular mail, indicating the Arbitrator's Decision had been recalled for the purpose of correcting a clerical error and that a corrected Decision would be issued pursuant to section 19(f) of the Act. Respondent's counsel represented that he never received this letter.

On June 21, 2019, the Arbitrator filed a corrected Decision in this matter. On July 10, 2019, Petitioner received the corrected Decision of the Arbitrator in this matter by email. Respondent's counsel represented that Respondent received the corrected Decision on the same date.

On July 22, 2019, Petitioner filed a Petition for Review, contesting the issue of penalties and fees. Petitioner submitted a copy of the cover letter for her Petition for Review, which indicated a copy was to be sent to Respondent's counsel.

Respondent did not file a Petition for Review of the corrected Decision by August 9, 2019. Respondent subsequently filed its Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Petition for Review, based on Respondent not having received the Commission's recall letter. Respondent's counsel acknowledged during the hearing on the motion that Respondent did not file a Petition for Review of the corrected Decision, which was received by Respondent on July 10, 2019.

The Commission's rules mandate that Petitions for Review shall be filed within the time provided by statute. 50 Ill. Admin. Code § 9040.10(a)(1) (2016). Accordingly, the determination of Respondent's Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Petition for Review requires the Commission to consider sections 19(b) and (f) of the Act.

Under section 19(b) of the Act (820 ILCS 305/19(b) (West 2018)), an arbitrator's decision becomes the decision of the Commission and, in the absence of fraud, is conclusive unless a petition for review is filed by either party within 30 days after the receipt by such party of a copy of the arbitrator's decision. Eddards v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2017 IL App (3d) 150757WC, ¶ 11. Absent the filing of a timely petition for review, the Commission is without jurisdiction to review the arbitrator's decision. See Wiscons v. Industrial Comm'n, 176 Ill. App. 3d 898, 899 (1988).

Section 19(f) of the Act (820 ILCS 305/19(f) (West 2018)) provides the Commission with the authority to correct any clerical or computational errors. Residential Carpentry, Inc. v. Kennedy, 377 Ill. App. 3d 499, 503 (2007). An appeal from a decision of the Commission which is commenced prior to the resolution of a motion to correct is premature. International Harvester v. Industrial Comm'n, 71 Ill. 2d 180, 188 (1978). In cases where the Commission recalls a decision upon a motion to correct, the decision is not considered final and appealable until the corrected decision is issued; the time for review begins to run from the date of receipt of the corrected decision. See Residential Carpentry, Inc., 377 Ill. App. 3d at 503; 820 ILCS 305/19(f) (West 2018) ("Where such correction is made the time for review herein specified shall begin to run from the date of the receipt of the corrected award or decision.")

As the Illinois Appellate Court has noted, "[t]he cases are legion that hold that the failure to strictly comply with sections 19(b) and 19(f) of the Act deprives the Commission and the courts of subject matter jurisdiction." Eschbaugh v. Industrial Comm'n, 286 Ill. App. 3d 963, 966 (1996) (and cases cited therein).

In this case, Petitioner and Respondent both received the Arbitrator's original Decision by email on June 5, 2019, commencing the 30-day period for filing a Petition for Review. On June 12, 2019, Respondent filed not only a Petition for Review, but also a motion to correct the Decision pursuant to section 19(f) of the Act, thereby suspending the 30-day period and rendering Respondent's Petition for Review premature. The Commission recalled the Decision of the Arbitrator. Accordingly, the decision was not final and appealable until the corrected decision was issued on June 21, 2019 and the time for review in this matter did not begin to run until the date of receipt of the corrected decision. On July 10, 2019, Petitioner and Respondent both received the corrected Decision of the Arbitrator thereby resetting the 30-day period for filing a Petition for Review.

It is undisputed that Respondent failed to timely file a Petition for Review after receiving the corrected Decision of the Arbitrator. The failure to receive the recall letter does not toll the 30-day period to file a Petition for Review. Rather, sections 19(b) and (f) dictate that the 30-day period commences from the date of receipt of the corrected decision. The parties and the Commission are required to strictly comply with these jurisdictional provisions of the Act.

Nevertheless, Respondent argues it should be permitted to file a late petition, relying on Wilson-Raymond Constructors Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 79 Ill. 2d 45, 56 (1980). In Wilson-Raymond, the Illinois Supreme Court observed that because there is no provision for recall other than that provided by section 19(f), Wilson-Raymond's recall motion, which sought reconsideration on the merits rather than correction of a clerical or computational error was a nullity. Id. In this case, Respondent sought the correction of a scrivener's error and its recall motion was not a nullity.

Respondent also argues that Petitioner would not be prejudiced by allowing the filing of an untimely Petition for Review. The Commission is without jurisdiction to allow such a filing. Notwithstanding, the Commission notes that Respondent remains entitled to respond to the issues identified in Petitioner's timely-filed petition for review.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent's Motion for Leave to File Supplemental Petition for Review is denied.

(NO EXHIBITS ADMITTED)

COMMISSIONER FLORES: We are here in the matter of Jennifer Williams versus Van Matre Health South Rehabilitation, case No. 15 WC 35422, both parties' counsel being present; Mr. Lenkov for the respondent, Mr. Reynolds for the petitioner.

They have submitted to me copies of their briefs in this matter which is brought by respondent's counsel.

So I will turn it over to Mr. Lenkov to, I guess, summarize the purpose of the hearing today.

MR. LENKOV: Thanks, your Honor. Again, our motion sets forth a timeline. But just to reiterate, we received the arbitration decision on 6-5-19. We then filed a petition to review on 6-12-19. We also filed on 6-12-19 a 19(f) petition because there was a minor error. The word "not" was inserted when it should not have been inserted.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: By the arbitrator.

MR. LENKOV: By the arbitrator.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Okay.

MR. LENKOV: So that did not obviously affect any of the substance of the decision. It was merely a typographical error. It was related to penalties.

The arbitrator then on 6-21-19 issued a corrected arbitration decision in which the word "not" was removed, removing that typographical error.

On 7-10-19, respondent received that corrected decision. Respondent did not receive the recall letter from the Commission even though it's true that the Commission did -- there is a copy of a Commission letter, a recall letter, with both counsel and my address on it. We did not receive it.

Accordingly, we did not file a petition to review the corrected decision. Respondent did, in fact, receive the corrected decision. But again, we did not receive the recall letter.

We're here today to ask the Commission to allow respondent to now file its petition to review instanter, given the fact that we did not recall the -- we did not receive the recall letter.

There is no prejudice to petitioner to allow us to file the petition now. There is nothing in the petition, the would-be petition, that is different from the petition that was originally filed. This is not a substantive -- this would not represent any substantive change nor represent any prejudice to petitioner.

In petitioner's response brief, he cites to case law that he alleges runs contrary to allowing this yet there is no citation to any actual case law.

Counsel also represents in his response brief that his client would suffer prejudice as a result but again doesn't articulate what that prejudice would be. I would submit that's because there is no prejudice to petitioner.

The case law that we cite, Wilson-Raymond, a copy of which we've provided to your Honor this morning, does state in essence that a petition for recall under 19(f) is not a vehicle for reconsideration of the case's merits.

So again, we ask the Court to allow respondent to avail itself of its due process rights by allowing us to appeal the decision of the arbitrator for the reasons set forth today and in our brief.

Thanks, your Honor.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Thank you, Counsel.

Mr. Reynolds?

MR. REYNOLDS: Thank you, your Honor. The petitioner opposes the motion to file their appeal brief to the Commission instanter on the corrected arbitration decision.

This is all set forth in the brief; but just in terms of the timeline, your Honor, the first thing that happened was our office received a letter from the Commission which is attached as an exhibit to our opposition. And the letter says that the decision had been recalled and that Arbitrator Glaub was going to correct the decision.

Our office was copied on that letter, and Mr. Lenkov and his office were copied on that letter.

Until our office received the letter, we were unaware that there was a pending petition or request by the respondent to amend the original arbitration decision. It seemed at the time that the Judge had recalled the decision on his own. That's what it seemed to be.

The corrected decision was received by e-mail to both parties on July 10th. And respondent's counsel and respondent have failed to timely review the July 10th, 2019 decision. No review was taken by the respondent 30 days after receipt of the corrected decision.

19(f), which he cites in his brief, makes it clear that when a decision is recalled that the time to file a review is 30 days from receipt of the corrected decision. And the respondent acknowledges that they received the corrected decision.

And until I got their motion, petitioner and her counsel were unaware that the respondent was the one who initiated the request to correct the decision in the first place because the petitioner never received a copy of their motion.

Now, what's significant is if they initiated the request and they received the corrected decision, they were clearly on notice, regardless of whether they received the letter from the Commission recalling the decision or not, that the decision had been corrected. A 19(f) is clear that when the decision was corrected, they had to timely file their review within 30 days of July 10th of 2019.

And so it was their motion, it was then granted, they received the corrected decision with the change; and 19(f) puts them on notice that they had to file a review within 30 days of the corrected decision.

The review they filed on the decision that is no longer the decision of the arbitrator and the commission is moot.

And then -- and this wasn't mentioned by Mr. Lenkov, but the petitioner filed her own review of the decision; and the petitioner timely filed her own review of the corrected decision because Arbitrator Glaub denied penalties. And when we submitted a copy of our review to counsel, of course, we indicated that we filed the corrected -- we filed a review of the corrected decision, the one that was received by the parties on July 10th.

So in some ways, they were given additional notice because we said, look, we took our review, not of the old decision, but we took our review of the corrected decision from July 10th.

And then the last thing, your Honor, is there's no substantial compliance. This is stricter compliance. All that we're talking about boils down to subject matter jurisdiction. The Commission lost jurisdiction to hear this argument by the respondent and their request when they failed to file the review within 30 days of the corrected decision.

Subject matter jurisdiction cannot be waived by the parties. It's strict compliance with the deadline. The deadline has not been complied with, and so you're not in a position to even grant the request for relief because the Commission no longer has jurisdiction to entertain their motion. Thank you.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Before you respond, Mr. Lenkov, let me ask briefly because again I'm coming in and I don't know the history of this case, was the Petition for Review filed by the petitioner on the corrected decision, is that in front of another commissioner currently? Was that heard?

MR. REYNOLDS: That's before you.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: It is before me? Okay. All right.

MR. REYNOLDS: And the transcript has been authenticated. And we don't have --

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Okay. I'm just trying to figure out where this case has come from because again, as I was saying, there's some cases that have been transferred from other commissioner's offices. And since I hadn't seen this motion yet, I wanted to make sure that I know where it's coming from.

MR. LENKOV: To be clear, we do have a return on review date on that appeal. As far as the Commission is concerned, that appeal is ongoing. So we have a return on review date.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: On the petitioner's petition for review.

MR. LENKOV: On respondent's. Right? It's not petitioner's. It's ours.

MR. REYNOLDS: We filed my own review so... which is still pending for now.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Okay. I'm sure when I get back to my office, somewhere there might be at the Commission the filings by the parties.

And before, Mr. Lenkov, you say anything additional that you want to say, I just want to note that because we're here in Ottawa today, I just don't have the file in front of me so I appreciate the additional information.

Mr. Lenkov.

MR. LENKOV: Of course. Just really quickly, just two points.

Counsel said he never received notice of our 19(f) petition. I mean we filed it. We sent a copy. I'd like leave to supplement the record by giving a copy -- by filing a copy of our notice, our petition to correct the decision. We filed that on 6-12-19 so...

COMMISSIONER FLORES: To the extent that you want to submit a courtesy copy to my office of anything that had previously been filed, you are welcome to do so.

MR. LENKOV: Okay.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Just copy opposing counsel and send it to my administrative assistant, and we'll get that.

MR. LENKOV: Great.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: With respect to anything substantive, is there anything else that you would like to add --

MR. LENKOV: Yes.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: -- other than what's in your written brief?

MR. LENKOV: Just one quick point. And I know it's a little bit complicated to follow the timeline, but it should be noted for the record that while the corrected decision was received by my office by e-mail, the recall letter that we think is at the heart of this situation, that's sent by letter. That's not an e-mail.

And, you know, as an officer of the court and practicing for 25 years, counsel says that we allege that we didn't receive it. We didn't receive it. If we received it, I wouldn't be up here arguing that we didn't receive it. I wouldn't put it into a legal document. We never received it.

Whether that is germane to the issue is up to the Commission. But, you know, we just didn't receive it. And my point is that's a letter. That's a hard copy letter that they mail, not e-mail.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Okay.

MR. REYNOLDS: And then, I'm sorry, just one more thing.

I meant to address the prejudice, your Honor. This was a case involving a request for TTD, vocational rehabilitation, medical bills. It was a decision in favor of the petitioner. If the motion is denied, the petitioner has the right to withdraw her appeal; and then the award would be due and owing. Now she would, of course, waive her right to pursue penalties which were denied. That was the only aspect of the claim that was not in the petitioner's favor from the arbitrator's decision.

But this is where the prejudice comes. The motion that they filed should be denied or stricken because their appeal is moot and they didn't file a timely review of the corrected decision, and that's clearly subject matter jurisdiction.

If their appeal is moot, then Ms. Williams can decide to dismiss her review; and then the award would be due. And that's how she's prejudiced, if this motion is granted, and she's going to be denied benefits that she's otherwise entitled to because they failed to take their timely review. Thank you.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: It's clear to me, and I am sure it's very clear to the other commissioners on this panel that it is important to the parties whether or not a petition for review remains or not. So...

MR. LENKOV: And just quickly in response, since counsel raised the prejudice issue, it should be noted that subsequent to this filing of motion, respondent has now initiated some of the award. To move the case forward, we have initiated vocational rehabilitation. We're also paying petitioner benefits.

So I don't want the Commission to think that petitioner's out there not receiving anything. We've actually now done what the Commission -- what the arbitrator awarded, even though we think that the appeal is well found -- that the motion and the appeal are well founded.

So it should be noted that some of that prejudice is not happening because the petitioner is actually receiving benefits.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Okay. Thank you, both. I will note for the record today that I do have the file stamped copy of the Notice of Motion and Order from respondent's counsel dated October 1st of 2019.

I have been provided file stamped copy of respondent's -- the actual motion for leave and supplemental documents also filed October 1st of 2019 as well as I will be receiving an e-mail copy of -- excuse me. I will be printing out what was e-mailed to my office, which is petitioner's counsel's November 12th, 2019 letter and response to the motion.

It's not yet file stamped because petitioner's counsel has not yet received back file stamped from the Commission. But I will return this copy to you.

And thank you, both. You may -- since there is a petition for review on file from the petitioner and it's assigned to my office, I will inquire at the Commission as to when it's being scheduled for.

But I've seen you both for many years. If you haven't heard from my office in the next -- or haven't seen a notice within the next 45 days, we're coming up on the end of the year, you can feel free to e-mail my administrative assistant. I'm happy to let you know where it is in the process. Okay?

MR. LENKOV: Thanks, Judge. One more thing. May I submit courtesy copies for the other commissioners of my packet?

COMMISSIONER FLORES: Sure. We're going to print out --

MR. LENKOV: Save the State some printing.

COMMISSIONER FLORES: I'm sure they'll be happy for it. And we'll get yours, Counsel, printed. Okay. Thank you.

BEFORE THE ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

ERIC WHITECOTTON,
Petitioner,

vs. NO: 17 WC 018007

JERICHO PROPERTY MANAGEMENT and JIM RIZQALLAH, Respondent.

ORDER

This matter came before Commissioner Barbara N. Flores on November 14, 2019, pursuant to Petitioner's Petition for Additional Compensation, Penalties, and Attorney's Fees under sections 16 and 19(k) of the Act. Petitioner's counsel presented his arguments to Commissioner Flores. Respondents did not appear in person or by counsel. Petitioner's arguments were made available for the Commission to review by means of a transcript of proceedings. After reviewing the record, the Commission grants Petitioner's petition.

The record indicates that on January 29, 2019, Arbitrator Anthony Erbacci approved a Settlement Contract between Petitioner and Respondents. The agreement provides for a lump-sum payment of $3,125.00 from Respondents to settle Petitioner's claims arising from an alleged accident occurring on or about January 15, 2017, while Petitioner allegedly was fixing sewer lines at Respondents' mobile home park. Both parties to the agreement were represented by counsel.

On October 22, 2019, Petitioner filed his Petition for Additional Compensation, Penalties, and Attorney's Fees. Petitioner alleged that Respondents had failed to provide proof of Workers' Compensation insurance at the time of the accident and thereafter. Petitioner also alleged that Respondents had failed to pay the sums agreed upon in the Settlement Contract. Petitioner further alleged that on July 18, 2019, Commissioner Flores granted Respondents' counsel's motion to withdraw.

Petitioner's counsel appeared at the hearing on the petition. Respondents did not appear in person or by counsel. Commissioner Flores confirmed that Respondents' counsel had withdrawn, with the instruction at that time to notify Respondents that they should contact Petitioner's counsel directly or would be expected to hear from Petitioner's counsel directly. A copy of a certified letter from Petitioner's counsel to Respondents, notifying them that the petition for penalties would be heard in Ottawa, Illinois on November 14, 2019, was admitted into evidence. At the direction of Commissioner Flores, Petitioner's counsel inquired outside the hearing room to determine that no representative of Respondent was present. Petitioner's counsel then represented that no settlement funds had been received by his office on behalf of Petitioner.

Petitioner requests penalties from Respondents under section 19(k) of the Act, which provides:

> "In case[s] where there has been any unreasonable or vexatious delay of payment or intentional underpayment of compensation * * * then the Commission may award compensation additional to that otherwise payable under the Act equal to 50% of the amount payable at the time of such award." 820 ILCS 305/19(k) (West 2018).

Petitioner also requests an award of attorney fees pursuant to Section 16 of the Act which provides for an award of attorney fees when an award of additional compensation under section 19(k) is appropriate. 820 ILCS 305/16 (West 2018). Section 19(k) penalties and section 16 fees are intended to address situations where the delay is deliberate or the result of bad faith or improper purpose. Jacobo v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2011 IL App (3d) 100807WC, ¶ 24. The imposition of penalties under section 19(k) and fees under section 16 is discretionary. Id.

In this case, Respondents have failed to pay the sum to which they agreed in the Settlement Contract. Respondents, having been sent notice of the hearing on the instant petition, also failed to appear before Commissioner Flores to provide any explanation for their failure to abide by the terms of the Settlement Contract. Therefore, the Commission concludes Respondents have deliberately and intentionally delayed payment of compensation to Petitioner. Accordingly, the Commission concludes Petitioner is entitled to penalties and attorney's fees pursuant to sections 16 and 19(k) of the Act.

The remaining question is the calculation of the penalties and fees to which Petitioner and Petitioner's counsel are entitled. As noted above, section 19(k) of the Act provides that the Commission may impose a penalty "equal to 50% of the amount payable at the time of such award." 820 ILCS 305/19(k) (West 2018). Accordingly, the Commission awards Petitioner penalties in the amount of $1,562.50.

Regarding the request for attorney fees:

> "With respect to any and all proceedings in connection with any initial or original claim under this Act, no claim of any attorney for services rendered in connection with the securing of compensation for an employee or his dependents, whether secured by agreement, order, award or a judgment in any court shall exceed 20% of the amount of compensation recovered and paid, unless further fees shall be allowed to the attorney upon a hearing by the Commission fixing fees, and subject to the other provisions of this Section."

820 ILCS 305/16a(B) (West 2018).

In this case, Petitioner's counsel has secured an additional penalty of $1,562.50. Accordingly, the Commission awards Petitioner's counsel additional attorney's fees in the amount of $312.50.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's Petition for Additional Compensation, Penalties, and Attorney's Fees pursuant to Sections 19(k) and 16 of the Act is hereby granted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondents pay to Petitioner additional compensation of $1,562.50 as provided in Section 19(k) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondents pay to Petitioner's attorney additional compensation of $312.50 as provided in Section 16 of the Act.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondents is hereby fixed at the sum of $5,100. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

BEFORE THE ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

DONALD SUTTON,

Petitioner,

vs. NO: 14 WC 20169

GRACELAND FAIRLAWN FUNERAL HOME,

Respondent.

ORDER

This matter coming before Commissioner Douglas McCarthy on December 11, 2019 pursuant to Petitioner's timely-filed Petition under Section 8(a) of the Act, and due notice provided to all parties, Commissioner McCarthy, after considering the issues of causal relationship and prospective medical care, and being advised of the facts and the law, hereby grants Petitioner's Section 8(a) Petition and awards the right knee nerve ablation procedure and right total knee arthroplasty as recommended and deemed necessary by Petitioner's treating physician.

Procedural History

The parties had previously proceeded to arbitration on the sole issue of Nature and Extent; the hearing took place before Arbitrator Nancy Lindsay on August 22, 2016. The Arbitrator, in her Decision dated October 24, 2016, awarded Petitioner 25% loss of use of the right leg pursuant to Section 8(e) of the Act. (PX1).

On June 27, 2017, Petitioner filed with the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission his Petition for Review Under Section 19(h) or Section 8(a) of the Act. (AX1).

The matter proceeded to hearing on December 11, 2019 before Commissioner McCarthy. Petitioner's counsel confirmed at hearing that the parties were proceeding to hearing on the Section 8(a) Petition. Specifically, the disputed issue pertained to prospective medical by way of a nerve ablation procedure for the right knee and possible knee replacement. (T.9). Section 8(a) of the Act provides for a review by the Commission if additional medical expenses are incurred.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner, then 51 years old, had been employed by Respondent as a funeral assistant. On November 14, 2013, Petitioner was working for Respondent washing cars, when he tripped and fell on a hose. Petitioner struck and injured his right knee. (T.12-13; T.29; PX1).

Petitioner, under the care and supervision of Dr. Stephen Huss, underwent arthroscopic surgery to his right knee on February 17, 2014. Specifically, Dr. Huss performed a partial medial meniscectomy, chondroplasty of the medial tibial plateau and medial femoral condyle. Petitioner's post-operative diagnoses were medial meniscus tear, chondral defect of the medial condyle and medial plateau, and chondromalacia of the femoral trochlea. (T.13-14; PX1).

Despite surgery, Petitioner remained in pain and in fact had subsequent falling incidents during post-operative physical therapy. Following an MRI on May 20, 2014 and a course of Synvisc injections, Petitioner underwent a second surgery to his right knee on January 16, 2015. Dr. Huss performed the surgery and found a cyst on the front portion of the lateral meniscus. Petitioner's post-operative diagnoses were small chondral defect chronic of the medial condyle and an anterior horn degenerative cyst of the lateral meniscus. The procedure performed was a debridement of the anterior horn of the lateral meniscus with a thorough exploration and diagnostic examination of the knee. (T.13-14; PX1). By January 11, 2016, Dr. Huss determined that Petitioner had reached MMI and Petitioner could return for treatment as-needed. (T.32; PX1).

At the December 11, 2019 hearing before Commissioner McCarthy, Petitioner testified that following the second surgery and through the arbitration hearing and Decision in 2016, he had continued to experience complaints and symptoms in his right knee. (T.14-15). During this time period, Petitioner managed his pain through medication prescribed by his primary care physician. (T.15-16).

On April 21, 2017, Petitioner consulted with board-certified orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Jacob Sams, at Decatur Orthopedic Center. (T.16; PX4; PX7, pg. 5). Between Petitioner's last appointment with Dr. Huss and his initial appointment with Dr. Sams, Petitioner testified that his right knee was gradually worsening. (T.16). Dr. Sams' evidence deposition was taken on October 10, 2019; he testified consistent with his medical records. (PX7).

Dr. Sams noted Petitioner's previous partial meniscectomy and meniscal cyst excision with Dr. Huss. Dr. Sams further noted on examination that Petitioner had pain at the extremes of his range of motion. Petitioner also had pain with palpation of the right medial and lateral joint lines.

X-rays of the right knee revealed mild joint space narrowing of the medial and lateral compartments. Dr. Sams diagnosed Petitioner with right knee pain and osteoarthritis. He administered a cortisone injection. (T.16-17; PX4). Dr. Sams recommended that Petitioner stay active without restriction, use over-the-counter anti-inflammatories, and return as needed. (PX4).

Petitioner followed-up with Dr. Sams on September 8, 2017 and reported that the injection had not relieved his right knee symptoms. (T.17; PX4). Dr. Sams next ordered an MRI. (T.17; PX4). Petitioner testified that his new primary care physician, Dr. Ahmed Elrakhawy, had referred him to Millennium Pain Center for pain medication; the physicians at the Pain Center had also recommended a course of physical therapy. (T.18-19; PX6).

Petitioner completed the MRI of the right knee on September 29, 2017. (T.17-18; PX2; PX3; PX4). The impression suggested an anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) tear with intact attachments but severe edema within the substance of the tendon and there was an anterior root attachment tear of the lateral meniscus. (PX2; PX3; PX4). On October 10, 2017, Petitioner reviewed the results of the MRI with Dr. Sams. Dr. Sams indicated that the MRI demonstrated a near complete loss of the medial meniscus as a result of the previous surgeries, and he believed Petitioner's pain stemmed from this loss. Dr. Sams was not concerned about the ACL tear and did not recommend an ACL reconstruction. (PX4). Instead, Dr. Sams recommended a Gel-One injection. (T.20; PX4). The medical record stated that given the level of meniscal loss, Petitioner would need a total knee arthroplasty in the future. (PX4).

Dr. Sams testified at his deposition with respect to the causal relationship between Petitioner's current pain and the November 14, 2013 work injury as well as the prior right knee surgeries.

> Whenever you have some of the meniscus taken out, you are effectively taking away some of the shock absorbing functions of the meniscus. Now, he was having more aching pain. He had medial and lateral joint line tenderness, which is indicative of meniscal issues, but his aching pain can absolutely be attributed to three years prior he had meniscal surgery. (PX7, pg. 11; 13-14).

Dr. Sams further testified: "The loss of the medial meniscus will ultimately result in increased forces going across the cartilage in that medial compartment, and in time you will find degenerative changes, such as cartilage loss and progressing to straight arthritis." (PX7, pgs. 14-15).

Petitioner underwent the Gel-One injection on December 19, 2017; Petitioner testified that the injection provided very little relief. (T.20; PX4). By now, despite the injection, pain medication, and physical therapy, Petitioner remained symptomatic. (T.20). He returned to Dr. Sams on February 20, 2018; Dr. Sams recommended a nerve ablation procedure in hopes of controlling Petitioner's pain. (T.20-21; PX4). Dr. Sams noted that the knee pain was affecting Petitioner's quality of life, especially Petitioner's ability to sleep and walk for a long period of time. (PX4). As of the December 11, 2019, hearing, Petitioner has not received approval to proceed with the nerve ablation and he has therefore not yet had the procedure. (T.21).

Petitioner's next appointment with Dr. Sams was on October 19, 2018; he reported worsening right knee complaints. (T.21; PX4). Dr. Sams recommended another MRI of the right knee which Petitioner completed on November 12, 2018. (T.22; PX4; PX5). The impression indicated a new or enlarged ganglion cyst, and stable appearance of the menisci with diminutive appearance of the medial meniscus, which could be the result of a combination of tearing, postsurgical changes, and degeneration tearing of the anterior horn and root of the lateral meniscus. The ACL appeared stable, and there was near full-thickness articular cartilage thinning of the weightbearing portion of the medial joint space. (PX4; PX5). On November 16, 2018, Dr. Sams reviewed the recent MRI results and recommended a right total knee arthroplasty. (T.22; PX4).

Respondent sent Petitioner for a Section 12 examination with board-certified orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Brian Cole. (T.22-23; RX1, pg. 4). Dr. Cole's evidence deposition was taken on August 27, 2019. (RX1). Dr. Cole had written three Section 12 reports with two addendums. (RX1, Respondent's Deposition Exhibits 1-3). The most recent report was dated April 4, 2019 and addressed the present issue of prospective medical. (RX1, pg. 7; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). Dr. Cole's testimony as to Petitioner's history of injury and treatment was consistent with the record. (RX1, pgs. 8-11). Dr. Cole testified that Petitioner had presented on April 4, 2019 with complaints of right knee pain. Petitioner reported that his right knee felt unstable, it was locking and catching, and he had difficulty with twisting, pivoting, sitting or lying down, bending, and walking on flat surfaces. (RX1, pg. 11; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3).

Dr. Cole examined Petitioner on April 4, 2019; he noted limited range of motion and tenderness on the outer side of the biceps femoris; Petitioner had ligamentous stability, and x-rays taken at the Section 12 examination revealed mild arthritis medially. (RX1, pgs. 13-14; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). Dr. Cole reviewed the images from the November 12, 2018 MRI. (RX1, pg. 15; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). Based on all the information he had reviewed and his examination, Dr. Cole concluded that Petitioner had minor to moderate arthritis. His Section 12 report stated that Petitioner had persistent aggravation of right knee osteoarthritis with lateral meniscal cyst. (RX1; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). At his deposition, he retracted this statement. (RX1, pgs. 31-32).

Dr. Cole opined that Petitioner did not require a total knee replacement as a result of the effects of the November 14, 2013 work accident. (RX1, pg. 17). If Petitioner did require a knee replacement in the future, Dr. Cole stated that it would be related "to the underlying arthritis that would progress on its own independent of the accident ever happening." (RX1, pg. 18). Dr. Cole further opined that the likelihood of Petitioner getting better now with knee replacement surgery was not very high. (RX1, pgs. 15-16; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). "The basis of that opinion is that the subjective complaints do not line up with osteoarthritis. The severity of the disease is minor to moderate at best." (RX1, pgs. 17-18).

In his April 4, 2019 Section 12 report, Dr. Cole had recommended benign neglect, continued monitoring of Petitioner's right knee condition, or a repeat arthroscopy with debridement and meniscal cyst decompression. (RX1; Respondent's Deposition Exhibit 3). Dr. Cole defined benign neglect: "That means despite having symptoms, it's best to minimize surgical or nonsurgical intervention given the low likelihood of success in a situation where you have a patient who has profound symptoms that don't line up with anything pathologically." (RX1, pgs. 28-29). Dr. Cole added:

> He does not have bone-on-bone arthritis. He complains primarily of lateral-sided knee pain. He has no arthritis laterally. Knee replacements are meant to treat arthritis. He has moderate arthritis medially. He is not bone on bone, and he has lots of other confounding issues in a case like this. The likelihood of success is less than 20 percent. (RX1, pgs. 29-30).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Sams on May 10, 2019. Dr. Sams noted Dr. Cole's opinions in his Section 12 report. Dr. Sams stated that he disagreed with Dr. Cole's recommendation for a repeat arthroscopic procedure. (PX4). Dr. Sams testified:

> [Y]ou can't add cartilage to the medial compartment. You can't add meniscus. If you take away further meniscus, it's only going to exacerbate his problem. He didn't mention anything about repairing the lateral meniscus, the root tear of that. I don't think that his – his findings are focal enough to have an arthroscopic procedure be of benefit. (PX7, pg. 24).

At his deposition, Dr. Cole also retracted his recommendation for a repeat arthroscopy. Dr. Cole agreed with Dr. Sams that the procedure was not warranted. (RX1, pgs. 35-36). Dr. Sams also disagreed with Dr. Cole's opinion that Petitioner did not need a knee replacement:

> Because he has an anterior horn lateral meniscus root tear. So if we focus on the lateral meniscus for a second, when you have a root tear, the meniscus, its entire function is lost. Okay. A root tear is kind of saying, you've lost your anchor, and when you put your force through it, it gets out of the way and all the pain – or all the force can be going through the lateral femoral and tibial cartilage. So to say that it wouldn't address that, and then to say his posterior – posterolateral pain, when we have an irritant in our knee, whether it be a medial meniscus, whether it be medial arthritis, whether it be any source of pain somewhere in the knee, a lot of times patients will feel that pain posteriorly. The joint capsule is weakest posteriorly. . .

> That's not where the problem is, but that's where they perceive it, because that's where the joint is being distended first. So that's where we get the name popliteal cyst or a Baker's cyst or things that go along with that. That's not the problem. The problem is elsewhere in the knee. So to say would a total knee replacement address that, an emphatic yes. (PX7, pgs. 25-26).

Dr. Sams testified further as to Petitioner's need for the recommended treatment:

> I have a patient who has tried a long list of very reasonable conservative measures, and we have not yet been successful at controlling his pain. He's dealing with pain on a daily basis. So I don't have benign neglect as an option when I know there are solutions out there that can help him. (PX7, pg. 24).

In summary, Dr. Sams confirmed at his deposition that he still recommended that Petitioner undergo the nerve ablation. If the ablation failed to improve Petitioner's condition, then Dr. Sams recommended proceeding with the right total knee replacement. (PX7, pg. 29).

During cross-examination, Dr. Sams admitted that he had not reviewed the previous treatment records from Dr. Huss. (PX7, pgs. 31-32). He also conceded that many of Petitioner's findings on physical examination were either negative or normal, and Petitioner's x-rays did not reveal extensive or severe arthritic change. (PX7, pgs. 32-34). However, Dr. Sams explained: "[P]ain is subjective, but they have their own response to pain. And so it would not be fair for me to say that his symptoms aren't real because his x-rays aren't bad enough or anything like that." (PX7, pg. 44).

As of the hearing date of December 11, 2019, Petitioner continued to follow-up with the pain center regarding his medication. (T.24-25). Dr. Sams had provided two more cortisone injections; the last one was administered on August 30, 2019. The injections again provided temporary to no relief. Petitioner had last treated with Dr. Sams on August 30, 2019. (T.23-24; PX4).

Petitioner testified that most of the pain was located on the outside of the knee, but he also had pain involving the entire knee joint. (T.34). Petitioner stated that he had difficulty standing for a long period of time, he was uncomfortable at night, and had difficulty sleeping and playing with his grandchildren; Petitioner also stated that he took Tramadol in order to get through his work day; Tramadol provided about 30-percent relief. Petitioner also took Meloxicam which provided about 15 to 20-percent relief. (T.25-27).

Petitioner further testified that he continued to work as a funeral assistant as of the date of hearing. (T.29). His current duties included setting up rooms for visitations and funerals, driving the hearse, cleaning Respondent's fleet of vehicles, and serving as a pallbearer. (T.30-31). He stated that his right knee was problematic while at work. "I have to do a lot of lifting and pulling and tugging and being a crematory operator I have to place bodies in there and pushing and things putting weight on that knee." (T.26-27). Petitioner also served as a pastor; standing for more than 30 to 45 minutes at a time affected his right knee. (T.39).

Conclusions of Law

Under Section 8(a) of the Act, a claimant is entitled to recover for all necessary medical services rendered and thereafter incurred which are reasonably required to cure or relieve the claimant from the effects of the accidental injury. 820 ILCS 305/8(a). Respondent confirmed at hearing that they were not disputing causal connection; Respondent's dispute was whether the treatment recommended by Dr. Sams was necessary. (T.41). The parties further confirmed on the record that they agreed to proceed on this matter without submitting Briefs or requesting oral argument. The parties also agreed that the matter did not have to be decided by a full panel, and on the record agreed to have Commissioner McCarthy decide the issue of prospective medical. (T.42-43).

Our Supreme Court has long held that it is the Commission's province "to assess the credibility of witnesses, resolve conflicts in the evidence, assign weight to be accorded the evidence, and draw reasonable inferences from the evidence." City of Springfield v. Indus. Comm'n, 291 Ill. App. 3d 734, 740 (1997) (citing Kirkwood v. Indus. Comm'n, 84 Ill. 2d 14, 20 (1981)). Interpretation of medical testimony is particularly within the province of the Commission. A. O. Smith Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 51 Ill. 2d 533, 536-37 (1972). Having considered the record in its entirety, including all the testimony and exhibits submitted by the parties, and the Commission having jurisdiction over this claim, the Commission finds the opinions of Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Sams, more persuasive than Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Cole.

Dr. Cole did not address the reasonableness nor necessity of the recommended right knee nerve ablation procedure, and his opinion relative to Petitioner's need for right total knee arthroplasty is not persuasive in light of the medical evidence in its entirety. Petitioner credibly testified that he remained symptomatic in his right knee from the time Dr. Huss released him in January 2016 on an as-needed basis to the time Petitioner began treating with Dr. Sams in April 2017. Petitioner had been managing his pain with medication prescribed by his primary care physician. Although Dr. Sams had not reviewed the previous treatment records from Dr. Huss, he was well aware of Petitioner's previous partial meniscectomy and meniscal cyst excision with Dr. Huss. Dr. Sams testified as to how Petitioner's injury and past surgeries resulted in his current condition of ill-being that now necessitated additional treatment. Dr. Sams explained that the "loss of the medial meniscus will ultimately result in increased forces going across the cartilage in that medial compartment, and in time you will find degenerative changes, such as cartilage loss and progressing to straight arthritis." (PX7, pgs. 14-15).

Dr. Cole's opinion that Petitioner's need for a knee replacement would be related "to the underlying arthritis that would progress on its own independent of the accident ever happening" is simply unsubstantiated. (RX1, pg. 18). Dr. Cole not only testified inconsistent with parts of his Section 12 report dated April 4, 2019, his opinion did not take into consideration Petitioner's continuous and consistent complaints of pain or Petitioner's attempt at conservative care. As Dr. Sams noted,

> I have a patient who has tried a long list of very reasonable conservative measures, and we have not yet been successful at controlling his pain. He's dealing with pain on a daily basis. So I don't have benign neglect as an option when I know there are solutions out there that can help him. (PX7, pg. 24).

Dr. Cole had testified similarly to Dr. Sams in that both physicians noted that many of Petitioner's findings on physical examination were either negative or normal, and Petitioner's diagnostic images did not reveal extensive or severe arthritic change. However, Dr. Sams explained, "[P]ain is subjective, but they have their own response to pain. And so it would not be fair for me to say that his symptoms aren't real because his x-rays aren't bad enough or anything like that." (PX7, pg. 44). The Commission assigns greater weight to the opinions of Petitioner's treating physician Dr. Sams as he not only has consistently observed and treated Petitioner, but his opinions are wholly supported by the record. The Commission thus finds Dr. Sams' recommendation for a nerve ablation in an effort to control Petitioner's pain to be necessary, reasonable and causally related to the November 14, 2013 work injury. The Commission also finds that if the ablation fails to cure or relieve Petitioner's right knee condition, then Petitioner is additionally entitled to the recommended right total knee replacement.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's Petition pursuant to Section 8(a) of the Act is hereby granted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner is entitled to the recommended right knee nerve ablation procedure followed by, if deemed necessary by Petitioner's treating physician, right total knee arthroplasty.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, medical expenses, temporary total disability and permanent partial disability, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

The Arbitrator awarded Petitioner, inter alia, "22-3/7 weeks TTD at the rate of $712.72 totaling $15,979.18 minus any group benefits paid which qualify under the Act." On the Request for Hearing sheet, the parties stipulated to an average weekly wage of $1,068.54; and also, that the period of time Petitioner was off work was, "8/16/14 to 1/18/15, representing 22-3/7 weeks." (Arbitrator's Exhibit #3.)

The Commission finds the correct TTD rate to be $712.36 per week ($1,068.54 AWW x 2/3). The Commission also finds that the period between August 16, 2014 and January 18, 2015 totals 22-2/7 weeks, not 22-3/7 weeks. Accordingly, the Commission modifies the Arbitrator's award of TTD to: 22-2/7 weeks, at a weekly rate of $712.36, for a total of $15,875.45.

All else is affirmed and adopted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed May 16, 2018, is hereby modified as stated herein and otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Bond for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $41,800.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority, which affirmed the Decision of the Arbitrator with minor modifications. The Arbitrator/Commission found that Petitioner proved he sustained a work accident on August 15, 2014, which caused a current condition of ill-being of his right shoulder. I would have reversed the Decision of the Arbitrator, found that Petitioner did not sustain his burden of proving that he sustained a work-related accident or that his condition of ill-being was related to his work activities, and denied compensation.

Petitioner was a crane operator. He had seven prior workers' compensation claims, all of which were accepted by his employer. He also had a non-occupational bicycle accident which resulted in a broken collar bone and distal clavicle fracture. He claimed that on August 15, 2014 he was loading a 2,400 pound billets (steel bars) onto a flatbed truck using a crane-mounted magnet. He testified that he had his right hand on the billets to keep them steady and putting pressure on his hand as they were being lowered. The billets fell faster than he expected and he felt a pop in his shoulder. Respondent has a regulation prohibiting touching billets as they were being loaded.

Respondent's Senior Safety and Health Specialist, Chester Barker, testified that he never saw a worker place his hand on billets as they were being loaded and there was no reason for a crane operator to use their hands to steady the billets. In addition, immediately after Petitioner reported his injury, Mr. Barker specifically asked Petitioner whether he had placed his hand on the billets or applied any force on the billets, and he answered that he did not. Petitioner reported to him that he felt a pop in his shoulder simply as he raised his arm. On cross examination, Petitioner was evasive on whether he made the statement to Mr. Barker and seemed to acknowledge that he did. In addition, Russel Hewit, Respondent's workers' compensation adjuster, testified that Petitioner reported he placed his hand on the billets but did not apply any force. Petitioner also made a similar statement to a treating doctor, Dr. Pena.

Finally, Respondent's Section 12 medical examiner, Dr. Karlsson, viewed the MRI and intraoperative report. He noted that there was no tear in the rotator cuff or large flap tear of the labrum, but only fraying of the labrum. He opined these findings were evidence of a chronic, long-developing degenerative condition and there was no evidence of any acute injury whatsoever. Petitioner's treating surgeon, Dr. Johnson, testified that he based his opinion that the incident caused Petitioner's condition of ill-being, on his report of applying force on the billets. If no such force was actually applied, his causation opinion would change. Based on the entire record before us, I find Petitioner to be patently not credible and would hold that he neither proved accident nor causation.

For the reasons stated above, I would have reversed the Decision of the Arbitrator, found that Petitioner did not sustain his burden of proving that he sustained a work-related accident or that his condition of ill-being was related to his work activities, and denied compensation. Therefore, I respectfully dissent from the decision of the majority.

In support of the arbitrator's findings relating to (C) Accident and (F) Causation, the arbitrator makes the following findings of fact :

Petitioner testified that, on August 15, 2014, he was a billet yard worker at Keystone Steel & Wire and had worked in that position for 5-10 years.

Petitioner had worked at Keystone Steel & Wire for over 40 years.

One of the jobs that Petitioner did on a daily basis would be to load a semi flatbed with billets. Many times, he would do this all day long and load many trucks with billets.

Petitioner further testified that he knew how to load these trucks with billets and he loaded them routinely as he had been taught to do over the years and always used the utmost caution in loading these billets.

On the day of the accident, August 15, 2014, Petitioner was working the day shift which starts at 6:00 a.m. On that particular day, he started to work at approximately 5:50 a.m. and he had already loaded these billets on a truck and completed his first job.

Petitioner was injured when he was working on the second truck he was assigned to at around 6:30 a.m. He said that he was loading a semi flatbed with billets. Billets are 5-inch square 50-foot long pieces of steel that weigh 4,200 pounds each. Petitioner testified that when you load a truck with billets you usually load 11 billets on the truck. They usually load 6 at first so that they can center the first set of billets and then put the remaining 5 next to them for a total of 11 billets.

Petitioner further testified that this is a one-man job. Petitioner testified that they use 3 magnets to latch onto the billets and lift them off of the ground. The magnets are on an overhead crane with a remote control. The magnets and overhead crane are run by the operator.

Petitioner testified that he would use a remote control to go about loading the billets onto the trucks. He would set the magnets on the billets and then engage the magnets using the buttons on his remote control. One button on the remote control would engage the magnets and another button would disengage the magnets.

Petitioner testified that the remote control was a small box that was approximately 4.5 inches by 6 inches. It has handles on it and the operator (in this case, the Petitioner) would carry it around with him.

Petitioner testified that he got the billets onto the magnets using his remote control and then moved them toward the front of the flatbed. He testified that the magnets would have the billets raised up approximately 15 feet in to the air and then he would use the remote control to move them over to the flatbed truck. Petitioner further testified that, once you move them over to where they are over the flatbed truck, he then moves them to get the billets positioned and lower them so that they are properly positioned in the front. Petitioner further testified that after he gets the billets positioned on the front of the truck, he goes to the back of the truck so that he can position the back end of the billets onto the truck properly. Petitioner testified that sometimes, because of the unevenness of the ground or the flatbed, the front of the billets sometimes load properly in front and that the back of the billets are then sometimes still up in the air and have to be lowered down into the proper position.

Petitioner testified that was the situation with this particular truck as the back of the billets were still not fully on the flatbed part of the truck and were partially in the air and needed to be let down so that the entire billets were on the flatbed.

Petitioner testified that he walked to the back of the truck with the remote to position those billets that had the back end of them still hanging in the air. The front had already been down, but the back was still sticking up which he testified happened on a regular basis. Petitioner testified, as such, he got the billets in a position where he needed them so that he could then lower the back part of the billets onto the truck.

Petitioner testified that there were 6 billets that were still in the air towards the back of the truck and that each billet weighed approximately 4,200 pounds and was 50-feet long. The billets were grouped together so Petitioner was lowering approximately 25,000 pounds of steel with his remote control.

Petitioner testified that, in order to steady the billets, he went to the back of the truck so that he could use his remote control with his left hand to lower the back parts of the billets down onto the flatbed. Petitioner testified that he put his right hand up to steady the billets. He had gloves on and he reached up with his arm straight out in front of him but at an upward angle of 100 to 120 degrees. His arm was straight out, but it was at an angle such that it was just above his head.

Petitioner testified that he had done this many times and that it was common practice for him to put his hand on the edge of the billets to steady them when they were still in the air and hanging from the magnets so that they did not rock out of position prior to being lowered.

Petitioner testified that he had done this many times with the remote control, which had both an up and down device. When he hit the down button, the billets unexpectedly went down very quickly. As his right arm went in a downward motion, he felt a pop with pain in the right shoulder.

Petitioner further testified that he did have his gloved right hand on the billets to steady them. However, he did not push them or move them in any way but had only put his arm up there to steady them.

Petitioner testified that everything happened so quick, he does not know whether his glove caught on the billets which have jagged metal edges, or if something else happened.

Petitioner further testified that he had been using that remote control for numerous years. On cross examination, he was asked whether or not he was not supposed to touch the billets at any time. Petitioner denied that he was ever taught that he could not touch the billets. In fact,

Petitioner testified that 2 or 3 different trainers told him he could put his hand on the side of the billets.

He testified that he touched the billets as many as several times a week to steady the billets. He had been doing this for the 5 years or more that he had been loading the flatbed trucks. He also stated that everyone else that worked with him in loading the billets did the same thing. He denied that he had to push on them but stated that his hand was up there touching the billets so as to steady them.

Petitioner testified he had never been warned about touching the billets or received any safety violation. He testified the billets slamming down so quickly had never happened before.

After the billets unexpectedly slammed down so quickly, he felt the pop in his arm. As Petitioner testified earlier, he was not pushing on the billets but was steadying the billets as he had done many times before.

Petitioner testified that he reported his injury immediately. He called his foreman and told him he was going to first aid. At first aide, he was met by Chester Barker, a senior safety and health specialist employed by the Respondent. Mr. Barker testified that the Petitioner told him he had raised his right arm and as he was lowering the billets, he felt his right shoulder pop. Barker prepared a written report on the alleged accident date which was admitted into evidence. (PX 9) In the report he said that the Petitioner reported that as he was getting ready to lower the billets down, he was going to try and "tweak them" around. He wrote that the Petitioner felt pain when he had raised his arm up to steady the billets. Mr. Barker further testified that the Petitioner told him that he did not have his right hand on the billets when they dropped down in an unexpected manner.

In the First Aid department, he was seen by a registered nurse who authored a one page report which was admitted into evidence. (PX 12) The history from the Petitioner was that he put his right hand on the billets to steady them as he was loading them into a truck. He said that his right shoulder popped and went numb, and he was unable to raise his right arm.

He was also seen that morning by Rusty Hewitt, the on-site claims adjuster for the Respondent's Workers Comp carrier, CCMSI. While there, the Petitioner completed an accident report which was signed by Dale Stookey who apparently worked in the Respondent's safety department. Mr. Hewitt testified that the Petitioner told him that he had placed his right hand on a load of billets and, as he was lowering them, felt right shoulder pain. He said that the Petitioner said he did not use any force on the billets as he was performing this task. The accident report, done at around the same time the morning of August 15, said that the Petitioner had raise his right arm straight out, putting his right hand on the billets to steady them. As he started to lower them, he felt his right shoulder pop. The Petitioner said that he placed his hand on the billets so that they would not swing when they were being lowered. (PX 1A)

Petitioner was then sent to OSF Occupational Health on Randolph. The initial intake sheet prepared by the nurse stated that Petitioner was loading a truck with billets and he put his right hand on the billets to steady them when his right shoulder popped and went weak and numb. The nurse noted that Petitioner was unable to raise his arm (Respondent's Exhibit 4).

Petitioner also told Dr. Peña, the OSF doctor, that he put his right hand on the back and side of the 52-feet 25,000-pound billets to steady them. He stated he had his right upper limb extended forward approximately 100-120 degrees and he was not putting any pressure on them but steadying them as he stated earlier. Petitioner testified earlier this was a position his arm was in when the 25,000 pounds of billets went down and landed at an unexpectedly very fast pace and that is when he felt the pop in his shoulder. He said that he noticed a painful crepitation and his arm went numb.

On examination, Dr. Peña noted radiation of pain to the right biceps and anteriorly and medially on the arm and noted a burning quality to his pain at the superior shoulder. Dr. Peña further noted a slight droop to the right shoulder on observation and that he was tender to the right acromioclavicular joint right anterior shoulder including the bicipital groove and also the axillary area medially. The Petitioner had decreased range of motion in the shoulder as well as decreased strength when compared with the left shoulder. He was noted to have right biceps pain against resistance. (PX 4)

Dr. Peña's assessment was a suspicion for a possible right proximal biceps tear and also the possibility of a rotator cuff tear. Dr. Peña took him off work on the date of injury.

An MRI of the right shoulder without contrast was ordered that day and showed a possible tear of the superior glenoid labrum (PX 7).

Petitioner was next seen by Dr. Braun of the OSF Occupational Health Center four days later on August 19, 2014. The history recorded in Dr. Braun's office note was that the Petitioner felt a pop with a burn in the superior portion of the right shoulder as he was lowering his right arm from above shoulder height to shoulder height as he was guiding a billet that was being loaded onto a truck. Dr. Braun reviewed the MRI results, and diagnosed the Petitioner with an acute labral tear. Dr. Braun referred the Petitioner to Dr. Johnson for further evaluation. (PX 5)

Petitioner then went under the care of Dr. Brent Johnson at Midwest Orthopaedic Center on August 22, 2014. Dr. Johnson noted two possible tears on the labrum, tightness and aching on the top of the shoulder, and sharp stabbing pain to the front of the shoulder as well as further pain at times on the lateral side of the shoulder. The pain rated from 7-10 out of 10. Petitioner advised difficulty with moving his shoulder as well as difficulty to eat, dress, and care for himself (Respondent's Exhibit 8).

After a course of physical therapy, Dr. Johnson performed surgery on October 30, 2014. He had diagnosed a right shoulder SLAP tear with adhesive capsulitis. The procedures that Dr. Johnson performed were a right shoulder arthroscopy, capsular release and manipulation as well as biceps tenodesis (Respondent's Exhibit 10).

Dr. Johnson testified that the accident of August 15, 2014 caused the injury to Larry Needham or aggravated any pre-existing condition in Larry Needham's shoulder resulting in the need for the surgery described above. That testimony was given to a reasonable degree of medical and surgical certainty (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, p. 17).

On cross-examination, he was asked if an old clavicle fracture sustained 15 years prior could in and of itself cause an individual to experience a popping sensation. Dr. Johnson replied it would be unlikely (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, p. 20). He was also asked if the clavicle fracture could cause pain or clicking and Dr. Johnson replied possibly but unlikely (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, p. 20).

Dr. Johnson was then asked that since he had noted significant fraying of Petitioner's anterior and superior labrum, could the fraying indicate a more degenerative chronic condition. Dr. Johnson answered that no it would not, stating further that if you have your labrum tore or you have a tissue tear in your shoulder, sometimes it appears frayed and torn (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, pp. 24-25).

On further questioning by counsel for the Respondent, Dr. Johnson was asked whether an individual could develop a labral tear with an activity of normal life just by raising the arm up and lifting something. Dr. Johnson's response was it's possible but unlikely (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, p. 28).

Dr. Johnson went on to testify further regarding the possibility of developing a labral tear by merely raising the arm. Dr. Johnson responded as follows: "So there's different types of labral tears. You can get what we call a Type I labral tear, which is fraying of the labrum, which everybody eventually gets from normal life wear and tear. HE HAD MORE WHAT WE CALL A TYPE II SLAP TEAR WITH THE PEEL-BACK SIGN, WHICH WAS INSTABILITY OF THE LABRUM. I THINK THAT'S LESS LIKELY WITH JUST EVERYDAY DAILY ACTIVITIES." (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, pp. 28-29; emphasis added).

Counsel for the Respondent went on to ask further "Well if reaching up and lifting something wouldn't cause it, why would him merely putting his hand on a billet to guide it cause a tear?" Dr. Johnson replied, "so if he had his hand on the billet and there was a significant force applied and he had his arm in a certain position, yes I feel it could cause it." Counsel then asked:

> "Q: But that assumes there was a significant force.
> A: Yes.
> Q: And what type of force would that need to be as far as significant?
> A: I can't quantify for you in terms of units or anything, but I think it would have to be more that just lifting up your arm. If he was pushing it or had a force push back against his arm, I think it could cause it." (Id at 29)

Dr. Johnson further testified that the force would come from either the Petitioner pushing the billets or a force back against him from the billets, it could be causative to the injuries. (Id)

He further testified that if Petitioner had placed his right hand on the back and side of the 52-foot 25,000-pound billets to steady them as they were hanging there by the magnet, would it have still caused the injury? Dr. Johnson replied "so, yes, if he had his hand up there on the billets to steady, yes, I would feel that would require some force and could cause the injury that has been described." (Petitioner's Exhibit 1, p. 31).

Respondent submitted evidence from Dr. Troy Karlsson, an orthopedic surgeon who did a records review and later an examination pursuant to Section 12 of the Act. On the issue of causation, Dr. Karlsson, who also testified by way of deposition, said that force was required. He said that the Petitioner did not have the requisite force to cause his injuries, as he was not pulling or pushing something and the material itself did not apply a force to him. (RX 8 at 15) He further opined that the surgical findings by Dr. Johnson were more consistent with a degenerative as opposed to a traumatic injury. (Id at 21-22) Finally, on cross examination, Dr. Karlsson testified that the act of raising one's arm to 100 to 120 degrees to steady a two-ton load of steel was not something that most people were doing on an everyday basis. (Id at 46)

Conclusions of Law on accident and causation:

The evidence clearly shows that on the day in question, the Petitioner was performing his regular job in the regular way he performed it. While there was some dispute as to whether the Petitioner had his right hand on the billet load as it was being lowered into the truck, the Arbitrator believes a preponderance of the evidence establishes that it was.

His histories on the accident date to Rusty Hewitt, Dale Stookey and Dr. Pena were consistent. He told them all that his right hand was against the billets when they unexpectedly dropped down to the truck bed. All of the subsequent histories to the Petitioner's medical providers also are consistent. He told all of them his right hand was on the billets. Only the testimony from Chester Barker details a different history. He says the Petitioner denied touching the billets when they first talked immediately after the occurrence. However, at a subsequent meeting Barker said that the Petitioner did report that his right hand was on the side of the billets as he was lowering them down.

The Arbitrator finds it much more likely that the Petitioner did have his hand on the billets as he was lowering them into the truck. Clearly the front end of the billets was in the truck bed while the back end was not. While the Petitioner said that the back end was not swaying, he said it was his normal practice to reach with his gloved right hand onto the back of the billets to prevent said swaying as they were being lowered.

The evidence further shows that while the Petitioner was lowering the billets, he felt symptoms in the right shoulder. The really difficult question is whether this activity was causally related to his injuries. Both doctors who testified, Dr. Johnson and Dr. Karlsson, said that some level of force against the shoulder was required before it could be concluded within a reasonable degree of medical certainty that causation was present. It is clear from the evidence that the Petitioner, while he was lowering the heavy load of billets, did not apply force with his right hand. He testified to that fact, as well as telling virtually everyone else associated with this claim that he didn't apply force while the billet was being lowered. As an aside, the Arbitrator feels the Petitioner was a very credible witness because of his consistency on the issue of force. It would have been easy for him to say that he was pushing on the billet to some degree to prevent it from swaying, but he did not.

On the other hand, both doctors said that force could have been placed on the shoulder from the billets themselves pushing back as they were being lowered. Dr. Johnson felt it significant that while the Petitioner was lowering the billet, his arm was in a raised position. (PX 1 at 26) As stated above, there is really no disputing the fact that the Petitioner had his right arm extended out from his body to a height above head level. There is also no dispute that this billet bundle, which weighed over two tons, dropped rapidly and unexpectedly when the Petitioner pushed the operating paddle with his left hand. As stated above, the evidence established that the Petitioner's right hand was on the billets to steady them before they were lowered.

The Arbitrator believes the above evidence allows him to draw two reasonable inferences. First, it is reasonable to infer that the Petitioner maintained hand contact with the billets while they quickly and unexpectedly dropped down to the truck bed. The reason his hand was on the billets was to steady them as they were being lowered. Secondly, it is reasonable to infer that this two-ton bundle provided some push back as it was dropping. It wouldn't take much of a sway for the heavy load to provide some level of force against the Petitioner's right arm.

Also, the chain of events favors causation. The Petitioner worked for many years for the Respondent without having any ongoing symptoms or treatment involving the right shoulder. While he did have an old, ununited distal clavicle fracture, there was no evidence presented to show that it was giving him any problems. After the accident, he immediately went to his foreman to report it. He was sent to First Aide and then to OSF, where he was seen by Dr. Pena. His exam findings were consistent with a traumatic event. He noted tenderness throughout the shoulder along with decreased motion and strength. He diagnosed a possible biceps tear. An MRI was performed which showed a torn labrum. Four days later he saw Dr. Braun, who termed the labral tear as being acute. Just one week after the accident, the Petitioner saw Dr. Johnson, an orthopedic specialist. Dr. Johnson found decreased ranges of motion, weakness of abduction and external rotation and tenderness to palpation. Again, all of these findings are reflective of a recent trauma. After a trial of therapy, surgery was performed.

It is likely that some of what Dr. Johnson found in surgery pre-existed the events of August 15. However, the law allows for compensation if an accident aggravates a pre-existing condition. Based upon the testimony of Dr. Johnson as well as the chain of events analysis, the Arbitrator finds that the accident as alleged is causally related to the Petitioner's condition of ill being.

In support of the arbitrator's findings relating to (J) Medical, the arbitrator makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

All of Petitioner's medical bills were paid by Respondent's group carrier with the exception of out of pocket expenses totaling $1,018.46. Petitioner's claim for reimbursement of medical expenses is granted in light of the Arbitrator's finding as to causation.

In support of the arbitrator's findings relating to (K) TTD, the arbitrator makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

Petitioner was off work from August 16, 2014 through January 18, 2015, a period of 22-3/7 weeks, during which period of time he received group disability benefits from Respondent totaling $7,289.29.

Petitioner's claim for temporary total disability is granted in light of the Arbitrator's findings as to accidental injury and causation. In light of Petitioner's average weekly wage of $1,068.54, Petitioner is entitled to 22 and 3/7 weeks TTD at the rate of $712.72 totaling $15,979.18 minus any group benefits paid which qualify under the Act.

In support of the arbitrator's findings relating to (L) Nature and Extent, the arbitrator makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

With respect to the five factors listed in Section 8.1b of the Act, the Arbitrator first notes that Dr. Karlsson did an AMA evaluation on June 7, 2016. The doctor found a 2 % impairment of the right arm which equates to a 1 % impairment of the whole body. The Arbitrator gives moderate weight to the doctor's findings.

The Petitioner has worked for the Respondent for the past forty years, working as a laborer in the billet yard for the past five to ten years. The job is somewhat strenuous in nature, as evidenced by the accident in question. The Arbitrator gives moderate weight to occupation.

The Petitioner was 55 years old when the accident occurred. As such, he will not have to work as long as would a younger individual with the post-surgery symptoms which he testified to at arbitration. The Arbitrator gives moderate weight to this factor..

The Petitioner was released to full duty work on January 15, 2015 and there is no evidence to support any wage diminution. The Arbitrator gives no weight to this factor.

Finally, Dr. Johnson testified that he last saw the Petitioner on April 24, 2015. This would have been three months after his return to work. Dr. Johnson noted no pertinent findings on examination, and said the Petitioner reported slight pain with extended activity. (PX 1 at 12) The Arbitrator gives considerable weight to this factor.

After consideration of the five factors set forth above, the Arbitrator awards 10 % person as a Whole under Section 8 (d) (2) of the Act.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by Respondent, and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, medical expenses, and permanent partial disability, and being advised of the facts and law, reverses in part the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. Petitioner did not file a Petition for Review but urges the Commission to modify the Arbitrator's Decision to include 25% loss of use of the right thumb as part of the permanency award.

The Arbitrator determined that Petitioner proved that her slip and fall on ice in the employer's parking lot on December 19, 2016 constituted an accident that arose out of and in the course of her employment. He found that Petitioner proved that she suffered injuries to her back and right thumb and awarded medical benefits and 3% loss of use of the body as a whole for Petitioner's back strain. However, the Arbitrator determined that Petitioner's right thumb injury resolved without any permanent disability and made no permanency award for that injury. Petitioner did not seek temporary total disability benefits. The Commission affirms the Arbitrator's finding that Petitioner's accident arose out of and in the course of her employment and the award of medical expenses and permanency as to Petitioner's back strain. However, the Commission reverses the Arbitrator's finding that Petitioner's right thumb condition was causally related to her work accident and his award of medical expenses related thereto.

On December 19, 2016, Petitioner, an office support staff member at Respondent's Decatur Correctional Center, received permission from her supervisor to go to her vehicle during her break and slipped on ice in Respondent's parking lot. Shortly after the accident, Petitioner's supervisor completed a Supervisor's Report of Injury wherein he noted Petitioner's injury was to her "back and right hip." Petitioner completed an Employee's Notice of Injury and Incident Report and indicated therein that she injured her "Back & RT Hip & Neck." Petitioner's Application for Adjustment of Claim, filed on January 5, 2017, listed "back" as the part of the body injured in the work accident.

On December 20, 2016, the day following her alleged accident, Petitioner reported to Dr. Newlin with right hip, back, and neck complaints from her fall. She did not mention a right hand or thumb injury. Petitioner returned to Dr. Newlin on December 28, 2016. The note indicates Petitioner complained of neck and back pain. Not until her January 26, 2017 appointment, over a month after her accident, did she report to Dr. Newlin constant thumb pain since the fall. Dr. Newlin ordered x-rays of Petitioner's right hand; results were negative, except for some degenerative changes.

Petitioner consulted with PA-C Gregoire in Dr. Wottawa's Springfield Clinic office on April 12, 2017 on referral from Dr. Newlin. She complained of locking and catching in her right thumb and reiterated that she had suffered constant pain in her thumb since her work-related slip and fall in December. The doctor's assistant noted that Petitioner was unable to explain to him the mechanism of the fall. Petitioner recalled only that she had fallen on her right side and that her thumb pain was 10 on a scale of 1-10. PA-C Gregoire ordered physical therapy and anti-inflammatories.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Wottawa's office on June 8, 2017. PA-C Purves performed the exam and offered Petitioner a steroid injection, which she declined. He noted that Petitioner's thumb condition might or might not be causally related to her fall. Dr. Wottawa performed a trigger thumb release on June 29, 2017.

Petitioner testified at hearing that she had noted pain in her back and hip and felt a "pop" in her right thumb immediately at the time of her fall. However, she also testified that she did not notice anything about her thumb at first and that it had not begun to hurt or swell until a week and a half after her fall.

At hearing, Respondent disputed that Petitioner had suffered a compensable work accident but stipulated that Petitioner's low back injury was caused by her fall. Respondent denied that Petitioner's trigger thumb was causally related and maintains this denial on appeal.

The Arbitrator found that Petitioner's fall arose out of and in the course of her employment with Respondent and that she suffered injuries to both her low back and right thumb. Petitioner was awarded reasonable and necessary medical services and 3% loss of use of the body as a whole for Petitioner's low back injury. The Arbitrator declined to award any permanency for Petitioner's right thumb complaints, concluding that "whatever problems Petitioner may have had with her right thumb are resolved without PPD." Arb. Dec., p. 6.

Petitioner bears the burden to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence all the elements of her workers' compensation claim. Martin v. Industrial Comm'n, 91 Ill.2d 288, 294 (1982). This includes proof of a causal connection between the work accident and Petitioner's alleged injury.

In this case, Petitioner has not presented credible evidence that her right thumb condition was causally related to her work accident. She testified that she immediately heard a "pop" in her right thumb. She later testified that she noticed nothing about her thumb for a week and a half after her fall. She did not report her alleged thumb injury to her supervisor, nor does "thumb" appear on any accident report or on her Application for Adjustment of Claim. Not until over a month had passed since her accident did she complain to Dr. Newlin of right thumb pain, which she said had been constant since the accident.

In light of the totality of the record, the Commission finds that Petitioner failed to prove that her right trigger thumb was causally related to her work accident on December 19, 2016. The Commission therefore reverses the Decision of the Arbitrator as it pertains to Petitioner's right thumb injury and treatment and otherwise affirms and adopts the Arbitrator's Decision.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator, finding that Petitioner proved that she suffered an accident on December 19, 2016 that arose out of and in the course of her employment and that her lower back injury is causally related to that accident, is hereby affirmed with the above change.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Respondent pay to Petitioner the reasonable and necessary medical bills related to the care and treatment of her lower back injury, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, and subject to any credit pursuant to Section 8(j).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that payment for medical bills related to the care and treatment of Petitioner's right thumb injury is denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is ordered to pay Petitioner the sum of $755.37 per week for a total period of 15 weeks, as provided in Section 8(d)2 of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused a 3% loss of use of Petitioner's body as a whole.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

Pursuant to §19(f)(1) of the Act, claims against the State of Illinois are not subject to judicial review. Therefore, no appeal bond is set in this case.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner Kelley Smith is a current State of Illinois employee who works for the Illinois Department of Public Health Division of Long Term Care/Quality Assurance. On December 19, 2016, she was still employed with the State of Illinois but worked for the Department of Corrections at that time. In both positions she primarily worked in the office and duties were clerical in nature.

On December 19, 2016, the Petitioner testified she asked for permission to go to her car and Petitioner suffered a slip and fall on the ice in the parking lot at her correctional facility as she was entering her vehicle. Petitioner testified that her car was parked in an employee handicap spot and she fell getting into the vehicle. Petitioner testified she had sought and was granted permission to go to her vehicle from her supervisor.

Petitioner testified that when she fell she only noted pain in her back and hip but she also felt a pop in her right thumb. The report filled out by Deborah Shannon, Petitioner's supervisor, indicated that the Petitioner hurt her back and right hip with no mention of a wrist injury. There was also a narrative completed that confirmed that Petitioner was given permission by a Denise Jones to go to Petitioner's vehicle. Petitioner also filled out an injury report that was consistent with her testimony and the other reports submitted at the time of trial but her report at the time also did not note that Petitioner suffered a right thumb injury.

On December 20, 2016, Petitioner reported to a Dr. Newlin with complaints to her right hip, back, and neck. During the exam, Petitioner described that her feet slipped and onto her buttocks. The impression at that time was neck and worsening lumbar. Petitioner was given a light duty work slip.

Petitioner's second exam was on December 28, 2016, she complained of lower back pain due to her fall, she was referred to physical therapy for whiplash.

Petitioner attended physical therapy at Decatur Memorial Hospital on January 6, 2017.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Newlin on January 26, 2017, with new complaints of right thumb pain, and complained that it occurred on December 19, 2016 injury.

When Petitioner returned to Dr. Newlin on February 17, 2017, she requested a referral for her thumb. Petitioner still had back complaints and was to continue therapy for her lower back.

The final time Petitioner saw Dr. Newlin was on March 6, 2017. Petitioner testified that she returned to work soon after this point full duty and then switched positions at the State of Illinois.

Petitioner underwent an MRI on her lower back and pelvis on March 19, 2017, due to low back pain. No acute findings were found on Petitioner's pelvis.

Petitioner testified that she underwent two injections and could have a third for her lower back but that she had not scheduled it as of the date of trial.

The records reflect that Petitioner had her first right SI joint injection on April 20, 2017, and her second on August 3, 2017. Petitioner continued to work full duty regarding her back since her release. Petitioner continues to have some minor problems with her lower back, including some ache due to overuse and long periods of sitting at her desk.

Petitioner was referred to Springfield Clinic with Dr. Wottowa's office for her right thumb injury. Petitioner was initially seen on April 12, 2017. It was noted that Petitioner suffered a fall in middle of the last December on to her right side but did not tell him the exact mechanism of the fall. It was noted that Petitioner evaded serious bony injury to her right hand Petitioner was to undergo therapy and follow up in 6-8 weeks.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Wottowa's office on June 8, 2017. A David Purves was the attending medical examiner at that time who explained that her injury may not be related at all. It was decided that Petitioner undergo a right trigger thumb release with Dr. Chris Wottowa.

Petitioner saw Dr. Wottowa for the first time on June 26, 2017. Petitioner declined injection in her thumb but wanted to proceed with surgery, which Dr. Wottowa ordered at that time. The operation was performed on June 29, 2017, on Petitioner's right thumb.

Petitioner followed up with Dr. Wottowa on July 12, 2017, and was released on an as needed basis with good results at that time regarding her thumb injury.

Petitioner testified that her right thumb is in good condition and she had a good result from the surgery.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issues (C), the Arbitrator makes the following conclusions of law:

The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner did suffer an injury that both arose out of and in the course of his employment. This is based upon the following reasoning:

Respondent disputed accident on this claim and for Petitioner to prove accident that must prove that the injury in question both arose out of and in the course of her employment with Respondent. Petitioner's un-rebutted testimony established both issues.

Per Material Service Corp., Division of General Dynamics v. Industrial Commission, 53 Ill. 2d 429, 292 N.E.2d 367 (1973). When an employer acquiesced to activities by the Petitioner the injury, even if personal in nature, with Respondent's permission can be compensable. In the above cited claim the injured employee went out to warm up her car, with permission of her employer and her vehicle slid into a body of water and she died as a result. The court ruled that due to the permission of the employer her activity, though personal in nature, was in the course of her employment. The Arbitrator finds the facts similar to the claim in question with the Petitioner asking for permission which was granted by her supervisor for her to attend her vehicle in the employer controlled parking lot.

The Arbitrator also notes that the Petitioner suffered a fall at an employee designated parking spot, in an employer controlled parking lot and a fall due to ice. None of this was disputed at the time of trial. Petitioner fell due to a hazard, ice, on the employer's premise, in a zone designated for employees. These factors made her injury also arise out of her employment.

In regard to disputed issues (F), the Arbitrator makes the following conclusions of law:

Respondent stipulated that Petitioner's low back injury was caused by her employment at the time of trial so no findings regarding that injury will be made.

The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner's right thumb current condition is related to her 12/19/2016 injury. This is based upon the following reasoning.

Petitioner testified that she did not initially notice that her right thumb was injured when she fell but the mechanism described was falling backwards and on to her right side. It was noted by the Arbitrator that Petitioner fell on her right side as noted in the initial medical records and Petitioner's hand injury was also to her right thumb. It is persuasive that due to Petitioner's back complaints she would not notice her thumb injury.

In regard to disputed issues (L), the Arbitrator makes the following conclusions of law:

The Arbitrator takes note of Section 8.1(b) which sets forth the criteria for determining permanent partial disability.

1) The parties did not submit an impairment rating. The Arbitrator gives this no weight.

2) Petitioner is an office worker for the Respondent. Throughout her injury Petitioner continued to work full duty and light duty. However, the Petitioner testified that she had difficult with long periods of sitting which was required of her employment; the arbitrator affords this some weight in favor of the Petitioner.

3) The employee was 52 years old at the time of his injury. Petitioner has a long career and many more years of employment ahead of her, the Arbitrator gives this less weight in favor of the Petitioner.

4) This injury did not affect the employee's future earning capacity. The arbitrator gives this some weight in favor of the Respondent.

5) The Petitioner's ongoing subjective complaints were corroborated in the medical records. Petitioner is still having on-going pain regarding her lower back and may require a third injection for manage her back complaints. The Arbitrator gives this greater weight in favor of the Petitioner.

Based on the above, the Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained 3% loss of use of Man as a whole under §8(e)12 of the Act. Furthermore, the Arbitrator finds whatever problems Petitioner may have had with her right thumb are resolved without PPD.

In alternative even if the Arbitrator rules against Petitioner in regards to her right thumb injury Respondent should still be found liable for Petitioner's back injury due to the findings regarding accident and their stipulation to her low back injury.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

On August 28, 2017, Petitioner was employed by the Respondent as a Deputy Sheriff at the Skokie Courthouse. He has been employed by the Respondent for the last 18 years. His work shift is from 8:00am to 4:00pm. His work duties include transporting inmates around the courthouse. On the date of the accident, Petitioner was transporting three inmates from the courtroom to the male lockup. On the way to the lockup, Petitioner's duties required that he feed the inmates in the lunch room. The lunch room was a square room measuring 10'x 10'. Petitioner testified that he had the 3 inmates lined up against the wall of the lunch room. On another wall, the lunch was on a table. The sandwiches were in a plastic bag placed on a Styrofoam plate. As Petitioner was picking up one of the plates to hand to the inmates, he had his back to the inmates. At that point one of the inmates stepped away from the wall and approached the Petitioner as he was turning back towards them. That inmate used his fist to strike Petitioner in his left chin in an upper-cut swing motion. The Petitioner credibly testified that he was struck with such force that his neck snapped back, he felt pain immediately in his neck and head, and spit a portion of a tooth out of his mouth. Petitioner's knees buckled but he did not fall to the floor. The inmate took another swing at Petitioner but Petitioner was able to block the punch. Other officers entered the room to stop the inmate. Petitioner was taken by ambulance to the emergency room complaining of an extreme headache.

On August 28, 2017, Petitioner was treated at Northshore Medical Group emergency room. The intake records indicate that Petitioner was bleeding from the mouth and had jaw and dental pain. The records also show that Petitioner had neck pain. The CT of the neck taken that day showed that Petitioner's neck fusion was solid at C4-5 and C5-6. Petitioner had testified that he had a previous neck surgery in 2016. The previous CT performed on May 14, 2016 showed a solid fusion also.

On August 31, 2017, Petitioner treated with his primary care physician, Dr. Zofakis. The history of the assault at work was consistent in the medical records. Petitioner had increased pain from the neck. The records indicate Petitioner was complaining of stiffness in the neck and numbness in both hands. He was diagnosed with cervical radiculopathy. He was prescribed Naproxen, time off from work, and referred to the spinal specialist, Dr. Gary Shapiro. Dr. Shapiro was the surgeon that performed Petitioner's neck fusion in 2016.

On September 13, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. Shapiro. The medical records clearly points out that Petitioner had not seen Dr. Shapiro since July 13, 2016 over 14 months prior to the accident in question. Dr. Shapiro's records indicate that Petitioner's symptoms are suggestive of a C7 distribution. Dr. Shapiro kept Petitioner off work. Dr. Shapiro reviewed the CT of August 28, 2017 and determined that there was a solid fusion at C4-6. Dr. Shapiro further explains that there appeared to be a small central calcified disc herniation at C6-7. Dr. Shapiro prescribed Medrol Dosepak and Norco. He mentioned that if his symptoms do not improve, then he would prescribe a MRI.

On September 14, 2017, Petitioner treated with the dentist, Dr. Trambas. He repaired the 2 fractured teeth.

On September 20, 2017, Petitioner started physical therapy at Athletico.

On September 27, 2017, Petitioner was seen by the IME, Dr. Butler. He diagnosed Petitioner with acute strain of the neck muscle and cervical radicular pain. Dr. Butler opined that there was a causal connection between the current complaints and the assault that occurred on August 28, 2017. He kept Petitioner off work and ordered a MRI.

On October 4, 2017, Dr. Shapiro saw Petitioner and documented Petitioner's continuing complaints of headaches, neck pain, and left arm pain with weakness.

On October 30, 2017, Petitioner had the C-spine MRI performed. The radiologist impression is "Central disc protrusion/spur formation C6-7".

On November 7, 2017, Dr. Shapiro met with Petitioner and reviewed the MRI film. Dr. Shapiro's assessment confirmed a central disc herniation at C6-7 with continued headaches, neck pain, and bilateral arm pain. Dr. Shapiro prescribed a cervical discectomy with fusion at C6-7. He continued to keep Petitioner off work.

On November 22, 2017, Dr. Butler, the IME, reviewed the same MRI without examining the Petitioner. Dr. Butler opined that the MRI showed that Petitioner merely strained his neck. Dr. Butler disagreed with Dr. Shapiro as to protrusion/herniation and the need for a fusion. He returned Petitioner to work full duty and released him from care at MMI.

On May 14, 2018, Dr. Shapiro wrote a letter of Medical Necessity. He explained that Petitioner had been doing very well since the first fusion in 2016 and was released to full duty at MMI on July 13, 2016. Dr. Shapiro had a detailed understanding of the new assault that occurred on August 28, 2017. He explained the immediate onset of neck pain, jaw pain, and right arm pain. He once again confirmed that there was an objective finding of a central disc herniation in the MRI of October 30, 2017. He stated that the mechanism of injury is consistent with the herniation seen at C6-7. The disc herniation was either rendered symptomatic or caused by the work related injury. He continued to prescribe a fusion at C6-7.

Petitioner testified that he was paid temporary total disability benefits while off work from August 29, 2017 through January 8, 2018. He testified that he while he has been waiting for the surgery to be approved he continues to have headaches and pain in the left arm. He testified that he has not had any subsequent injuries to his neck since the assault.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

"C" (Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent?)

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner had an injury arising out of and in the course of employment and that the injury caused the need for surgery prescribed by Dr. Shapiro. The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's testimony was credible as to the assault that occurred on August 28, 2017. There was no contrary opinion from the Respondent concerning the assault. All the histories in the medical records were consistent with the history given by the Petitioner.

"F" (Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury?)

The Arbitrator finds that the medical opinion of Dr. Shapiro is more persuasive and factually correct. The Arbitrator notes that Dr. Shapiro was Petitioner's treating surgeon from a previous fusion. Dr. Shapiro knew Petitioner's history and was able to show that the previous fusion was solid and that Petitioner had no medical visits for over 14 months before the new assault at work on August 28, 2017. Dr. Shapiro also confirmed the assessment of the radiologist that the MRI showed a herniation/protrusion at a new level of C6-7. Dr. Shapiro provided conservative care for Petitioner which did not alleviate the symptoms, and, in fact, the symptoms have become worse. While it may be true that the MRI findings were like a pre-accident MRI on May 15, 2015 and the doctor discussed future surgery at that level at that time. It also appears from the record that the accident, more likely than not, accelerated the need for the fusion surgery at C6-C7 and as a result, the claim is compensable under the Act.

The Arbitrator fully recognizes that it would be better if a physician had opined the acceleration theory, but the accident speaks for itself.

The Arbitrator finds that Dr. Butler's opinion is less compelling than Dr. Shapiro's assessment.

"J" (Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?)

The Arbitrator, having found in Petitioner's favor for accident and causation, finds that Respondent is liable for the medical bills incurred per the fee schedule and 8.2.

"K" (Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care?)

The Arbitrator, having found in Petitioner's favor for accident and causation, also finds that Respondent is liable for the neck fusion surgery prescribed by Dr. Shapiro including related follow up care.

v.	)	No. 16 WC 007757
MONTERREY SECURITY CONSULTANTS, INC., RESPONDENT.	)	20IWCC0004

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner's Testimony:

Petitioner, Gary Rizza, testified that on 10/11/15, while in the course and scope of his employment, he injured his right ring finger and lower back while apprehending a shoplifter. He broke the finger and experienced back pain and sciatica in both legs.

Petitioner sought treatment for his right ring finger and lower back that day at Ingalls Memorial Hospital. He was given an injection and prescribed an MRI. The doctor also referred him to Dr. Miz for his low back and Dr. Labana for his right hand. He had the MRI at Open MRI in Homer Glen. He was taken off work.

When he presented to Dr. Labana, his right hand was very sore. His right ring finger was still purple and swollen. A splint was applied to the finger. He later underwent occupational therapy and was released from care.

When he presented to Dr. Miz, he reported that his back pain was severe and that he could not sit or stand for very long. Dr. Miz told him that he could not return to work until he completed a course of physical therapy. Petitioner was in excruciating pain.

In November 2015, a friend referred him to Dr. Hasan. Dr. Hasan sent Petitioner to Physical Therapy & Sports Injury Rehabilitation for treatment. Over the course of three months, Dr. Hasan administered three injections to his back. Each injection helped for a little while, but the pain came back. Then, Dr. Hasan referred him to Dr. Harvey.

When he presented to Dr. Charles Harvey, he told him that the pain was in his lower back on both sides, but the back pain and the sciatica was much more dominant on the left side. Dr. Harvey examined him. He told Dr. Harvey that he did not receive lasting pain relief from the injections, and Dr. Harvey told him that he felt surgery would be the only step that would provide him with some type of permanent relief.

On July 18, 2016, he saw Dr. Jesse Butler for a second opinion. He told Dr. Butler about the problems with his mainly left-sided lower back pain and about how his sciatica was never ending. Dr. Butler reviewed the MRI, and also recommended surgery.

Petitioner further testified that after this injury - - sometime about the end of 2015 - - he has experienced heart palpitations. Dr. Harvey told him that high blood pressure was a concern of his and that he would like Petitioner to see a cardiologist before the surgery. Petitioner takes medication for his blood pressure.

On May 11, 2016, which was approximately one month after Dr. Harvey suggested surgery, Respondent arranged for Petitioner to be examined by their IME physician, Dr. Citow. From the time he walked into Dr. Citow's office until the time he left, five minutes or less had passed. During the examination, Dr. Citow did not touch him. Dr. Citow wrote a report, about which Petitioner learned two months later. It is Petitioner's understanding that Dr. Citow's opinions were not consistent with those of Dr. Harvey, Dr. Hasan, and Dr. Butler.

On October 12, 2016, Dr. Harvey performed surgery on Petitioner. Such surgery consisted of a lumbar laminectomy and discectomy at L4-L5. After the incision healed, Dr. Harvey prescribed a course of physical therapy. Dr. Harvey ordered an MRI, which was done on December 30, 2016. Dr. Harvey continued to keep Petitioner off work. After Dr. Harvey reviewed the MRI, he suggested that Petitioner undergo another surgery on the right side in order to provide some type of permanent relief.

Petitioner also attempted to do work hardening, which Dr. Hasan had recommended. As the work hardening progressed and more weights were added, Petitioner could no longer do it. The pain got to be too much.

On April 3, 2017, at the request of Respondent, Petitioner presented to Dr. Singh. Based on Petitioner's knowledge, Dr. Singh agreed that Petitioner injured himself on October 11, 2015. So, Dr. Harvey had made a recommendation for a revision surgery, and both Dr. Hasan and Dr. Singh agreed with such recommendation. Dr. Singh gave Petitioner a light-duty status.

On July 10, 2017, Petitioner testified, he was finally able to get another injection approved, which Dr. Hasan had recommended. The injection provided only temporary relief on the right side.

Petitioner testified that he wants the surgery that Dr. Hasan, Dr. Harvey and Dr. Singh have recommended.

The first time Respondent contacted Petitioner about light-duty work was in June 2017. They requested that Petitioner go to a teen center on July 10th, which Petitioner did not do because he was at Riverside Medical Center getting the fourth injection to his back. Petitioner testified that he notified this off-duty site, or Respondent, that he would not be appearing on July 10, 2017. Specifically, he notified three different people to let them know he would not be appearing that day: the Workbox representative, who put this modified-duty job together, the nurse, who is affiliated with the insurance company, and the representative of the teen center. He told the three of them on July 7th that he would be glad to go there on the following Monday. Amanda, a representative of Workbox, left a voice mail message for Petitioner on the 17th of July. Amanda was one of the three individuals he contacted regarding work at this modified-duty job.

In September 2017, Petitioner was notified of a second off-duty job site. This one was at the Salvation Army in Blue Island. Petitioner went there and met the people from there but did not actually do any work there. He did not begin working there because he was not able to do what they wanted. They wanted him to work in the kitchen, but the lady there made the determination that Petitioner could not do that work.

On November 20, 2017, there was an off-duty job offer from Vitas Hospice Care. Petitioner started working there on November 20, 2017, continues to work there, but has not been paid for the work he has done there.

TTD benefits were terminated on July 5, 2017, and he has not received any TTD benefits since that time.

Petitioner recalled that he may have outstanding medical bills as a result of this injury. There is an outstanding bill from Central Illinois Radiological Associates in the amount of $478.00. He also has a bill from University Pathologists with a balance of $89.70, on the next page, a balance of $11.50, and on the third page a balance of $23.00. Then, there is a $65.00 balance from Physical Therapy and Sports Injury Rehabilitation.

Petitioner then testified as to pharmacy bills that he paid out-of-pocket, all of which he claimed were related to work injury of October 11, 2015.

On cross-examination, Petitioner testified that he was seeing Dr. Patel for his high blood pressure. Also, Dr. Balthazor prescribed hydrocodone and lorazepam. Dr. Hasan also prescribed hydrocodone for pain. He had also prescribed hydrocodone for Petitioner earlier that year. Petitioner testified that he submitted these prescriptions to the employer's insurance company; he was told by Walgreen's that his prescriptions were denied. Petitioner list of prescription bills that he is presenting are just those that he paid for out-of-pocket. Petitioner underwent another MRI and x-rays in December 2017; a doctor from Dr. Harvey's office ordered these tests. Petitioner thought that new MRI showed three bulging discs on the right side instead of two. That was a change in circumstance. Petitioner saw Dr. Hasan on September 18, 2017. At that point, Dr. Hasan prescribed another epidural steroid injection.

Petitioner testified that there was a point after the revision laminectomy surgery was recommended that he did not want to have it.

Prior to the accident, Petitioner was never diagnosed with a degenerative disease or degenerative condition of the lumbar spine. Prior to the accident, he "sort of" experienced symptoms of pain in his lumbar spine. He would experience soreness if he did spring clean-up of the house where he went out and did all the work himself or if he was painting. The soreness would result if he was doing something that he would not normally do. So, he never had treatment for his lumbar spine until the accident.

On July 10, 2017, he received the fourth epidural steroid injection at Riverside Medical Center. He received pain relief for a week to a week and a half. Dr. Hasan has prescribed a fifth injection.

Dr. Singh examined him in March or April of 2017. Dr. Singh was with him for over a half hour. First, they talked, and then he examined Petitioner.

When Dr. Citow examined him on May 11, 2016, he did not ask Petitioner to ambulate, did not conduct range of motion exercises - - he did not conduct an examination of Petitioner with his hands at all.

Some money from Monterrey Security was deposited directly into his account in the last week or so, but he has no idea of the purpose of this money.

To the best of Petitioner's knowledge, the surgery that Dr. Harvey performed on him has been paid according to the fee schedule. Petitioner further testified that the first, second, third and fourth injections have not been paid for. Some things, however, have been paid for. Petitioner assumes that some money has been paid for the injections, but he has not seen the schedule that the attorneys are talking about.

The amounts of the unpaid bills that he is claiming are listed on the petition that Petitioner's Counsel filed today. He has been treating at Riverside Medical Center since 2015.

He testified on direct that about 15 years ago, he filed a workers' compensation claim against Joe Rizza Ford, but did not file another claim against Terry's Lincoln Mercury.

Petitioner would agree with Respondent's Counsel that temporary total disability benefits were paid by the employer from the time of the injury to July 5, 2017.

Petitioner testified that his doctor at Riverside Medical Center stated that he is totally incapacitated. Petitioner does not know if the doctor made such statement on November 9, 2017 because he has not seen the doctor's note. Most recently, he saw his doctor at Riverside Medical Center in December 2017, and at that time the doctor said to him that he is totally incapacitated.

On redirect examination, Petitioner testified that Dr. Balthazor is a physician's assistant who works with Dr. Harvey. To reiterate, Petitioner testified that that the prescriptions that are included in Exhibit L are all for the October 11, 2015 incident.

Petitioner testified that the reason that he did not want to have the revision surgery at one point was that the insurance company wasn't giving him any help. So, he testified, if they are not paying his benefits at the time, and he goes under the knife, and he's off work another year without help from them, and now he has a big bill, he is not doing himself any favor. After they discussed that he was not ready to get that surgery, they discussed additional injections as an alternative.

Dr. Harvey did tell him that he was totally incapacitated, but to Petitioner's knowledge, neither Dr. Harvey nor Dr. Hasan has completed treatment. He does not have any permanent restrictions.

Monterrey Security is his employer. The amount of money that was deposited in his account was $1,416.38. Since his benefits were terminated on or about July 4, 2017, the only money he has received from Respondent other than this 1400 and some odd cents was a check he received for one penny.

On recross examination, Petitioner testified that he recalls receiving and reviewing Dr. Singh's IME report, but he did not recall when. Petitioner's testimony was that he did not have the revision surgery because he was not getting any help from his employer anymore. His testimony is also that he received TTD until July 5, 2017.

Summary of Medical Treatment:

On the date of accident, 10/11/15, Petitioner presented to Ingalls Memorial Hospital. (T. 28; P. Ex. "A") He reported he was at work and caught someone and now has pain in his right hand, 4th digit, and lower back. (P. Ex. "A", p. 7) X-rays of the lumbar spine and right fourth finger were taken. X-ray of the fourth finger revealed a comminuted nondisplaced fracture of the fourth distal phalanx; the lumbar report revealed mild disc space narrowing at L2-3, L3-4 and L5-S1 and mild spondylosis. (P. Ex. "A", p. 23-26).

On 10/13/15, Petitioner was diagnosed with non-displaced fracture of distal phalanx of the right ring finger, pain, lumbar spine, and other spondylosis with radiculopathy, lumbar region. He was referred to ortho/hand for the fracture. An MRI of the lumbar spine was ordered and it was recommended that he apply ice. He was also prescribed Hydrocodone and Cyclobenzaprine, and taken off work. He was scheduled to follow-up in one week. (P. Ex. "A", p. 40-56)

Per the referral, Petitioner presented to Premier Orthopaedic & Hand Center, Dr. Neal Labana, where he was treated for his finger fracture (including splint, therapy, and home exercise) until being released on 12/29/15. (P. Ex. "C") During treatment of his hand, he was released to work with restrictions of no use of the affected extremity until his full-duty release on 12/29/15.

Petitioner followed-up on 10/16/15, at which time he complained of throbbing pain in the right ring finger and lower back, with radiating pain. He was kept off work and recommended continued use of his cane. (P. Ex. "A", p. 57-67) The MRI of the lumbar spine was performed at Homer Glen Open MRI & Imaging on 10/21/15. The MRI revealed multilevel spondylosis, disc bulges causing neural foraminal stenosis, disc bulges at L2-L5 causing impingement of the exiting nerve roots, mild central canal stenosis at L2-5. (P. Ex. "B")

On 11/6/15, Petitioner returned to Ingalls Memorial Hospital with complaints of severe back pain. He was referred to Dr. George Miz at Bone and Joint Physicians. He ultimately saw Dr. Miz on 11/3/15, at which time he complained of low back pain after the work-related injury. Since the date of the accident, he experienced pain and numbness that radiates down his legs. After performing a physical examination and reviewing Petitioner's lumbar MRI, Dr. Miz determined Petitioner has lumbar radiculopathy related to his disk herniation and recommended initial treatment with physical therapy, noting other options such as injections and surgical decompression depending on the progress. Petitioner was to stay off work until he finished the recommended physical therapy. (T. 37; P. Ex. "D") At the recommendation and referral of Dr. Miz, Petitioner presented to Physical Therapy & Sports Injury Rehabilitation, LLC on 11/12/15, where he continued therapy until 2/11/16.

However, on 11/18/15, Petitioner presented to Dr. Ashraf Hasan at Oak Orthopedics for a second opinion. Dr. Hasan agreed with Dr. Miz's diagnosis. Petitioner was scheduled for left L4 and left L5 transforaminal ESI. Petitioner was to continue physical therapy. (P. Ex. "F") The injection was performed on 11/23/15 at Riverside Medical Center (P. Ex. "G"; T. 41) The pain improved but returned as severe as ever. (T. 41) He had another injection on 12/9/15, with the same results. (P. Ex. "G" & "F"; T. 42) A third injection was performed on 1/11/16. Again, there was initial relief, then the pain returned. (P. Ex. "G" & "F"; T. 42) Ultimately, on 3/9/16, after recommending work hardening and a few additional visits without improvement, Dr. Hasan referred Petitioner for a neurosurgical evaluation. (P. Ex. "F"; T. 43)

At the referral of Dr. Hasan, and on 4/5/16, Petitioner presented to Dr. Charles Harvey at Riverside Medical Center, at which time he was diagnosed with lumbar disc herniation. Dr. Harvey recommended an MRI of the lumbar spine and prescribed medications. He opined surgery was likely a left L4-5 laminectomy and microdiscectomy. Petitioner was to follow up after the MRI (P. Ex. "G") On 4/21/16, the MRI of the lumbar spine revealed moderate-sized disk herniation at L4-5 resulting in moderate to severe left lateral recess narrowing, and moderate to severe central canal narrowing. (P. Ex. "O")

On 4/20/16, Respondent had Petitioner evaluated by Dr. Jonathan Citow, pursuant to Section 12 of the Act, who rendered a report dated 5/11/16. Dr. Citow recommended obtaining the lumbar MRI before giving opinions on diagnosis, further treatment, and MMI. (R. Ex. "A")

On 5/5/16, Dr. Harvey recommended lumbar laminectomy and discectomy L4-5 left with medial facetectomy and foraminotomy. (P. Ex. "G")

On 7/6/16, Dr. Citow prepared an Addendum, wherein he recommended an ESI, opining if Petitioner remains symptomatic after that, a left-sided L4-5 microdiscectomy can be considered. He released Petitioner to return to work without restrictions and opined MMI would be one month post-injection. (R. Ex. "B")

On 7/18/16, Petitioner presented to Dr. Jesse Butler at Spine Consultants, LLC for a second opinion regarding Dr. Harvey's recommendation for surgery. (T. 44) Dr. Butler examined Petitioner and diagnosed him with lumbar disc herniation with radiculopathy and stenosis. (P. Ex. "I") He recommended a lumbar laminectomy at the L4 level with discectomy on the left at L4-5. (P. Ex. "I")

Therefore, on 10/12/16, Dr. Harvey performed a lumbar laminectomy and discectomy, L4-5 left, with medial facetectomy and foraminotomy. (P. Ex. "G", p. 364; T. 51) Petitioner continued to present for post-operative, follow-up visits, with complaints of weakness, numbness and tingling in both legs. On 11/22/16, he was recommended for physical therapy for lumbar strengthening and range of motion exercises. He was kept off work as well. (P. Ex. "G")

On 12/15/16, a new MRI of the lumbar spine was ordered to rule out recurrent disc herniation. Physical therapy was put on hold until MR images were taken and results reviewed. Again, Petitioner was kept off work. (P. Ex. "G") On 12/30/16, it was determined Petitioner did not have a recurrent disc herniation but does have scar tissue at the site of his left L4-5 laminectomy as well as stenosis bilaterally at L3-4 and L4-5 that could be contributing to his symptoms. Prior to considering additional surgical intervention, he was referred to interventional pain management to try injections. He was kept off work. (P. Ex. "G" & "O")

On 1/12/17, Petitioner returned with imaging for further evaluation of the back and leg pain. He was referred to pain management and ordered to follow up after injections. On 3/22/17, Petitioner complained of heart palpitations. He did not have a history of these problems prior to the subject work incident. He was recommended for testing. (P. Ex. "G")

On 4/3/17, Respondent had Petitioner evaluated by Section 12 physician, Dr. Kern Singh. Dr. Singh opined Petitioner's condition of ill-being is residual L3-4 and L4-5 spinal stenosis; that as a result of the 10/11/15 incident, Petitioner sustained an L4-5 disk herniation as well as an aggravation of an underlying stenosis at L3-4 and L4-5; that there is a causal relationship between the mechanism of injury as described by Petitioner and the condition of ill-being; that the treatment provided to Petitioner has been medically necessary and reasonable; that Petitioner is not at MMI; and that he recommends a revision L3-4 and L4-5 laminectomy. (P. Ex. "P", p. 6-7) Dr. Singh also opined Petitioner's residual stenosis is currently symptomatic, which necessitates the surgery. (P. Ex. "P", p. 6, under "Causality and Apportionment")

On 6/28/17, Petitioner returned to Dr. Hasan, with continued complaints of pain. Dr. Hasan recommended another lumbar injection and that he continue with work restrictions per Dr. Harvey. (P. Ex. "F") On 7/10/17, Petitioner underwent another lumbar injection. (P. Ex. "O")

On 7/31/17, Petitioner reported some initial relief, but the pain returned in the same distribution as previously. Dr. Hasan recommended that he be re-enrolled in the directed physical therapy and to continue restrictions per Dr. Harvey. (P. Ex. "F")

On 11/9/17, Petitioner returned to Dr. Harvey for further evaluation of ongoing low back and leg pain. His low back pain was radiating to his right leg worse than the left leg. A second injection was recommended prior to consideration of the revision surgery. Another MRI and dynamic study was ordered for surgery planning for the possible lumbar decompression surgery. Petitioner was kept off work. (P. Ex. "G")

On 12/9/17, MRI revealed multilevel spondylosis superimposed upon a developmentally mildly shallow spinal canal. There is moderately severe spinal canal stenosis at L3-4. Stable postsurgical changes left hemilaminectomy and microdiscectomy at L4-5.

On 12/11/17, an echocardiogram was performed, which showed normal LV size and function; no significant valvular pathology was noted. (P. Ex. "O")

To date, Petitioner continues to see Dr. Harvey, who continues to recommend the revision surgery. (P. Ex. "G")

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In support of his decision with regard to issue (F) "Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner is credible.

The Arbitrator finds, by a preponderance of the evidence, that Petitioner has proven that his current condition of ill-being of his lumbar spine is causally related to the injury. The parties have stipulated to the accident. Moreover, the treating physician and Respondent's Section 12 Examiner agree that his current condition of ill-being of his lumbar spine is causally connected to Petitioner's 10/11/15 work injury. Treating physician, Dr. Charles Harvey, opined Petitioner's condition is "secondary to a work related injury." Dr. Harvey even added that Respondent's IME physician, Dr. Kern Singh, "agreed that [Petitioner] sustained a work-related injury that caused his left L4-5 disc herniation as well as exacerbated his underlying spondylosis and stenosis at L3-4 and L4-5;" that Dr. Singh "agreed that [Petitioner] was not yet at MMI and continued to require additional treatment." (P. Ex. "G", office visit, 11/9/17). Thus, in his April 3, 2017 report, Dr. Singh (Respondent's Section 12/IME physician) opined Petitioner's condition of ill-being is residual L3-4 and L4-5 spinal stenosis; that as a result of the 10/11/15 incident, Petitioner sustained an L4-5 disk herniation as well as an aggravation of an underlying stenosis at L3-4 and L4-5; that there is a causal relationship between the mechanism of injury as described by the Petitioner and the condition of ill-being; that the treatment provided to Petitioner has been medically necessary and reasonable; that Petitioner is not at MMI; and that he recommends a revision L3-4 and L4-5 laminectomy. (P. Ex. "P", p. 6-7) Dr. Singh also opined Petitioner's residual stenosis is currently symptomatic, which necessitates the surgery. (P. Ex. "P", p. 6 under "Causality and Apportionment") Further, the Arbitrator notes that Dr. Hasan's treatment and recommendations have been consistent with those of Dr. Harvey and Dr. Singh. Additionally, there is no evidence that Petitioner received treatment for any back complaints or problems prior to his work-related injury of 10/11/15. (T. 26-27)

In support of his decision with regard to issue (J) "Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services? ", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator finds Petitioner has proven, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the medical treatment rendered to him for injuries that resulted from the accident of 10/11/15 was reasonable, necessary, and causally related to such accident. Therefore, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent is liable for payment for such treatment, including reimbursement to Petitioner of out-of-pocket prescription costs. Petitioner's testimony and the treating records support the Arbitrator's finding. Even Respondent's Section 12/IME physician, Dr. Kern Singh, stated that all of Petitioner's treatment has been reasonable and necessary. (P. Ex. "P")

Specifically, Respondent shall pay $948.00 for the reasonable and necessary medical services rendered to Petitioner by Ingalls Memorial Hospital for dates of service 10/11/15 through 11/6/15 (P. Ex. "A"); shall pay $5,163.03 for the reasonable and necessary medical services rendered to Petitioner by Dr. Harvey/Riverside Medical Center for dates of service 11/23/15 through 12/14/17 (P. Exhibits "G" & "O"); and shall reimburse Petitioner $383.21 for the out-of-pocket prescription costs that he paid (P. Ex. "L"). From the total prescription charges claimed of $719.93, the Arbitrator has deducted charges for Metoprolol as this medication is used to treat high blood pressure and is unrelated to the accident. He also deducts the $112.68 charge for DOS 6/16/16, the $35.39 charge for DOS 12/5/16, and the $59.39 charge for DOS 1/28/17, because he does not know what all these medications are. All of the above charges are to be made pursuant to Section 8(a) and subject to Section 8.2 of the Act.

In support of his decision with regard to issue (K) "Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has proven by the preponderance of evidence that he is entitled to prospective medical care and, which consists of a revision surgery that has not only been recommended by Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Harvey, but has been recommended by Respondent's Section 12 Examiner, Dr. Singh. Furthermore, Dr. Hasan's treatment and opinions have been consistent with the recommended surgery.

Respondent argues that at one point, Petitioner indicated that he did not want the revision surgery and discussed the possibility of additional injections. Petitioner testified that it is true, at one point he did not want the revision surgery. He explained that the reason he did not want to have the revision surgery was that the insurance company wasn't giving him any help. So, he testified, if they are not paying his benefits at the time, and he goes under the knife, and he's off work another year without help from them, and now he has a big bill, he is not doing himself any favors. So, after he discussed with his doctor that he was not ready to have that surgery, they discussed additional injections as an alternative.

Petitioner clearly testified at trial that he wants to proceed with the surgery. (T. 69)

Petitioner has had ongoing symptoms and treatment recommendations, including a revision surgery, as a result of his 10/11/15 accident.

Section 8(a) of the Act states that, subject to Section 8.2, the employer shall provide "all the necessary first aid, medical and surgical services, and all necessary medical, surgical and hospital services thereafter incurred, limited, however, to that which is reasonably required to cure or relieve from the effects of the accidental injury ..."

Petitioner's treating physicians and Respondent's IME physician all agree that another surgery is reasonable and necessary. Dr. Singh recommended a revision L3-4 and L4-5 laminectomy. (P. Ex. "P"). Dr. Harvey agreed (P. Ex. "G", office visit, 11/9/17). Therefore, the Arbitrator finds that the prescribed revision surgery is clearly within the scope of Section 8(a), and orders Respondent to authorize and pay for such surgery, subject to Section 8.2 of the Act.

In support of his decision with regard to issue (K) "What temporary benefits are in dispute? TTD and TPD/Modified Duty", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Arbitrator's Exhibit 1 indicates that Petitioner claims that he was temporarily totally disabled from 7/5/17 through 11/19/17, and that Petitioner seeks payment for modified-duty work from 11/20/17 through 1/23/18.

The Arbitrator finds Petitioner has proven by a preponderance of evidence that he is entitled to TTD from 7/5/17 through the date of the hearing, 1/23/18. There are two periods of temporary total disability that are before the Arbitrator:

TTD from 7/5/17 through 11/19/17: Petitioner's TTD benefits were terminated on 7/5/17. During this period, Petitioner cooperated with Respondent with regard to their modified-duty job program. (T. 70-88). As requested, Petitioner reported to the Salvation Army where it was unilaterally determined by that facilities manager that they "did not feel comfortable bringing on Mr. Rizza to do volunteer time in our kitchen." (P. Ex. "Q", bottom p. 2). He was also turned away from the Bridge Teen Center. The representative from that facility stated, "the Bridge Teen Center cannot accommodate Mr. Rizza based on restrictions." (P. Ex. "Q", bottom p. 20) Finally, Petitioner was allowed to start a modified job position at VITAS Healthcare of Chicagoland South on 11/20/17, where he has continued to work light duty without pay (as of the date of the trial before the Arbitrator). Petitioner is entitled to TTD benefits for the entire first period, 7/5/17 through 11/19/17, which is 19-5/7 weeks.

TPD/Modified Duty from 11/20/17 through 1/23/18: There is no dispute as to Petitioner's entitlement to benefits during this period. At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner worked at VITAS Healthcare of Chicagoland South for over two months (at the time of the trial before the Arbitrator), complying with the modified-duty work, without being paid. This is supported by Petitioner's testimony and documentary evidence. (See T. 87-89; P. Ex. "Q", p. 21-27) Besides, Respondent provided no evidence at trial, live or otherwise, to dispute Petitioner's entitlement to payment for modified-duty work, as provided under the Act. In fact, in its response to Petitioner's 19(b) Petition, filed on 12/19/17, Respondent clearly states, "Respondent is not disputing an obligation to pay TPD for the modified duty work. Respondent has or will issue a check for the modified-duty work." (P. Ex. "N", p. 2, ¶2) TTD, as opposed to TPD, is appropriate in that Petitioner was never paid anything for the modified-duty work. Thus, Petitioner is entitled to TTD benefits for the entire second period, 11/20/17 through 1/23/18, which is 9-2/7 weeks.

Therefore, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner is entitled to TTD benefits from 7/5/17 through 1/23/18, which is 29 weeks.

In support of his decision with regard to issue (M) "Should penalties or fees be imposed upon Respondent?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

After the accident but prior to July 5, 2017, Respondent paid Petitioner TTD benefits for which Respondent claims a credit. (AX 1, Section 9) Such credit is to be applied to the pre-July 5, 2017 periods of TTD paid, which are not in dispute.

Inexplicably, effective 7/5/17, Respondent terminated TTD benefits to Petitioner despite the fact that no doctor or other medical professional had released him to return to full-duty work. Dr. Harvey and Dr. Hasan have limited Petitioner to performing light-duty work.

In the 4/3/17 report of Dr. Singh, Respondent's Section 12/IME physician, he states: "I do believe he is capable of returning to work at light duty as delineated above." (P. Ex. "P")

Prior to 7/5/17, Dr. Harvey, Dr. Hasan, and Dr. Singh have all recommended revision surgery for Petitioner's lumbar spine, which Petitioner wishes to undergo. (T. 69)

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner made a good faith effort to participate in the modified-duty work that Respondent requested during a period of time that Petitioner was temporarily totally disabled. (T. 70-88)

After hearing Petitioner's uncontested testimony and after reviewing the evidence, the Arbitrator finds that it was through no fault of Petitioner that he failed to begin working the modified-duty assignments prior to working at VITAS Healthcare.

Petitioner testified that Respondent first requested that he perform light-duty work in June 2017.

Petitioner's unrebutted testimony was also that Respondent requested that he report to a teen center for modified-duty work on 7/10/17, that Petitioner was unable to meet at the teen center on that day, and that he notified three people on 7/7/17, including the nurse case manager, the contact at the teen center, and Amanda of Workbox, that he was unable to do so because he would be receiving an epidural steroid injection on 7/10/17. He testified that he offered to report to the teen center the following Monday, and that on 7/17/17, Amanda left a voice mail message for him.

It appears that that Respondent requested that he report to Bridge Teen Center a second time, on Monday, 10/16/17 at 2:45 p.m. It was determined that the Bridge Teen Center could not accommodate Petitioner's restrictions. (P. Ex. "Q")

Petitioner's Exhibit Q includes three letters from Monterrey Security to Petitioner with regard to the Modified Duty Off-Site (MDOS) Program. Petitioner testified that he received these letters. The Arbitrator admitted this exhibit over Respondent's objection. Each letter is an admission by a party opponent and a statement against interest. (P. Ex. "Q").

Petitioner testified that he reported to the Salvation Army, but it was unilaterally determined by that facilities case manager that they "did not feel comfortable bringing on Mr. Rizza to do volunteer time in our kitchen." (P. Ex. "Q"). Respondent failed to submit any evidence to the contrary.

Finally, at the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was allowed to start working a modified-duty job at VITAS Healthcare of Chicagoland South on 11/20/17 and continued to work there through 1/23/18. However, Respondent has not paid Petitioner for his work there, despite Respondent's statements in the 11/1/17 letter to Petitioner. (T. 87-89; P. Ex. "Q")

Respondent provided no evidence at trial, live or otherwise, to dispute Petitioner's entitlement to payment for modified-duty work, as provided under the Act. In fact, in their response to Petitioner's 19(b) Petition, filed on 12/19/17, Respondent clearly states: "Respondent is not disputing an obligation to pay TPD for the modified-duty work. Respondent has or will issue a check for the modified duty work." (P. Ex. "N", p. 2, ¶2) However, as of the first date of trial before the Arbitrator, 1/23/18, and over a month after Respondent's representation that it is not disputing an obligation to pay, and more than two months since Petitioner started the modified-duty assignment, Respondent had yet to pay Petitioner the benefits to which he is entitled under the Act.

Petitioner did testify on 1/23/18 that some money from Monterrey Security was deposited directly into his account in the last week or so, but he had no idea of the purpose of this money. Petitioner further testified that Monterrey Security is his employer, and that the exact amount of money deposited in his account was $1,416.38. Respondent is entitled to a credit in this amount.

Notwithstanding the deposit by Respondent of $1,416.38 into Petitioner's account a week before trial, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner is entitled to penalties under Sections 19(l) and 19(k) of the Act for the period 7/5/17 through 1/23/18 (29 weeks), and is also entitled to attorney's fees under Section 16 of the Act.

Given Respondent's unreasonable and vexatious delay in issuing benefits to Petitioner to which he is entitled, the Arbitrator awards the following 19(k) penalties that are equal to 50% of the TTD due and owing: $769.92 x 29 x .50 = $11,163.84.

Then, pursuant to the non-discretionary Section 19(l) "late" penalties, the Arbitrator awards an amount equal to 203 days (which are the number of days in 29 weeks) x $30.00/day = $6,090.00.

Next, pursuant to Section 16, the Arbitrator awards attorney's fees in the amount of $11,163.84 x .20 = $2,232.77.

Therefore, the Arbitrator awards Petitioner total penalties and fees of $19,486.61.

In support of his decision with regard to issue (O) "Does Respondent have the right to obtain a second Section 12 examination?", the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator denies Respondent's request for a second independent medical examination with Dr. Kern Singh. The Arbitrator's denial of Respondent's request comes after Respondent exercised its right to a Section 12 examination as provided in the Act (P. Ex. "P") and after the Arbitrator conducted a pre-trial on the issue. (T. 11)

Respondent argued that they are entitled to a second examination with their IME physician, Dr. Singh, because Petitioner's condition had changed. (T. 9-17) Further, Respondent argues that when Petitioner is "seeking additional medical treatment and benefits that Respondent has a statutory right to obtain a Section 12 examination." (T. 10-11) However, nine and a half months before the trial, Respondent did obtain its Section 12 examination, as is their right under the Act, at which time Dr. Singh examined Petitioner and prescribed revision surgery. In fact, it is on the basis of that Section 12 physician's opinion, along with the treating physician's recommendations, that Petitioner requests his statutory right to medical treatment, including the revision surgery. Dr. Singh's based his recommendation for revision surgery in part on the fact that Petitioner "has residual stenosis at L3 to L5 that is currently symptomatic and requires a formal lumbar decompression." (P. Ex. "P", p. 6, under "Causality and Apportionment")

As to a change in his condition, Petitioner, on cross-examination, "interpreted" the 12/9/17 MRI of the lumbar spine as showing three disc bulges to the right as compared with two bulges, which he previously had.

The radiologist's impression of the 12/9/17 MR images is the following:

1. No acute abnormality demonstrated. No significant interval change.
2. Multilevel spondylosis superimposed upon a developmentally mildly shallow spinal canal. There is moderately severe spinal canal stenosis at L3-4.
3. Stable post-surgical changes left hemilaminectomy and microdiscectomy at L4-5. (P.Ex. "O", p. 369)

On 12/9/17, before Petitioner underwent the MRI, he completed a form entitled "Riverside MRI Patient Safety Information Form." In such form, Petitioner described his symptoms as follows: "BACK EXTREAM PAIN AND EXTREAM SCIATICA PAIN IN MY RIGHT LEG. INJURY DATE 10/11/2015." (P. Ex. "O", p. 378)

After a careful review of the records and Petitioner's testimony, the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner's condition has not changed since Dr. Singh examined him.

The Arbitrator further finds that Petitioner credibly explained his reasons for considering, at one point, not to proceed with the revision surgery.

The fact of the matter is that the records indicate Petitioner is in extreme pain, Dr. Singh has recommended the revision surgery, Dr. Harvey continues to recommend it, Dr. Hasan's recommendations are consistent with those of Dr. Harvey, Petitioner testified that he wishes to undergo such surgery, and the Arbitrator finds that this surgery comports with treatment contemplated by Section 8(a) since it is "reasonably required to cure or relieve [him] from the effects of the accidental injury."

The Arbitrator denies Respondent's request for a second Section 12/IME evaluation by Dr. Singh. To allow the same would cause unnecessary and undue delay.

Case No. 12 WC 012947

STATE OF ILLINOIS – ILLINOIS RIVER CC,
Employer/Respondent.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner testified she was employed by the State of Illinois at the Illinois River Correctional Center. The Petitioner was a correctional officer. Petitioner worked for the State of Illinois for approximately 22 years at the time of her alleged work place injury. Petitioner has alleged bilateral carpal and cubital tunnel syndrome caused by repetitive trauma.

Petitioner's primary care physician Dr. Ben Phillips referred the Petitioner to Dr. Yibing Li for an EMG. Dr. Li performed an EMG on January 25, 2010, with a result of mild right carpal tunnel, no left carpal tunnel and no cubital tunnel. Petitioner presented to Dr. Jeffery Garst on September 21, 2010, with complaints of bilateral hand pain and numbness. (PX2) Another EMG was performed, this time by Dr. Xuan Truong on October 22, 2010, which showed severe right carpal tunnel syndrome, moderate left carpal tunnel syndrome and bilateral cubital tunnel syndrome. (PX4). Dr. Garst diagnosed bilateral carpal and cubital tunnel on October 20, 2010, and recommended surgery. (PX2).

Petitioner underwent a left carpal tunnel release and left ulnar nerve transposition performed by Dr. Garst on November 24, 2010. Petitioner underwent a right carpal tunnel release and right ulnar nerve transposition by Dr. Garst on February 3, 2011. (PX2). Petitioner continued her medical treatment with a successful course of treatment in physical therapy. (PX5). Petitioner's treatment concluded with her final visit with Dr. Garst on August 1, 2011. (PX2).

Petitioner underwent an independent medical exam with Dr. James Williams on September 5, 2012. Dr. Williams' impression was Petitioner was status post bilateral carpal and cubital tunnel syndrome and found the treatment provided by Dr. Garst to be reasonable and appropriate. (RX2). Dr. Williams was of the opinion that turning keys, pulling doors, writing, and pushing buttons was neither causative of and/or aggravating to the condition of bilateral carpal and/or tunnel syndrome. (RX2).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Issue C: Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent?

In order to obtain compensation under the Act, a claimant bears the burden of showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he/she was suffered a disabling injury which arose out of and in the course of the employment. Sisbro, Inc. v. industrial Comm'n, 797 N.E.2d 665, 671 (2003

In repetitive trauma claims, a claimant must show that "a work-related accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the preexisting [condition] such that the employee's current condition of ill-being can be said to have been causally connected to the work-related injury and not simply the result of a normal degenerative process of the preexisting condition." St. Elizabeth's Hosptial v. Workers' Compensation Commission, 371 Ill.App.3d 882 (5th Dist. 2007). Each of those factors is variable and highly dependent on the work being performed. In other words, repetitive trauma claims the accident a work activity, which when performed at a specific frequency and intensity over certain duration carries the potential of causing, and in fact causes the injury in question. In repetitive trauma claims medical testimony is incredibly important regarding the issue of causation because inquiry focuses on whether Petitioner's work activities were, over a period of time, sufficient to cause or aggravate the pre-existing deteriorated condition of ill-being. See Nunn v. Illinois Industrial Commission, 157 Ill.App.3d 470 (4th Dist. 1987).

In this case, Petitioner testified regarding her job duties. Petitioner testified that no particular job duty caused her symptoms to be worse. Petitioner could not say that using keys as opposed to using a wand at a metal detector made her condition or pain worse. Petitioner did not know how often she had to use keys during a work day, but Petitioner did state it would vary depending on her assignment. Petitioner testified that she was right hand dominant and testified to the limited job duties requiring use of her left hand and/or arm. Petitioner testified she used her left hand/arm to open doors, answer the telephone, and to use a key toggle on her belt. Petitioner testified that on the date of trial her left hand was in worse condition than her right hand.

Petitioner's treating doctor, Dr. Jeffrey Garst, gave a causation opinion in his testimony. However neither his medical records nor his testimony gave any detailed reasons for his opinion. On cross examination Dr. Garst testified he believed turning keys was the primary job activity performed by Petitioner that led to his causation opinion. (PX2, pages 37-41). However, Dr. Garst, neither in his records nor in his testimony, gave any information about how often Petitioner did any of her job activities and did not know how often, how long, or when Petitioner had to use any type of keys at the facility.

Dr. James Williams completed an independent medical exam of Petitioner on September 5, 2012. Petitioner was post treatment for bilateral carpal and cubital tunnel syndrome. Dr. Williams' medical opinion was that Petitioner's job duties did not cause or aggravate Petitioner's medical condition. Dr. Williams believed Petitioner's hypertension, post-menopausal status, increased BMI, the 1.5 packs of cigarettes a day, her psoriasis, was more causative of her condition of ill-being. Dr. Williams specifically pointed out the psoriasis as it is systemic as opposed to osteoarthritis which only affects one particular joint. Dr. Williams has toured the facility the Petitioner worked at and is familiar with the keys, including Floger Adams keys, and doors employees have to use at the facility. Dr. Williams explained that Petitioner's activities of opening and closing doors are activities which are intermittent and are not sustained or require significant force. Dr. Williams during his independent medical exam took a detailed job description from the Petitioner. Dr. Williams and Petitioner's doctor, Dr. Jeffrey Garst, differ on their causation opinions. In this case, Dr. Williams had a better understanding of Petitioner's job duties due to his more detailed inquiry of Petitioner's job duties and his familiarity with the facility in question, and so, Dr. Williams' opinion is given greater weight than Dr. Garst's opinion on causation.

The Arbitrator adopts Dr. Williams' opinion finding no causation, and further finds the bilateral nature of Petitioner's injuries show Petitioner's risk factors, as opposed to Petitioner's job duties, were the cause of Petitioner's condition of ill-being. Based on the record as a whole, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner has failed to meet her burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that she sustained an accidental injury which arose out of and in the course of her employment. The claim is denied.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Petitioner herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of exposure under the Act, disease covered by the Act, accident, last date of exposure, causal connection, nature and extent, legal and evidentiary errors, and issues pertaining to Sections 1(d) to 1(f) of the Occupational Diseases Act, and being advised of the facts and applicable law, affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

The Commission specially writes to emphasize that it has subject matter jurisdiction over this matter. John Restivo died on May 10, 2018 while his claim was pending. Vera Restivo, as John Restivo's widow and an eligible payee under the Act, substituted in this claim at the time of arbitration. The Commission finds Mrs. Restivo's actions proper and sufficient; nothing further and nothing more was required by Mrs. Restivo to act as a party in this claim. The process and procedure before the Commission shall be as simple and summary as reasonably may be. 820 ILCS 305/16.

In the event of an injured employee's death, the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act provides as follows:

> In a case of specific loss and the subsequent death of such injured employee from other causes than such injury leaving a widow, > widower, or dependents surviving before payment or payment in full for such injury, then the amount due for such injury is payable to the widow or widower and, if there be no widow or widower, then to such dependents, in the proportion which such dependency bears to total dependency. 820 ILCS 305/8(e)19.

The Special Concurrence/Dissent in this case argues that we have no jurisdiction until an estate is opened and a personal representative is named by the Court. We disagree. The Act, our Rules, and case law do not require legitimate beneficiaries or dependents of deceased employees, as defined by the Act, to undertake formal probate or other circuit court proceedings before their claim or claims may be heard and considered by this Commission. This requirement would not only undermine the purpose of the Act, but could potentially open a precarious path wherein beneficiaries not recognized by the Act but recognized through probate and other circuit court proceedings may be in a position to obtain awarded compensation. Further, a contrary position would permit additional litigation and delay of benefits due to a legitimate individual or taker. This is not what the Act intended.

The Commission also notes that various sections of the Act allow rights and benefits to flow to an employee or his or her beneficiaries or dependents after death without the requirement of formal probate or other circuit court proceedings. The Act repeatedly underscores this by indicating "an employee or his dependents. . ." See, e.g., 820 ILCS 305, Sections 1(b)3, 4(d), 5(a), 6(c), 8(a), 8(h), 9, 12, 16(a), and 19(l). In fact, Section 5(a) of the Act makes a point to separate the entities who may be eligible for compensation under the Act and lists them as follows: employee, any individual wholly or partially dependent upon the employee, the legal representatives of the employee's estate, "or any one otherwise entitled to recover damages for such injury." 820 ILCS 305/5(a). Beneficiaries and dependents of deceased employees may act on the deceased employee's claim and request compensation under the Act, separate and apart from a legal representative of the employee's estate. See also 820 ILCS 305/19(j).

The Special Concurrence/Dissent relies upon two recent Appellate Court opinions as support for her position. We believe both cases are distinguishable.

For example, in Bell v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2015 IL App (4th) 140028WC, the petitioner's attorney named the estate of the deceased injured claimant and properly had the claimant's sister appointed as the administrator. The claimant's sister was not eligible to simply substitute in because she did not qualify as a dependent under the Act. The Court clearly explained the difference in that case where there was no spouse or eligible dependents as defined in our Act. This is not applicable to the case at bar where Mrs. Restivo was the Petitioner's widow, an eligible payee under the Act. In referencing Sections 8(e)(19) and 8(h) of the Act, the Court said "By their plain terms, these provisions merely establish to whom benefits will be paid if the employee dies with a spouse or dependents before he has been fully compensated for his work-related injury. They do not limit the ability of a deceased employee's estate to collect accrued, unpaid benefits that were due and owing to the employee when he was alive. Neither provision addresses what happens when an employee dies without leaving a surviving spouse or any other surviving dependents, as in this case." 2015 IL App (4th) 140028WC, ¶ 19 (emphasis added).

In a slightly different case of Ill. State Treasurer v. Estate of Kormany, the Appellate Court held that it had no jurisdiction because the petitioner's attorney named the estate of the deceased injured claimant, but unlike Bell, there was no personal representative or administrator appointed. 2019 IL App (1st) 180644WC, ¶ 2. Hence, the Court had no jurisdiction until that happened. Kormany is distinguishable from the case at bar as there is no evidence that Kormany, the deceased claimant, died with a spouse or dependent as defined by the Act. Again, this scenario does not exist in the instant case.

Thus, although the Commission affirms the Arbitrator's denial of this claim, the Commission finds that it had jurisdiction over this matter. Vera Restivo, as John Restivo's widow and an eligible payee under the Act, was properly substituted in this claim and allowed to continue proceedings in his stead.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed November 16, 2018, is hereby affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

No bond is required for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in the Circuit Court.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent. Unlike the majority, I believe there exists case law directly on point (Illinois State Treasurer, as ex-officio Custodian of the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund v. Estate of Gyula Kormany, A-Tech Stucco EIFS Company, 2019 IL App (1st) 180644WC) which compels the Commission to vacate the decision of the arbitrator until such time as a representative of the Estate of John Restivo is properly appointed and substituted. The majority, in arriving at its decision, attempts to distinguish the Court's holding in Estate of Kormany in order to find that the need to appoint a legal representative runs counter to the law and the purpose of the Act. To be clear, the Commission is an administrative body. As such, it is tasked with applying the law as written by the legislature and subsequently interpreted by the higher courts whether it should agree or not. I believe the Court's holding is clear and should be applied.

In Illinois State Treasurer, as ex-officio Custodian of the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund v. Estate of Gyula Kormany, A-Tech Stucco EIFS Company, 2019 IL App (1st) 180644WC, claimant, Gyula Kormany, filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim alleging he sustained certain injuries while employed by A-Tech Stucco EIFS Company. Prior to the arbitration hearing, claimant died of causes unrelated to his claimed work injuries. The Application was amended to substitute the Estate of Kormany. A decision was issued by the arbitrator which was affirmed by the Commission awarding benefits to the Estate of Kormany.

The Appellate Court vacated the Commission's decision finding that until such time as a properly appointed representative of the Estate of Kormany could be substituted as the petitioner, the Commission's jurisdiction was suspended. Estate of Kormany at ¶ 2. The Court in rendering its decision relied upon Washington v. Caseyville Health Care Association, 284 Ill. App. 3d 97, 100, 672, N.E.2d 34 (1996), which holds "It is axiomatic that for every suit, there must always be a plaintiff, a defendant, and a court. Mitchell v. King, 187 Ill. 452, 55 N.E. 637 (1899). An attorney's employment and his authority is revoked by the death of his client, so an attorney cannot proceed where he does not represent a plaintiff or a defendant. Mitchell, 187 Ill. 452, 55 N.E. 637." Once a claimant dies of unrelated causes, a legal representative must be appointed in order to continue the prosecution of the claim for the benefits to which the claimant was entitled prior to his death.

"The commission is an administrative body created by legislative enactment for the purpose of administering the Workmen's Compensation act. It is not a court and has no inherent powers of a court. It is a non-judicial body. It can only make such orders as are within the powers granted to it by the General Assembly, quoting Trigg v. Industrial Commission, 364 Ill. 581." Michelson v. Industrial Commission, 375 Ill. 462, 466-7, 31 N.E.2d 940 (1941). The Commission does not possess the authority to appoint a legal representative of a deceased claimant whose death is unrelated to his claim for compensation benefits. Certainly, once such representative is properly appointed and substituted, the estate may prosecute the claim and benefits may be awarded as delineated by Sections 8(e)19 and (h) of the Act. As the majority correctly notes, "In referencing Sections 8(e)(19) and 8(h) of the Act, the Court [in Bell v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2015 IL App (4th) 140028WC, ¶ 19] said "By their plain terms, these provisions merely establish to whom benefits will be paid if the employee dies with a spouse or dependents before he has been fully compensated for his work-related injury." Supra, ¶ 7.

The majority mistakenly frames the issue in terms of subject matter jurisdiction, but as the Supreme Court of Illinois noted in Mitchell v. King, 187 Ill. 452, 458-9, 55 N.E. 637 (1900), "the court acquired jurisdiction of him and of the subject matter, but at his death had not acquired jurisdiction of defendant." The Commission unquestionably maintains subject matter jurisdiction under the Act over Mr. Restivo's claim for benefits via his Estate; the Commission's jurisdiction is temporarily suspended pending the appointment of the legal representative.

More importantly, the majority in noting "that various sections of the Act allow rights and benefits to flow to an employee or his or her beneficiaries or dependents after death without the requirement of formal probate or other circuit court proceedings" fails to appreciate that the Act creates two separate causes of action. As the Supreme Court of Illinois noted in Board of Education v. Industrial Commission, 57 Ill. 2d 307, 312, 312 N.E.2d 227 (1974), "Two causes of action are created by Section 8 of the Workmen's Compensation Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. 1969, ch. 48, par. 138.8) – one in favor of the employee for nonfatal injuries and another in favor of his dependents for fatal injuries. [citation omitted]." The Act specifically allows for a separate cause of action in favor of a deceased claimant's dependents to prosecute their claim for benefits where a claimant's work-related injury results in his death. As the Act creates a separate cause of action, the Commission merely recognizes the same, and as the majority notes "no formal probate or circuit court proceedings" are necessary; unlike a claimant's cause of action which abates upon his death until such time a representative is appointed and substituted for a claimant's estate. The Act contains no provision for the Commission to make such appointment/substitution.

As such, pursuant to the Court's holding in Estate of Kormany, I would vacate the decision of the arbitrator until such time as a representative of the Estate of John Restivo is properly appointed and substituted.

In arriving at my decision, I rely heavily on Illinois State Treasurer, as ex-officio Custodian of the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund v. Estate of Gyula Kormany, A-Tech Stucco EIFS Company, 2019 IL App (1st) 180644WC. This opinion was issued on March 29, 2019 and posted to the Appellate Court site on June 5, 2019 as a NRel. Since this posting, the Appellate Court has issued its mandate which has been transmitted to the circuit court and the Commission.

"A withdrawn opinion has no precedential value, since it does not express the views of the court. [citation omitted]." Nationwide Bank & Office Management v. Industrial Commission, 361 Ill. App. 3d 207, 210, 836 N.E.2d 120 (2005). As such, if the Appellate Court withdraws its opinion, I concur with the majority's decision to affirm and adopt the decision of the arbitrator in its entirety.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Arbitrator finds:

Without objection from Respondent, at the time of arbitration, Vera Restivo was substituted as Petitioner in this matter as representative of her husband John Restivo. Vera Restivo resides in Mulkeytown, Illinois. She was married to John Restivo for 47 ½ years. She testified that Mr. Restivo passed away on May 10, 2018. He was 65 years old at that time.

Medical records of Dr. David Knowles were admitted into evidence. Mr. Restivo was seen by Dr. Knowles on November 16, 2011, for an abnormal PSA. On that date Mr. Restivo denied shortness of breath and productive cough. Physical examination of his respiratory system revealed breath sounds were clear bilaterally and his respiratory effort/rhythm showed no retraction and normal rate. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 92-94).

Mr. Restivo underwent biopsies of his prostate on December 14, 2011. In a report dated December 14, 2011, adenocarcinoma of the prostate was confirmed. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, p. 81). He was treated for the prostate cancer with prostatectomy. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, p. 66).

Mr. Restivo continued to deny a productive cough or shortness of breath when seen by Dr. Knowles on December 14, 2011, February 22, 2012, March 22, 2012, June 11, 2012, and September 12, 2012. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 43-45, 54-56, 65-67, 72-74, 77-78, 86-88).

Medical records of West Frankfort Family Practice were admitted into evidence. Mr. Restivo was seen by Dr. Andrew Yochum, on October 29, 2012, to establish care. His review of systems respiratory was negative. He was noted to be a former smoker. Physical examination of the lungs showed they were clear to auscultation with normal respiratory efforts. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, pp. 54-57).

Petitioner returned to West Frankfort Family Practice on February 4, 2013 and, again, his review of systems was negative on February 4, 2013. On that date pulse oximetry was 94%. Physical examination of the lungs showed they were clear to auscultation with normal respiratory effort. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, pp. 42-45). Mr. Restivo was seen at Southern Illinois GI Specialist on February 15, 2013. It was noted that he was "current someday smoker." On review of systems respiratory Mr. Restivo denied cough, dyspnea or shortness of breath with exercise. Auscultation of the chest showed normal breath sounds with no rales, wheezes or rhonchi. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, pp. 39-41).

Mr. Restivo was seen by Dr. Knowles on April 1, 2013. His review of systems respiratory remained negative. Mr. Restivo denied shortness of breath. He had clear breath sounds on examination. Dr. Knowles noted Mr. Restivo continued to be free of his prostate cancer. His social history indicated that Mr. Restivo was a former smoker having smoked for 20 years, 20 years prior. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 36-38). Mr. Restivo again denied shortness of breath and had clear breath sounds bilaterally on July 16, 2013. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 24-26). Mr. Restivo was seen on October 2, 2013. His review of systems respiratory showed no cough or difficulty breathing. On physical examination he had clear breath sounds. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 18-20).

Mr. Restivo's last day in the mine was December 19, 2014. (AX 1)

Mr. Restivo saw Dr. Knowles again on June 19, 2014 and he denied shortness of breath or difficulty breathing, (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 13-15)

Mr. Restivo followed up at Southern Illinois GI on several occasions. The review of his respiratory system continued to be negative and physical examination of the lungs remained clear to auscultation with normal respiratory effort on May 30, 2013, November 21, 2013, April 28, 2014, February 26, 2015, August 6, 2015, September 14, 2015 and December 17, 2015. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 7, pp. 3-5, 7-9, 11-13, 16-18, 23-26, 30-33, 34-37). Mr. Restivo was also seen by Dr. Knowles on January 21, 2015 and August 6, 2015 and during these visits examination of his chest revealed clear breath sounds. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 5, pp. 3- 5, 8-10)

On April 10, 2015 John Restivo signed his Application for Adjustment of Claim in this matter. (AX 2)

On June 7, 2015, Dr. Henry K. Smith, board certified radiologist and B-reader, interpreted a chest x-ray of Mr. Restivo dated May 22, 2015. Dr. Smith interpreted the chest x-ray as positive for pneumoconiosis, profusion 1/0 with P/S opacities in the bilateral mid to lower lung zones. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 2)

On December 1, 2015, and at the request of his attorneys, Mr. Restivo was examined by Dr. Glennon Paul. A written report issued in which Dr. Paul concluded that Mr. Restivo had simple coal workers' pneumoconiosis. His pulmonary function studies were normal. It was Dr. Paul's understanding that Mr. Restivo had worked as a coal miner from 1973 through 2014 and was laid off for five years during that time. He worked underground the entire time, usually at the face, but he spent six months roof bolting. Dr. Paul wrote, "He gets shortness of breath with some exertion but it is hard to tell whether the shortness of breath is from exertion or from his orthopedic problems from his legs. He takes no medicine for it." Mr. Restivo was retired at the time of the exam. He had a past history of prostate cancer and his prostate had been removed. He also has arthritis in his left shoulder and knees. (Ex. 2 to PX 1)

Additional Medical Treatment

Mr. Restivo was seen at SIH on July 21, 2016. His review of systems respiratory was negative. He reported that his knees were worn out. On examination his lungs were clear to auscultation, and he had normal respiratory effort. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 44-47).

On April 26, 2016, and at the request of Respondent's attorney, Dr. Christopher Meyer, board certified radiologist and B-reader, interpreted a May 22, 2015 chest x-ray of Mr. Restivo. Dr. Meyer found no radiographic evidence of coal workers' pneumoconiosis. He noted that, with the exception of a single calcified granuloma, Mr. Restivo's lungs were clear. (Respondent's Exhibit 3)

Deposition of Dr. Christopher Meyer

The deposition of Dr. Meyer was taken on August 12, 2106. Dr. Meyer has been board certified in radiology since 1992. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 8). Dr. Meyer has been a B-reader since 1999. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 20-21). Dr. Meyer was asked to take the B-reading exam by Dr. Jerome Wiot who was part of the original committee that designed the training program which is called the B-reader Program. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 21-22). Dr. Meyer has recently been asked to have a more active academic role in the B-reader program. Dr. Meyer is on the American College of Radiology Pneumoconiosis Task Force which is engaged in redesigning the course, the exam and submitting cases for the B-reader training module and exam. Dr. Meyer testified that the faculty for the B-reader program is typically experienced senior level B-readers. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 33-34). Dr. Meyer testified that radiologists have a 10% higher pass rate on the B-reading exam than other specialties. In Dr. Meyer's opinion, radiologists have a better sense of what the variation of normal is. Dr. Meyer testified that one of the most important parts of the B-reader training and examination is making a distinction between the 0/1 and 1/0 film. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 35-36).

Dr. Meyer testified that the B-reader looks at the lungs to decide whether there are any small nodular opacities or any linear opacities and based on the size and appearance of those small opacities, they are given a letter score. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 23).

Dr. Meyer testified that specific occupational lung diseases are described by specific opacity types. Coal workers' pneumoconiosis is characteristically described as small round opacities. Diseases that cause pulmonary fibrosis, like asbestosis, will be described by small linear opacities. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 29). The distribution of the opacities is also described because different pneumoconioses are seen in different regions of the lung. Coal workers' pneumoconiosis is typically an upper zone predominant process. The last component of the interpretation is the extent of lung involvement or the so-called profusion. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 24). Dr. Meyer testified that the profusion is basically trying to define the density of the small opacities in the lung. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 31).

Dr. Cristopher Meyer reviewed a PA and lateral chest radiograph of Mr. Restivo dated May 22, 2015, from Central Illinois Allergy and Respiratory. Dr. Meyer initially reviewed copy films. He subsequently reviewed the same examination but the original film and not the copy exam. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 41). Dr. Meyer testified the copy films were quality 3 due to severe overexposure. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 41-42). Dr. Meyer testified that the original examination was quality 1. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 42; Respondent's Exhibit No. 3). Dr. Meyer testified that he saw a calcified granuloma in the right lower lobe of the lung. He testified that there were no small opacities. He testified that with the exception of a single calcified granuloma, the lungs were clear. He testified that there were no findings of coal workers' pneumoconiosis. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, p. 42).

Additional Medical Treatment

On September 13, 2016, and at the request of Respondent's attorneys, Dr. Castle reviewed a chest x-ray dated May 22, 2015, from Central Illinois Allergy and Respiratory Services. He found no evidence of coal workers' pneumoconiosis but he did note evidence of granulomatous disease. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, deposition exhibit).

Deposition of Dr. Paul

The deposition of Dr. Paul was taken on March 14, 2017. Dr. Paul testified that he saw Mr. Restivo on December 1, 2015, at the request of Mr. Restivo's attorney. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, Deposition Exhibit No. 2). Dr. Paul testified that he was the Director of St. John's Respiratory Therapy and Clinical Assistant Professor of Medicine at the SIU Medical School. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 6). Dr. Paul further testified that he was the Senior Physician at the Central Illinois Allergy and Respiratory Clinic. Those physicians specialize in Allergy and Pulmonary Disease and they take care of patients with respiratory diseases, critical care, allergic diseases and some internal medicine problems. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 7). Dr. Paul is semi-retired and does work comp examinations. Dr. Paul supervises a DUI Clinic's medical treatment program.

(Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 43-44). Dr. Paul is board certified in asthma, allergy and immunology. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 9). Dr. Paul testified that at the time he did his fellowship in 1970 to 1972 there were not any pulmonary fellowships developed. He testified that it was strictly in allergy, asthma and respiratory disease. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 9-10). Dr. Paul is not an A-reader or a B-reader of films. He has never been board certified in pulmonary disease. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 43). Dr. Paul has seen a hundred or more individuals at the request of Petitioner's counsel. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 38).

Dr. Paul testified that Mr. Restivo reported working 37 ½ years in the coal mines with all of those years being underground. Mr. Restivo reported shortness of breath with some exertion, but it was hard for him to tell whether that was because of his orthopedic problems related to his legs or from his lungs. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 11). Mr. Restivo did not report to Dr. Paul that he was taking any pulmonary medication. Mr. Restivo reported that he smoked an occasional cigarette when he was younger, but he never smoked more than two cigarettes a day. Dr. Paul did not consider Mr. Restivo's smoking history to be significant in terms of his pulmonary health. Dr. Paul's methacholine testing was negative. Mr. Restivo's spirometry was within the range of normal. Dr. Paul testified that Mr. Restivo's diffusing capacity was slightly below normal. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 12). Dr. Paul testified that given all the data that he had concerning Mr. Restivo, it was his opinion that Mr. Restivo had coal workers' pneumoconiosis caused by inhalation of coal dust. Dr. Paul testified that in light of the diagnosis of coal workers' pneumoconiosis, Mr. Restivo could not have any further exposure to the environment of a coal mine without endangering his health. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 14).

Dr. Paul testified that in order to have pneumoconiosis, one must have, in addition to coal mine dust deposited in his lungs, a tissue reaction to it. That tissue reaction is called scarring or fibrosis. Dr. Paul testified that by definition if one has coal workers' pneumoconiosis, he would have some impairment in the function of his lung at the site of the scarring whether it can be measured by spirometry or not. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 17-18). Dr. Paul testified that it is possible for one to have injury or disease in his lung despite having normal pulmonary function test results. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 18). Dr. Paul testified that a person could have radiographically significant coal workers' pneumoconiosis and normal pulmonary function testing, normal blood gases and normal physical examination of the chest. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 21). Dr. Paul testified that a person could have coal workers' pneumoconiosis and have a normal chest x-ray. He testified that coal workers' pneumoconiosis can be found on pathology and autopsy and not show up on the chest x-ray. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 35). Dr. Paul testified that a negative x-ray can never rule out the existence of coal workers' pneumoconiosis. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 36).

Dr. Paul testified that he did not get a history from Mr. Restivo that he had ever taken breathing medication. He testified that the past medical history that he got from Mr. Restivo did not include respiratory disease. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 39). Dr. Paul did not review medical records regarding Mr. Restivo. Dr. Paul testified that Mr. Restivo did not tell him that he left coal mining when he did on the advice of a physician or that he was unable to do the duties of his last job in the coal mine. Dr. Paul testified that the spirometry performed on Mr. Restivo did not reveal an obstruction. With regard to the lung volumes, there was no evidence of restriction. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 40). Dr. Paul did not know what the American Thoracic Society standards were for inhalation time of the tracer gas in diffusion capacity testing. He did not know the hold time for the tracer gas. He testified that the technicians who performed the testing under his direction would know that information. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 41). Dr. Paul testified that if an impairment in Mr. Restivo's diffusion capacity was due to scarring of the lung from his inhalation of dust in the coal mine that would be permanent. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 42.)

Dr. Paul did not know the date of the chest x-ray that he reviewed. Dr. Paul noted that with regard to what lung zones were involved, he recorded that changes were throughout both lung fields. By this he meant it involved the entire chest x-ray. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, pp. 42-43). Dr. Paul testified that he does not describe the opacity types because if there are opacities and somebody was a coal miner, the opacities have to be due to coal dust. Dr. Paul testified that he does not measure profusion. (Petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, p. 43).

Additional Medical Treatment

Mr. Restivo was seen at SIH on May 25, 2017, with complaints of dizziness and fatigue after working outside in the heat and drinking less water than normal. On examination his lungs were clear to auscultation with normal respiratory effort. He was counseled regarding the importance of being hydrated. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 30-33). On May 30, 2017, and June 2, 2017, Mr. Restivo's lungs were clear to auscultation with normal respiratory effort. On those dates he reported the weakness and dizziness had gone away after he increased his water intake. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 22-29). Mr. Restivo had normal respiratory effort and normal breath sounds on June 13, 2017. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 2-4). When seen on July 13, 2017, he reported no shortness of breath. He reported that his knees were shot and that he was going to consider surgery on same after he was eligible for Medicare. His review of systems respiratory was negative for chest tightness, shortness of breath and wheezing. On examination his respiratory effort was normal as were his breath sounds. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 4-5).

Deposition of Dr. James Castle

Dr. Castle was deposed on August 4, 2017. He testified that, at the request of Respondent's counsel, Dr. James R. Castle reviewed medical records and a chest x-ray regarding Mr. Restivo. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 21). Dr. Castle is a pulmonologist and is board certified in internal medicine and the subspecialty of pulmonary disease. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 4). Board certification in pulmonary disease was first established in 1941. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 40). Dr. Castle practiced in Roanoke, Virginia for 30 years. His practice was limited to pulmonary disease and chest disease, which encompassed critical care medicine. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 7). Dr. Castle's practice included patients with occupational lung disease. He had some patients in his practice who had coal workers' pneumoconiosis. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 8). Dr. Castle was first certified as a B-reader in 1985. He was continuously certified as a B-reader until his certification expired on June 30, 2017. (Respondent's Exhibit NO. 2, pp. 13-14).

Dr. Castle reviewed a chest x-ray dated May 22, 2015, from Central Illinois Allergy and Respiratory Services. Dr. Castle testified that there were no parenchymal abnormalities consistent with pneumoconiosis on that chest x-ray. He did note evidence of granulomatous disease. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 30). Dr. Castle testified that for a proper reading of a chest x-ray for pneumoconiosis one must first determine the quality of the film and then determine whether or not there are any parenchymal abnormalities consistent with the disease. If there are, the reader categorizes those abnormalities based on their size and shape. The reader then determines in what area of the lung the opacities are located. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 30-31). Dr. Castle testified that the most important part of the interpretation is determining the profusion. This is done by comparing the film to the ILO standard films and determining the exact profusion and noting that on the 12-point scale. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 31). Dr. Castle testified that it is very unlikely for simple coal workers' pneumoconiosis to progress once the exposure ceases. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 31). Dr. Castle testified that there was not any pathologic evidence of pneumoconiosis in the medical records that he reviewed. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 30).

Dr. Castle testified that there is no such thing as radiographically apparent pulmonary impairment. The American Thoracic Society has indicated that the only way to determine pulmonary impairment is by doing valid physiologic studies. Dr. Castle testified that he agrees with the position taken by the American Thoracic Society that an older worker with a mild pneumoconiosis may be at low risk for working in currently permissible exposure levels until he reaches retirement age. Dr. Castle testified that there is no clinical significance to subradiographic pneumoconiosis in that it means that there has been a limited or inadequate amount of dust retention to cause radiographic changes and there would be no impairment related to that. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 31-32). Dr. Castle testified that he disagreed with Dr. Paul's testimony that anybody that has coal dust in his lungs has pneumoconiosis. He testified that it would be fair to say that anyone that has a significant history of coal mining probably has some coal dust in his lungs. He testified that only a minority of coal miners who have had a significant exposure to coal dust develop pneumoconiosis. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 32-33). Dr. Castle disagreed with Dr. Paul's testimony that if a coal miner has opacities in his lungs it has to be the result of coal dust. Dr. Castle testified that an opacity may be due to a number of other things like granulomatous disease, which can cause a similar appearance. He testified that the opacities of coal workers' pneumoconiosis are consistent with things such as tuberculosis, sarcoidosis or a number of infectious problems. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 34). Dr. Castle testified that Mr. Restivo's diffusion capacity measured on March 24, 2016, at Methodist Hospital was 108%. He testified that this indicates there would not be any significant clinical scarring of the lung. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 32).

Dr. Castle testified that based upon a thorough review of all the data, he concluded that Mr. Restivo did not suffer from any pulmonary disease or impairment occurring as a result of his occupational exposure to coal mine dust. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 36). He testified that Mr. Restivo worked in or around the underground mining industry for a sufficient enough time to develop coal workers' pneumoconiosis if he were a susceptible host. Dr. Castle testified that another risk factor for the development of pulmonary disease was that of tobacco abuse. He testified that the tobacco use history in Mr. Restivo's record is too vague for him to accurately determine Mr. Restivo's tobacco smoking history. He testified that another risk factor for the development of pulmonary symptoms and disease is that of obesity. Mr. Restivo had an elevated BMI greater than 30 or 31 on most occasions. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 36-37). Dr. Castle noted that Dr. Henry Smith reviewed the same x-ray and described minimal changes consistent with pneumoconiosis in the middle and lower lung zones. Dr. Smith classified the film as 1/0 which meant he also considered that the film may be negative. Dr. Castle testified that having lesions present in the middle and lower lung zones was somewhat atypical to coal workers' pneumoconiosis. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 38).

Dr. Castle testified that the physiologic study obtained by Dr. Paul was a valid study and was entirely normal showing no evidence of any functional abnormalities. Mr. Restivo had no evidence of obstruction or restriction. The diffusing capacity from Methodist Hospital was also entirely normal. Dr. Castle opined that Mr. Restivo did not have any functional respiratory impairment whatsoever from any cause including coal workers' pneumoconiosis. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 39). Dr. Castle testified that he is familiar with the AMA Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment Sixth Edition. When he applied the results from the valid objective testing on Mr. Restivo to Table 5-4 of the Guides, Mr. Restivo fell in Class 0 impairment. Dr. Castle testified that Mr. Restivo was capable of heavy manual labor from a ventilatory standpoint. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 39-40).

Dr. Castle testified that Mr. Restivo could have coal worker's pneumoconiosis notwithstanding a negative chest x-ray. He testified that coal workers' pneumoconiosis can be a latent and progressive disease. He testified that pneumoconiosis could be seen on a chest x-ray even in the year after the miner leaves the coal mine presuming that it was present at the time he left the coal mine. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 42). Dr.Castle testified that no matter what he saw on Mr. Restivo's chest x-ray, it would not rule out the possibility that Mr. Restivo could have pneumoconiosis that could be found pathologically or at autopsy. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 47). Dr. Castle testified that recent studies have shown that as many as 50% of long term coal miners have pathological coal workers' pneumoconiosis that was not appreciated by a radiographic study during their life. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 48). Dr. Castle testified that coal workers' pneumoconiosis is basically an x-ray diagnosis except for the caveat about pathology. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, p. 51). Dr. Castle testified that coal workers' pneumoconiosis is basically trapped coal dust in a part of the lung which ends up wrapped in scar tissue and can be accompanied by emphysema around it. Dr. Castle testified that the tissue affected by the scarring and emphysema cannot perform the function of normal healthy lung tissue. He testified that by definition, if a person has coal workers' pneumoconiosis, he would have an impairment in the function of his lungs at the site of the scarring. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 2, pp. 52-53)

Additional Medical Treatment

Mr. Restivo continued to treat at SIH. His review of systems respiratory remained negative for cough and shortness of breath, and his pulmonary examination was normal on November 9, 2017 and, again, on February 15, 2018. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 6-10). Mr. Restivo was seen on April 5, 2018, for pre-op clearance for his bilateral total knee replacements. His review of systems respiratory was negative for cough, shortness of breath and wheezing. There were no abnormalities on physical examination of the chest. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 10, pp. 11-13).

Medical records of Memorial Hospital of Carbondale were admitted into evidence. Mr. Restivo was admitted to Memorial Hospital on May 3, 2018. On that date he reported chest pain that started approximately one and a half weeks earlier. He had been having chest pain daily with radiation to his elbows bilaterally. Following the appointment with his orthopedic physician and rehab at Herrin Hospital, he reported to the Herrin Hospital ER for chest pain. STEMI was called at Herrin ER with acute anterior wall MI and Mr. Restivo was transferred to Memorial Hospital for emergent cardiac cath. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 13). On examination his lungs were clear to auscultation bilaterally and his respiratory effort was normal. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 16). His review of systems respiratory was negative for shortness of breath and cough. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 15). During a cardiac catheterization an occlusion was found and a stent was placed. Following the initial catheterization he had chest pain which resulted in another cardiac catheterization with patent stent findings. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 19). On May 7, 2018, Mr. Restivo was talking with his son when he suddenly was unable to talk and when he was able to speak his speech was slurred. Code stroke was called. Mr. Restivo underwent a CT of the brain on May 7. Same revealed questionable chronic lacunar infarction of the left basal ganglia. He had no intracranial hemorrhage or mass. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 119). The discharge note indicated that on May 7, 2018, Mr. Restivo was found to have right cerebrellar and right temporal ischemia. On May 8, 2018, code blue was called due to sustained VT. He received CPR and multiple shocks. He was intubated and transferred to ICU. Mr. Restivo was ultimately transferred to Barnes-Jewish Hospital via helicopter. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 9, p. 32).

Medical records of Barnes-Jewish Hospital were admitted into evidence. Mr. Restivo was admitted to Barnes-Jewish Hospital on May 9, 2018, as a transfer from an outside hospital for "cardiogenic shock following VT/VF arrest." (Respondent's Exhibit No. 6, p. 45). According to the History and Physical, on May 8, Mr. Restivo went into VT/FV arrest and was reportedly coded for 1.5 hours. During the code, he received CPR, multiple rounds of EPI and was shocked eight times. He was intubated during the code. Following cardiac arrest, Mr. Restivo was persistently hypotensive. He was transferred to Barnes-Jewish Hospital via helicopter for further management. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 6, p. 45). Mr. Restivo's hemodynamics initially improved, however, overnight on May 9, he had worsening hypotension and worsening hypoxemia. On the morning of May 10, he had recurrent episodes of VT/SVT requiring shocks. Cardiology was again consulted and they felt that Mr. Restivo was not a candidate for escalation of care. Mr. Restivo was made DNR/do not reintubate. He was transitioned to comfort care and passed away on May 10, 2018. The preliminary cause of death was listed as cardiogenic shock. Secondary diagnoses included acute hypoxemic respiratory failure, acute kidney injury, anemia, bacteremia, cardiac arrhythmia, cerebral vascular accident, coronary artery disease, ischemic cardiomyopathy and ventricular tachycardia. (Respondent's Exhibit No. 6, p. 3).

Mr. Restivo's case went to arbitration on September 20, 2018. Mrs. Restivo, Petitioner, was the sole witness testifying at the hearing.

Mrs. Restivo testified that her husband worked in the mines for 30 years. She testified that he started in the mines in 1970. He worked at Old Ben Coal Company beginning in 1973. He worked for Freeman from 1976 to 1978. He worked at Old Ben from 1978 to 1983. He worked for Specialty Mine Services from 1983 to 1985 and at Arch Mine from 1985 to 1996. Mr. Restivo worked for American Coal from 1996 to 2002. He worked at Alliance from 2003 to 2006. Mr. Restivo worked at Mach Mining from November 2006 to June 2011. He returned to Mach Mining from September 2011 to December 19, 2014. Mrs. Restivo testified that this was her husband's last day of coal mine employment because he retired. She testified that he was employed with Respondent on that date. Mrs. Restivo testified that during his coal mining career her husband was a shuttle car operator and miner operator which meant he ran a machine that cut the coal out of the face of the mine.

Mrs. Restivo testified that her husband's primary care physician was Dr. Yochum. Mrs. Restivo testified that when her husband came home from work his clothes were dusty and dirty. She testified that it was difficult to wash his clothes. Sometimes she had to wash the washer after she washed his clothes because of the dust.

Mrs. Restivo testified that she observed her husband having difficulty breathing. She testified that he did not have the stamina to do a lot of things that he used to do. She testified that they had built their house themselves, but he did not have the capacity to do that anymore. She testified that he used to hunt and fish a lot but he had just about quit both of those activities because he was afraid to be out by himself with his breathing. She testified that he had slowed down a bunch with regard to playing with the grandkids.

Mrs. Restivo testified that Mr. Restivo smoked in his 20s. She testified that he had quit in the early 1970s. She testified that when he smoked he probably smoked a pack a week. She testified that more recently he might have smoked once or twice a year with a grandson. She testified that her husband had prostate cancer which had resolved. She testified that he also had high blood pressure.

Mrs. Restivo testified that after he retired, her husband did not work again. He signed up for Social Security at the time of his retirement. She testified that her husband also had significant problems with his knees. She testified that they were a problem for him at the time of his retirement. She testified that he needed them replaced. She testified that his knees cut short a lot of his activity as well. She testified that he put off getting his knee replacement until he received Medicare. He had both knees replaced on April 18, 2018. She testified that soon after that surgery he had a significant deterioration in his health. She testified that he had a heart attack and suffered renal failure and was put on dialysis, and then he had a stroke. She testified that they sent him to St. Louis after he had the stroke and that is where he passed away.

The Arbitrator concludes:

1. Mr. Restivo failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that he sustained an occupational disease arising out of and in the course of his employment. In so concluding, the Arbitrator finds the B-readings by Drs. Meyer and Castle to be more persuasive. In particular the Arbitrator finds the testimony of Dr. Meyer to be insightful, informative and persuasive. His background and experience in radiology, B-reading and coal workers' pneumoconiosis is impressive and beyond that of Drs. Smith and Paul. Dr. Meyer testified to the training received in the B-reading course. Dr. Paul does not have that training. Drs. Meyer and Castle are both B-readers and have been recertified as same numerous time. Coal workers' pneumoconiosis is a diagnosis made by chest x-ray interpretation absent pathologic evidence. Three B-readers interpreted the 2015 chest x-ray. Two of them found it to be negative for coal workers' pneumoconiosis. Dr. Meyer testified that coal workers' pneumoconiosis is generally an upper lung zone predominant process. Petitioner offered no evidence to contradict this opinion. Dr. Smith noted opacities only in the middle and lower lung zones bilaterally. His interpretation is not consistent with the general progression of coal workers' pneumoconiosis. Dr. Paul testified that all of Mr. Restivo's lungs were involved. Dr. Meyer explained that pneumoconiosis is typically an upper lung zone process. Additionally, while miners with significant years of mining may have some coal dust in their lungs, not all of them have a tissue reaction to the coal dust and develop coal workers' pneumoconiosis. All of the experts agree that CWP is diagnosed either through x-rays or pathological exam/autopsy. No pathological exam/autopsy was undertaken in this case. Mr. Restivo's primary cause of death was cardiogenic shock.

2. The Arbitrator notes that over the years Mr. Restivo's medical records did not include complaints of coughing or shortness of breath. Mr. Restivo did complain to Dr. Paul of dyspnea on exertion but did not complain of cough with sputum. The Arbitrator gives more weight to the medical entries than Mr. Restivo's complaints to Dr. Paul as the latter may have been motivated to support his claim.

3. The Arbitrator also notes that the date of accident/exposure therein was Mr. Restivo's date of retirement from the mine. His retirement was not associated with any specific breathing problems.

4. Petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Restivo's condition of ill-being was causally connected to his employment.

5. Petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Restivo suffered a timely disablement under Section 1(f) of the Occupational Diseases Act.

6. Petitioner's claim for benefits is denied and no benefits are awarded.

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the parties herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of medical expenses, causal connection and permanent partial disability, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

The Commission affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, in part, except the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award of 3.5% loss of use of a person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 for the cervical spine and vacates the award of 3.5% loss of use of a person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 for the lumbar spine.

The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's finding that the Petitioner's cervical spine injury was a minor temporary aggravation of a pre-existing condition, and that shortly thereafter she returned to her baseline pre-existing condition by November 19, 2013, and that any future treatment for the cervical spine is not related to the July 12, 2013, accident.

The Commission further finds that Petitioner's lumbar spine injury was also a temporary aggravation of a pre-existing condition, and that shortly thereafter she returned to her baseline preexisting condition by November 19, 2013, and that any future treatment for the lumbar spine is not related to the July 12, 2013, accident.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

There is no dispute that Petitioner had both pre-existing cervical and lumbar pain complaints, treatment and in the case of her cervical spine, a pre-accident surgical recommendation.

> It has long been recognized that, in preexisting condition cases, recovery will depend on the employee's ability to show that a work-related accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the pre-existing disease such that the employee's current condition of ill-being can be said to have been causally connected to the work-related injury and not simply the result of a normal degenerative process of the pre-existing condition. *Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Cervical Spine

The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator that the Petitioner sustained a minor temporary aggravation of her pre-existing cervical condition, however, the Commission finds that Petitioner returned to her baseline condition and she failed to prove her current condition warrants an award of permanent partial disability. The Commission relies upon the Petitioner's testimony that in June 2012, eleven months before the date of accident, her primary care physician, Dr. Kevin Oestmann, referred her to surgeon Dr. Jon Taveau. (T, pp. 37-39) Dr. Taveau examined Petitioner and noted a history of onset of neck pain two years ago. He noted symptoms of constant pain in her neck, both shoulders, both sides of her upper back and radiating pain into both arms and to all her fingers. (RX9, p. 46) The frequency of pain was constant. The pain in 2012 was described as aching, piercing, sharp and tingling and aggravated by the following activities: bending, coughing, driving, exertion, flexion, lifting, lying down, pushing, rotation, sneezing, straining, turning head, twisting and working. Associated symptoms include decreased mobility, difficulty sleeping, muscle spasm, tenderness, tingling and weakness. She had severe neck pain, arm pain, numbness, tingling and Lhermitte's symptom with cervical range of motion. (RX9, p. 46) Petitioner's physical exam revealed positive Spurling sign, positive limited range of motion especially with rotation left and her recent MRI of her cervical spine showed a disc osteophyte complex at C6-7. Dr. Taveau recommended either a Prestige or ACDF. He ordered a repeat EMG with NCV and MRI, flexion extension views, prior to her follow-up appointment. Petitioner did not want to proceed with surgery at that time. (RX9, p. 48)

A cervical MRI was repeated on October 10, 2012. Compared to the October 5, 2011 exam, the minor anterolisthesis of C4 on C5 was new and the facet arthropathy on the left at C4-C5 and on the right at C5-C6 worsened. (RX9, p. 44) On November 7, 2012, Dr. Taveau's history documents a disk osteophyte complex at C6-7 and instability and a disk osteophyte complex at C4-5. Petitioner continued to report severe neck pain, arm pain, numbness, tingling and Lhermitte's symptom with cervical range of motion. She reported having been symptomatic for two years. (RX9, p. 40)

On November 16, 2012, the Petitioner underwent an EMG/NCS where the history described left-sided neck pain, and left upper extremity radiating and shooting pain with tingling and numbness involving her hand. (RX9, p. 57) At the follow-up appointment on November 20, 2012, Dr. Taveau stated that the recent imaging of the cervical spine revealed large disk osteophyte complexes at C4-C5 and C6-7 with anterior subluxation of C4-5, 2 mm. Flexion extension views revealed worsening of her C4-5 subluxation to 4 mm with flexion. (RX9, p. 42)

After the work-related accident of July 12, 2013, Petitioner provided a history in the emergency room at Memorial Hospital in Carbondale. She complained of pain radiating down her right lower extremity and tenderness in her neck, back and left upper extremity. Petitioner ultimately was referred back to Dr. Taveau. The first consult, on August 19, 2013, notes that an established patient returned with recent injury at work. She reported she still has severe neck pain, arm pain, numbness, tingling and Lhermitte's symptom with cervical range of motion. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator that the symptoms described by Dr. Taveau on June 27, 2012, and at all of his office visits preceding the work accident mirrored the pain complaints Petitioner described after the accident.

Petitioner underwent a section 12 evaluation with Dr. Andrew Zelby, a neurosurgeon, at Respondent's request on June 3, 2015. (RX1, p. 4) Petitioner reported a history of a "little" neck pain in 2012, and that she claimed that neck pain and her pre-accident low back pain were much less severe than following her work accident. (RX1, pp. 8-9) Dr. Zelby testified that he reviewed Dr. Taveau's records and on June 27, 2012, Dr. Taveau documented Petitioner's complaints of neck pain and tingling which radiated to both shoulders and down both arms to the thumbs and index fingers and down the upper back. At that time, Dr. Taveau recommended either a disc arthroplasty or an anterior cervical discectomy and fusion. (RX1, pp. 19-20) Dr. Taveau referred Petitioner for another cervical spine MRI that she underwent on October 10, 2012. Id. Petitioner underwent a cervical-spine MRI on August 9, 2013, after her work-related accident, which revealed no interval change from the October 10, 2012, MRI scan. (RX1, pp. 20-21) Furthermore, Dr. Zelby testified that, "The objective physical findings in my exam did not correlate to any of the pathology seen on any of Ms. Little's cervical scans either before or after the accident." (RX1, p. 21) Dr. Zelby did not find any evidence of any aggravation of any pre-existing degenerative condition in Petitioner's cervical spine. (RX1, p. 22)

Dr. Zelby found that Petitioner's reported pain of 8 constantly on a scale of 1/10 was inconsistent with his observations of her movements and at rest. (RX1, p. 10) Petitioner exhibited multiple Waddell findings, "a symptom amplification, inconsistency" after Petitioner reported decreased sensation in the entire upper left extremity, the entire left foreleg, and findings on vibratory sensation performed with a tuning fork were also non-anatomic. (RX1, pp. 14-15) Dr. Zelby noted that Petitioner's inconsistent behavioral responses, the Waddell signs, were positive for pain on simulation and non-anatomic sensory changes. (RX1, pp. 15-16)

Dr. Jeffrey Jones, Petitioner's neurosurgeon, testified on behalf of Petitioner. Dr. Jones testified he had no record of Petitioner being symptomatic with regard to either her neck or her lumbar spine prior to the work accident. He thought "clinically, before the accident she really didn't have severe problems and after the accident she did." (PX19, pp. 18-19) Dr. Jones provided an equivocal opinion that the incident on July 12, 2013, "probably" aggravated the underlying condition and caused her to become symptomatic in her cervical and lumbar spines. He testified, "But we don't really have any films of her before the incident that I know of anyway, so it's hard to say whether the slip was there or not. But surely, the symptoms were much more severe after it so it's at least an exacerbation of what she had." (PX1, pp. 19-20) Dr. Jones testified that Petitioner did really well after her shoulder surgery and he noted Petitioner's neck was no longer an issue. (PX19, p. 34)

The Commission finds Dr. Jones's causation opinion is not credible and is entitled to little weight. He did not review the pre-accident treating records for her cervical condition. See, e.g., Sunny Hill of Will County v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2014 IL App (3d) 130028WC, 14 N.E.3d 16, 383 Ill. Dec. 184 (Expert opinions must be supported by facts and are only as valid as the facts underlying them.)

The Commission finds that Dr. Zelby's causation opinion is more persuasive than Dr. Jones' opinion regarding Petitioner's cervical spine condition because Dr. Jones was not aware of Petitioner's prior extensive pre-existing treatment or diagnostic tests, either pre-dating or immediately post-dating the accident.

Therefore, the Commission finds that the Petitioner suffered a minor temporary aggravation of her pre-existing cervical spine condition and that her cervical spine condition was at baseline by November 19, 2013, with no evidence of permanent disability from the work accident of July 12, 2013. Therefore, the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award of permanent partial disability for Petitioner's cervical spine condition.

Lumbar Spine

The Commission takes note of Petitioner's pre-accident lumbar back complaints. The Respondent requested a utilization review report of both prospective and retrospective medical treatments provided for Petitioner's cervical, thoracic and lumbar spine and left shoulder conditions that was authored by Dr. Michael Treister. (RX7) Dr. Treister testified on December 21, 2015, regarding his records review and the report he authored. (RX6) According to Dr. Treister, Petitioner saw her primary care physician, Dr. Oestmann on October 17, 2012, nine months prior to the work incident and at that time she was diagnosed with chronic back pain, arthralgias (joint aches) along with cervical disc degeneration. Dr. Oestmann noted that she was taking Aleve for symptom relief. (RX7, p. 6) On October 19, 2012, Petitioner went to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale for x-rays of her lumbosacral and thoracic spines. The diagnosis for the diagnostics states: "a patient history of backache." The radiologist documented facet arthropathy in the lumbar films at L4-L5 and L5-S1. Dr. Treister explained "Facet arthropathy is the fingerprint of degenerative disc disease." (RX7, p. 6)

SOTHCC0005

Dr. Treister reviewed both the thoracic and lumbar spine x-rays on CD and opined the lumbar x-ray showed clear evidence of mild L1-L2 disc space narrowing and the thoracic spine showed extensive anterior osteophyte formation throughout the thoracic spine with a couple of lower levels more involved than most of the others. Dr. Treister noted that Petitioner did not undergo the thoracic spine MRI as had been ordered by Dr. Taveau after the November 7, 2012, office visit. (RX7, p. 7)

Dr. Treister opined that Dr. Oestmann's documentation of Petitioner's complaints of tenderness in the thoracic and lumbar spine and widespread tenderness should be considered a Waddell sign noting that there was no documentation of any focal spinal tenderness, muscle spasm or motion restrictions. (RX7) Dr. Treister further noted that Petitioner misrepresented her history to a number of different physicians. (RX6, p. 59) The Commission finds it significant and is persuaded by Dr. Treister's comments regarding Petitioner's veracity: "Based upon my review of these records I wouldn't believe a word that this patient said." This opinion comports with both Dr. Zelby's and Dr. Hayward's findings that Petitioner had multiple positive Waddell signs on exam, as noted below. (PX8; RX8)

Petitioner underwent a section 12 evaluation with Dr. Andrew Zelby, a neurosurgeon, at Respondent's request on June 3, 2015. (RX1, p. 4) Petitioner reported that her pre-accident low back pain was much less severe than following her work accident. (RX1, pp. 8-9) Dr. Zelby found that Petitioner's reported pain of 8 constantly on a scale of 1/10 was inconsistent with his observations of her movements and at rest. (RX1, p. 10) Petitioner exhibited multiple Waddell findings, "a symptom amplification, inconsistency" after Petitioner reported decreased sensation in the entire upper left extremity, the entire left foreleg, and findings on vibratory sensation performed with a tuning fork were also non-anatomic. (RX1, pp. 14-15)

Dr. Zelby opined that Petitioner had a normal lumbar spine exam and a normal neurologic exam. He testified that she does have some degeneration and some disc protrusions, but nonetheless she was neurologically normal. (RX1, pp. 20-21)

Dr. Zelby testified continued treatment of her lumbar spine is not reasonable or necessary. He further opined that she does have a small paracentral right disc protrusion at L1-2 but she has no symptoms or findings on exam suggestive of an L2 radiculopathy. She did have symptoms that questionably followed an L4 dermatomal distribution but the small far lateral disc at L3-4 on the left would result in an L3 radiculopathy not an L4 radiculopathy. They are not causing any symptoms or any neurologic abnormalities and represent no clinical problems. (RX1, p. 24) Even with an EMG/NCV positive for findings at L1 and L2, that finding has little meaning in terms of guiding the care and treatment of the patient. ...[T]hat would not be an indication for lumbar surgical intervention for the same reason. (RX1, p. 50)

Further, the Commission finds Dr. Hayward's records provide evidence of a lack of correlation between Petitioner's post-accident symptoms and her diagnostic findings. On November 19, 2013, Dr. Hayward reviewed Petitioner's MRI report and noted "MRI of the lumbar spine does not demonstrate a reason for her symptoms." (PX8, 11/19/13, p. 2)

Likewise, on December 16, 2013, Dr. Hayward noted, "She does not have any lumbar radicular findings." (PX8, 12/16/13, p. 1) Dr. Hayward referred her to physical therapy but documented that he "did not see anything on the patient's MRI or diagnostic studies to recommend/suggest any surgical treatment of the lumbar spine." (PX8, 1/10/14 OV, p. 2)

Notably, after Petitioner returned to Dr. Hayward's office and complained physical therapy was making her low back pain worse, PA-C Davidson discharged her stating: "At this time, there is nothing that we can offer the patient. She is released from our care." (PX8, 1/28/14 OV, p. 1)

Thereafter, an addendum authored by Dr. Hayward, dated February 18, 2014, was added to the January 28, 2014, office note. The addendum stated:

> I have just been informed by her physical therapist, Brandy, that during her functional testing, the patient had multiple inconsistencies as well as 3/5 Waddell's. The patient has been released from my care. She was referred to Dr. Riew. The therapist also mentioned that the patient said that I wanted to operate on her. No surgery has been offered to her by myself. I do not contemplate any surgery in the future. WC has denied the referral to Dr. Riew. Considering the above, my referral will be canceled. The patient is released from my care. Id.

Petitioner did not seek any additional lumbar back treatment until she consulted another orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Jeffrey Jones in 2015. Dr. Jones referred Petitioner to pain management. Petitioner sought pain management treatment with Dr. Brent Newell from October 1, 2015, through July 7, 2016. (PX14)

The Commission notes Dr. Newell's causation opinion but does not find it persuasive. Dr. Newell suspects most of the findings pre-date her accident but have been aggravated. However he notes the difficulty in assessing causation as he first saw her two years after the accident. Regardless, he notes that "she relates this is at least more likely than not an aggravation of some of these preexisting degenerative changes." (PX14) The Commission finds that Dr. Newell's causation opinion was based on a factually incomplete history and is not persuasive.

On March 29, 2016, Dr. Newell also documented a normal physical and neurological exam. On May 24, 2016, Petitioner returned to Dr. Newell, and he reviewed the lumbar spine MRI she underwent as a result of a visit to the emergency room and found that Petitioner had a synovial cyst at L3-L4 that was the possible source of her pain. (PX14) The Arbitrator noted, and the Commission agrees, that the Petitioner's spondylolisthesis at L3-4, diagnosed by Dr. Jones, occurred two years after the work accident and that the intervening objective diagnostic tests were devoid of evidence that Petitioner had spondylolisthesis at L3-4, or any other level, despite other degenerative findings. Even assuming the presence of that condition, the Commission finds that none of Petitioner's subjective complaints or objective physical or neurological exams correlate to L3-L4 spondylolisthesis or any other degenerative condition of her lumbar spine.

The Commission further agrees with the Arbitrator's finding that the surveillance videos from August 28, 2013 and September 5, 2013, are relevant because it shows no evidence of a limp or significant lumbar back problem based on scenes of Petitioner walking and lifting a large gas can into her car after filling it at a pump, contrary to Petitioner's complaints to Dr. Criste and Dr. Cantrell around the same time. Based on the surveillance videos as well as the credibility issues raised by Petitioner's treating physician as well as Dr. Zelby and Dr. Treister, the Commission finds Petitioner lacks credibility.

The Commission relies upon the findings and opinions of Dr. Treister, Dr. Zelby and Dr. Hayward where Petitioner exhibited either self-limiting behaviors, Waddell findings or symptom magnification in its determination that Petitioner's current condition is not causally related to the accident of July 12, 2013. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator, that the inconsistencies make it difficult to find any ongoing symptoms can be validly connected to the July 12, 2013, accident.

Therefore, the Commission finds that the Petitioner suffered a temporary aggravation of her pre-existing lumbar back condition and that her lumbar back condition was at baseline by November 19, 2013, with no evidence of permanent disability from the accident of July 12, 2013. Therefore, the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award of permanency for Petitioner's lumbar back condition.

Finally, the Commission corrects scrivener's errors in the Arbitrator's decision. At page 17, last paragraph, second to the last sentence, striking the "d" off the word "continued" wherein it will read "...and to continue light exercise..." not [continued]. Also, on page 32, second paragraph from the bottom, strike the apostrophe and the letter "s" ('s) off the first word, wherein it will read "Petitioner" [not Petitioner's].

At page 28, third paragraph, the second sentence, wherein it should read "Petitioner underwent a lumbar x-ray [not "MRI"] on 10/19/12 which indicated degenerative findings at L1/2 and some facet arthropathy in the lower spine."

All else is affirmed and adopted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed March 5, 2019, is hereby modified for the reasons stated herein, and otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the permanent partial disability award of 3.5% loss of the person as whole under Section 8(d)2 for the cervical spine condition is vacated because the Petitioner sustained a temporary aggravation of her pre-existing cervical condition on July 12, 2013 and that her cervical condition was not causally related to the July 12, 2013, accident after November 19, 2013.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the permanent partial disability award of 3.5% loss of the person as whole under Section 8(d)2 for the lumbar spine condition is vacated because the Petitioner sustained a temporary aggravation of her pre-existing lumbar condition on July 12, 2013, and that lumbar condition was not causally related to the July 12, 2013, accident after November 19, 2013.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $268.23 per week, until Petitioner reaches age 67 or five years from the date of the final award, whichever is later, because the injuries sustained to the left shoulder caused a loss of earnings, as provided in Section 8(d)1 of the Act. The Commission notes that the parties stipulated that weekly benefits were paid by Respondent through the Arbitration hearing date. Respondent shall pay Petitioner compensation that has accrued from November 19, 2013 through December 14, 2017 and shall pay the remainder of the award, if any, in weekly payments.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, with the following exceptions. The Petitioner is not entitled to medical expenses related to treatment of the cervical spine or lumbar spine after November 19, 2013. The Petitioner is not entitled to the expenses related to Dr. Oestmann's treatment of Petitioner on August 5, 2014 and May 5, 2015.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $75,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the opinion of the majority and would affirm and adopt the Decision of the Arbitrator. After considering the totality of the evidence, I believe the Arbitrator appropriately determined that Petitioner sustained a 3.5% loss of use of the whole person as result of injuries to the cervical spine and a 3.5% loss of use of the whole person as a result of injuries sustained to the lumbar spine, in addition to a wage differential award for left shoulder injuries sustained due to the July 12, 2013, work incident.

While the majority agrees with the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner is entitled to a wage differential award pursuant to Section 8(d)1 of the Act due to her left shoulder injury, the majority has also seen fit to reverse the Arbitrator's combined award of 7% loss of use of whole person for injuries to Petitioner's cervical and lumbar spine sustained as a result of the work incident. The Arbitrator wrote a thorough and well-reasoned Decision and carefully weighed all the evidence. There is no question that Petitioner had preexisting cervical and lumbar spine conditions. However, I agree with the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner sustained minor aggravations of her preexisting cervical and lumbar spine conditions. The totality of the evidence supports a finding that those minor aggravations resulted in a small level of permanent partial disability regarding her cervical and lumbar spine. I view the evidence differently than the majority and do not believe the evidence supports a finding that Petitioner sustained no level of permanent disability as a result of the proven injuries to her cervical and lumbar spine. The Arbitrator's award of 3.5% loss of use of the whole person for each of Petitioner's cervical and lumbar injuries pursuant to Section 8(d)2 is appropriate given the credible evidence.

For the forgoing reasons, I would affirm and adopt the Arbitrator's Decision and find that in addition to the awarded wage differential for Petitioner's left shoulder condition, Petitioner sustained a combined 7% loss of use of the whole person (3.5% each for the cervical and lumbar spine injuries) due to the July 12, 2013, work incident.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, with the following exceptions. The Petitioner is not entitled to medical expenses related to treatment of the cervical spine or lumbar spine after November 19, 2013. The Petitioner is not entitled to the expenses related to Dr. Oestmann's treatment of Petitioner on 8/5/14 and 5/5/15.

Respondent shall be given a credit for all awarded medical benefits that have been paid prior to hearing, via workers' compensation or Section 8(j), and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner permanent partial disability benefits of $599.59 per week for 17.5 weeks, because the injuries sustained to the cervical spine caused the 3.5% loss of the person as a whole, as provided in Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner permanent partial disability benefits of $599.59 per week for 17.5 weeks, because the injuries sustained to the lumbar spine caused the 3.5% loss of the person as a whole, as provided in Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner permanent partial disability benefits, commencing December 14, 2017, of $268.23 per week, until Petitioner reaches age 67 or five years from the date of the final award, whichever is later, because the injuries sustained to the left shoulder caused a loss of earnings, as provided in Section 8(d)1 of the Act. The Arbitrator notes that while the Petitioner's entitlement to such benefits prior to the hearing date, the parties stipulated that weekly benefits have been paid by Respondent through the hearing date.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner compensation that has accrued from November 19, 2013 through December 14, 2017, and shall pay the remainder of the award, if any, in weekly payments.

RULES REGARDING APPEALS: Unless a party files a Petition for Review within 30 days after receipt of this decision and perfects a review in accordance with the Act and Rules, then this decision shall be entered as the decision of the Commission.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST RATE: If the Commission reviews this award, interest at the rate set forth on the Notice of Decision of Arbitrator shall accrue from the date listed below to the day before the date of payment; however, if an employee's appeal results in either no change or a decrease in this award, interest shall not accrue.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

An employee since 2001, the Petitioner testified that she worked for Respondent as an x-ray technician until 7/12/13. She currently works at the front desk for Respondent, performing registration, answering phones, burning CDs and relieving other co-workers during lunch or absences.

On 7/12/13, Petitioner was pushing a dual CR monitor that was on wheels, describing it as about the same approximate size as a small apartment refrigerator. In order to avoid colliding with a nurse, she testified: ". . . I yanked it with my left arm as hard as I could and pushed it away from her with my right arm. And then it was headed towards the glass door, so I really pulled it, and I had my right leg to stop it from rolling, and the thing yanked me, and it pulled up my (left) arm and down my side."

The parties stipulated prior to hearing that the Petitioner sustained a compensable left shoulder injury on 7/12/13, but the Respondent disputes any causal connection between the accident and the Petitioner's claimed cervical and lumbar conditions.

Petitioner acknowledged that she previously hurt her right shoulder in 2007, but testified she was only off work for three days as a result. She denied having any prior workers' compensation claims related to her neck or back. Petitioner testified she has reviewed her medical records and physician depositions and agreed they accurately reflected what she reported to her providers.

Following the 7/12/13 incident, Petitioner testified she had left scapular pain and burning as well as pain in the left neck and down the left arm. The Memorial Hospital ER records reflect Petitioner was pushing a monitor, twisted and hurt her left posterior shoulder and right lower back with pain radiating down the right leg with tingling. X-rays were obtained of the cervical spine (no fracture, diffuse degenerative disc and facet disease with mild C4/5 spondylolisthesis), lumbar spine (no fracture, mild spondylosis) and left shoulder (normal). A history of chronic neck pain was noted. She was diagnosed with lumbar radiculopathy, cervical strain and left shoulder injury. (Px3). There is a separate note from 7/15/13 which noted, as to the cervical strain, "intermittent radiculopathic symptoms to left more than right upper extremity, most is pre-existing." Intermittent right leg radiculopathy to the toes was also noted and Petitioner was restricted to light duty. Norflex, Naproxen and Norco were prescribed. (Px3; Px4).

Various pre-accident records of Petitioner were submitted into evidence by Respondent. Petitioner underwent a breast augmentation procedure in 2011. On 6/27/12, Dr. Taveau, DO, noted Petitioner complained of a two-year history of neck pain that had worsened. Her pain was constant in the bilateral neck, upper back, shoulders and arms with radiation into the arms, hands and bilateral thumbs and index fingers. The left arm was the worst, and she also noted numbness in the bilateral arms. Numerous activities would aggravate her symptoms. Dr. Taveau indicated Petitioner also had Lhermittes symptom with cervical range of motion. He noted MRI showed a large C6/7 disc/osteophyte complex and that EMG/NCV showed no evidence of radiculopathy. Dr. Taveau recommended either a fusion or disc replacement at C6/7, but that Petitioner did not want to have surgery at that time. He ordered EMG/NCV, MRI and flexion/extension x-rays. (Rx9).

The x-rays on 10/10/12 showed minimal anterior subluxations of C4 on C5 and C5 on C6, most likely chronic. There was moderate degenerative disc disease at C6/7 with disc space narrowing and severe bilateral foraminal stenosis. Cervical MRI from the same date reflected loss of lordosis, minimal degenerative C4 over C5 anterolisthesis, mild C4/5 and moderate C6/7 central canal stenosis and multilevel hypertrophic facet arthropathy (most marked at left C4/5 and right C5/6). Foraminal stenosis was indicated at C2/3 (mild left due to hypertrophy), C4/5 (severe left and minimal right due to hypertrophy), C6/7 (severe left greater than right due to osteophytes and hypertrophy). Petitioner followed up with Dr. Taveau on 11/7/12, noting in addition to the already noted complaints she reported thoracic pain between her shoulder blades. He noted that the updated MRI showed disc-osteophyte complexes at C4/5 and C6/7, along with the subluxed levels. He wanted to obtain the EMG as well as thoracic MRI. The 11/16/12 EMG/NCV testing reflected a left C6/7 radiculopathy, mild bilateral carpal tunnel (left worse than right) and mild left ulnar neuropathy at the elbow. The history portion indicated Petitioner complained of left neck pain radiating and shooting into the left arm as well as tingling and numbness in the left hand. It is unclear what EMG/NCV Dr. Taveau was indicating was negative for radiculopathy. (Rx9).

On 7/22/13, Nurse Practitioner Kommer at occupational health noted diagnoses of cervical strain with bilateral radiculopathy, left greater than right, and thoracolumbar strain with radiculopathy into the right leg, and she was held off work. Spinal CT scans were prescribed along with Vicodin, Soma and Medrol dosepak. Norflex and Norco were discontinued. (Px3; Rx11). The 7/22/13 cervical CT scan showed multilevel degenerative changes, worst at C6/7 and with C4 over C5 grade 1 anterolisthesis, minimal C5 over C6 anterolisthesis and minimal C6 over C7 retrolisthesis. Foraminal narrowing was noted at C2/3 (moderate bilateral), C4/5 (mild right, severe left), C6/7 (moderate/severe right, mild/moderate left) and C6/7 (severe bilateral), as well as mild central stenosis at C6/7. This was noted to have been compared to 10/10/12 films, but the comparative findings were not noted. (Px4; Rx11). 7/22/13 lumbar films showed no evidence of disc protrusion or extrusion, no significant canal or foraminal stenosis, and mild to moderate right facet arthropathy at L2/3. (Px4; Rx11). Thoracic films from the same date showed multilevel degenerative disc disease without neural compromise. (Px4; Rx11).

An 8/9/13 cervical MRI reflected: 1) slight anterolisthesis of C4 on C5 and C5 on C6, 2) multilevel degenerative spondylosis (mild C4/5 and mild/moderate C6/7 central canal stenosis), 3) multilevel foraminal stenosis (worst at C4/5, C5/6 and C6/7), and 4) multilevel hypertrophic facet arthropathy. 8/9/13 lumbar films showed: 1) right L1/2 disc herniation with no central stenosis, 2) left L34 herniation with moderate left L3 foraminal stenosis, 3) mild right L1/2 and minimal left L2/3 and L5/S1 foraminal stenosis, and 4) multilevel facet hypertrophy. Thoracic MRI from 8/9/13 reflected disc herniations at T3/4, T4/5 and T8/9 with minor cord deformity, a T9/10 disc bulge with minor cord deformity and no central canal stenosis. There also was lower thoracic facet hypertrophy. (Px4).

The Arbitrator notes that while the 8/9/13 MRIs were noted to have been ordered by Dr. Taveau, there is no record in evidence that the Arbitrator saw indicating Petitioner saw Dr. Taveau prior to 8/19/13. On 8/19/13, Petitioner saw Dr. Taveau with complaints of severe neck pain, arm pain, numbness, tingling and Lhermittes symptoms with cervical range of motion. The history notes she hurt her cervical, thoracic and lumbar spine "again" on 7/12/13. Numbness and tingling was reported in the bilateral legs. Following exam, Dr. Taveau diagnosed cervical osteophytes, disc displacement, radiculitis and strain. Also diagnosed was lumbar disc displacement and thoracic and lumbar degenerative disc disease. (Px5).

Petitioner also saw her primary provider, Dr. Oestmann, with complaints of severe pain and numbness in her left upper extremity and right lower extremity since the 7/12/13 accident. After obtaining and reviewing the MRIs of Petitioner's cervical, thoracic, and lumbar spine, he prescribed pain medication and muscle relaxers "since none of her other physicians are concerned about her pain." He advised Petitioner to return if her symptoms persisted or worsened, or if she developed new symptoms. He also recommended pain management, but this was not authorized by Respondent. Petitioner again reported persistent neck and back symptoms to Dr. Oestmann on 8/20/13 and was referred to Dr. Hayward. Petitioner returned relatively regularly for follow-up and refills of her medication and updates of her work restrictions. (Px7).

Following review of the MRI films, Dr. Taveau noted worsening at C4/5 and C6/7 but doesn't indicate what prior films he was comparing them to. He also stated Petitioner "has not yet" completed her "repeat" EMG/NCV. (Px5; Rx9). Lumbar x-ray from 8/19/13 was unchanged versus 7/12/13 films. (Px4; Rx9).

On 8/21/13, Dr. Taveau noted Petitioner was treating with multiple providers and was being evaluated for possible surgery, and he indicated he would manage her medications if she proceeded with surgery, but that her medications otherwise should be managed through her primary provider or pain management. (Px5).

Petitioner underwent a lower extremity EMG/NCV on 8/27/13, and Dr. Alam indicated the results were consistent with right high lumbar radiculopathy, probably L1/2, as well as left L3 nerve root irritability with no frank radiculopathy. Upper extremity EMG/NCV from 8/28/13 was read by Dr. Alam as showing left C4 and C7 radiculopathies, mild bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and no evidence of ulnar neuropathy. (Px6).

Surveillance video was obtained by Respondent on 8/28/13 which followed Petitioner for a period of time after she left Dr. Alam's office. The Arbitrator notes that the video depicts the Petitioner walking, bending for a couple of minutes to fill what appears to be a 5-gallon gas can and getting in and out of her car. While there was no overly significant physical activity depicted, the Arbitrator would note that the Petitioner was not limping at any time and did not appear to be having any difficulty with her activities. The Arbitrator further notes that only five minutes of video was obtained on 8/28/13, and according to the investigator's report was not seen at all on 8/27/13 or 8/30/13. (Rx12; Rx14).

On 9/6/13, Dr. Taveau noted that Petitioner had a worsening of her lumbar and thoracic symptoms after her work injury. He was recommending C4/5 and C6/7 fusion surgery as well as L1/2 laminectomy/discectomy, but that Petitioner "does not wish to proceed with any surgery." She was referred to pain management with Dr. Juergens and was advised to follow up as needed. (Px5; Rx9).

Petitioner saw Dr. Criste at the same facility as Dr. Taveau on 9/6/13. She reported neck pain radiating into the low back, with her only relief being medication. She also reported moderate to severe low back pain since her accident that radiates to the right foot. He prescribed physical therapy (4 weeks for the lumbar spine), continued use of a TENS unit and a possible L1/2 epidural in the future based on EMG and MRI findings, which Petitioner declined. (Px3; Rx9). There is a handwritten note on the therapy order which states: "9/6/13. Dr. Taveau said this would not be good for me right now because of my pain level." (Px3). The Arbitrator notes that multiple reports in evidence show handwritten notes on them, which appear to have been written by Petitioner, which constitute statements by Petitioner that were not necessarily testified to.

Further surveillance was obtained on the Petitioner on 9/6/13, this time for a total of about a minute. She was seen entering and exiting a restaurant. When walking she did not display a limp. No physical activity was seen beyond walking and exiting and entering her vehicle. The report of the investigator notes she was also seen driving through a bank drive-thru. (Rx13; Rx15).

Petitioner was examined by physical medicine and rehabilitation specialist Dr. Cantrell at the Respondent's request on 10/10/13. She reported an onset of symptoms on 7/12/13 while pushing an x-ray monitor, abruptly stopping its roll by pulling it with her right arm and pushing it with her left. Petitioner reported this caused mid-thoracic spine pain that went into the bilateral lumbar spine and into the right leg, along with left neck pain and associated left arm numbness. The report indicated that "because of the fact she had a prior history of a work-related injury to her neck and left shoulder, for which she had seen Dr. Taveau, she was directed to Dr. Taveau for an evaluation." Petitioner reported that Dr. Taveau told her if she wasn't going to have neck surgery, he had nothing more to offer her, and that Dr. Alam's EMG findings correlated with her cervical MRI abnormalities. She indicated she found Dr. Criste to be "rude and felt that he blew her off regarding treatment recommendations." On exam of her cervical spine, Petitioner had moderate limitations in active movement of her neck in left rotation, and mild limitations to the right, with full neck flexion and extension. She had mild limitations in bilateral side bending. She had relief of her neck complaints at the end range of extension. She had full range of motion of the shoulders and no weakness of the upper extremities. Neurologic exam was essentially normal. Dr. Cantrell noted that Petitioner was holding her head in a bent position to the right during the exam, and later during the exam was holding her head bent to the left. She walked with a limp favoring the right side with complained of the right knee and hip. Petitioner indicated a shaky sensation in her back with full extension and that her right arm is tremulous at times. (Rx2).

Following his exam and review of medical records, both pre and post-accident, diagnostic testing results and surveillance video from August and September 2013, Dr. Cantrell opined there was nothing indicating the Petitioner needed to be off work for her subjective complaints and that she was capable of working in at least a light to medium duty capacity. He noted the Petitioner lifting a gas can in the video and "the obvious discrepancy between her demonstrated capabilities on the video surveillance compared to that which she has described being capable of doing and the obvious discrepancy between her limp favoring her right lower extremity on today's examination in contrast to the absence of any obvious antalgia on two separate dates of video surveillance does not support the need for an off-work status. . . particularly this far out from her injury." He opined that she could work with a 40-pound restriction and allowing her to alternate sitting and standing every two hours, on a temporary basis. (Rx2).

A 12/11/13 cervical x-ray showed segmental instability at C4/5 and C5/6 with flexion/extension, and grade 1 anterolisthesis of C5 on C6 at neutral, along with diffuse degenerative disc disease. (Px4).

Petitioner saw Dr. Hayward, DO, on 11/19/13. He took a history of persistent cervical pain, mid back pain, lower back pain with radicular right foot and posterior thigh pain and bilateral toe paresthesias, and left shoulder pain with radicular left upper extremity numbness. Petitioner reported being injured at work when she had to stop suddenly to avoid a collision between the monitor she was pushing and a fellow employee. Dr. Hayward noted the Petitioner's MRI and EMG/NCV results and indicated the Petitioner's arm symptoms didn't correlate with C4 radiculopathy, but could represent C5 radiculopathy, though they were "in an incomplete dermatomal distribution." The diagnoses were cervical and lumbosacral spondylosis without myelopathy. He continued Petitioner's restrictions and recommended an MRI of Petitioner's left shoulder and flexion/extension films of the cervical spine to rule out instability. Barring indication of injury in these studies, he indicated that a determination of maximum medical improvement (MMI) and a functional capacity evaluation (FCE) would be appropriate. He also noted that Petitioner was working with a 10-pound work restriction but complained of turning her head as a cashier, and that she did not feel she could tolerate physical therapy. Petitioner returned on 12/16/13 with persistent complaints of left arm and bicep pain, shoulder pain made worse with movement of the head and neck, and pain throughout her mid and low back. Dr. Hayward found no lumbar radicular findings on exam. Following review of cervical MRI and EMG/NCV testing, it appears he was recommending an anterior cervical fusion, but wanted Petitioner to see Dr. Riew for a second opinion. He recommended therapy and pain management for the thoracic/lumbar spine, noting he saw nothing surgical on MRI or other diagnostic studies, and that Petitioner "would like to continue conservative care." Dr. Hayward's assistant on 1/28/14 noted the referral to Dr. Riew was not authorized by Respondent since Heyward himself was already a second opinion. Dr. Hayward indicated he had nothing further he could offer to Petitioner and released her from his care. Since physical therapy was making Petitioner's low back pain worse, however, the assistant recommended that she cease physical therapy. However, an addendum by Dr. Hayward on 2/18/14 notes: "I have just been informed by her physical therapist, Brandy, that during her functional testing, the patient had multiple inconsistencies as well as 3/5 Waddell's. The patient has been released from my care. She was referred to Dr. Riew. The therapist also mentioned that the patient said that I wanted to operate on her. No surgery has been offered to her by myself. I do not contemplate any surgery in the future. WC has denied the referral to Dr. Riew. Considering the above, my referral will be canceled. The patient is released from my care." (Px8; Rx8).

Petitioner underwent therapy at Occupational Performance Rehab from 1/21/14 to 2/18/14 for the low back and radiculitis on referral from Dr. Hayward. She was noted to have a mild antalgic gait favoring the right leg. The notes reflect improvement, particularly in terms of radicular symptoms into the legs. On 2/11/14, Petitioner reported an increase in pain, indicating it may have been due to vacuuming. On 2/18/14, Petitioner reported she didn't feel her back was any better and that two doctors wanted to operate, but this wasn't approved, and that Dr. Hayward felt her low back was not bad enough for surgery yet. She also reported not doing her home exercises as she had been advised, noting she is sometimes exhausted after work. She continued to indicate she had less pain and radiating numbness in the right leg, but that her back and neck were the same or worse. She was discharged due to a lack of progress. The therapist documented Petitioner was unable to perform any of her job duties based on the exam, but also documented several limiting factors during the objective functional tests including client anxiety, increased pain, mechanical changes, and self-limiting behaviors. Petitioner's job was noted to be in the medium demand category. A final discharge report was issued on 3/4/14, with that report stating: "PT was discontinued per request by MD." Petitioner had only partially achieved two out of six noted goals. (Px8; Px9; Rx10).

Petitioner agreed Dr. Hayward released her in February 2014 and that she thereafter didn't see a neck surgeon until she saw Dr. Riew in January 2015.

On 6/3/14, Dr. Oestmann ordered full spinal MRIs. (Px7). 7/15/14 cervical films revealed that Petitioner's degenerative findings, including those at C4/5 and C6/7, were stable when compared to Petitioner's previous cervical MRI of 8/9/13. The lumbar MRI revealed a stable disc bulge/protrusion at L1/2 when compared to the prior lumbar MRI of 8/9/13, with increasing marrow edema along the right pedicle of L3, new marrow edema and stress-related changes involving the left L3/4 facet joint, and multilevel facet joint arthropathy seen within the lower lumbar spine, most severe at left L3/4. (Px4).

Petitioner also had a new MRI of her thoracic spine and left shoulder MRI on 9/24/14, indicated to have been ordered by Dr. Oestmann. The thoracic MRI again showed disc herniations at T3/4 and T8/9 with right ventral cord deformity, unchanged versus 8/9/13 films, and the left shoulder MRI demonstrated: 1) marked rotator cuff tendinosis with a partial tear of the insertional fibers of the supraspinatus representing greater than 50% of the tendon thickness as well as small partial tears along the infraspinatus and subscapularis without a full thickness tear or tendon retraction; 2) mild fluid within the subacromial/subdeltoid bursa; 3) intrasubstance degenerative fraying involving the posterosuperior glenoid labrum with a small linear filling defect within the joint adjacent to the posterosuperior labrum, and a small flap/fragment related to an underlying labral tear was not excluded; 4) hypertrophic degenerative changes of the AC joint with joint-centered marrow edema suggesting stress reaction or contusion. (Px4).

Petitioner did see Dr. Riew, using her regular health insurance, on 1/13/15 with complaints of neck and arm pain with numbness (in the forearm into the middle three fingers) and weakness, which she reported having since 7/12/13 and with worsening since. Her neck pain was 75% and her arm pain 25%, much more significantly in the left arm than the right. Per the completion of an intake form by Petitioner that he reviewed with her, the doctor noted no relevant past medical history. Exam noted loss of sensation in various places on the left upper extremity. During exam Petitioner did report "she had some degenerative neck problems prior to the injury but was not known to have herniated discs at that time." Dr. Riew reviewed cervical x-ray (10/2012), MRIs (8/9/13 & 7/15/14) and CT scan (7/22/13). He diagnosed cervical spondylosis with radicular symptoms that he believed were mainly arising from the C4 to C7 levels with possible contribution from C3/4. He referred Petitioner to the Pain Center, prescribing physical therapy, which Petitioner indicated she had not undergone for the neck, and diagnostic and therapeutic left nerve blocks at C4/5 and C6/7. Dr. Riew indicated he would not recommend surgery for neck pain and would only consider it to address the left arm and hand and right small finger numbness. The Arbitrator notes that where the intake form asks how long her pain had been present, Petitioner responded "July 12, 2013." The Arbitrator also notes that the Petitioner's pain drawing indicates leg symptoms only from the knees down to the feet. (Px10).

Petitioner only saw Dr. Riew once, agreeing that his only specific recommendations were nerve blocks and physical therapy, but she testified both he and Dr. Jones told her to wait on any surgery as long as she could.

Petitioner initially saw Dr. Lee on 11/19/14 on referral from Dr. Oestmann for left shoulder pain. Petitioner reported yanking the rolling monitor with her left arm, pushing it with the right "in a twisting motion injuring complete spine and left shoulder." She reported numbness and tingling down the arm into the palm with occasional numbness in all fingers but the pinky. She also complained of numbness down the bilateral legs. Following exam and review of Petitioner's left shoulder, cervical and lumbar MRIs, Dr. Lee diagnosed radiculitis/radiculopathy, neck pain, partial rotator cuff tear and shoulder pain, noting the case was complicated by multiple areas of symptoms since onset, though her upper extremity symptoms appeared more cervical in origin. The left subacromial space was injected. (Px11).

Petitioner was examined at the Respondent's request on 6/3/15 by neurosurgeon Dr. Zelby. She provided a consistent history of the accident. Petitioner stated that she felt pain instantly in her neck on her left side, going through her left shoulder, and down the front of her left arm to the elbow, with numbness on the back of the left forearm into the back of her hands and fingers. Petitioner also described a sharp, stabbing pain in her lower thoracic, upper lumbar area with a feeling like heat and burning radiating down the spinal axis on to the outside of the right hip and right thigh, with tingling down the outside of the right foreleg to the little toe more than the middle toe. Petitioner also reported more severe pain along the left side of the low back into the outside of the left hip and down the front of the left thigh and foreleg to the foot, with numbness in the bottoms of both feet. Petitioner told Dr. Zelby she had the same, constant subjective symptoms since the work accident, and rated her pain as 8/10 and constant. Petitioner reported to Dr. Zelby a pre-accident history of "a little" neck pain in 2012, but that her neck pain was much less severe than it was following her work accident. She stated she was told in 2012 that she had only degenerative disc disease in her neck. Petitioner also reported a pre-accident history of low back pain which, again, was less severe than following her work accident. She had undergone prior bilateral carpal tunnel surgery. (Rx2).

Dr. Zelby indicated Petitioner stated her job as an x-ray tech was a heavy physical job. She was working under restrictions performing clerical work. Exam noted diminished sensation in the entire left arm, foreleg and bilateral feet. Some Waddell signs were noted. Following his review of Petitioner's pre and post-accident records, Dr. Zelby diagnosed cervical and lumbosacral spondylosis. He noted Petitioner's complaints of a "constellation of symptoms" and that, other than obviously non-anatomic sensory changes, her examination was normal. While Petitioner reported modest pre-accident complaints, Dr. Zelby indicated that her complaints and objective findings did not change before and after the accident, including objective MRI films. He noted that cervical surgery was recommended to Petitioner prior to the accident, and that the current recommendation for C4/5 and C6/7 surgery was "an inherently poor surgical construct." Referencing recommended L1/2 surgery, Dr. Zelby opined that cervical and lumbar surgery were being recommended based on the MRI films and that the recommended levels did not correlate with Petitioner's symptoms. This suggested that the work accident had nothing to do with the MRI abnormalities. Dr. Zelby opined that Petitioner suffered a cervical strain in the context of a preexisting and already symptomatic cervical condition, and this did not aggravate, accelerate or alter this the preexisting condition. He further opined that there was no evidence to support her inability to return to work by October or November of 2013, and any treatment after that time would not be related to the accident. Dr. Zelby stated: "A medical basis for her reported degree of infirmity is elusive and is difficult to even relate her ongoing subjective complaints to a manifestation of her underlying degenerative condition. He determined she had reached MMI as to any work-related condition by October/November 2013. (Rx2).

Petitioner did not return to Dr. Lee until 6/26/15. She reported the injection helped about 75% for two to four months before starting to wear off, and that her anterior shoulder pain had returned. She had a catching sensation with a certain movement. Given her response to the injection, Dr. Lee believed the shoulder pain could be due to biceps tendonitis, as there was fluid there per MRI. A second injection was performed, noting if she still had anterior pain at the next visit, the biceps would be injected. Surgery was also discussed. On 7/24/15, Petitioner reported the last injection was very painful and after three days felt like a "toothache" pain. The biceps was injected and Petitioner felt some improvement soon after. On 8/21/15, Petitioner reported significant improvement with the injection. It was noted she was taking medications for her neck and back and was working modified duty. At that point, Dr. Lee recommended one more biceps injection and, if that didn't help, arthroscopic surgery "while continuing to sort out plans with work comp for neck and back." Petitioner was released to return as needed and advised to contact Lee if she wanted the injection and/or surgery. (Px11).

The Respondent forwarded additional medical records to Dr. Cantrell and he issued an updated report on 9/14/15. These included the records of Dr. Hayward, Dr. Oestmann, Dr. Lee, Dr. Riew and Dr. Zelby, as well as various diagnostic testing. Referencing his prior report and opinion regarding Petitioner's ability to work, Dr. Cantrell stated that he supported Dr. Zelby's conclusion that Petitioner was capable of returning to her full work duties by November 2013, given there were no clinical neurological deficits, the presence of non-anatomic sensory symptoms, and non-physiologic pain behaviors "as noted on several occasions in the medical records following my examination of (Petitioner)." (Rx5).

Cervical MRI performed on 9/15/15 reportedly showed; 1) severe neuroforaminal stenosis at left C4/5 and C6/7, moderate/severe at right C6/7 ("these findings are grossly unchanged" versus 10/10/12 films); 2) mild progression of degenerative changes at other levels; 3) mild/moderate canal stenosis at C6/7, mild at C4/5, unchanged; 4) mild grade 1 anterolisthesis of C4 over C5 and C6 over C7, unchanged; 5) loss of lordosis suggesting muscle spasm; and, 6) unchanged left thyroid lobe nodule. (Px12). Lumbar films from the same date showed: 1) moderate left neuroforaminal stenosis at L3/4, grossly unchanged from 8/9/13 and 7/15/14; 2) mild/moderate neuroforaminal stenosis at right L1/2 and left L5/S1, slightly progressed; 3) mild canal stenosis at L3/4, slightly progressed; and, 4) loss of lordosis suggestive of muscle spasm. (Px12).

On 9/16/15, Petitioner saw orthopedic surgeon Dr. Jones for the first time for her low back. She reported constant, chronic low back pain aggravated by daily activities and radiation to the left thigh. She also reported neck pain into the left arm. Dr. Jones noted MRIs showed multilevel degeneration in the cervical and lumbar spine. Mild lumbar spondylosis was noted with C5/6 anterolisthesis and C6/7 disc-osteophyte complex with positive EMG at C4 and C7. Dr. Jones stated: "(Petitioner) was involved in a workplace accident while pushing an x-ray machine and has had neck and back pain since that time and reports that she did not have any neck or back pain prior to this incident." He also noted her left shoulder issue as well and that she was going to have surgery. He recommended surgery only at C6/7 based on her arm pain, but that other levels might need to be addressed in the future. Noting her neck pain improved with shoulder injection, Dr. Jones recommended addressing the shoulder first. As to the lumbar spine, again noting multilevel problems, he identified L3/4 spondylolisthesis as the "most striking" and that this was consistent with some of her leg pain. He did not believe the slight anterolisthesis at L2/3 was significant enough to address. He noted significant L3/4 facet arthropathy and foraminal stenosis and no relief with "multiple rounds" of physical therapy. He recommended facet injections with Dr. Newell, noting L3/4 fusion would be considered if that failed. (Px13).

Asked if she failed to tell Dr. Jones about her prior cervical treatment, Petitioner testified this was not correct. When confronted with an intake form she completed which asked what cervical diagnostic testing she had undergone, Petitioner acknowledged she only listed her post-accident testing ("I thought he was only talking about the accident.") and testified that she did tell him about pre-accident testing verbally. (Px8).

On 9/18/15, Respondent requested a retrospective and prospective Utilization Review with orthopedic surgeon Dr. Treister regarding the reasonableness and necessity of treatment and treatment recommendations, not causation. Dr. Treister reviewed Petitioner's cervical MRIs and x-rays from prior and subsequent to her work accident. He testified that, over the course of eight (8) years prior to her work accident, Petitioner's scans showed significant cervical changes, including severe collapse of the C6/7 disc space and severe left-sided neural foraminal stenosis. His review of Petitioner's 7/12/13 cervical x-rays indicated mild anterolisthesis at C4/5 and C5/6, as well as moderate osteophyte formation and near complete disc space collapse at C6/7 and opined that these findings were virtually identical to those seen on Petitioner's pre-accident diagnostic scans. In his review of Petitioner's 7/22/13 cervical CT scan and 8/19/13 cervical MRI, Dr. Treister saw no evidence of any changes in Petitioner's cervical spine pathology versus her prior diagnostic studies in 2012. Dr. Treister indicated Petitioner's 8/19/13 cervical MRI showed very light anterolisthesis of C4 on C5, and C5 on C6 with multiple levels of degenerative disc disease and severe foraminal stenosis at C6/7, worse on the left. He noted that the radiologist who interpreted this study noted the findings were identical to Petitioner's pre-accident cervical MRI. (Rx7).

As to the lumbar spine, Dr. Treister reviewed Petitioner's 10/19/12 lumbar and thoracic x-rays and observed some mild L1/2 disc space narrowing with minimal facet arthropathy at the base of the lumbar spine. He found thoracic films to be striking in that there was extensive anterior osteophyte formation throughout the thoracic spine. His review of 7/12/13 lumbar x-rays reflected minimal lumbar osteophytes and mild disc space narrowing at L1/2 that was virtually identical to that seen on 10/19/12. Dr. Treister's review of the 7/22/13 lumbar CT scan indicated degenerative disc disease at L1/2 and nothing very significant below that level. He indicated the 8/19/13 lumbar MRI also didn't show any changes, but in addition to the L1/2 degeneration there was a likely L3/4 disc bulge with moderate spinal canal stenosis. He saw no acute disc herniation at L1/2. Dr. Treister's stated that his review of the 7/15/14 lumbar MRI showed basically identical findings as the 8/9/13 films, with a degenerative L1/2 disc bulge and mild disc bulging at L3/4. (Rx7).

Dr. Treister also reviewed and commented on various medical records. As to the initial ER records from Memorial Hospital, he indicated they contained no documentation of any positive neurological findings, and no focal, post-traumatic physical findings, such as muscle spasm, swelling, focal tenderness, or motion restriction. The 7/22/13 WorkCare notes documented physical exam findings of widespread tenderness of the neck and right lower extremity. The doctor said that such widespread findings are generally considered Waddell findings, meaning the findings were more likely functional or hysterical and not objective. No focal findings were documented. The WorkCare note also documented 4 out of 5 strength without any localization. Dr. Treister opined this was likely another Waddell finding, as diffuse weakness does not indicate pathology at any single injured level. No positive neurological findings were documented. (Rx7).

Dr. Treister reviewed Dr. Taveau's records and noted that while his 8/19/13 note documented some unusual pain and numbness in Petitioner's lower extremities, there were no objective physical findings establishing any acute post-traumatic pathology and no radiological findings or objective physical exam findings establishing an acute injury on 7/12/13. The motor and sensory neurological exam findings were normal. Dr. Treister also noted Petitioner's prior cervical treatment with Dr. Taveau. Dr. Treister noted Dr. Criste's 9/6/13 report states that Petitioner's pain "begins in the neck and radiates to the lower back," which Dr. Treister stated was not a description of lumbar disc generated discomfort, but rather was a diffuse, non-localizing complaint. He also noted that Petitioner's description of constant, sharp, burning, and aching symptoms were the same words Petitioner used to describe her symptoms prior to the work accident. Dr. Criste's note contained no detailed anatomic location of Petitioner's complaints, and his physical exam did not document any focal tenderness or spasm. Instead, Petitioner again described widespread tenderness, which Dr. Treister stated was a Waddell finding, in the face of a normal neurological exam. Dr. Treister noted the 9/26/13 examination at Trinity Neuroscience Institute (Dr. Criste and Dr. Taveau) was normal with no reference to any focal tenderness, muscle spasm, or motion limitation with the exception of: a positive Spurling test (without any specific description of the findings); and a positive limited range of motion (with no specific measurements or pain description). There was also "significant pain with any range of motion cervical, thoracic and lumbar," which Dr. Treister stated should also be considered a Waddell sign. (Rx7).

In reviewing the records of primary care provider Dr. Oestmann, Dr. Treister noted that on 8/20/13 the Petitioner reported diffuse tenderness over the cervical spine and left trapezius muscle, which Dr. Treister noted were the same symptoms documented by Dr. Oestmann prior to 7/12/13. Dr. Oestmann also documented diffuse tenderness in the thoracic and lumbar spines, which Dr. Treister again indicated was widespread tenderness that should be considered a Waddell sign. There was no documentation of any focal spinal tenderness, muscle spasm, or motion restriction. (Rx7).

Dr. Treister noted 8/28/13 EMG/NCV testing with Dr. Alam found evidence of left-sided C4 and C7 radiculopathy. Dr. Treister opined that the C7 radiculopathy was not surprising given Petitioner's C6/7 advanced spondylosis, but that the C4 findings were somewhat suspect, as there were no subjective complaints of objective findings consistent with a C4 radiculopathy. Dr. Treister also opined the EMG/NCV study was not reasonable and necessary. (Rx7).

Dr. Treister's review of Dr. Cantrell's record of 10/10/13 noted multiple documented Waddell findings, including diffuse tenderness on palpation, and Petitioner keeping her head tilted to the left and then shifting to tilting to the right. Dr. Treister stated Petitioner's subjective complaints on that date were not substantiated by the documented objective findings. In his review of the records of Dr. Riew, Dr. Treister noted a very impressive and thorough consultation on 1/13/15. He did not believe physical therapy would have given Petitioner more than a day's relief from her cervical symptoms, given the very severe, preexisting deterioration at C6/7. He agreed that a nerve block at C6/7 would have been a reasonable diagnostic test, but such a block would not be reasonable at C4/5 since Petitioner had no subjective complaints or objective findings that would correlate to C4/5. He opined that Dr. Riew's documentation of pain over the left side of the neck and the entire cervical spine would be considered a Waddell finding. (Rx7).

Following his documentary review, Dr. Treister opined that the evidence he reviewed showed no substantive change in the Petitioner's spinal pathology between a year or two prior to the accident date to present, and little change in her subjective complaints or the medical objective findings over that time. He opined that her preexisting degeneration would be reasonably expected to progress over time, but that "there is little doubt" that no significant time-related deterioration had occurred from 7/12/13 to present: "Had there been some degree of aggravation to any of her degenerative disc disease in the cervical, thoracic or lumbar on 7/12/13, then by this point in time we would have anticipated some localized radiological acceleration: there has been none." Dr. Treister noted that Petitioner had subjective left-sided C7 radiculopathy and substantial C6/7 spinal canal stenosis which was persistent and had been gradually worsening for over two years according to the records. While Dr. Treister opined the 2012 recommendation by Dr. Taveau's pre-7/12/13 surgical recommendation was reasonable, and that when it was not performed ongoing persistent symptoms would be expected because the preexisting mechanical problems had not been alleviated. Dr. Treister believed Petitioner has a congenital predisposition to disc deterioration and was surprised this was not mentioned by Dr. Riew, whose facility is at the forefront of such issues, but that Petitioner didn't provide Dr. Riew with an accurate history of her preexisting condition. Dr. Treister opined that Petitioner suffered nothing more than strains on the accident date with no permanent injury or aggravation. He further opined that Petitioner's 7/12/13 treatment at Memorial Hospital, as well as the treatment of Dr. Oestmann, Dr. Taveau, and Dr. Criste (including medication) through 9/6/13 (when she was examined by Dr. Criste) was reasonable and necessary, and that any treatment after that date was not reasonable and necessary treatment to cure the effects of the work accident, but rather would have addressed the preexisting condition. He noted that Petitioner "dismissed" the therapy recommended by Criste at that time. Dr. Treister also noted that Dr. Taveau's 9/6/13 letter to Dr. Oestmann failed to reference his pre-accident surgical recommendation, which "does not appear to represent an honorable portrayal of the patient's medical condition." He also specifically opined that the 7/22/13 CT scans and 8/9/13 MRI scans were not necessary per ODG guidelines, but that the MRIs, while not reasonable in light of the CT scans, would have been reasonable otherwise as a "useful and convenient patient status baseline" given the Petitioner's long history of prior neuromuscular complaints. Dr. Treister also questioned how the mechanism of injury, involving low kinetic energy, could have impacted all three areas of the spine, and that "physicians should be doubtful when more than one spinal area is claimed as injured by a patient, even in a high kinetic energy dissipating accident." He noted that Petitioner's severe pre-existing pathology at C6/7 may have explained this, but that such severe pain preexisted the accident date. (Rx7).

Dr. Treister was subsequently deposed by the parties on 12/21/15. He testified that he performed spine surgeries for about 32 years, but that in the last 15 to 20 years he did not. He reviewed a 1/29/03 cervical MRI that both he and the radiologist agreed showed obvious degenerative disc disease at C6/7. 9/19/11 cervical x-rays showed moderate to severe disc space narrowing at C6/7 with severe left neuroforaminal stenosis. These films showed a significant progression of deterioration at C6/7 over the time between with severe or significant disc space collapse. Additionally, the x-ray showed evidence of anterolisthesis of C5 on C6. There was then a 10/5/11 cervical MRI and after a lot of follow-up care, Dr. Taveau on 6/27/12 gave the Petitioner a choice of recommended surgeries at C6/7, that being decompression and fusion or decompression and disc replacement, either of which Dr. Treister indicated would have been reasonable at that time. He noted he has both performed both of these surgeries as well as had undergone both himself. Petitioner's 11/16/12 EMG/NCV with Dr. Alam showed mild bilateral carpal tunnel and ulnar neuropathy at the left elbow. Dr. Treister testified that while it did not show evidence of radiculopathy, "when you have really longstanding crushing of a nerve it can be very misleading on an EMG. So I would say it didn't support it or didn't go against it, but it didn't show anything about the radiculopathy. (Rx6).

Dr. Treister reviewed post-accident cervical x-ray (7/13/13), CT scan (7/22/13) and MRI (8/19/13) and saw no evidence of anatomical change in pathology versus the 2011 and 2012 diagnostic testing. On 9/26/13, Dr. Taveau recommended C4/5 and C6/7 discectomy and fusion surgery. While there was some C4/5 degenerative changes, Dr. Treister indicated surgery at that level was not reasonable given no objective evidence of a C5 radiculopathy. He didn't understand why Taveau was recommending C4/5 involvement. As to Dr. Riew's 1/13/15 evaluation of Petitioner, Dr. Treister testified that while therapy, as he recommended, could have given her temporary relief, it wouldn't do anything for the severe, longstanding C6/7 deterioration. A C6/7 nerve block would have been a reasonable diagnostic test, but "I don't think it relates to the work injury." There was no need for a C4/5 nerve block given no objective findings there and no subjective complaints relative to that level. (Rx6).

Petitioner had lumbar and thoracic x-rays on 10/19/12. Lumbar films showed narrowing of the L1/2 disc space and minimal arthropathy at L4 to S1. The 7/12/13 lumbar x-ray showed basically the same findings. The subsequent lumbar CT scan showed degenerative disc disease at L1/2 – Dr. Treister noted that while the radiologist indicated this as at L2/3, but Treister reviewed the films and it was actually L1/2. Again, the changes were mild. Based on Dr. Treister's review of the records and scans, Dr. Taveau's recommendation of L1/2 laminectomy surgery was not reasonable given no subjective complaint of radiculopathy from that level, no objective findings to support it, no evidence of disc herniation and no conservative treatment to that point: "Its an off-the-wall recommendation. It has no basis in fact." Dr. Treister notes that the 7/15/14 lumbar MRI showed some small bulges at L1/2 and L3/4, but that the films were essentially the same as on 8/9/13. He opined that Petitioner needed no further lumbar treatment. There were some significant degenerative changes in the thoracic spine that were clearly longstanding, noting he believed there was evidence of this in chest x-rays from many years prior to the accident. Petitioner really had no complaints referable to the thoracic spine, and there's no evidence that it was injured or aggravated by the work accident. Dr. Treister further opined that Petitioner's left shoulder findings indicated generally age-appropriate degenerative changes, Petitioner's complaints were diffuse and not focal, again indicating Waddell-type findings. He opined that left shoulder surgery was not reasonable and necessary. (Rx6).

On cross-examination, the doctor agreed that he stopped performing surgeries and ended his practice in July 2014, and that he had not performed a spine surgery in 2008. He did not specialize in spinal surgery. He did not examine the Petitioner himself. He could not say whether he reviewed every medical record of the Petitioner. He agreed he believed the Petitioner was dishonest with her doctors where she failed to disclose her pre-accident medical history but agreed that he had no direct knowledge of what Petitioner said to her doctors other than what those doctors recorded. He also assumed that there were likely a lot of pre-accident records that reflected similar complaints as Petitioner had post-accident. Asked if he agreed Petitioner's treatment was reasonable and necessary setting aside the issue of causation, Dr. Treister testified "some of the treatment that's recommended is totally bogus", noting there was no indication for a lumbar laminectomy. The C6/7 fusion/disc replacement recommended prior to the accident was reasonable, but post-accident "the patient has so many functional complaints I don't know whether you would find a surgeon willing to entertain surgery at this time." He agreed that the last note he had of cervical complaints prior to the accident date was November 2012, though Dr. Oestmann on 5/21/13 noted diagnoses that included "arthralgias, cervical disc degeneration, pineal cyst and cervical spondylosis." Dr. Treister agreed that people can have asymptomatic spinal degeneration per MRI/x-ray, and in fact "more often than not that's the case." Asked if Petitioner would be in the best position to determine how her symptoms may have changed since the accident, Dr. Treister testified: "Based upon my review of these records I wouldn't believe a word that this patient said." He testified this was based on her misrepresentation of her history to a number of different physicians, noting her physicians would have been dishonest if she reported her preexisting condition and they failed to indicate it in their records. He referenced multiple records as reflecting functional findings, widespread tenderness, global anesthesia and weakness, all of which are non-objective findings and were documented as Waddell findings. He couldn't find objective findings that correlated with recommendations. (Rx6).

On 10/1/15, Dr. Newell documented complaints of radiating pain to the left thigh and buttock and documented an essentially normal neurological exam on this date. He performed bilateral facet joint injections at L3/4 on 10/20/15. (Px14; Px15). Petitioner returned on 11/1/15 indicating she was nervous about physical therapy causing more pain. She reported a 40% improvement in her symptoms following the L3/4 facet injection. (Px14).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Lee on 11/9/15, noting injections for her back had not improved her shoulder pain. She said she was advised to get the shoulder surgery before back surgery but did not indicate who told her this. Surgery was planned but was not approved pending a Section 12 evaluation on behalf of Respondent. Another biceps injection was performed on 12/7/15. (Px11).

On 11/20/15, Petitioner returned to Dr. Jones, who again noted he wanted to hold off on neck treatment until the completion of left shoulder treatment given the significant improvement of her neck and left upper extremity symptoms following a left shoulder injection. Regarding her low back, Petitioner reported the L3/4 facet injections greatly helped her pain, but that the pain increased again with physical therapy. While he noted that surgery might still be needed for the L3/4 spondylolisthesis, he wanted to wait until the shoulder treatment was completed unless she developed any significant weakness in the upper part of her leg or in dorsiflexion of her foot. He noted spondylolisthesis, however, tends to get worse over time. He indicated she could work modified duty and indicated restrictions on lifting (5-10 pounds), repeated bend/stoop/squatting and no prolonged sitting. (Px13).

On 11/30/15, Petitioner returned to Dr. Newell. His review of Petitioner's imaging studies reflected arthritic changes in her neck and lower back as well as a lumbar spondylolisthesis. Petitioner noted relief with the facet injections but that her pain again flared either because of therapy or because it wore off. Dr. Newell suspected most of these conditions preexisted Petitioner's injury but were aggravated. She reported numbness in both feet since the accident. He commented that it was very difficult for him to evaluate causation in this case, his treatment being two years following the accident. Dr. Newell noted Petitioner's pain was "multifaceted" and recommended a second L3/4 injection, which Petitioner declined. He indicated her myofascial pain could be helped with significant postural changes. He also recommended continued physical therapy despite Petitioner's complaints that she felt it aggravated her pain and was fearful of therapy aggravating her pain. (Px14).

Petitioner was examined pursuant to Section 12 of the Act on 12/17/15 by orthopedic surgeon Dr. Emanuel for the left shoulder. He noted a "long and complicated history" and that he discussed this with Petitioner for 45 minutes. At the time of the accident, Petitioner reported instantaneous left arm pain, "basically a pop in her shoulder radiating up to her neck." She also reported right hip pain and a knifelike pain in the midportion of her back that was burning and radiating to the lower lumbar spine, and that within an hour her left leg was numb with tingling in her toes. Petitioner reported a history of cervical disc disease going back to 2012, and that she had a prior left shoulder injury at work in 2007, noting she returned to work after a week but continued to have off and on shoulder pain "but nothing to the degree she is currently experiencing." Petitioner reported that she had good relief with four injections to the shoulder with Dr. Lee, but that the relief has lasted for shorter periods with each one. She indicated she felt relief of the pain radiating into her neck. Current complaints included shooting pains from the shoulder to the neck, feeling like "rubber bands rolling underneath each other" in her shoulder when reaching overhead and even just with turning magazine pages, and paresthesias in the left arm and numbness in the hand. Following his examination, review of Petitioner's medical records and review of surveillance video, Dr. Emanuel diagnosed left AC joint arthritis, and opined that the work accident substantially aggravated this condition. This was in part based on the mechanism of injury and the Petitioner's report to him of a pop in the shoulder. He did not believe the mechanism of injury would have caused a rotator cuff or glenoid labrum tear. Dr. Emanuel also did not believe Petitioner showed signs of biceps tendonitis. The surveillance video did not change his opinions. He recommended subacromial decompression, distal clavicle resection and debridement of the rotator cuff. He indicated he also believed the Petitioner could have continued to work full duty as to the shoulder injury only, as he deferred any spinal opinions to spine specialists. (Rx17).

Petitioner again returned to Dr. Newell on 12/30/15, and at that time he noted multiple positive Waddell signs on exam, including moderate pain behavior, light touch pain, distraction difference on straight leg raise testing and non-anatomic pain. He again recommended diagnostic nerve blocks and that she attend therapy to learn postural correction. (Px14).

On 1/8/16, Dr. Newell performed diagnostic medial branch blocks at left L2, L3 and L4, noting the possibility of a radiofrequency ablation procedure in the future. Petitioner reported immediate 30% pain relief, and she was asked to keep a pain diary over the following 24 hours. On 1/26/16, Petitioner returned to Dr. Newell reporting no benefit from injections and that she had a lot of side effects including headache and with her vision. The doctor indicated she did not have enough benefit to consider radiofrequency ablation and given this and the side effects, he was "not too interested" in pursuing further injections. He once again recommended physical therapy given his belief that there was a muscular component to her problem with a lot of "dysfunctional movement." He believed it would be difficult to get her back to a pain free level given she was exhibiting chronic pain. (Px14).

Left shoulder surgery was performed on 2/11/16 by Dr. Lee. His operative report was not located in the record of evidence. The Arbitrator notes that Dr. Emanuel's review of the report indicates Dr. Lee performed repairs of subscapularis and supraspinatus tendon tears, debridement of the rotator cuff, biceps tenodesis and subacromial decompression. (Rx17). Post-surgery, Petitioner continued to follow up with Dr. Lee and underwent physical therapy while being held off work. Light duty restrictions were issued as to the shoulder on 4/1/16. (Px11).

On 2/26/16, Petitioner returned to Dr. Jones for a re-check. Petitioner reported she was doing fairly well and did not think she needed surgery. (Px13). On 3/29/16, Dr. Newell documented a normal physical and neurological exam. He noted her left-sided lower extremity symptoms could be related to L3/4 changes on the left but did not believe her right-sided lower extremity symptoms were related to Petitioner's 2015 lumbar MRI findings. Dr. Newell discussed Petitioner undergoing cognitive behavioral treatment and a comprehensive pain management program to address her subjective pain complaints. (Px14).

On 4/15/16, Petitioner returned to Dr. Jones. She described chronic, worsening, constant, severe symptoms in her low back, and radiating to the ankle on the left. He released Petitioner from his care on this date, advising her to return if her leg pain increased. (Px13).

On 5/24/16, Petitioner returned to Dr. Newell, and noted she had been to the ER due to severe pain in her left lower leg. He noted Petitioner's lumbar MRI taken that date revealed a new synovial cyst at L3/4 that was the possible source of her pain. He noted her work status was sedentary and she could return with occasional walking and standing, occasional lifting up to 10 pounds and no overhead work. (Px14).

It appears Petitioner last saw Dr. Newell on 7/7/16. In a note to Dr. Oestmann, he stated that Petitioner made some progress, but it was slow, and he didn't think she needed further injections given her poor response. Barring any other surgical recommendations, he believed Petitioner had reached MMI and recommended Petitioner work on weight loss and home exercise, and that she obtain an FCE to determine restrictions. (Px14).

On 7/27/16, Dr. Lee noted Petitioner was working light duty and has occasional biceps pain with activity, such as typing at work or pulling a door shut with backwards motion. Physical therapy "has stopped due to limitations with her back." (Px11).

On 4/6/16, Petitioner went to Southern Illinois Hospital stating she awoke that morning with bad sciatica and pain shooting down her left leg. She denied any new trauma. She noted a 4-day history of right big toe numbness. She reported that the way she had to lay in bed due to shoulder surgery resulted in her back being worse. Despite significant injections of morphine and Decadron, Petitioner complained of pain with no improvement. A consult with Dr. Jones resulted in her admission and recommendation of new MRI to see if anything changed. Following the 4/6/16 lumbar MRI, Dr. Jones indicated no changes were seen and he recommended discharging Petitioner with a Medrol dosepak with a plan to schedule elective L3/4 fusion surgery. (Px15).

Petitioner testified that the surgery with Dr. Lee helped her condition, and that post-surgical therapy helped "for a while." She testified that on one occasion in therapy when additional exercises were added to her routine, including wall push-ups and bands, something popped in her left arm, resulting in increased pain with neck pain and a "knot" in her biceps. At that point, Dr. Lee terminated therapy.

Petitioner was reexamined by Dr. Emanuel pursuant to Section 12 of the Act on 8/25/16. Petitioner reported she did well after surgery until being in therapy two months later and performing an exercise behind her back when she felt pop with immediate anterior and posterior shoulder pain. She reported improvement in her neck pain with the shoulder surgery. He noted that Petitioner's therapy and recommended work hardening were limited or discontinued due to her low back problems. Following exam and review of additional updated medical and noting that Dr. Lee did not perform the AC joint debridement he had recommended, Dr. Emanuel opined that Petitioner should undergo AC joint cartilage debridement and revision distal clavicle resection. He recommended work restrictions pending same. (Rx17).

On 10/26/16, Petitioner complained of biceps pain and that she had pain sleeping on her shoulder. She noted having had a Section 12 exam on 8/29/16. Dr. Lee indicated she had AC joint pain that day on exam, and that Dr. Emanuel had recommended a distal clavicle resection for this. However, given the Petitioner's neck and back condition possibly requiring surgery, Dr. Lee "agreed with her" that the shoulder could wait until the other issued were addressed. Dr. Lee also stated: "The painful tightness in her biceps is not specific enough to determine etiology nor treatment. Although it occurred during therapy, there does not appear to be enough asymmetry compared to the other side to suspect excess shortening." She was continued on light duty and was to return after her neck and back were addressed, noting if she had spine surgery that left her restricted from heavy lifting, another shoulder surgery might be unnecessary. (Px11).

Petitioner saw Dr. Alam on 10/27/16 and 11/28/16 on referral from Dr. Oestmann based on a history of paresthesias in her fingers, toes and feet. He more specifically noted complaints of numbness and tingling in the bilateral middle and ring fingers and in the bilateral middle and first toes with occasional numbness on the tops and sides of the feet. She had previously undergone bilateral carpal tunnel surgeries ten years ago. Neurologic exam was normal. While he stated that prior EMGs showed bilateral carpal tunnel and left ulnar neuropathy, the most recent EMG report specifically stated that there were no findings of ulnar neuropathy. Petitioner reported shoulder surgery helped her left arm pain, and that bilateral carpal tunnel releases helped the paresthesias, but that "her symptoms have come back", including other fingers. Dr. Alam stated that 11/4/16 EMG/NCVs reflected right L5 and left L3 radiculopathies, left C4/5 nerve root irritability without frank radiculopathy and mild bilateral sensory carpal tunnel. Petitioner was noted to be taking Gabapentin, Hydrocodone and Flexeril as needed, and she was advised to follow up in three months. (Px6).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Lee on 12/16/16, noting ongoing shoulder problems and a knot at the biceps and that she wanted to discuss surgery. Dr. Lee noted that some of the Petitioner's complaints could be neck related, that he didn't believe there was a surgical remedy for the biceps knot, and that the clavicle resection could help with her catching pain but not all of her symptoms. Petitioner wanted to proceed despite the risks even if there was only a 50% chance of improving her pain. Light duty was continued. (Px11).

Petitioner underwent the second left shoulder surgery with Dr. Lee on 2/23/17 for left AC joint inflammation, consisting of diagnostic arthroscopy and open distal clavicle resection. His report notes the arthroscopy noted intact rotator cuff repairs involving the subscapularis and supraspinatus tendons. There were no significant or unusual adhesions. (Px11; Px16). She attended therapy at Joyner for a short time post-operatively. The records from this facility note consistent complaints of increased pain after treatments and Petitioner terminated therapy as of 5/8/17, indicating this was per her doctor's orders. (Px17).

Following the second left shoulder surgery, Petitioner testified to only "some" improvement. She testified that because she knew the protocol from after the first surgery, Dr. Lee advised her to perform a home therapy program, which she did, and prescribed Toradol and Percocet. Petitioner continued to follow up with Dr. Lee until her release at MMI on 6/9/17. Petitioner was continued off work and advised to work on range of motion at home. While his 3/8/17 note continued Petitioner off work, on 4/5/17 Petitioner noted her pain had improved, including her bicep, but that she had triceps burning and pain with keyboarding. She denied numbness and tingling. She was advised to discontinue the use of a sling other than as needed and was released to light duty. On 5/5/17, Petitioner reported "therapy is tearing her up." Petitioner continued to report she had "herniated discs" in her neck and back. She was advised to stop formal therapy and to continued light exercises at home that didn't involve her neck. Light duty was continued and she was offered Toradol if needed. (Px11).

A lumbar MRI was performed on 5/11/17 that was compared to the 4/6/16 films, noting no significant changes with ongoing increased signal at the left L3 and L4 pedicles that could be stress reaction or reactive edema, and the L3/4 synovial cyst was no longer evident. (Px15).

On 6/9/17 Petitioner reported the Toradol helped her pain, and she was also taking Norco and Flexeril. Dr. Lee noted the true limitations of the shoulder could not be determined given the neck and back problems also limit her abilities to lift outstretched and overhead. She was to see her primary provider for medications, and she was released to return as needed with ongoing restrictions on the shoulder: no overhead or outstretched lifting or work, keyboarding as tolerated, and lifting/pushing/pulling up to 5 pounds but only close to her body. (Px11).

On 7/13/17, Dr. Emanuel reviewed the Petitioner's second shoulder operative report and noted the prior surgical tendon repairs remained intact but he biceps tenodesis failed, leaving Petitioner with essentially a biceps tenotomy, for which he did not recommend further surgery. He noted Dr. Lee wanted Petitioner to obtain an FCE to determine any permanent restrictions, but that she was not cleared for this due to her back condition. Dr. Emanuel opined that Petitioner had reached MMI for the left shoulder. He opined Petitioner should be restricted from lifting over 25 pounds from floor to waist, 15 pounds from waist to shoulder and 5 pounds above shoulder height. He also recommended no repetitive shoulder height or above reaching, pushing, pulling or lifting. On 8/23/27, Dr. Emanuel provided an AMA impairment rating based on the Sixth Edition of 9% of the left upper extremity, or 5% of the body as a whole. (Px17). Dr. Emanuel testified on 10/2/17 consistently with his reports. (Rx16).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Alam on 9/12/17, noting she had undergone a second shoulder surgery but that her arm and fingers still go numb, mainly the left three middle fingers, as well as the right middle finger. Petitioner indicated she was seeing Dr. Jones for cervical radiculopathy, but that it was unclear if her ongoing numbness was due to the neck or carpal tunnel/ulnar neuropathy, so repeat EMG/NCV studies were ordered. (Px6).

The 9/15/17 EMG/NCV report indicated the study was consistent with mild/moderate bilateral carpal tunnel, left greater than right, mild left ulnar neuropathy at the elbow and C5/6 nerve root irritability without frank radiculopathy. At Petitioner's 10/11/17 follow up with Dr. Alam, he advised her to follow up with an orthopedic surgeon for evaluation of carpal tunnel and ulnar neuropathy, and prescribed elbow and wrist braces. Per the last report of Dr. Alam in evidence from 12/12/17, he noted Petitioner had been seen by an ortho and was prescribed braces. (Px6).

Petitioner testified she earned $25.18 per hour as an x-ray tech for Respondent, and that x-ray technicians there continue to earn this wage. She currently earns $15.18 and continues to receive ongoing wage differential benefits.

Petitioner testified she had immediate neck and back pain after the accident and reported this to her physicians. She has been prescribed medication and therapy for her neck and low back. She's had a brace and injections for the low back, but the neck has not been injected. Her medications have included hydrocodone, acetaminophen, gabapentin and Zanaflex. Petitioner acknowledged that she became addicted to hydrocodone and has been trying to wean herself off it, indicating she has reduced her use from 6 to 8 per day to 1 to 3 per day.

Petitioner testified her left shoulder remains weak with pain and burning. Her left bicep will burn, hurt and cramp up. The top of her shoulder is numb, and her fingers and feet will go numb. She has good range of motion but has pain with putting her arm behind her back. Petitioner testified she is a musician who plays multiple instruments, and that her injuries limit her ability to play, particularly the fiddle. It also hampers her ability to do side work as a freelance graphic artist. She is awakened at times when sleeping in certain positions.

As to her neck, Petitioner testified she has pain between the neck and shoulder area, and typically has shoulder and neck pain together, sometimes under her jaw. Her low back pain is worse on the left than the right and she feels a knot from the left bra line to her left waist. She feels tingling on the left side and stabbing pain with prolonged walking or standing. She testified: "It feels like there's little bugs that crawl up and down my back on that left side." Her back always aches between the shoulder blades, sometimes with sharp pain like a knife, and at times gets so severe that she has to stop what she's doing to change positions.

On cross-examination, Petitioner agreed that Respondent authorized both left shoulder surgeries and paid her TTD benefits while off work for that left shoulder condition. Petitioner admitted she had cervical problems prior to her 7/13/13 accident, and did not dispute reporting to Dr. Oestmann, her primary provider, on 8/23/11 that she had numbness in fingers. She did not disagree with any of the indications in Oestmann's records of her complaints of neck and back pain. She agreed that Dr. Oestmann in June 2012 referred her to surgeon Dr. Taveau for her neck, and that at that time she complained of constant pain in her neck, both shoulders and both sides of her upper back with radiating pain into both arms and all of her fingers. She was referred for a cervical MRI in October 2012.

Petitioner agreed that subsequent to the work accident she saw both Dr. Taveau and Dr. Criste, and both assessed her with a potential lumbar problem at L1/2. She did not dispute the accuracy of any of her subjective complaints in their records. Petitioner agreed she also saw surgeon Dr. Hayward in Cape Girardeau in July 2013, and agreed she had no reason to dispute anything in his records.

As to her October 2013 visit with Dr. Cantrell, Petitioner agreed she was limping at the time. Respondent's counsel indicated she did not appear to be limping at the time of the hearing, and Petitioner testified she still limps but "I try to hide it." Dr. Cantrell indicated in his report that the Petitioner initially had her head tilted to the right side then switched it to the left side halfway through the exam. Noting she had it tilted to the right at hearing, the Petitioner testified: "I shift a lot. I'm sort of wiggly. Even sitting here, I feel like I am a wiggle worm, but I change positions often."

Petitioner reviewed the surveillance videos taken of her on 8/28/13 and 9/5/13, prior to her seeing Dr. Cantrell, and she agreed they don't show her limping. She testified that she doesn't limp "non-stop", and that it depends on her pain level. She agreed, however, that she told Cantrell in that she had been favoring her right leg since July 2013.

Petitioner agreed the first treatment she sought for her low back following Dr. Heyward's February 2014 release was when she saw Dr. Jones in September 2015. She testified she knew Dr. Jones from working with him at the Respondent hospital. She agreed she trusted him, and that she had reviewed his records and deposition prior to the hearing. She understood he testified he never saw her prior back or neck scans. She testified she didn't catch that he testified he never saw her post-accident scans but indicated he should have had access to her 9/15 MRI at Cedar Court MRI.

Advised that Dr. Jones indicated that Petitioner reported she had no pre-accident neck or back pain when she first saw him on 9/18/15, Petitioner denied that this was accurate: "We talked about that I had some bulging discs before but never herniated disc." She disputed it if he indicated he had no knowledge of her pre-accident neck or back conditions.

Petitioner agreed that her current job is within her work restrictions. She testified that a recent raise is what got her up to $15.18 per hour. She agreed that the documentation of her wages in Rx18 is accurate. The portions where she earned $0 in February and March of 2017 represented the periods she was receiving TTD.

On redirect exam, Petitioner testified she knew both Dr. Taveau and Dr. Jones from working with them at the Respondent's hospital facility and that Dr. Taveau was aware that she had neck and back problems prior to the accident date. She wasn't sure if Dr. Jones did or not.

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Lee testified by way of deposition on 11/23/15, and he indicated his practice is mainly focused on the upper extremities. When Petitioner presented to him on 11/19/14 on referral from Dr. Oestmann, examination of the left shoulder reflected pain over the tuberosity where the rotator cuff attaches, pain along the biceps over the front of the shoulder, good range of motion and strength, and pain with positions like crossing her arm in front of her body and raising the arm. She did not report any pre-accident shoulder problems. He reviewed MRI reports of her entire spine and left shoulder, noting he likely only reviewed the films themselves for the left shoulder. He believed her examination was consistent with a partial rotator cuff tear, and he felt it was more likely than not related to the accident. He also diagnosed cervical radiculopathy. Petitioner indicated she was going to have an evaluation with a spine surgeon, after which she was to follow up with Dr. Lee "accordingly." On 6/25/15, Petitioner reported approximately 75% relief with injection that had lasted for two to four months. Most of the pain returned to the front of her shoulder, and he testified that the injections to the biceps provided more relief than those to the rotator cuff. His diagnosis at that point included biceps tendonitis. At her 11/9/15 follow up, Petitioner continued to have localized pain over the biceps in front of the shoulder. Dr. Lee was not aware of any intervening accidents since he first saw her. At that point he recommended surgery to perform biceps tenodesis and exploration and possible repair of the rotator cuff. He testified that he did not believe he had ever issued work restrictions for Petitioner. He received and reviewed the surveillance videos taken of Petitioner. (Px18).

On cross, Dr. Lee testified he had not reviewed any of Petitioner's records from prior to her first visit with him other than the noted MRIs, so the history of Petitioner's complaints came directly from her. He agreed she reported complaints of symptoms down her left arm into the fingers and in the bilateral legs, and she reported no prior treatment. He wasn't sure if this referred to only to shoulder treatment or regarding all of the symptoms she reported. He agreed Petitioner's shoulder MRI referenced a 2007 shoulder injury, and that his copy has some "scribbling" that states "wrong/false" and some attempted clarification, but he couldn't say who wrote it, agreeing it could have been Petitioner who brought it to him. There was no way to tell from the MRI if there were any acute findings, particularly given the MRI was taken over a year after the accident. There was degeneration, especially with the labrum. He agreed he didn't initially diagnose a biceps tear and that he did think some of her symptoms were related to radiculopathy, but noted she initially had some biceps symptoms and he diagnosed it the second time because the problem was still present. He has never reviewed any of Petitioner's records regarding cervical treatment. (Px18).

Dr. Lee agreed Petitioner first reported a catching sensation in the shoulder on 6/15/15 but opined this would be related to the accident if its related to the partial cuff tear. He agreed he didn't initially recommend treatment for the shoulder on 11/19/14 because she was to have a cervical evaluation. As to why he then didn't think it was important to see how that treatment went before operating on the shoulder, he testified Petitioner's most recent focus has been on the low back, and her back surgeon said to treat the shoulder first – "she didn't say she needed neck surgery beforehand." If the Petitioner actually had a cervical treatment recommendation in January 2015, it could make him reconsider shoulder surgery depending on the condition. No cervical surgeon had indicated he should go first with the shoulder per Petitioner. As to the video surveillance, Dr. Lee testified that he did not believe that Petitioner's lifting of a gas can was contraindicated, because Petitioner was not engaged in any outstretched lifting or lifting to any significant height. She moved the can a short distance to the back seat of her car and did not perform any twisting movements. (Px18).

Family practitioner Dr. Oestmann testified on 3/15/16. His first post-accident visit with Petitioner was on 8/20/13, at which time she reported complaints of pain in her back, neck, thoracic spine, lumbar spine and left shoulder. She also complained of some right foot numbness. He testified that Petitioner came to him distressed because her pain was not resolved despite being seen by three other doctors (Dr. Taveau, Dr. Alam and Respondent's examiner). Dr. Oestmann changed Petitioner's medication to Relafen, Tylenol with codeine, and Soma, and advised her to take Prilosec to protect gastrointestinal tract from the medication. Dr. Oestmann opined that Petitioner's neck symptoms were related to the accident. Her condition since 8/20/13 has been "one of chronic discomfort, waxing and waning a little bit of how severe the symptoms were. Sometimes more neck or – symptoms, sometimes more back symptoms and shoulder symptoms." Some medications have worked for a period of time before they don't work anymore, or they cause a side effect and she stops taking them, and he has referred her for pain management. He testified that if all of the Petitioner's symptoms resolve with shoulder surgery, that would likely indicate the shoulder was the problem, but that he would defer any opinions regarding the shoulder to Dr. Lee or any other orthopedic shoulder surgeon involved. On cross-examination, Dr. Oestmann agreed Petitioner had a prior cervical issue where an MRI was ordered, and she was referred to Dr. Taveau in 2012. He agreed Dr. Taveau indicated the MRI showed a C6/7 disc-osteophyte complex. Dr. Taveau on 11/20/12 also indicated that Petitioner had degenerative disc disease in the cervical spine with disc displacement and radiculitis, and he recommended cervical surgery. Dr. Oestmann agreed he didn't really perform a neurologic examination on Petitioner either before or after the accident date but did note a positive straight leg raise on 8/20/13. He agreed a lot of his notes indicated tenderness in the cervical, lumbar and thoracic spine, but that he didn't really make any focal physical findings regarding these complaints. Dr. Oestmann testified that Petitioner's 8/5/14 and 5/5/15 visits were unrelated to the accident. (Px19).

Neurosurgeon Dr. Jones was deposed by the parties on 7/19/16. He first saw Petitioner on 9/18/15. Petitioner reported shoulder, neck and back pain following an injury at work. The history noted symptoms that had been chronic and nontraumatic, and Dr. Jones testified that some of her symptoms had been longstanding "but they've gotten a lot worse after that incident at the hospital." Petitioner reported pushing a fluoroscopy unit, she had to jerk it back to avoid hitting someone and "I guess it was a twisting-type injury." She had neck and radicular pain that matched with MRI findings at C6/7. She had degenerative changes through the cervical spine. She had a slight C4 over C5 anterolisthesis, which is frequently degenerative, but the radicular arm pain appeared related to C6/7. Dr. Jones didn't review any outside records other than the MRIs. There were no significant findings on examination: "It was mostly pain-type symptoms that we were dealing with." In the low back, MRI showed L3 over L4 spondylolisthesis with a synovial cyst at the same level, "all of which can cause problems for her in the future." (Px20).

Because neck problems and shoulder problems can have overlapping symptoms, because Petitioner had significant improvement with a shoulder injection, and because Petitioner had already been set up for shoulder surgery when she first saw Dr. Jones, he recommended she have the shoulder surgery first to then evaluate if there were remaining symptoms from the neck. Some of her degenerative changes were likely preexisting the accident date, but Dr. Jones had no record of her being symptomatic prior to the accident. Petitioner completed an intake form that asked if she had similar prior symptoms "and she stated that it's not like this. She probably had the same, you know, minimal back and neck pain that we have, you know, as we get older, but this was clearly worse." (Px20).

Dr. Jones diagnosed radicular symptoms likely coming from C6/7, which he wanted to clarify by getting the shoulder addressed first, and L3/4 spondylolisthesis that "may need to be addressed in the future" with a fusion depending on how she does clinically. He recommended L3/4 injections, for both diagnostic and therapeutic purposes. (Px20).

On 11/20/15, he testified that Petitioner reported significant improvement with injections and a reduction in pain medication, but that she worsened again with therapy. She reported that she did very well following her left shoulder surgery. He last saw Petitioner on 4/15/16, and she'd had severe left leg pain to where she was seen in the ER, but she had significant improvement with steroids. He believed it would be best for Petitioner to delay surgery for as long as possible, until she had leg pain too severe to live with, and she was released from care. With regard to causal connection, Dr. Jones testified that it was hard to say whether Petitioner's cervical and lumbar conditions were related to the work accident without having pre and post-accident films to compare anatomically. However, based on the Petitioner's report that she had no prior significant symptoms and treatment and much more severe symptoms after the accident, the accident probably aggravated, or at least exacerbated, her underlying cervical and lumbar conditions "unless she's got a history of seeing doctors for neck and back pain." (Px20).

On cross exam, Dr. Jones testified that he reviewed Petitioner's 2015 cervical and lumbar MRIs from Cedar Court Imaging; however, he did not review any of Petitioner's prior, multiple diagnostic scans from either before or after the work injury. He agreed his initial 9/18/15 examination of Petitioner did not indicate any significant abnormalities that would lead to possible surgery, and that his diagnoses were based on Petitioner's subjective complaints. Agreeing his 9/18/15 report notes Petitioner reported no prior neck or back pain, Dr. Jones testified that whether this mattered to his causation opinion "depends on how much she was having, because I would be really surprised if she didn't have some neck or back pain in her life, because when you look at her MRI, all of that stuff on her MRI wasn't from that accident. So she had – I mean, she had some degenerative arthritic changes beforehand, so I would expect that she has kind of neck and back pain like me. That is, I have neck and back pain, and its something, you know, when you get up in the morning, it's hard to move around, and then after the day goes by, you feel better or as the more you move. So, yes, I don't think it would change the fact that it got much worse after surgery; however, it depends what she was complaining of before and if she had films of it before." He then went on to testify that if Petitioner had "multiple MRIs and it's shown that she had the leg pain beforehand, then you could argue that, well, maybe all this stuff preexisted the accident. The problem is if she just had minor pain, I would expect her to have that based on her MRIs, because there's no way all of that degenerative stuff was there just after the accident." (Px20).

Dr. Jones further testified that the L3/4 spondylolisthesis is "tricky" in terms of causation, since the initial post-accident films were not obtained until two years after the accident "so we don't know if that slip occurred because of the incident two years before." He testified that his thinking on causation would be the same with the cervical spine, but "It's a little different with the cervical because there is no instability in the neck other than some at C4/5, but it appeared her arm symptoms were coming from C6/7, though her neck pain still could have been from C4/5." Again, he reiterated that Petitioner reported that her spinal condition became much worse after the work accident. The cervical anterolisthesis and the lumbar spondylolisthesis could be degenerative. He also reiterated that there is no way to tell if there were any anatomical changes in the cervical or lumbar spine due to the accident, "so we're basically going off of just subjective complaints." There is no way to say how the spine may have changed between the accident date and the 2015 MRIs while she was undergoing conservative treatment. (Px20).

As to the cervical condition, Dr. Jones testified that Petitioner did really well after her shoulder surgery, and regardless of that most radicular symptoms like Petitioner had, about 80%, go away on their own. He testified that she had reached MMI as to the neck. Petitioner's main issue at her last visit was her lumbar spine, and he testified it was fair to say that there were no objective physical or neurological findings on exam which would correlate to L3/4. Again, he is not recommending lumbar surgery unless her leg pain becomes intolerable or she develops leg weakness, though he believed it would probably be needed at some point in the future, though he remained hopeful she would never need it. He testified that he knows the Petitioner from her being an x-ray tech for many years at the hospital. (Px20).

Dr. Zelby, a neurosurgeon who examined Petitioner at the Respondent's request on 6/3/15, testified via deposition on 9/28/15. Petitioner reported to Dr. Zelby a pre-accident history of a little neck pain in 2012, but that her neck pain was much less severe than it was following her work accident. She stated she was told in 2012 that she had only degenerative disc disease in her neck. Petitioner also reported a pre-accident history of low back pain which, again, was less severe than following her work accident. Petitioner stated that, following her work accident, she felt pain instantly in her neck on her left side, going through her left shoulder, and down the front of her left arm to the elbow, with numbness on the back of the left forearm into the back of her hands and fingers. Petitioner also described a sharp, stabbing pain in her lower thoracic, upper lumbar area with a feeling like heat and burning radiating down the spinal axis on to the outside of the right hip and right thigh, with tingling down the outside of the right foreleg to the little toe. Petitioner further described more severe pain along the left side of the low back into the outside of the left hip and down the front of the left thigh and foreleg to the foot, with numbness in the bottoms of both feet. Petitioner told Dr. Zelby she had continued to have the same complaints, and her symptoms were constant and at an 8 out of 10 level. He testified that she did not appear to be at this pain level to observation. (Rx1).

Dr. Zelby testified that Petitioner's reported persistence and severity of her symptoms was inconsistent with the objective medical findings, as well as with the natural history of her objective medical condition, irrespective of cause. He testified that Petitioner's indicated diminished sensation was non-anatomic and it was not possible for her to have such sensory deficits be related to the spine or nervous system. Other non-anatomic findings made by Dr, Zelby, Waddell signs of symptoms magnification, were non-anatomic diminished vibratory sensation and positive pain on simulation. He testified to the cervical findings in Petitioner's two pre-accident MRIs and Dr. Taveau's 10/10/12 cervical surgical recommendation, and that this was not consistent with Petitioner's stated history of mild cervical problems. Dr. Zelby testified that there were no interval changes between the pre-accident October 2010 cervical MRI and post-accident 8/9/13 cervical MRI, which was even noted by the radiologist. (Rx1).

Dr. Zelby testified that Petitioner had no objective physical findings that would correlate with her cervical MRI findings. Her lumbar examination was normal, and while she did have some degeneration and disc protrusions, she was neurologically normal. He opined there was no evidence that Petitioner's preexisting degenerative spine conditions (cervical, thoracic and lumbar) were aggravated by the accident. Noting Dr. Riew recommended therapy and nerve blocks for the lumbar spine, Dr. Zelby testified he disagreed with Dr. Taveau's cervical surgery recommendation. In support of his opinion, Dr. Zelby testified again that there was no correlation between the subjective complaints and her cervical MRI findings, and that suggesting a discectomy at two separate non-contiguous levels is a poor biomechanical surgical construct. The lack of any real correlation between the symptoms and the MRI findings does not provide a reasonable expectation that surgery would provide relief to Petitioner. As to the low back, she has a small L1/2 right paracentral disc protrusion but no symptoms relatable to L2 radiculopathy. She had symptoms that questionably followed an L4 pattern, but the small disc she had at left L3/4 would impact L3, not L4. (Rx1).

Based on his review of everything and examination of Petitioner, Dr. Zelby opined that Petitioner sustained no more than a cervical strain in the context of her preexisting degenerative condition. There is no medical evidence supporting that the preexisting condition was aggravated, accelerated or altered by the July 2013 accident. Plus, she had the noted inconsistencies between her complaints and exam and diagnostic findings. He opined she would have been at MMI by October or November of 2013, and there was no basis to conclude she couldn't have returned to her regular work at that time. (Rx1).

On cross examination, Dr. Zelby testified he believed he was he was qualified to opine as to the Petitioner's physical condition and work ability more than a year-and-a-half prior to his exam, even though his opinion conflicted with the opinions of other contemporaneous physicians, based on his review of their records and his exam. During cross-examination, Petitioner's attorney sought to ask questions regarding the intake questionnaire completed by Petitioner, but Dr. Zelby indicated all he keeps is his electronic record and that he shredded it. Dr. Zelby agreed that while he found no evidence of atrophy, Dr. Riew noted findings of atrophy in Petitioner's left upper arm. He testified he had no opinion as to whether the Petitioner sustained a shoulder injury from the accident and he paid no attention to any diagnostic testing of the shoulder. He acknowledged that Dr. Riew also noted pain over the left aspect of Petitioner's neck with pain at the base of her skull into her left shoulder. He had no knowledge of whether Petitioner had undergone any left nerve root blocks or what the results of such blocks may have been. Dr. Zelby testified that he himself does not perform nerve blocks "because I think that the information provided is confusing at best and useless at worst." He testified that, based on his review of Petitioner's cervical MRI reports, she had some progression of problems from 2003 to 2011, little if any progression from 2011 to 2012, and no progression from 2012 to 2013. As to whether a doctor can determine if a pathology is acute or not via diagnostic films, he testified: "Sometimes you can. Sometimes you can't" Asked if Petitioner's treatment prior to his exam had been reasonable, Dr. Zelby again referenced that Petitioner had pre and post-accident cervical treatment, and that there "is such a disconnect between her objective findings and her subjective complaints" that any treatment is questionable as necessary, but he reiterated that any treatment after November 2013 would be unrelated to the accident. Asked again, Dr. Zelby opined that post-accident an MRI and four or so weeks of physical therapy would have been reasonable as a consequence of the work injury. As to the 9/6/13 cervical x-ray, he was asked if he agreed with the report indicating an acute L1/2 disc herniation, and Dr. Zelby testified: "I reviewed that MRI." He testified that he agreed there was a disc protrusion at that level and that it could have been acute, but that Petitioner had no symptoms suggestive of an L2 radiculopathy. As to Dr. Taveau's 9/6/13 report, he testified the report only states that Petitioner reported having L1 and L2 radiculopathy and questioned her expertise to make such determination. Dr. Zelby acknowledged he did not review Petitioner's lower extremity EMG prior to his report and did not know why it was not provided to him. It was noted that Taveau's 9/6/13 report also indicated that EMG/NCV confirmed an L1/2 radiculopathy in addition to C4 and C7 radiculopathy. (Rx1).

Physical medicine and rehabilitation physician Dr. Cantrell testified via deposition on 12/15/15. His expertise is in evaluating and treating musculoskeletal conditions and injuries. He testified his initial 10/10/13 report was prepared based solely on a request for his opinion on Petitioner's ability to work. Petitioner told him she had subjective complaints of pain complaints in her right lower extremity that was causing her to limp as well as symptoms in her axial spine. On physical exam of her cervical spine, Petitioner had limitation of neck rotation, moderate to the left and mild to the right while flexion and extension was full. She had mild limitations in bilateral side bending. She had relief of her neck complaints at the end range of extension. Dr. Cantrell noted that Petitioner was holding her head bent to the right initially during the exam, and then later had it bent to the left, and testified this was unusual if it was an involuntary muscle spasm or contraction. The left shoulder had normal range of motion and good strength. On physical exam of the lumbar spine, Dr. Cantrell noted negative bilateral straight leg testing and normal neurologic exam in the upper and lower extremities. Petitioner ambulated with a limp favoring her right lower extremity, noting she had right hip and knee pain with walking. She noted she had a shaking sensation at the end range of back extension, and that she had occasional tremor feeling in the right arm. (Rx3).

Dr. Cantrell reviewed the two surveillance videos from 8/28/13 and 9/6/13 and testified Petitioner was ambulating without any obvious antalgia, entering and exiting vehicles without any obvious pain behaviors, bending freely at the waist while filling a portable gas tank, and lifting the gas tank and placing it into her vehicle. He testified that several of these behaviors were inconsistent with how the Petitioner presented at his office on 10/10/13. (Rx3).

Consistent with his report, Dr. Cantrell opined that Petitioner was capable of working with a 40-pound lifting restriction and the ability to alternate sitting and standing every two hours when he saw her on 10/10/13. These restrictions were not permanent. Because the Petitioner had previously been placed on fairly restrictive restrictions before he saw her, he didn't want her to return immediately to full duty in case of deconditioning. Dr. Cantrell reviewed updated medical records on or about 9/14/15 and opined at that time that Petitioner could return to her regular work duties. This was based on Dr. Zelby's findings a month after Cantrell had seen Petitioner, including normal neurologic exam and the presence of non-physiologic pain behaviors that had been noted several times in her medical records, and the passage of time (Rx3).

On cross examination, Dr. Cantrell agreed that he had not reviewed any of Petitioner's records subsequent to Dr. Zelby's June 2015 report, and he was not aware that Dr. Lee had subsequently prescribed left shoulder surgery. He had no opinion as to causation and no opinion regarding whether such surgery would be reasonable or not. (Rx3).

Px21 is the Petitioner's Motion to Strike the Respondent's expert opinion, that of Dr. Zelby. (Px21). This was significantly based on Dr. Zelby's indication that he shredded an intake form the Petitioner completed, as well as his refusal to answer questions. As to the former concern, the Arbitrator notes that Dr. Zelby summarized in his report what the Petitioner indicated in the intake form, and that under the circumstances of this case, this does not appear to be much different than the doctor indicating what he may have verbally heard from a patient. The Arbitrator finds that this objection would go to the weight of the evidence as opposed to the admissibility. As to the latter concern, the Arbitrator notes for the record that a review of Dr. Zelby's cross examination does reflect a level of contentiousness in his responses from early on in that testimony without any instigation, however the Arbitrator again finds that this issue goes to the weight of the opinions of Dr. Zelby as opposed to the admissibility of his opinions. The Arbitrator denies the Petitioner's Motion to Strike (Px21).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUE (F), IS THE PETITIONER'S PRESENT CONDITION OF ILL-BEING CAUSALLY RELATED TO THE INJURY, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

The parties stipulated that the Petitioner's left shoulder condition is causally related to the 7/12/13 accident. This is supported by the opinions of Dr. Lee and Dr. Emanuel.

It has long been recognized that, in preexisting condition cases, recovery will depend on the employee's ability to show that a work-related accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the preexisting disease such that the employee's current condition of ill-being can be said to have been causally connected to the work-related injury and not simply the result of a normal degenerative process of the preexisting condition Whether a claimant's disability is attributable solely to a degenerative process of the preexisting condition or to an aggravation or acceleration of a preexisting condition because of an accident is a factual determination to be decided by the Commission. Sisbro, Inc.v. Industrial Comm'n., 207 Ill. 2d 193 (2003).

With regard to the Petitioner's claimed cervical injury, the Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner sustained a minor temporary aggravation of a preexisting condition, and that she shortly thereafter returned to her baseline preexisting condition. Any future treatment for the cervical spine is not related to the 7/12/13 accident.

Petitioner was initially diagnosed with a cervical strain. Petitioner had an undisputed history of cervical and radicular complaints and treatment going back to 2011, when she underwent cervical MRIs that showed multilevel degenerative changes, most significantly at C6-7. In 2012 she reported a two-year history of symptoms, meaning they go back to 2010.

Petitioner's preexisting cervical condition was referenced by both Dr. Oestmann and Dr. Taveau. On 6/27/12, a year prior to the accident, Petitioner reported a two-year history of worsening constant neck pain that was also in the upper back, shoulders and arms with radiation into the arms, hands and bilateral thumbs and index fingers, along with numbness in the arms. The left arm was the worst. She had seen Dr. Taveau, a neurosurgeon, on 7/27/12 with complaints of constant neck pain that was aching, piercing, sharp, and tingling. Her pain was located all over her upper body: in the bilateral anterior neck, lateral neck, posterior neck, shoulders, arms, upper back, scapulars, and interscapulars. She also reported radiation of pain to her bilateral upper arms, elbows, forearms, wrists, hands, thumbs, and index fingers. He documented that the symptoms were aggravated by a wide variety of activities, including bending, coughing, driving, exertion, flexion, lifting, lying down, pushing, rotation, sneezing, straining, turning her head, twisting, and working.

On 11/7/12, Dr. Taveau noted complaints of severe neck pain, arm pain, numbness, tingling, and Lhermittes symptoms with cervical range of motion. At her post-accident visit with Dr. Taveau on 8/19/13, he recorded virtually identical subjective complaints and exam findings. While he documented a "worsening" of Petitioner's preexisting thoracic and lumbar symptoms, but not the cervical symptoms. 10/10/12 cervical MRI testing showed a large C6/7 disc/osteophyte complex with severe bilateral foraminal stenosis. Dr. Taveau in late 2012 recommended either a fusion or disc replacement at that level and specifically noted that Petitioner did not want to have surgery at that time. 10/10/12 x-rays showed minimal but present subluxations at both C4/5 and C5/6 that were noted to be chronic at that time. The cervical MRI also showed degenerative C4 over C5 anterolisthesis, mild C4/5 and moderate C6/7 central canal stenosis and multilevel hypertrophic facet arthropathy that was worst from C4 to C6. Foraminal stenosis was indicated at C2/3, C4/5 and C6/7 that was mainly all due to degeneration/hypertrophy. On 11/7/12, Petitioner complained to Dr. Taveau of thoracic pain between her shoulder blades. Dr. Taveau noted the MRI showed disc-osteophyte complexes at C4/5 and C6/7 along with the subluxed levels. 11/16/12 EMG/NCV indicated a left C6/7 radiculopathy, mild bilateral carpal tunnel (left worse than right) and mild left ulnar neuropathy at the elbow, and a history of left neck pain radiating and shooting into the left arm with tingling and numbness in the left hand was noted. A cervical MRI report from 9/15/15 noted findings that were grossly unchanged versus 10/10/12 pre-accident films.

Petitioner's subjective cervical and radicular complaints do not appear reliable based on the evidence. As noted, the records do not support any significant worsening of her cervical condition after 7/12/13 versus what she was complaining of in 2012. At that time, in fact, she was complaining of bilateral symptoms and reported to Dr. Taveau on 6/27/12 that her two-year history of neck pain had been worsening at that time. Again, there was really no difference between Petitioner's initial complaints to Dr. Taveau after the accident and what she was reporting in 2012. Petitioner undisputedly had degenerative findings on her pre- and post-accident x-rays and MRI studies. Dr. Taveau, Dr. Jones, Dr. Riew, Dr. Zelby, Dr. Treister, and the interpreting radiologists, all believed Petitioner's most significant findings were at C4/5 and C6/7, the same levels indicated prior to the accident at issue here. Petitioner's subjective complaints, however, were widespread.

Several of Petitioner's own treating physicians, as well as Respondent's examining physicians, documented instances of Waddell findings and/or symptom magnification during Petitioner's treatment. The WorkCare records from 7/22/13 note sensory deficit with light touch on neurological exam. On 8/19/13, Dr. Taveau documented "significant" pain with any range of motion in her cervical, thoracic, and lumbar spine. On 2/18/14, Petitioner underwent therapy at Occupational Performance and Rehab, and the records document multiple instances of self-limiting behaviors. When Dr. Hayward learned of this from the therapist, he discharged Petitioner from his care. In 2015, Dr. Newell documented multiple Waddell findings during his physical examination and his ultimate recommendation on 3/28/16 was that Petitioner pursue pain management and cognitive behavioral therapy. Dr. Hayward also noted Petitioner's arm complaints were "in an incomplete dermatomal distribution."

Dr. Zelby, Respondent's Section 12 examiner, also documented evidence of symptom magnification on 6/3/15. He noted that her widespread complaints did not follow any known pattern that would relate them to being caused by a spinal problem. This included loss of sensation to her entire left upper extremity, her entire left foreleg and the entire aspects of both feet. Dr. Zelby testified that no condition of a person's spine or nervous system would produce such sensory deficits.

The surveillance video in this case, while minimal in terms of the amount of time Petitioner was actually filmed, was nevertheless telling and cannot be ignored. The reason the Arbitrator finds the video relevant is that the Petitioner shows no evidence of a limp or significant back problems, based on scenes of her walking and lifting a large gas can into her car after filling it at a pump, versus the complaints she was making to her doctors around this same time. These 8/28/13 and 9/5/13 videos were taken within days of Dr. Criste's 9/6/13 exam, where Petitioner complained of a gait disturbance, and just before her exam with Dr. Cantrell on 10/10/13, where he observed Petitioner walking with a limp and she told him that she had been limping since the accident date. Petitioner agreed the videos do not show her limping but testified that she doesn't limp "non-stop" and that it depends on her pain level. In the arbitrator's view, this explanation is self-serving and simply not believable in the context of all of the evidence in this case.

There also are too many instances in this case where the Petitioner was not truly forthcoming about her preexisting complaints and conditions. This includes her history statements to Dr. Hayward, Dr. Riew and Dr. Jones. Petitioner admitted she failed to tell Dr. Riew that she had multiple MRIs and x-rays prior to her work accident. Dr. Riew's report notes Petitioner indicated no relevant prior medical history, but that she had some preexisting degenerative neck problems prior to the injury but no herniated discs. On 9/16/15, Dr. Jones stated: "(Petitioner) was involved in a workplace accident while pushing an x-ray machine and has had neck and back pain since that time and reports that she did not have any neck or back pain prior to this incident." (emphasis added). Again, the Petitioner's explanation for this was not believable in the Arbitrator's view. Dr. Jones's causation opinion is therefore flawed. First, Dr. Jones admitted he had not reviewed any of Petitioner's prior medical records, including pre-and post-accident records. He further admitted he never reviewed any of Petitioner's multiple cervical MRIs, CT scans, and x-rays from both before and after her accident. He did not even know Petitioner had undergone any such scans until mere days before his initial evaluation in September of 2015. Dr. Jones admitted that his causation opinion was based solely on Petitioner's subjective complaints. Dr. Jones conceded that if Petitioner had films and visits to a neurosurgeon prior to her accident, her cervical condition might have preexisted the work accident.

The Arbitrator finds that any aggravation of the Petitioner's cervical spine was temporary and involved identical symptoms as she had prior to the accident. The Arbitrator, giving the Petitioner some benefit of the doubt, finds that any causal relationship of the Petitioner's cervical spine to the 7/12/13 accident ended as of 11/19/13. This is consistent with being shortly after surveillance was obtained on Petitioner which impacted her credibility, the testimony of Dr. Zelby indicating that Petitioner at worst would have been at MMI as to her cervical sprain by November 2013, and with Dr. Hayward's 11/19/13 report wherein he indicated that Petitioner's cervical symptoms were in "an incomplete dermatomal distribution" with arm symptoms that did not correlate to the MRI findings. Further, this is also consistent with Dr. Treister's opinion that any treatment after 9/6/13 was not reasonable and necessary, irrespective of cause.

The Arbitrator incorporates the above findings with regard to the lumbar spine as well in terms of the surveillance video and findings of symptoms magnification.

Both the records of Dr. Oestmann and Dr. Taveau indicate the Petitioner had low back pain prior to the 7/12/13 accident. The Petitioner acknowledged this as well in her testimony. Petitioner underwent a lumbar MRI on 10/19/12 which indicated degenerative findings at L1/2 and some facet arthropathy in the lower spine.

Dr. Hayward noted he saw nothing surgical regarding Petitioner's lumbar spine. Dr. Newell suspected most of the conditions preexisted Petitioner's injury but were aggravated. However, he noted that it was very difficult for him to evaluate causation in this case, his treatment being two years following the accident. Dr. Newell noted Petitioner's pain was "multifaceted." He indicated her myofascial pain could be helped with significant postural changes and physical therapy, which Petitioner declined, indicating concern that it would aggravate her pain. Dr. Newell on 12/30/15 noted multiple positive Waddell signs on exam. On 1/26/16, Newell indicated his belief that there was a muscular component to her problem with a lot of "dysfunctional movement". On 3/29/16, Dr. Newell documented a normal physical and neurological exam. He noted her left-sided lower extremity symptoms could be related to L3/4 changes on the left but did not believe her right-sided lower extremity symptoms were related to Petitioner's 2015 lumbar MRI findings. Petitioner declined an injection at that level. Dr. Newell even discussed Petitioner undergoing cognitive behavioral treatment, along with a comprehensive pain management program, which supports that he believed there was a nonorganic involvement in her complaints.

On 4/6/16, Petitioner went to Southern Illinois Hospital stating she awoke that morning with bad sciatica and pain shooting down her left leg, but a 4-day history of right big toe numbness, and despite being given doses of morphine and Decadron, Petitioner still complained of pain with no improvement.

During the pendency of treatment, the Petitioner's complaints went from the right leg to the left leg. A pain drawing she completed for Dr. Riew indicated her leg symptoms were only in the legs from the knees down. Other records reflect complaints of pain going down the thighs. There are records which note complaints of numbness in the bilateral feet. On 11/19/14, Petitioner complained to Dr. Lee of bilateral leg numbness. The notations of some of the doctors in this case regarding widespread complaints and symptoms that did not fit anatomical patterns is credible given these types of complaints.

Petitioner reported prior neck symptoms to Dr. Austin on 7/15/13 but reported nothing regarding prior low back complaints. An intake form completed for Dr. Hayward documents no prior lumbar symptoms. Dr. Jones' reports indicate a history of no low back pain prior to the accident.

The Arbitrator has already referenced the issues that exist in this case in terms of the findings of Waddell signs/non-anatomic complaints and her activities in the surveillance videos versus her complaints in the same time period.

The most significant finding on Petitioner's initial lumbar scans was of a paracentral disc bulge or herniation at L1/2, and a lower extremity EMG/NCV revealed a possible radiculopathy at that level. However, Dr. Hayward opined in late 2013 that none of Petitioner's low back or alleged radicular symptoms were explained by any lumbar MRI finding, and he did not recommend surgery. It was not until 2015, more than two years after the accident, that Dr. Jones assessed an L3/4 spondylolisthesis based on a September 2015 MRI. However, following the 2013 accident, Petitioner underwent a lumbar x-ray, a lumbar CT scan, a lumbar MRI, and a lumbar flexion extension x-ray, and there was no indication of an L3/4 spondylolisthesis on any of these scans. In fact, the radiologists specifically noted in their respective reports that no spondylolisthesis was present on either the 2013 MRI or the 2013 flexion extension x-ray. Dr. Jones acknowledged that he had not reviewed Petitioner's prior lumbar MRIs, CT scans, or x-rays. Dr. Jones also noted multilevel lumbar problems, and that the "most striking" finding of L3/4 spondylolisthesis was consistent with some of her leg pain, and he did not believe the slight anterolisthesis at L2/3 was significant enough to address. He noted Petitioner indicated she's had "multiple rounds" of physical therapy with no relief, but the Arbitrator found no evidence of such multiple rounds in the medical records.

Dr. Taveau, Dr. Hayward, Dr. Zelby, and Dr. Treister (who performed utilization review) all reviewed these scans, and none identified any potentially symptomatic condition at L3/4, let alone a symptomatic degenerative spondylolisthesis. Dr. Hayward specifically commented that the 2013 lumbar flexion extension x-ray demonstrated no movement in the lumbar spine, i.e., that no spondylolisthesis was present. This was consistent with the radiologist's impression of that scan that no spondylolisthesis was present on that scan.

From the time she was discharged by Dr. Hayward in January of 2014 until she saw Dr. Jones in September of 2015, Petitioner was not seen by any surgeon. During that time, Dr. Oestmann ordered a repeat lumbar MRI in July of 2014, which showed no spondylolisthesis at L3/4 or any other level.

Two things are clear from the foregoing: Petitioner's L3-4 spondylolisthesis developed approximately two years after her work accident, and even assuming the presence of any such condition, none of Petitioner's subjective complaints or objective physical or neurological exams correlate to that, or any other, degenerative condition of Petitioner's lumbar spine.

Dr. Zelby essentially testified that the Petitioner's subjective complaints were excessive when compared to her clinical and diagnostic findings, and that her widespread complaints failed to pinpoint any specific area of relevant pathology. While Dr. Zelby's testimony was confrontational on cross exam, which does impact his persuasiveness, the Arbitrator cannot ignore his findings given the consistency with the findings of other providers in this case.

Dr. Treister review of 7/12/13 lumbar x-rays reflected minimal lumbar osteophytes and mild disc space narrowing at L1/2 that was virtually identical to that seen on 10/19/12. Dr. Treister's review of the 7/22/13 lumbar CT scan indicated degenerative disc disease at L1/2 and nothing very significant below that level. While Dr. Treister was addressing the reasonableness of treatment, he testified as to how causation was intertwined in this, and his report is an exhaustive review of the vast majority of the medical records that existed up to his exam. This put the doctor in an excellent position to see all of the existing medical evidence in this case at one time in offering his opinions.

Incorporating the findings of the Arbitrator regarding the cervical spine as well, the Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner's causally related lumbar condition ended as of 11/19/13.

The Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner in this case reached maximum medical improvement regarding the left shoulder as of 6/9/17 based upon the release of Dr. Lee following the second left shoulder surgery, at which point she was released with permanent restrictions.

The Arbitrator notes that none of the physicians involved in this case has referenced the thoracic spine as being involved with Petitioner's subjective complaints in any way. As such, there is no evidence that the thoracic spine was injured on 7/12/13.

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUE (J), WERE THE MEDICAL SERVICES THAT WERE PROVIDED TO PETITIONER REASONABLE AND NECESSARY AND HAS RESPONDENT PAID ALL APPROPRIATE CHARGES FOR ALL REASONABLE AND NECESSARY MEDICAL SERVICES, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

The Petitioner submitted her claimed medical expenses as Petitioner's Exhibit 1.

The Arbitrator initially notes that Dr. Oestmann testified that Petitioner's 8/5/14 and 5/5/15 visits were unrelated to the accident. As such, any billing related to these dates of treatment is denied based on a lack of causal relationship.

The Arbitrator finds that the billing that is related to the treatment of Petitioner's left shoulder condition is the responsibility of the Respondent and this billing is awarded pursuant to Section 8(a) of the Act, subject to the fee schedule limitations of Section 8.2 of the Act.

The Arbitrator finds that any causal relationship of the Petitioner's cervical condition ended as of 11/19/13. The expenses for any treatment Petitioner received prior to and including that date which relates to the cervical spine is awarded. Any cervical treatment and expenses that were incurred after that date are denied.

The Arbitrator finds that any causal relationship of the Petitioner's lumbar condition ended as of 11/19/13. The expenses for any treatment Petitioner received prior to and including that date which relates to the lumbar spine is awarded. Any lumbar treatment and expenses that were incurred after that date are denied.

The Respondent is entitled to credit for any and all awarded medical expenses that were paid prior to the hearing date via either workers' compensation insurance coverage through the Respondent or any group health insurance coverage through the Respondent, and Respondent shall hold the Petitioner harmless from any and all claims or liabilities that may be made against him by reason of having received such payments only to the extent of such credit, pursuant to Section 8(j) of the Act.

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUE (L), WHAT IS THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE INJURY, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

Pursuant to §8.1b of the Act, the following criteria and factors must be weighed in determining the level of permanent partial disability for accidental injuries occurring on or after September 1, 2011:

(a) A physician licensed to practice medicine in all of its branches preparing a permanent partial disability impairment report shall report the level of impairment in writing. The report shall include an evaluation of medically defined and professionally appropriate measurements of impairment that include, but are not limited to: loss of range of motion; loss of strength; measured atrophy of tissue mass consistent with the injury; and any other measurements that establish the nature and extent of the impairment. The most current edition of the American Medical Association's (AMA) "Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment" shall be used by the physician in determining the level of impairment.

(b) In determining the level of permanent partial disability, the Commission shall base its determination on the following factors;

(i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a);
(ii) the occupation of the injured employee;
(iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury;
(iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and
(v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. In determining the level of disability, the relevance and weight of any factors used in addition to the level of impairment as reported by the physician must be explained in a written order.

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that no AMA permanent partial impairment rating or report was submitted into evidence by either party with regard to the Petitioner's cervical or lumbar spine injuries. While an AMA permanent partial impairment rating was submitted by Respondent with regard to the Petitioner's left shoulder injury, the Arbitrator has determined that §8.1b is not applicable this injury, as noted below. This factor carries no weight in the permanency determination regarding the Petitioner's spine.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes that the record reveals that Petitioner was employed as an x-ray technician at the time of the accident and that he is not able to return to work in his prior capacity as a result of said injury. However, the evidence supports that this incapacity is due to her left shoulder condition, not her cervical and lumbar conditions. This factor carries no significant weight in the permanency determination regarding the Petitioner's spine.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner was 50 years old at the time of the accident. Neither party has submitted evidence which tends to show how the Petitioner's age may impact any permanent disability that Petitioner may have suffered based on her spinal condition. This factor carries no weight in the permanency determination regarding Petitioner's spine.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner's future earnings capacity, the Arbitrator notes that the evidence supports the fact that Petitioner's left shoulder condition has impacted her future earning capacity based on the permanent restrictions indicated by Dr. Lee and Dr. Emanuel. As such, this factor does not carry any significant weight in the permanency determination with regard to Petitioner's spine.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator notes that the greater weight of the evidence supports that the Petitioner's cervical and lumbar injuries relative to the 7/12/13 accident involved temporary strains which do not impact her permanent condition. The Petitioner had a significant cervical degenerative condition and related symptoms for several years prior to this accident, and the evidence indicates that the 7/12/13 accident did not structurally impact the Petitioner's cervical spine. While she did complain of increased cervical symptoms after the accident, the Arbitrator finds that her post-accident condition significantly mirrors her pre-accident condition. With regard to the lumbar condition, the Arbitrator notes that the Petitioner also has acknowledged a prior condition, and there are medical records which support this as well. While the Petitioner's medical records are replete with cervical and lumbar complaints as well as radicular symptoms, the Petitioner's complaints have been widespread and, based on the greater weight of the medical and medical expert evidence in this case, these complaints have been somewhat non-anatomic, and the several physicians have found the Petitioner's complaints to be exaggerated and/or inconsistent with her objective and clinical findings. These inconsistencies make it very difficult to find that any ongoing symptoms can be validly connected to the 7/12/13 accident. The Arbitrator does believe that the Petitioner had symptoms related to the cervical and lumbar spine following the accident, but that any such symptoms were based on a minor aggravation of preexisting conditions in both spinal areas, and the inconsistencies make it very difficult to find any significant ongoing permanent partial disability to the cervical and lumbar spine is causally related to the 7/12/13 accident.

Based on the above factors, the record taken as a whole and a review of prior Commission awards with similar injuries similar outcomes, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the cervical spine to the extent of the loss of use of 3.5% of the person as a whole, and sustained permanent partial disability to the lumbar spine to the extent of the loss of use of 3.5% of the person as a whole, pursuant to §8(d)2 of the Act.

With regard to the left shoulder, §8.1b of the Act is not applicable to the Petitioner's left shoulder injury because this injury is subject to §8(d)1 of the Act based on the Petitioner having permanent restrictions related to her left shoulder which have led to her partial incapacity from pursuing her usual and customary line of employment as an x-ray technician.

Petitioner testified that at the time of her work accident, she was employed by Respondent as an x-ray tech with an average weekly wage of $999.31, which was stipulated. She testified she is now employed by Respondent as a front desk worker due to permanent restrictions related to her left shoulder injury. This is not in dispute. Petitioner testified she currently earns $15.18 per hour. She also confirmed her payroll records for the 46 weeks prior to the date of hearing. (Rx18). Based on the evidence, the Petitioner, pursuant to §8(d)1, is capable of earning her current wage as the average amount she is able to earn in suitable employment.

Our courts have indicated that Section 8(d)1 is the preferred method of awarding permanent disability where applicable. This Section of the Act dictates that Petitioner is entitled to 66 2/3 percent of the difference between the average amount which she would be able to earn in the full performance of her duties in the occupation in which she was engaged at the time of the accident, and the average amount she is earning currently.

Petitioner's stipulated her average weekly wage on her date of accident was $999.31. The Arbitrator did not note that the Petitioner testified to the number of hours she worked per week that led to her receiving this wage. She testified she would be making essentially the same rate of pay were she still employed as an x-ray tech at the time of trial. Her average weekly wage in her current position is $596.96. This was calculated by dividing her non-overtime earnings in the last year ($27,460.33) by the number of weeks she worked (46). The difference between these amounts is $402.35, 66 2/3 percent of which equals $268.23.

Petitioner is therefore awarded $268.23 per week until she reaches 67 years of age, or five years from the date this award becomes final, whichever is later.

THE ARBITRATOR HEREBY MAKES THE FOLLOWING FINDINGS OF FACT:

Petitioner, a 32 year old police officer, sustained an accidental injury to his right shoulder that arose out of and in the course of his employment by respondent on 3/24/18.

On 3/24/18 petitioner was dispatched to a call at a home on East Cook. The victim was a woman who accused the suspect, her relative, of using her debit card without permission. The suspect was in the home in an upstairs bedroom. Petitioner and his fellow officer went upstairs to speak with the suspect. There were about 14 steep stairs up to a landing. From the landing were two shorter staircases up the left and right of the landing. Petitioner and his fellow officer entered the room and woke the suspect up. He was agitated, and the petitioner and his fellow officer tried to talk with him. As they tried to talk with the suspect he tried to leave the room. The suspect would not answer any of the officers' questions. He continued to try and get past them and out of the room. The petitioner and his fellow officer told the suspect that he was being temporarily detained. At that point, the suspect lunged at the petitioner with two hands. The petitioner tried to hold the suspect back with his right arm, and physically restrict him from leaving. The suspect sent the petitioner into the wall. Petitioner's fellow officer grabbed the suspect by the waist as he tried to get past him, to prevent him from going down the stairs. The officer's grip broke and he and the suspect fell down the steps to the landing. That officer injured his head. Petitioner, seeing this, ran down the stairs to the landing. He tried to secure handcuffs on the suspect. As he grabbed the suspect's arm, the suspect kicked with both feet striking petitioner in the chest, causing him to fall down the remaining 14-15 steps from the landing to the ground floor.

After the petitioner landed on the ground level he got up and saw his fellow officer still on the landing with the suspect. He returned up the stairs in order to secure the suspect in handcuffs. The suspect continued to fight back, kicking and punching the officers. Petitioner's fellow office finally got a grip on the suspect's waist. Petitioner then reached over the suspect in order to grab his arm and secure the handcuffs. All the while telling the suspect to stop resisting. Again, the petitioner continued to fight back and the petitioner, his fellow officer and the suspect fell down the 14-15 stairs from the landing to the ground floor. At the bottom of the steps, the suspect was on top of petitioner. Petitioner tried to push him off with his right hand enough so that he could reach his department issued taser. The petitioner then deployed the laser into the suspect's torso area. At that point, petitioner and his fellow officer were able to restrain the suspect and take him into custody.

Petitioner presented to the emergency room at Memorial Medical Center on 3/24/18. He gave a consistent history of the injury. He complained of back pain, and soreness in his right shoulder. Petitioner was examined and x-rays of petitioner's left rib cage were taken. Dr. Berg's diagnosis was right shoulder strain and left flank contusion. Petitioner was referred to his primary care physician, Dr. Morton.

On 4/9/18 petitioner presented to Dr. Morton. He provided a consistent history of the injury. Petitioner reported that his rib cage area was feeling better, but his right shoulder issue had continued. He reported discomfort when he tried to raise his right arm above shoulder level. Dr. Morton examined petitioner and assessed a right shoulder rotator cuff strain and chest wall contusion that was improving. Dr. Morton prescribed some physical therapy. Petitioner returned to Dr. Morton on 4/19/18 for unrelated sinusitis.

On 4/24/19 petitioner presented to the Orthopedic Department at Springfield Clinic on the referral of Dr. Morton for his right shoulder injury. Petitioner provided a consistent history of the accident. Physician's Assistant David Purves examined petitioner and took some x-rays of the right shoulder. His impression was right shoulder rotator cuff injury. Purves performed an injection into the subacromial space, and recommended a course of physical therapy.

Petitioner presented for an initial physical therapy evaluation on 5/18/18. He noted that his ribs had fully recovered. He also reported that his right shoulder continued to be painful with lifting overhead and reaching behind his back. Petitioner had full range of motion but demonstrated mild weakness and pain with subscapularis and supraspinatus testing. Grinding was also noted in the right shoulder with active motion. Six weeks of therapy at 1-2 times a week was recommended.

On 6/7/18 petitioner returned to Purves. He reported continued pain with activity. He noted that symptoms occur with activity away from the body, overhead, and at night with sleeping. Following an injection petitioner was assessed with right shoulder impingement syndrome. An MRI of the right shoulder was ordered due to lack of improvement.

On 7/13/18 petitioner returned to Purves. The results of the MRI were reviewed. Purves noted that the MRI showed acromial spur with abnormal signal in the distal supraspinatus tendon. Fluid was also seen within the suscapularis. No full thickness tear was seen. Some fluid was seen within both tendons consistent with tendinopathy and intratendinous delamination. Also seen was some increased signal in the region of the anterior labrum. He did not see any true labral pathology. Purves recommended continued conservative treatment. A 2nd injection was recommended but the petitioner stated that the 1st injection made him worse. Purves prescribed Meloxicam.

On 8/1/18 petitioner presented to Dr. Wottowa. Dr. Wottowa noted that petitioner's shoulder had actually gotten worse over the past few months. Following an examination and radiograph review. Dr. Wottowa's impression was mainly rotator cuff tendinitis, created and exacerbated by the fall. Since petitioner was unresponsive to injections and therapy, Dr. Wottowa performed a true impingement test, an injection of just lidocaine in the subacromial space. Since this improved petitioner's symptoms dramatically, Dr. Wottowa was of the opinion that the impingement portion of his problem was the source of his discomfort. Dr. Wottowa was of the opinion petitioner could live with it, or consider a shoulder arthroscopy. Dr. Wottowa was of the opinion that petitioner living with it would be problematic for him because of his job. Petitioner decided on undergoing the surgery.

Petitioner continued working full duty until his surgery.

Petitioner underwent a preoperative history and physical on 8/23/18. On 8/30/18 petitioner underwent a right shoulder arthroscopy with a subacromial decompression, performed by Dr. Wottowa. Petitioner followed up postoperatively with Dr. Wottowa. This follow-up included a course of physical therapy and follow-up visits on 9/14/18, 10/15/18, 11/26/18, 12/12/18, and 1/9/19.

On 10/15/18 Dr. Wottowa noted that petitioner had done exceptionally well with his right shoulder. He noted that petitioner still had some discomfort over his right shoulder, but had done well in physical therapy. He noted that now that petitioner was doing exercises he had a little more discomfort. Petitioner's shoulder motion was outstanding, and he had full flexion, full abduction, and normal rotation and excellent strength. Petitioner showed mildly positive impingement signs, and tenderness directly at the acromion. Dr. Wottowa continued petitioner in therapy. Dr. Wottowa released petitioner to desk work.

On 11/1/18 petitioner told the therapist that his only pain was with pushup activities. On 11/13/18 he told the therapist he would get sore with working out and then it would feel better when he stopped. On 11/19/18 he told the therapist that he could do pushups in a different position to compensate for pain. On 11/29/18 he told the therapist he had turned a corner and was doing better, and hitting it hard at the gym. On 12/4/18 he reported that he was doing very well and doing his regular gym and lifting routine. On 12/11/18 petitioner was discharged from physical therapy. Petitioner's worst pain level was reported as a 2. His best pain level was a 0, and his current pain level was a 0. With regard to his current complaints, petitioner noted that he was feeling good and eager to return to full duty work at a police officer. He reported his aggravating factors as reaching out to the side. All of petitioner's therapy goals were reached.

On 12/12/18 Dr. Wottowa noted that petitioner was doing well. He had full active and passive range of motion of the shoulder. His drop arm testing was negative; super space strength was 5/5; and, had normal neurovascular function in the upper extremities. Dr. Wottowa noted that petitioner was doing well, and was going to continue a home exercise program and continue to progress activity as tolerated. Dr. Wottowa was of the opinion that petitioner could return to work. He instructed petitioner to follow-up in a month, and if he was doing well, would give him a full release at maximum medical improvement.

On 1/9/19 petitioner last followed up with Dr. Wottowa. It was noted that petitioner had no pain. Dr. Wottowa noted that the only thing bothering him was that he could not do pushups. Petitioner denied that he had no pain. He stated that he had no pain with resting. An examination revealed full range of motion and normal strength, negative impingement signs, and well healed incisions. Dr. Wottowas's impression was that petitioner looked "like a million bucks". He gave petitioner a full release and return to full duty work without restrictions. He placed him at maximum medical improvement.

Since returning to work petitioner's primary complaint is pushing and pulling with his right arm in front of him. He testified that he has improved from pre-operative status. He reported no pain with rest, riding in a car, or at a desk. Petitioner testified that he still has pain with pushups.

Petitioner gave a history of a recent altercation with an intoxicated suspect at Walgreen's that escalated to the point where the suspect lunged at him and his fellow officer. As petitioner grabbed the suspect's right arm to secure it, the suspect pulled away and fell to the ground with his arms underneath him. Petitioner had to hold him down while his fellow officer tried to cuff him. While doing this he felt pain in his right arm, and tried to compensate for it with shifting of his body weight. Petitioner also reported increased pain in his right arm when he tried to come between a male and a female while he was trying to get the female and her baby away from the male suspect. He stated that he had difficulty doing this with his right arm and had to ultimately put his foot in the door to stop the suspect from trying to push him out the door and close it before petitioner could get the female and her baby outside to talk to her separately.

Petitioner testified that he also noticed problems while doing rifle firearm training. Petitioner testified that he has not yet had to qualify with his rifle since being released from care and back to full duty work.

Petitioner testified that he has had to figure out how to reconfigure his body movements when using his right arm to compensate for the pain in his right arm when he outstretches it. Petitioner also feels pain in his right arm when placing suspects in the police car, and after altercations with suspects. Petitioner testified that he cannot do a pushup motion without pain. He also suspected he would have difficulty with CPR, but has not yet done any CPR on anyone since being released from care and returned to full duty work.

Since being released from care petitioner is making more money than at the time of the injury. He is also performing his regular duty police officer duties without any restrictions or accommodations. Petitioner testified that he has not complained to any of his superior of any problems with his right shoulder. Petitioner testified that he has progressed steadily since released by Dr. Wottowa, and was told by Dr. Wottowa that he would continue to improve for about a year and a half.

WHAT IS THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE INJURY?

For injuries that occurred after 9/1/11, according to 820 ILCS 305/8.1B(b) the Commission shall base its determination of permanent partial disability based upon five factors including an AMA report, the occupation of the injured employee, the age of the employee at the time of injury, the employee's future earning capacity and evidence of disability corroborated by treating medical records.

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), neither party offered into evidence an AMA impairment report into evidence. The Arbitrator therefore gives no weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes that the petitioner was a 32 year old police officer at the time of the injury. On 12/12/18 petitioner was released from care to full duty work without restrictions. Petitioner has continued to work without restrictions or accommodations since being released to full duty work. Petitioner still has pain in his right arm when doing pushup or working with his right arm extended. For these reasons the arbitrator gives greater weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that the petitioner was a 32 year old police officer at the time of the injury. Petitioner was released from care to full duty work without restrictions. Nonetheless, the petitioner continues to experience pain in his right arm when his arm is extended in front of him or he is doing pushups. Petitioner also gave specific incidents of when his right arm/shoulder causes him pain while he is performing his duties as a police officer. The Arbitrator notes that given his age, petitioner could potentially have multiple decades of police work ahead of him. For these reasons the arbitrator gives greater weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner's future earnings capacity, the arbitrator notes that petitioner was released to full duty work without restrictions. Petitioner testified that he is making more money than he was on the date of injury. Therefore, the arbitrator gives lesser weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator finds the petitioner sustained an injury to his left ribs that resolved. He also sustained an injury to his right shoulder for which he underwent a cortisone injection and therapy with no lasting relief. Following the failure of conservative treatment, petitioner underwent a right shoulder arthroscopy with a subacromial decompression. Post-operatively he had regular follow-ups and physical therapy through December 2018. At that time he was released to desk duty, and on 1/9/19 he was released from care at maximum medical improvement. He was returned to full duty work without any restrictions. Dr. Wottowa noted that petitioner had no pain. He also noted that the only thing bothering petitioner was that he could not do pushups. Petitioner denied that he had no pain. He stated that he had no pain with resting. An examination revealed full range of motion and normal strength, negative impingement signs, and well healed incisions. Dr. Wottowas's impression was that petitioner looked "like a million bucks". Petitioner testified that his primary complaint is pushing and pulling with his right arm in from of him and doing pushups. Petitioner testified that he has had to figure out how to reconfigure his body movements and body weight when using his right arm extended in front of him or while doing a pushup motion, especially while at work. Petitioner also still has complaints while doing rifle firearm training. He has not yet had to qualify with his rifle since his release to full duty work. Petitioner also suspected that he would have difficulty doing CPR, but has not needed to perform it since his release to full duty work. Petitioner is working his full duty job without restrictions and has not asked for any accommodations. Therefore, the arbitrator gives greater weight to this factor.

Based on the above factors, and the record taken as a whole, the Arbitrator finds the petitioner sustained a permanent partial disability to the extent of 13.75% loss of use of person as a whole pursuant to Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner was hired as a farm technician by Respondent in May 2006. Respondent's facility is a chicken farm utilized for the production of eggs. Petitioner testified Respondent's facility includes 11 chicken houses with as many as 9,000 to 10,000 chickens per house. Respondent's facility could have as many as 100,000 chickens at a time.

Petitioner's job duties include taking care of the chickens. He makes sure they are healthy and have sufficient food and water. He also performs various testing of the chickens to ensure their health.

Petitioner testified that one of the more difficult aspects of the job is culling roosters which is necessary to maintain an appropriate population of the chickens.

Petitioner further testified that between June 20, 2016 and June 26, 2016 he culled 48 roosters. He described the process as severing the brainstem of the rooster from the rooster's brain. He also described the process as cervically dislocating the rooster.

Petitioner explained he holds the legs of the rooster in his left hand, and grabs the chicken's neck between his right index and right middle fingers. He then pulls downward on the chicken's head with sufficient force to sever the brainstem from the brain. Petitioner described the process as a difficult procedure. He also testified culling 48 roosters in a short period of time is an unusual amount.

Petitioner testified that after that week in June 2016, he had a lot of pain and was not able to do as much. He went to see a physician at Ortho NY in Albany, New York. He underwent an MRI arthrogram and was released to return to work at his regular job.

Petitioner testified his shoulder got worse, but he was still able to perform his job duties.

Petitioner testified he sustained a second accident October 31, 2016. He testified he was in a chicken coop building a chicken pen. He was on the floor and he pulled himself up with his right arm by grabbing on to a chicken perch which is a steel bar. As Petitioner was pulling himself up, he felt a large pop and some pain in his right shoulder. He testified he had to leave immediately to seek medical attention.

Petitioner testified he was having shoulder pain prior to the second accident, but he was still able to perform his job duties. However, after the second accident, he was unable to lift his arm to perform the necessary job duties. Petitioner described the condition of his shoulder after the second accident as having a lot of pain. Petitioner testified he knew that he needed medical attention. On direct exam, Petitioner testified he went back to Ortho NY where another MRI arthrogram was performed. Petitioner was allowed to return to work with restrictions, and Respondent accommodated the restrictions.

Respondent terminated Petitioner's employment January 18, 2017.

Petitioner returned to Illinois after he was terminated from his employment by Respondent. He was evaluated by Dr. Brett Keller February 14, 2017. Petitioner testified that Dr. Keller advised Petitioner to undergo surgery as soon as possible.

At trial, Petitioner testified he was still having trouble sleeping, and he could not raise his shoulder above his head. He indicated he lacked mobility in his shoulder, and he was unable to perform everyday tasks like he used to.

Petitioner further testified that when he saw Respondent's examining physician, he described the culling actions required as part of his job duties. He also testified he described the rooster culling activities for Dr. Keller.

On cross exam, Petitioner acknowledged the roosters were not very heavy for him. The roosters weigh between 7 and 8 pounds, and Petitioner is 6 feet, 2 inches tall and weighs 250 pounds.

When asked about the number of roosters Petitioner culled, he acknowledged culling 22 roosters June 22, 2016 and not having any problems as a result of those activities. Petitioner then culled 20 additional roosters June 26, 2016, and he testified that was when he began having problems with his shoulder.

Petitioner denied experiencing a specific incident while culling roosters, rather, he felt kind of sore after the culling activities June 26, 2016.

Petitioner testified the culling of an individual rooster could take anywhere from 4-5 seconds up to 10-15 seconds depending upon how much of a struggle the rooster makes. Petitioner estimated that it would have taken him about an hour to catch and cull 20 roosters June 26, 2016.

When asked why he used his bad arm to pull himself up from the floor of the chicken coop October 31, 2016, Petitioner indicated it was his only option because of the cramped space he was in.

When asked why he waited three weeks between the incident October 31, 2016 and his next medical visit, Petitioner testified the delay was because he was swamped with work. During those three weeks, Petitioner continued performing his regular job duties.

Petitioner denied telling Dr. Kaback that he experienced several years worth of shoulder pain. Petitioner did acknowledge undergoing an MRI for his right shoulder in 2010. He testified he had the MRI performed, because he did not think his shoulder was perfect after undergoing surgery. His primary concern seemed to be that he did not have a full range of motion for his backswing while golfing.

Petitioner also acknowledged that shoulder dislocations in the right arm were one of the reasons for going back to see the doctor in November 2016. Petitioner testified he was able to self-reduce his shoulder dislocations and put them back in place. He would either push his shoulder against a wall, or he would pull on his shoulder against his body.

Petitioner also acknowledged he had not received any treatment for his right shoulder since February 2017. He also indicated he has not made any attempts to return to work since being terminated by Respondent.

During the remaining portions of Petitioner's testimony, he talked about the shoulder dislocations. He indicated he moved the shoulder back into its original place. He also described the dislocations as meaning there was little to zero movement in the shoulder.

Petitioner testified that when he reduced the shoulder dislocations or subluxations, the joint did not move, his shoulder mobility did not return, and his pain did not decrease.

With respect to Petitioner's medical treatment, he underwent surgery on his right shoulder several years before the first alleged accident date. Surgery was performed October 24, 2007 consisting of a debridement of a posterior labral tear and a subacromial decompression. The diagnoses included a posterior labral tear and a right shoulder impingement syndrome. (Px.6)

Dr. Keller gave Petitioner a full-duty release February 12, 2008. (Px.6)

Petitioner returned for an MRI of the right shoulder both on March 10, 2010 and April 13, 2010. The report from March 10, 2010 indicates Petitioner had a tiny subacromial-subdeltoid bursal effusion and a mild synovial hypertrophy of the acromioclavicular joint. (Px.6)

The report from the April 13, 2010 MRI indicates there was no evidence of a rotator cuff tear. Petitioner did have marrow edema at the distal clavicle which was thought to possibly be related to a fracture. Clinical correlation with a history of trauma was recommended. (Px.6)

Following the rooster culling activities June 26, 2016, Petitioner reported to Dr. Kaback at Ortho NY July 1, 2016. The history form indicates Petitioner was being seen for right shoulder pain. The treatment note indicates Petitioner was engaged in repetitive pulling-type work over the past several weeks, and he noticed a lot of popping and grinding pain in the right shoulder. (Px.4)

An MRI arthrogram was performed July 26, 2016. The study revealed anterior and posterior labral tears with a paralabral cyst at the posterior labrum. Additionally, fluid was identified which was thought to be consistent with a ganglion cyst. (Px.4)

Petitioner continued working in his regular capacity. He returned to see Dr. Kaback November 22, 2016 which is about three weeks after the reported incident from October 31, 2016. Petitioner provided a history of culling roosters in June 2016 which involved the extension of the right shoulder. Petitioner indicated he had immediate pain in his right shoulder. He also told Dr. Kaback he had two dislocations of the right shoulder since the previous visit with one occurring the previous day and with one occurring in his sleep. Petitioner told Dr. Kaback he was able to self-reduce each of the dislocations. No history of the October 31, 2016 incident was provided to Dr. Kaback. (Px.4)

On exam, Dr. Kaback did not identify any instability, but he still diagnosed Petitioner with right shoulder anterior instability. He imposed a restriction of no repetitive use with the right arm. (Px.4)

On December 27, 2016, another MRI arthrogram was performed of Petitioner's right shoulder. The report indicates there is a more extensive anterior labral tear, and the posterior labral tear was stable. The paralabral cyst on the posterior side of the labrum was enlarged. Similarly, the ganglion cyst was enlarged. (Px.4)

When Petitioner returned to see Dr. Kaback January 4, 2017, he advised he had three right shoulder dislocations since the previous evaluation with one of the dislocations occurring in his sleep. Petitioner was still working in a full-time capacity as of that office visit. (Px.4)

On exam, no atrophy was identified in the right shoulder or right upper extremity. Dr. Kaback recommended surgery for the anterior/inferior labral tear. For his progress report, Dr. Kaback indicated there was no temporary impairment. (Px.4)

When Petitioner returned to Illinois, he was evaluated by Dr. Brett Keller February 14, 2017. Petitioner provided a history of re-injuring his right shoulder June 26, 2016 while working on a farm. He reportedly pushed himself off the floor and felt a pop in his right shoulder. Petitioner told Dr. Keller that as he continued working around the farm, his pain level increased to the point where he was unable to lift his arm above his head. (Px.6)

Petitioner advised Dr. Keller that he dislocated his shoulder a few times, but he was able to relocate the shoulder on his own with severe pain. Dr. Keller recommended surgery on the right shoulder. (Px.6)

At the request of Respondent, Petitioner was evaluated by Dr. Scott Sagerman May 18, 2017. Petitioner provided a history to Dr. Sagerman of culling about 400 roosters during June 2016. He also indicated that on June 26, 2016, he felt a pop and pain in his right shoulder and was then unable to use his arm. (Rx.4, Dep. Ex.2)

Petitioner described the procedure of culling roosters as requiring forceful use of the right arm to perform a cervical dislocation. Petitioner also told Dr. Sagerman that beginning in November 2016, his shoulder started dislocating, and he put it back in place himself six times. (Rx.4, Dep. Ex.2)

Additionally, Petitioner reported that in December 2016, he felt increased pain in his shoulder when pulling himself up from the floor in a chicken house. (Rx.4, Dep. Ex.2)

Dr. Sagerman diagnosed Petitioner with a right shoulder labral tear with instability. He was uncertain as to the cause of the condition. (Rx.4, Dep. Ex.2)

After reviewing additional information including a job description and Dr. Keller's deposition testimony, Dr. Sagerman rendered an opinion that Petitioner's work activities would not have caused or aggravated Petitioner's right shoulder condition. (Rx.4, Dep. Ex.3)

Both Dr. Keller and Dr. Sagerman testified by way of evidence deposition.

Dr. Keller testified September 1, 2017. (Px.7)

Dr. Keller is an orthopedic surgeon. (Px.7, p.3) He evaluated Petitioner on February 14, 2017. (Px.7, pp.4-5)

Petitioner provided a history to Dr. Keller of re-injuring his right shoulder when he was pushing himself off a floor and felt a pop in his right shoulder. (Px.7, p.5) Petitioner further reported to Dr. Keller that his right shoulder got worse with activities, and he was unable to lift his arm. He also reported he dislocated his shoulder a few times, but he was able to relocate the shoulder with severe pain. (Px.7, p.5)

Dr. Keller indicated he performed surgery on Petitioner's right shoulder October 24, 2007 for a posterior labral tear. He then allowed Petitioner to return to work with no restrictions February 12, 2008. (Px.7, p.7)

Dr. Keller had not seen the medical records from Ortho NY. He only reviewed the MRI films from December 27, 2016. He interpreted the films to show an anterior and posterior labral tear with a paralabral cyst with no evidence of a rotator cuff tear. (Px.7, p.8)

Dr. Keller acknowledged the language on the December 2017 MRI report in that it noted the anterior labral tear was more extensive, but he had not reviewed the films from July 26, 2016 to compare the changes. (Px.7, pp.9-10)

Dr. Keller testified his clinical exam was consistent with the MRI findings. (Px.7, p.10) Dr. Keller diagnosed Petitioner with the labral tears and a cyst as well as both anterior and inferior instability. He recommended an arthroscopic procedure to debride or possibly repair the torn labrum. He also recommended a subacromial decompression and a distal clavicle excision. (Px.7, p.11)

Dr. Keller took Petitioner off work as of February 14, 2017. He testified he has not seen Petitioner since February 14, 2017. (Px.7, p.12)

Counsel for Petitioner provided a hypothetical question to Dr. Keller including the history of Petitioner having to cull 40-50 roosters which was when the shoulder first began hurting. (Px.7, p.13) The hypothetical also indicated Petitioner's symptoms started after performing the culling activities for a week or two. Counsel for Petitioner also provided a history of Petitioner pulling himself up in the chicken coop. (Px.7, p.14)

Dr. Keller testified the culling maneuver could potentially cause a shoulder issue due to the force and repetition which was based upon Petitioner culling 40 roosters in a period of two days. (Px.7, p.15)

Dr. Keller also testified the pulling up incident was consistent with worsening the labral tear as noted on the second MRI. (Px.7, p.15)

On cross exam, Dr. Keller acknowledged Petitioner was a weightlifter, and he did not know whether Petitioner used proper form when lifting weights. (Px.7, pp.17-19)

When asked about the paralabral cyst, Dr. Keller testified it could have been there for several weeks, or it could have been in Petitioner's right shoulder for several years. (Px.7, pp.19-20)

When asked about the history provided by Petitioner, Dr. Keller testified the act of pushing up off a floor was different than the history provided by Petitioner's counsel. He also testified that pushing up off the floor would probably not cause a labral tear. (Px.7, p.20)

However, when the shoulder dislocates, it is typical for the labrum to tear. Dr. Keller conceded the three dislocations described by Petitioner would potentially explain the torn labrum. Dr. Keller further indicated that if Petitioner's right shoulder dislocated while he was sleeping, that suggests a considerable amount of instability. The surgery recommended by Dr. Keller was to stabilize the shoulder. (Px.7, p.22)

Dr. Keller indicated the dislocations described by Petitioner may not have been true dislocations but were more likely subluxations. He acknowledged the incidents described by Petitioner could have been true dislocations especially if Petitioner had significant instability. (Px.7, pp.22-23) Dr. Keller further acknowledged that if Petitioner was suffering from dislocations or subluxations while sleeping, that would be consistent with significant instability. (Px.7, p.23)

Dr. Sagerman testified by way of evidence deposition October 24, 2017. (Rx.4)

Dr. Sagerman is an orthopedic surgeon who specializes in upper extremities. He performs shoulder surgeries on a regular basis. (Rx.4, pp.4-5)

Dr. Sagerman performed an IME at the request of Respondent May 18, 2017. (Rx.4, p.5)

Petitioner provided a history of culling 400 roosters during the month of June. He further reported that on June 26, 2016, he was culling roosters and felt a pop in his right shoulder. Petitioner also indicated he was then unable to use his right arm after the pop occurred. (Rx.4, p.6)

Petitioner told Dr. Sagerman that the culling procedure required the forceful use of the right arm to perform a cervical dislocation of the roosters. (Rx.4, pp.6-7)

Petitioner also reported to Dr. Sagerman that in November 2016, his right shoulder started dislocating. Petitioner indicated he put the shoulder back in place himself on six occasions. He then reported he experienced increased pain in December 2016 when pulling himself up off the floor. Petitioner complained of pain and popping in his right shoulder at the time of the IME. (Rx.4, p.7)

On exam, Dr. Sagerman noted Petitioner's muscle contour was normal and symmetric. Petitioner's range of motion was limited, and he complained of tenderness in the anterior glenohumeral joint and in the subacromial region. Petitioner also showed apprehension with passive range of motion. Rotation strength was grossly normal with give-way weakness and guarding. (Rx.4, p.8)

Dr. Sagerman rendered an opinion that the MRI findings were consistent with tears of the glenoid labrum. He diagnosed Petitioner with right shoulder labral tears with instability. He further indicated surgery would be a reasonable option. He did not believe Petitioner needed to have any restrictions imposed on his activities. (Rx.4, p.9)

Following the IME, Dr. Sagerman reviewed additional materials including the treatment records from Dr. Kaback and Petitioner's job description. He noted the history provided to Dr. Kaback was that Petitioner had several years worth of shoulder pain. The job duty information provided to Dr. Sagerman revealed Petitioner culled 53 roosters during June 2016. (Rx.4, p.10)

Dr. Sagerman concluded that causation was undetermined, but Petitioner's work activities would not have caused the labral tear or instability in the absence of a significant trauma to the shoulder. He did not believe there was any causal relationship between the right shoulder labral tear with instability and the claimed work accidents. (Rx.4, p.11)

Dr. Sagerman also testified that after reviewing Dr. Keller's deposition transcript, his opinions did not change. He did not believe the culling of roosters would cause or aggravate Petitioner's right shoulder condition. Similarly, he did not believe Petitioner pulling himself up would cause or aggravate the condition. (Rx.4, p.13)

When explaining his causal connection opinion, Dr. Sagerman testified the mechanism of culling roosters is not of the magnitude of trauma that would cause or aggravate the condition in Petitioner's shoulder. He further explained Petitioner's job activities did not result in the worsening of his condition. (Rx.4, pp.13-14)

On cross exam, Dr. Sagerman further explained that a person cannot apply enough force to cause a labral tear or dislocate his own shoulder. (Rx.4, pp.16-17)

At the conclusion of Petitioner's testimony at trial and the submission of each party's exhibits, the Arbitrator took the matter under advisement.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In support of the Arbitrator's Decision relating to (C), Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent?, the Arbitrator makes the following findings:

Petitioner alleged he sustained injuries to his right shoulder as a result of his job duties June 26, 2016. Those allegations are set forth in case number 17 WC 033985. This case involves an alleged aggravation of the shoulder injury as a result of an incident which occurred October 31, 2016. Petitioner alleges he was in a confined space building a chicken coop, and he attempted to pull himself up with his right arm. He grabbed a perch which is a steel bar, and he pulled himself up with his previously injured right arm.

At trial, Petitioner testified he experienced immediate and severe pain, and he knew he needed to obtain immediate medical treatment.

Petitioner did not receive treatment for about three weeks. He testified that he was still performing his regular job duties, and he was too swamped with work to go to the doctor.

When Petitioner saw Dr. Kaback November 22, 2016 which is about three weeks after the October 31, 2016 incident, he did not provide a history of the October 31, 2016 incident. He only provided a history of culling roosters in June 2016 and also of experiencing two shoulder dislocations since the previous visit with the doctor July 1, 2016. Petitioner reported that one dislocation occurred the previous day (November 21, 2016) and one occurred in his sleep. Petitioner told Dr. Kaback he was able to self-reduce each of the dislocations.

Petitioner never told Dr. Kaback about anything which occurred October 31, 2016.

When Petitioner returned to see Dr. Kaback January 4, 2017, he again talked about shoulder dislocations, but no mention was made of Petitioner pulling himself up and worsening his right shoulder condition.

Petitioner's next medical visit was with Dr. Keller February 14, 2017. Petitioner provided a history of pushing himself off the floor and feeling a pop in his right shoulder. He did not provide any history of the rooster culling activities June 26, 2016 or of an incident where he pulled himself up off the floor.

During his evidence deposition, Dr. Keller conceded that the history provided by Petitioner was different than the history contained in the hypothetical questions posed by Petitioner's attorney.

Even though Petitioner did complete an accident report, the complete lack of any reference to the October 31, 2016 incident to the medical providers cannot be overlooked. The treatment provided to Petitioner for his right shoulder was never for any injury sustained October 31, 2016.

Here, Petitioner never provided a history of the October 31, 2016 incident to his treating physicians. In fact, the mechanism of injury provided to Dr. Keller was exactly the opposite of the mechanism testified to by Petitioner.

With Petitioner not providing a history of the alleged accident October 31, 2016 to any of his treating doctors, it is clear he was not seeking treatment for any injury sustained as a result of that alleged incident. Consequently, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner failed to prove he sustained accidental injuries as a result of the described incident October 31, 2016. The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner failed to prove he sustained accidental injuries which arose out of and in the course of his employment for Respondent as a result of the described incident October 31, 2016.

In support of the Arbitrator's Decision relating to (F), Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury?, the Arbitrator makes the following findings:

The Arbitrator adopts and incorporates herein the findings set forth in Section (C) above.

With respect to the medical opinions, Dr. Keller testified the October 31, 2016 incident described to him by Petitioner's counsel during his evidence deposition would be an unlikely cause of a labral tear. (PX 7 at 21) He said rather reluctantly that the act of pushing himself off the floor probably just aggravated the condition. (Id at 16)

The Arbitrator finds that Dr. Sagerman basically agrees with Dr. Keller. He testified that the act of pulling himself up off the floor with his right hand and arm would not be sufficient to cause or aggravate a torn labrum or an unstable shoulder.

Finally, Petitioner waited over three weeks to seek medical care and when he did, on November 22, 2016, he failed to tell his doctor about the event. (PX 4)

Based upon the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner failed to prove his current condition of ill-being is causally related to the October 31, 2016 alleged work accident in that there is no credible evidence to support a conclusion that the right shoulder condition was caused or aggravated by the October 31, 2016 incident.

In light of the above conclusions, all other issue are moot.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the majority opinion because Petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that he sustained accidental injuries under a repetitive trauma theory and that his condition of ill-being is causally related to his work activities of June 26, 2016.

The claimant has the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he suffered a disabling injury that arose out of and in the course of his employment. Included within that burden of proof is that his current condition of ill-being is causally connected to a work-related injury. Sisbro, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n., 207 Ill.2d 193, 797 N.E.2d 665, 278 Ill.Dec 70 (2003). A claimant who alleges injury based on repetitive trauma must show that the injury is work related and not the result of the normal degenerative aging process. Peoria County Belwood Nursing Home v. Industrial Comm'n., 115 Ill.2d 524, 530, 505 N.E.2d 1026, 106 Ill.Dec. 235 (1987). A claimant who seeks an award of benefits under a repetitive trauma theory is held to the same standard of proof as a claimant seeking benefits for a sudden, traumatic injury. Durand v. Indus. Comm'n., 224 Ill.2d 53, 64 (2006). In repetitive trauma cases, the claimant generally relies on medical testimony establishing a causal connection between the work performed and claimant's disability. Nunn v. Industrial Comm'n., 157 Ill.App.3d 470, 477, 510 N.E.2d 502, 109 Ill.Dec 634 (1987). "In those cases where the courts sustained a theory of repetitive trauma, the claimant in each one conclusively established a repetitive job task. In each case, the claimant performed the same task in a repetitive fashion on a daily basis." Williams v. Industrial Comm'n, 244 Ill. App. 3d 204, 211, 614 N.E.2d 177, 181, 185 Ill. Dec. 43, 47 (1st Dist. 1993).

In this case, Petitioner had an extensive pre-existing condition requiring right shoulder arthroscopy with debridement of a posterior labral tear and a subacromial decompression in 2007. (RX4) After discharge from care, Petitioner resumed weight lifting activities. (PX7, p. 18) Approximately three years later, Petitioner's right shoulder was interfering with activities of daily living and he sought medical care. (T. p. 40) Petitioner underwent two MRI scans because he felt his shoulder was not perfect. Petitioner, a self-described avid golfer, testified he did not have full range of motion when executing his golf swing and his back swing. (T. p. 40) On May 25, 2010, Dr. Keller noted Petitioner reported right AC joint pain resolved after receiving an injection on a previous visit and he may return to work without restrictions. (PX6) Petitioner provided a history of several years of shoulder pain to Dr. Kaback on November 22, 2016. (PX4)

Dr. Sagerman, Respondent's IME, testified Petitioner had a structural injury in 2007 necessitating surgery. Further, he opined the labral tear detected in 2007 could cause a shoulder to dislocate. (RX4, p. 7) Petitioner told his treating physician, Dr. Kaback, he had two dislocations between June and a November 22, 2016, visit and, notably, one occurred while he was sleeping. (T. p. 41) However, at arbitration, Petitioner testified he did not have any shoulder dislocations between June, 2016 and October, 2016. (T. p. 50) He testified it was after October 31, 2016, when he was pushing himself off the floor, when his right shoulder started to dislocate. (T. p. 41) Petitioner filed claim 17 WC 6484, concerning this October 31, 2016 work-related accident, which was consolidated with the present case. That case was found non-compensable and Petitioner appealed. Petitioner also advised his treating physician that since November, 2016, his right shoulder has been dislocating a lot and he reduced it himself 6 times. Petitioner testified that when his shoulder dislocated, he was able to put it back into place by pushing his shoulder up against a wall. (T. p. 42) Petitioner's testimony shows his shoulder dislocations occurred spontaneously and without incident and reflects the effects of a longstanding pre-existing condition.

The MRI arthrogram performed on July 26, 2016, revealed anterior and posterior labral tears, the posterior labral tear associated with a para labral cyst, and another fluid collection was noted extending into the region of the suprascapular and spinoglenoid notch area, felt to be consistent with a ganglion. (PX4) Dr. Keller admitted the presence of the para labral cyst indicated the labral tear was potentially pre-existing and could have potentially been present for several years. (PX 7, p. 20)

SOLICCOOTO

Irrespective of any culling activity at work, Petitioner and Respondent's medical experts, Drs. Keller and Sagerman, opined dislocations typically cause labrum tears to occur. Dr. Keller conceded that the three dislocations described by Petitioner could potentially explain the torn labrum. (PX7, p. 22) Also, because one of the dislocations occurred while Petitioner was sleeping, it shows there was considerable instability in the shoulder. (PX7, p. 22) Dr. Sagerman testified that the worsening of the labrum tear as shown on the December 27, 2016, MRI happened after the dislocations which put additional strain on the labrum. (RX4, p. 19)

Based on the foregoing, Petitioner has failed to prove his condition is causally related to his work activities.

Dr. Sagerman further testified that the procedure for culling roosters, in this case cervical dislocation, would not cause or aggravate the Petitioner's right shoulder condition. (RX4, p. 13) Specifically, in the absence of a significant trauma, the Petitioner's work activities would not cause or aggravate a labral tear. (RX4, p. 13) Dr. Sagerman was posited a hypothetical question that asked him to assume Petitioner had to use a great deal of force to perform the cervical dislocation, he performed it 53 times in June, and had no symptoms before but symptoms after, would the condition of the shoulder be causally related to the activity. Dr. Sagerman testified that the activity described would not be enough force to cause a labral tear or dislocate a person's shoulder. Further, there was no connection between the mechanism of injury to the pathology detected on the MRI. Dr. Sagerman's opinion was based on his physical examination, his review of Ortho New York/Dr. Kaback's treating records, his review of a written job description that indicated Petitioner culled 53 roosters during the month of June, his review of both recent and past radiological images of Petitioner's right shoulder, review of Dr. Keller's treating records from 2007 and 2010 as well as Dr. Keller's evidence deposition testimony. (RX4)

Reliance on Dr. Keller's causation opinion is misplaced. First, Dr. Keller's medical records state Petitioner reinjured his right shoulder on June 26, 2016, as a result of pushing himself off the floor while working on the farm. (PX6) Dr. Keller testified this action would not cause a labral tear. (PX7, p. 20) Second, the medical records do not reference any repetitive activity or culling activity as the cause of Petitioner's right shoulder complaints. (PX7, p. 21) Thus, his causation opinion causally relating the right shoulder condition to the culling activity, specifically cervical dislocation, is not supported by his own records.

Third, Dr. Keller was given a hypothetical question based on facts not in evidence. Dr. Keller was asked to assume Petitioner's culling activity required a very difficult heavy maneuver as far as force and he did that for a week or two before his symptoms started. Dr. Keller admitted on cross-examination it usually takes "a pretty significant force or trauma" to cause Petitioner's shoulder condition. But Petitioner did not testify his activity involved significant force or was a very difficult heavy maneuver. In fact, Petitioner testified he did not know how many pounds was used to perform the activity. (T. p. 22) Notably, the evidence shows the chickens weighed 5-7 pounds and Petitioner stood 6'2" tall and weighed 250-260 pounds. Additionally, Petitioner never testified he performed this activity for one to two weeks before symptoms became manifest. Finally, Dr. Keller admitted that it was difficult to say if the culling impacted the front or the back of the shoulder. "It's just a forceful maneuver of the shoulder that is likely—could potentially injure something in the shoulder." (PX7, p. 24) He couldn't say if it involved the front, the back or the rotator cuff. Dr. Keller's opinion was based on assumptions and conjecture as to force, weight, repetition, and location.

The credible medical evidence shows the employment tasks did not present sufficient force to cause Petitioner's right shoulder condition.

Based on the foregoing, I find Petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that he sustained a compensable accident under a repetitive trauma theory and that his current condition of ill-being is related to the accident of June 26, 2016. Consequently, I would also vacate the TTD award for the period of January 18, 2017, through January 10, 2018, and the award for prospective medical related to the right shoulder.

ATTACHMENT TO ARBITRATOR'S DECISION

Tim Aeschliman v. Charles River Laboratories, Inc.

IWCC No.: 17 WC 033985

Consolidated with 17 WC 006484

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding (C) Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent? And (F) was the Petitioner's condition of ill being causally related to his work activity, the Arbitrator notes as follows:

The Petitioner is alleging a right shoulder injury due to repetitive trauma. In those cases, the issues of whether there was an accident arising out of the employment and causation are analyzed as one.

The Petitioner testified at Arbitration that he was employed by the Respondent, Charles River Laboratories, Inc. as a farm technician. The Petitioner stated that the farm in question was a chicken farm designed to produce eggs on a massive scale. He testified that there were approximately eleven chicken houses and that each housed approximately 10,000 chickens. His job was to make sure that the chickens assigned to him were taken care of. The Petitioner testified that one of those duties included making sure that the balance between the roosters and the hens in any particular house was maintained. If this ratio became unbalanced, it was his job to restore that balance by lessening or culling the appropriate number of roosters in said coop. The Petitioner testified that in the weeks leading up to June 26, 2016 there was such an imbalance and, in the week or so leading up to June 26, 2016 he had to cull approximately 48 roosters. The Petitioner testified that the process of culling these roosters involved severing the brain stem of the rooster by cervical dislocation. The Petitioner describing this culling process by stating that he would hold the rooster's feet in his left hand and place the rooster's neck between the index and middle fingers of his right hand. He would then pull downward with his right arm away from the rooster's feet until he felt the rooster's brain stem separate and its neck cervically dislocate. The Petitioner testified that this was a difficult maneuver and that he was used a great deal of force in order to accomplish it. Petitioner testified that the number of roosters culled between June 20 and 26, 48, was a higher number than usual. The Petitioner testified that on June 26, 2016, he spent about one hour culling 20 roosters. He said after that day, he began to experience pain and discomfort in his right shoulder. The Petitioner filled out a First Report of Accident and Injury on June 27, 2016 stating that he had reinjured his right shoulder that he had previously had a surgery on as a result of culling roosters (Petitioner's Exhibit 1). The Petitioner first sought medical treatment from Ortho NY on July 1, 2016 where he told the treating physician that he was performing repetitive pulling type work and injured his previous repaired right shoulder. At that time an MRI Arthrogram of the right shoulder was ordered. This test, performed on July 26, 2016, showed that the Petitioner has suffered Anterior and Posterior Labral Tears.

The Petitioner testified that despite these findings, he returned to work for the Respondent performing his regular job duties. He further said that his shoulder pain got worse as he performed his job. The Petitioner then testified that on October 31, 2016 while building a chicken pen, he was pulling himself up from the floor with his right arm using a steel bar and felt a large pop and pain in his right shoulder. Once again, the Petitioner immediately filled out a First Report of Accident and Injury for the Respondent. In this form, he stated that he was building a pen for an upcoming Pre Lay and was using a perch to pull himself up from the floor with his already injured shoulder and felt a pop in his shoulder. (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

The Petitioner once again followed up for medical treatment with Ortho NY on October 22, 2016. Once again an MRI Arthrogram was ordered. This was performed on December 27, 2016 and said test found a more extensive Anterior Labral Tear than was previously identified in the July 26, 2016 test. Following this test, the physician at Ortho NY recommended that he undergo an arthroscopic repair to his right shoulder.

The Respondent called no witnesses to dispute the Petitioner's testimony regarding these occurrences. The Petitioner's testimony is corroborated by the incident reports filled out immediately following the injuries.

The Petitioner testified at Arbitration that for unrelated reasons, his employment with the Respondent was terminated effective January 18, 2017. Prior to that date, the Respondent had been accommodating the light duty restrictions placed on him by Ortho NY of no repetitive overuse of his right arm and desk work only. (Petitioner Exhibit 4). The Petitioner testified that he had initially began working for the Respondent in Illinois, where all his family resided, and had only recently transferred out to the New York facility. Once he was terminated from his employment, the Petitioner testified that he moved back to the Illinois area. The Petitioner testified that he then sought treatment from Dr. Brett Keller, an orthopedic surgeon practicing in Bloomington, Illinois. Dr. Keller's notes and deposition were admitted into evidence. He had previously done surgery on the Petitioner's right shoulder on October 24, 2007, performing a debridement of a posterior labral tear and a subacromial decompression. (PX 6)

The Petitioner first saw Dr. Keller for these new problems on February 14, 2017. After reviewing the previous testing done in New York, it was Dr. Keller's opinion that the Petitioner was suffering from an Anterior-Posterior Labral Tear with a Para labral Cyst and with no Rotator Cuff Tear. (Petitioner Exhibit 7, p. 8). Dr. Keller testified that the Petitioner symptoms were consistent with the findings on the MRI Arthrograms and recommended that the Petitioner undergo a right shoulder arthroscopy with Labral Debridement versus repair, a sub acromial decompression and a distal clavicle excision. (Petitioner Exhibit 7, p. 10-11). Dr. Keller was then given an extensive hypothetical consistent with the Petitioner's testimony at Arbitration, and was then asked, if said facts were proven at Arbitration, whether he believed that the culling motion which the Petitioner had to perform 40-50 times shortly before he began treating were responsible for the tears which were seen on the MRI. Dr. Keller responded:

"Assuming that the motion is like you showed me where you're pulling away, pulling down and it does require a significant force... I think that certainly is a maneuver and action that could potentially relate – you know, cause his shoulder issue just due to the force and the repetition." (Petitioner Exhibit 7, p. 14-15).

Dr. Keller was then asked if the second accident, wherein the Petitioner was pulling himself up from a prone position on the floor by using a bar was a mechanism consistent with the worsening that he saw on the second MRI. He testified that the act of pushing himself off the floor was unlikely to have caused a torn labrum. He said that the Petitioner pulling himself up probably just aggravated the injury. (PX 7 at 21, 16) Finally, Dr. Keller was asked whether or not these incidents have caused the need for the surgery which Dr. Keller had recommended. Dr. Keller responded:

"My opinion that his injury is related to his accident or issue at work that he's described assuming what you've told me is true." (Petitioner Exhibit 7, p. 16).

At the request of the Respondent, the Petitioner was examined by Dr. Scott Sagerman. It was Dr. Sagerman's opinion that the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being was not casually related to the work activities. Dr. Sagerman felt that in the absence of a significant trauma, the Petitioner's work activities would not cause a Labral tear. Dr. Sagerman opined that the procedure of culling roosters was not a significant enough trauma to cause the Labral tear. Dr. Sagerman went on to state that he did not believe the Petitioner's second accident, where he pulled himself up off the floor using the steel bar was causative because the tears had already been demonstrated on a previous MRI. (Respondent's Exhibit 4, p. 11-13). On cross examination, Dr. Sagerman was asked whether the second accident caused the worsening of the Petitioner's shoulder which was demonstrated between the two different MRI Arthrograms taken. Dr. Sagerman opined that it did not and, that it was his opinion that the dislocations that the Petitioner described were responsible for the worsening. When Dr. Sagerman was informed that the Petitioner's testimony would be that said dislocations did not occur until after the second accident, Dr. Sagerman stated that that would not change his opinions. (Respondent's Exhibit 4, p. 18-21). Dr. Sagerman then reluctantly agreed that the Labral tears found in 2016 were not present in the Petitioner's last MRI taken in 2010. Dr. Sagerman then reiterated that he did not feel the culling motion was a significant enough force to cause Labral tears. Dr. Sagerman then testified that while it would have to be something more traumatic then the culling, he had no history of any other incidents or accidents up until the culling that would explain how the Petitioner developed the Labral tears found on MRI. (Respondent's Exhibit 4, p. 22-24).

Based upon the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds that the opinions of Dr. Keller are more persuasive than those of Dr. Sagerman. Dr. Keller's testimony regarding causation is consistent with the Petitioner's testimony at Arbitration, namely that his problems began after the culling motions necessary as part of his job duties leading up June 26, 2016. As stated above, Dr. Keller felt the force and repetition involved in the culling process provided the basis for his opinions.

While Dr. Sagerman testified clearly in his deposition that the act of culling the roosters was not of the magnitude of trauma that would cause or aggravate the injury, the Arbitrator questions how he arrived at that opinion. Dr. Sagerman initially saw the Petitioner for a Section 12 examination at the request of the Respondent. In his initial report, dated May 22, 2017, he agreed that the Petitioner had a torn labrum. He also reviewed the medical records from the Petitioner's earlier shoulder care from 2007 through 2010. He said that there was no indication of any ongoing treatment for the shoulder after 2010. With respect to causation, Dr. Sagerman said that he " would like to view a demonstration of the culling process to confirm the mechanism of injury..." (Dep. X 2, RX 4)

The doctor then authored a second report dated July 12, 2017, after being provided additional information by the Respondent. In the report, Dr. Sagerman writes that he had received a job description along with information as to the number of roosters culled by the Petitioner. He also writes, however, that there was no description of the physical demand for culling roosters, something which he had requested in his earlier report. Despite not having this information, the doctor wrote that the performance of the patient's work activities would not cause a labral tear or shoulder instability. (Dep. X 3, RX 4)

While Dr. Sagerman later reiterated his opinions on causation in both a written note and during his deposition, the Arbitrator finds those opinions to lack credibility. He wrote that he needed a demonstration to give his opinion. The Respondent then sent him some materials but not a demonstration. With only that information, how was he able to provide his causation opinion, found in his second report?

Dr. Sagerman also implied in his deposition that the Petitioner's injuries were somehow related to his prior shoulder injuries referred to above. He testified that the Petitioner had a prior structural injury and had continued pain, suggesting the new pathology came on between 2010 and 2016. (RX 4 at 11-12) This testimony conflicts with the doctor's initial report. After reviewing all of the medical records, he wrote that there was no indication of any ongoing shoulder symptoms after his release in 2010. (Dep. X 2, RX 4)

Based upon the above evidence, the Arbitrator finds that the work activity engaged in by the Petitioner culling roosters between June 20 and 26, 2016 was an accidental injury arising out of his employment which was causally related to his present condition of ill being.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding (K) Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care?, the Arbitrator notes as follows:

Having found that the Petitioner did sustain an accident which arose out of and in the course of his employment with the Respondent, and having further found that the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to said accidents, the Arbitrator hereby finds that the surgery recommended by both the doctor from Ortho NY and Dr. Brett Keller is both reasonable and necessary and orders the Respondent to authorize said surgical treatment.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding (L) What temporary benefits are in dispute? TTD, the Arbitrator notes as follows:

The Petitioner testified at Arbitration that he was returned to work following the October 31, 2016 incident by the doctors at Ortho NY with a restriction of no repetitive overuse of his right arm and desk work only. (Petitioner's Exhibit 4). The Respondent accommodated said restriction until the Petitioner was terminated on January 18, 2017. The Petitioner testified that at no point have said restrictions been removed. Additionally, the Petitioner came under the treatment of Dr. Brett Keller who removed the Petitioner entirely from work pending the surgical procedure which he had recommended. Having found that the Petitioner did sustain accidents which arose out of and in the course of his employment with the Respondent, and having further found that the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is casually related to said accidents, the Arbitrator further finds that the Petitioner's inability to return to work is also casually related to said accidents. Given that the Petitioner has been recommended for an Arthroscopic procedure for his right shoulder problems, the Petitioner is clearly not at maximum medical improvement. Since the Respondent chose to terminate the Petitioner rather than continue to accommodate said restrictions, the Arbitrator finds that the Respondent owes Temporary Total Disability benefits from the date of said termination of January 18, 2017 through the date of Arbitration of January 10, 2018 for a period of 51 1/7 weeks.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REMAND

This matter comes before the Commission on remand from the Appellate Court which found, in its November 7, 2018, Rule 23 Order that "the Commission's finding that Petitioner failed to prove that her injury arose out of her employment was against the manifest weight of the evidence and it committed error in denying claimant compensation under the Act." App.Ord. at ¶1.

On October 14, 2016, the Commission had affirmed the Arbitrator's decision that "petitioner's injury resulted from a personal risk, and that the general public was exposed to the identical risk." Arb.Dec. at 6. The dissenting Commissioner wrote, "Petitioner was exposed to a greater risk than the general public because she regularly used the entry and walkway where she fell while on break." Comm.Dec. at 2. The dissent further opined that Petitioner's injuries "also arose out of her employment under the personal comfort doctrine." Id. The Sangamon County circuit court affirmed the Commission's decision.

The Appellate Court found, "a risk-analysis is unnecessary if the injury occurred on the premises due to an unsafe or hazardous condition" (App.Ord. at ¶15) and "the fact that this walkway was used by the general public is immaterial to the issue of compensability because claimant's injury was caused by a hazardous condition on the employer's premises." Id. at ¶16. It explained, "The key factors that guide our decision in this case are as follows: (1) claimant's injury occurred on the employer's premises, and (2) the injury was due to or caused by a dangerous condition or defect on the employer's premises. No consideration is given as to whether claimant's risk was any greater than that of the general public." Id at ¶17. The Court, however, disagreed with claimant's alternative argument that her injuries were compensable under the "personal comfort doctrine." The Court reversed the Commission's decision and remanded this cause to the Commission for further proceedings.

Based on the Court's order regarding the issue of accident, the Commission finds that Petitioner's left ankle fracture is clearly causally related to that accident and addresses the remaining issues below.

Petitioner is entitled to the medical expenses contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 5 pursuant to §8(a) of the Act, subject to the fee schedule in §8.2 of the Act. Respondent is entitled to a credit under §8(j) of the Act for payments made by its group insurance carrier; provided that Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims and demands by any providers of the benefits for which Respondent is receiving credit under this order.

The Commission finds that Petitioner was temporarily totally disabled (TTD) for 11 weeks representing the period from February 14, 2014 through May 1, 2014. The parties stipulated that Petitioner's Average Weekly Wage (AWW) was $697.92, which equates to a TTD benefit rate of $465.28 per week.

Regarding Petitioner's permanent partial disability award, since her accident occurred on or after September 1, 2011, the five factors in §8.1b(b) of the Act are weighed as follows:

i) No AMA Impairment Rating was submitted by either party so this factor is given no weight.

ii) Petitioner's occupation is Administrative Zoning Secretary. She performs office work including typing, calling, filing and getting the City Council packets ready. T.13. Following her treatment, Petitioner was returned to full duty. We find that although Petitioner sustained a severe tri-malleolar fracture of her ankle, her job is sedentary and not likely to aggravate her residual symptoms as much as a more physical job would. We give this factor significant weight.

iii) Petitioner was 43 years old at the time of her injury. We find that no evidence was introduced to support a finding that her age affects her level of disability and, therefore, we give this factor no weight.

iv) Similarly, no evidence was introduced to indicate that Petitioner's future earning capacity is reduced due to her injury. We give this factor no weight.

v) Regarding evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, Petitioner testified that she is depressed because she has a lot of problems with her ankle, which hurts "everyday all the time." T.19. She does not have full mobility due to the hardware in her ankle and is unable to walk down stairs with one foot in front of the other. Id. She cannot run but does try to walk, although not for long periods of time, and she elevates her foot as soon as she gets home because it still swells up "almost everyday" depending on how much she is on it. T.20. Petitioner now wears tennis shoes, which provide better stability than sandals. T.21. She has difficulty walking up even slight hills. Id. Petitioner does not take any prescription pain medication but does take Aleve in the morning before work and then at home, if necessary, but she tries not to take it every day. T.22. Her ankle hurts more in bad weather and she wears compression socks at times. T.23.

At Petitioner's last office visit to Springfield Clinic, on January 22, 2015, it was noted that she still had occasional stiffness and pain with quite a bit of swelling on strenuous activity. Px4. We note that, despite Petitioner's complaints of constant pain and difficulties, she had not returned for any medical treatment in the last six months. T.38. Nevertheless, we find that Petitioner's testimony regarding her disability is corroborated, in large part, by her medical records. We give this factor the most weight.

After considering all the above factors, we find Petitioner is entitled to 41.75 weeks of permanent partial disability benefits representing the loss of use of 25% of the left foot. Based on Petitioner's Average Weekly Wage, her permanent partial disability benefit rate is $418.75 per week.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $465.28 per week for a period of 11 weeks, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $418.75 per week for a period of 41.75 weeks, as provided in §8(e)11 of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused the loss of use of 25% of Petitioner's left foot.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the medical bills contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 5 for medical expenses under §8(a) of the Act, subject to the fee schedule in §8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is entitled to a credit under §8(j) of the Act for payments made by its group insurance carrier; provided that Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims and demands by any providers of the benefits for which Respondent is receiving credit under this order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Pursuant to §19(f)(2) of the Act, Respondent is not required to file an appeal bond in this case. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

BEFORE THE ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

MARIAH MADDUX,

Petitioner,

20IWCC0012

vs. NO: 15 WC 28741

UNITED AIRLINES, INC.,

Respondent.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REMAND

This matter comes before the Commission on remand from the Circuit Court of Cook County, which found in its February 28, 2019, Memorandum Opinion and Order:

> The Commission erred in its legal analysis and its decision is reversed. According to long-standing Illinois Supreme Court and Appellate Court precedent, traveling employees are entitled to workers' compensation benefits so long as they were engaged in reasonable and foreseeable behavior at the time of the injury, without regard to the nature of the risk. Moreover, even if the nature of the risk were relevant to the compensability of a traveling employee's injury, as one Illinois Appellate Court opinion appears to suggest, Petitioner was nevertheless entitled to compensation under the "street risk" doctrine. Cir.Ord. at 1.

On June 20, 2018, the Commission affirmed the Arbitrator's decision finding Petitioner failed to prove that she sustained a compensable injury that arose out of her employment by Respondent. The dissenting (and partially concurring) Commissioner performed a traveling employee analysis and wrote:

> In the instant case, it is reasonable and foreseeable that the Petitioner would have gotten dinner after arriving at the Respondent-mandated hotel after an evening flight, thus satisfying the third prong that her accident arose out of her employment. She was > carrying a box of food back to her room when she "took a tumble" in the hall and rolled into the wall. Based on the above analysis, Petitioner's accident arose out of and in the course of her employment. Comm.Dec. at 3.

The Circuit Court concluded its traveling employee analysis by stating, "Where, as here, a traveling employee is injured while engaged in a reasonable and foreseeable course of conduct, any injury she may suffer is compensable. The Commission erred in failing so to conclude." Cir.Ord. at 5.

Based on the finding of a compensable accident, the Court reversed the Commission's denial of penalties under Section 19(l). The Court found, "as Employer has offered no legal justification for its denial of benefits, penalties under 19(l) must be awarded." Id. at 6. However, the Court found:

> Because of the different standard and especially because of the discretionary nature of awards of penalties and attorneys' fees under sections 16 and 19(k), the court declines to order an award pursuant to these sections, but rather remands to the Commission to determine the matter anew. The court does note, however, that a legally baseless defense to a claim can in appropriate circumstances constitute a sufficient basis for awarding such penalties and fees." Id. at 6-7 (citation omitted).

The Court ordered, "On remand, the Commission must not only determine the amount to award Petitioner as compensation, but must also enter an award under section 19(l). The Commission must also determine whether to award Petitioner penalties and attorneys' fees under sections 16 and 19(k) of the Act." Id. at 7.

Based on the Court's order regarding the issue of accident, the Commission finds that Petitioner's right leg, right wrist, lumbar spine, cervical spine, left hip and left shoulder conditions are causally related to the accident on May 19, 2015, and we address the remaining issues below.

We find that Petitioner's medical expenses have been reasonable, necessary, and causally related to her accident and Petitioner is entitled to the medical bills contained in Petitioner's exhibits pursuant to §8(a) of the Act, subject to the fee schedule in §8.2 of the Act. Respondent is entitled to a credit under §8(j) of the Act for payments made by its group insurance carrier; provided that Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims and demands by any providers of the benefits for which Respondent is receiving credit under this order.

We further find that Petitioner is entitled to prospective medical treatment as recommended by Dr. Grover and Dr. Milford including, but not limited to, cervical and lumbar injections and a left shoulder MRI.

The Commission finds that Petitioner was temporarily totally disabled (TTD) for 44-4/7 weeks representing the period from May 22, 2015, when Petitioner was restricted from full duty work, through the date of hearing on March 28, 2016. The parties stipulated that Petitioner's Average Weekly Wage (AWW) was $699.99, which corresponds to a TTD benefit rate of $466.66 per week.

The Circuit Court found that Petitioner is entitled to late-payment penalties under §19(l) of the Act. Petitioner's brief argues that Respondent delayed payment for 311 days, which is based on Petitioner's calculation of the time period claimed for unpaid TTD benefits (5/22/15 through 3/28/16). Again, the Commission calculates this as 312 days but awards 311 days as requested by and stipulated to by Petitioner. Petitioner is therefore entitled to §19(l) penalties of $9,330.00 ($30 per day x 311 days).

Pursuant to the Court's instruction, we have considered "whether to award Petitioner penalties and attorneys' fees under sections 16 and 19(k) of the Act" and have declined to do so. We note that at least some of Petitioner's medical expenses were paid by Respondent's group health insurance carrier under §8(j) of the Act. These payments are to be considered when determining whether to award penalties under §19(k) of the Act. We also note that the original Arbitrator along with a unanimous Commission panel on review, including the dissenting (and partially concurring) Commissioner, found that Respondent's behavior and delay did not rise to the unreasonable or vexatious level required to award penalties under §19(k) of the Act or legal fees as provided in §16 of the Act, nor did Respondent assert a frivolous defense.

The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Commission, 78 Ill. 2d 327, 399 N.E.2d 1322, 35 Ill. Dec. 794 (1980).

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $466.66 per week for a period of 44-4/7 weeks, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the medical bills contained in Petitioner's exhibits for medical expenses under §8(a) of the Act, subject to the fee schedule in §8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay for prospective medical treatment as recommended by Dr. Grover and Dr. Milford including, but not limited to, cervical and lumbar injections and a left shoulder MRI.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner additional compensation of $9,330.00 as provided in §19(l) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's requests for additional compensation pursuant to §19(k) of the Act and for legal fees as provided in §16 of the Act are hereby denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is entitled to a credit under §8(j) of the Act for payments made by its group insurance carrier; provided that Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims and demands by any providers of the benefits for which Respondent is receiving credit under this order

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $40,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the parties herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, temporary total disability, medical expenses, including prospective medical, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent partial disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Comm'n. 78 Ill.2d 327, 399 N.E.2d 1322 (1980).

The Commission affirms and adopts that part of the Arbitrator's Decision finding that Petitioner sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of her employment on May 2, 2014; that the MRI spectroscopy was not reasonable and necessary treatment to cure or relieve the effects of the accidental injury; that the epidural steroid injections received after July 2, 2014, were not reasonable and necessary to cure or relieve the effects of the accidental injury; and that the Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition was not causally related to the May 2, 2014, accident. The Commission reverses the Arbitrator's Decision finding that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being regarding her lumbar spine is causally related to the May 2, 2014, accident and vacates the Arbitrator's award of prospective medical treatment, specifically the L5-S1 fusion, for the reasons explained below.

It is the function of the Industrial Commission to decide questions of fact and causation

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law

The Commission affirms and adopts the Arbitrator's Findings of Fact, noting that this case was consolidated with case 13 WC 23310, and the consolidated cases were tried in a Section 19(b) proceeding. Only the instant case, 14 WC 22576, was reviewed.

Petitioner, a Certified Nursing Assistant, sustained a work-related accident on May 13, 2013, the subject of case 13 WC 23310. Petitioner underwent lumbar spine surgery--an L5 laminectomy and L5-S1 discectomy--performed by neurosurgeon Dr. Taveau, on August 5, 2013. (PX26) Dr. Taveau released Petitioner to return to work without restrictions on April 11, 2014. (PX26)

On May 2, 2014, Petitioner was performing her work-related duties which included lifting patients. After working a portion of her shift, she began to experience low back pain and right-sided pain which she had not experienced with the previous injury. (T. pp. 31-32)

The Commission strikes the Arbitrator's Conclusions of Law on pages 11 through 15 of the Arbitrator's Decision and substitutes the following Conclusions of Law:

Accident

Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of her employment on May 2, 2014. On that date, Petitioner was taking care of nine patients, four of which were "total lift" patients. Petitioner's job assignment required a significant amount of lifting. After working a portion of her shift, Petitioner sat down for lunch and experienced a cold sensation, first centrally located in her lower back and then on the right side, unlike that which she experienced with the prior injury. (T. pp. 30-32)

Petitioner reported the incident to Respondent that same day and a written report was prepared. Respondent directed Petitioner to Dr. Austin for medical treatment. Petitioner completed a form indicating her back was painful because of activity and heavy lifting. (PX33) On May 6, 2014, Petitioner saw her primary care physician, Dr. Alexander, and advised she had a sudden onset of back pain while at work on Friday. Respondent presented no rebuttal witness at trial regarding the accident of May 2, 2014. (T. pp. 32-33)

The Commission finds Petitioner proved by a preponderance of the evidence she sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of her employment on May 2, 2014.

Causal Connection

The Commission concludes Petitioner's current conditions of ill-being, specifically her lumbar spine and her bilateral shoulder condition, are not causally related to the accident of May 2, 2014. In support of this conclusion the Commission finds the following:

Lumbar Spine

The Petitioner saw her primary care physician, Dr. Alexander, on May 6, 2014, and stated she had reinjured her lumbar spine at work on May 2, 2014. Dr. Alexander took her off work. (PX2) She underwent an MRI of the lumbar spine on May 16, 2014, which showed the previous laminectomy at the L5-S1 level, no evidence of central canal stenosis or recurrent disc protrusion, and enhancing scar tissue within the lateral recesses bilaterally at the L5-S1 level which may be affecting the descending nerve roots. (PX17)

Petitioner returned to her surgeon, Dr. Taveau, on May 19, 2014, and reported intermittent right leg pain. Dr. Taveau's physical exam revealed she was neurologically intact. He agreed with Dr. Alexander that Petitioner should remain off work. (PX26)

Despite the radiologist's finding that the MRI scan of May 16, 2014, did not reveal evidence of a recurrent disc herniation, Dr. Taveau opined there was a recurrent disc herniation, paracentral right, that appeared to be impinging on the right L5 descending sacral nerve root. He ordered flexion/extension x-rays of her lumbar spine and an NCV study. Dr. Taveau recommended conservative therapy. If surgery was required, he would recommend an L5-S1 posterior lumbar interbody fusion (PLIF). (PX26)

When Petitioner returned to Dr. Taveau on May 28, 2014, she advised she went to the emergency room over the weekend for back and leg pain and was released. He noted that the flexion/extension x-rays revealed no evidence of instability. He released her to attend school and recommended she do low impact exercise such as swimming, elliptical machines or walking. He kept her off work. (PX26)

On June 6, 2014, the Petitioner underwent an EMG/NCS study which was consistent with right L5/S1 radiculopathy, but clinical correlation was recommended.

On June 26, 2014, Petitioner consulted Dr. Brent Newell, a pain management doctor. Dr. Newell reviewed the May 16, 2014, MRI scan of the lumbar spine and opined there was enhancing scar tissue in the L5-S1 disc affecting the S1 nerve root, but no herniation. (PX13).

Dr. Taveau testified on December 15, 2014, via evidence deposition. He testified that on May 28, 2014, the last date he rendered care, he released Petitioner to participate in activities at school, including the didactic and clinical portions, without restrictions. It was stipulated at Arbitration that the job duties of a CNA were the same or substantially similar to the physical requirements of Petitioner's nursing school clinicals. Dr. Taveau continued to recommend conservative treatment, finding Petitioner was neurologically intact and she did not have any spinal instability. (PX34, 74-75)

The Commission notes the letter prepared by Dr. Taveau on August 19, 2014, restricting Petitioner from returning to work. The Commission finds significant Dr. Taveau's testimony that he did not examine Petitioner on that date nor had he examined Petitioner since her last visit on May 28, 2014, yet he restricted her from returning to work. Thus, the Commission finds Dr. Taveau's opinion regarding her ability to return to work not credible.

Petitioner voluntarily resigned her position with Respondent on September 1, 2014. It was stipulated at Arbitration that Respondent had a policy of accommodating light duty work for employees with workers' compensation claims.

On October 30, 2014, Petitioner underwent a second MRI scan of the lumbar spine. The radiologist found postoperative laminectomy/microdiscectomy changes at L5-S1 when compared to the prior exam, decreased contrast enhancing epidural granulation/fibrosis compared to the prior exam, no recurrent or residual disc herniation or significant central spinal canal stenosis, and minimal left L4-5 and mild-moderate left L5-S1 foraminal stenosis.

Petitioner began treating with Dr. Gornet on November 20, 2014. He opined the MRI scans of the lumbar spine performed on May 16, 2014 and October 30, 2014, showed large annular tears at L5-S1. On examination, Petitioner was able to bend and forward flex with her hands to the mid-lower legs and she returned to standing with a smooth rhythm. He recommended she undergo a CT myelogram and another MRI scan. He recommended an anterior fusion at L5-S1 despite not having the results of the new tests he had ordered. Dr. Gornet documented that he believed Petitioner sustained a disc injury as a result of the May 13, 2013, work-related accident and her condition was aggravated by her second accident of May 2, 2014. (PX23)

At Respondent's request Petitioner underwent a Section 12 examination with Dr. Zelby. In his January 14, 2015, report, Dr. Zelby noted Petitioner underwent an L5 laminectomy and L5-S1 discectomy in August 2013 and returned to work April 17, 2014. She worked three weeks full duty and has been off since May 2, 2014. Dr. Zelby reviewed the CT scan of the lumbar spine, dated December 5, 2014, which showed modest degenerative changes as well as the prior L5 laminectomy, the MRI scan dated October 30, 2014, which showed no evidence of a disc protrusion, the MRI scan of December 5, 2014, which was unchanged, and the MRI scan of June 6, 2013, and August 1, 2013, both which pre-dated the current accident. Dr. Zelby opined that there was no evidence of a recurrent disc herniation, which was consistent with the opinion of the radiologist. In regard to the presence of an annular tear, Dr. Zelby opined this was not significant and was not a basis to perform lumbar surgery. (RX1)

Dr. Zelby's findings on examination were essentially normal and there were no objective findings to explain the persistence and severity of her symptoms. He found multiple positive Waddell signs with significant symptom magnification. He opined that there was no medical basis for Petitioner to undergo a fusion at L5-S1. Further, Petitioner could work at a Medium-Heavy physical demand level and Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement (MMI) as of January or February 2014.

On March 9, 2015, Petitioner underwent an MRI of the lumbar spine, a lumbar spine

myelogram and CT scan post myelogram The MRI scan of the lumbar spine revealed post-surgical changes involving the posterior paraspinous soft tissues and ventral epidural space consistent with postsurgical granulation tissue at the L5-S1 level, no evidence of a recurrent L5-S1 disc herniation, mild to specification with diffuse annular disc bulge, no central canal stenosis, and minimal bilateral neural foraminal exit stenosis. Further, there was no other significant disc desiccation, disc profile abnormality, central canal stenosis or neural foraminal exit stenosis throughout the remainder of the lumbar spine. (PX20)

The CT scan of the lumbar spine post myelogram showed normal alignment of the lumbar spine. There was mild disc desiccation with diffuse annular disc bulge, no central canal stenosis, and minimal bilateral neural foraminal exit stenosis. It was further noted there was no other significant disc profile abnormality, central canal stenosis or neural foraminal exit stenosis throughout the remainder of the lumbar spine and no facet arthropathy throughout the lumbar spine. (PX7)

Petitioner saw Dr. Gornet on March 9, 2015. Dr. Gornet noted Petitioner continues to rely on narcotics which is inappropriate. He further stated if she cannot be weaned off narcotics that she is taking on a regular basis, then no further treatment should be provided, and she should be at MMI. Dr. Gornet also expressed concerns about symptom magnification. Dr. Gornet stated that if Petitioner can demonstrate that she is weaned off all narcotics and can demonstrate further that she is a reasonable candidate for intervention, consideration could be given to treating her at only the L5-S1 level with an anterior lumbar fusion. (PX23)

In April 2015, Petitioner began treating with Dr. Fleming at Neuroscience Institute, who replaced Dr. Taveau. M. Bryant, Physician's Assistant for Dr. Fleming, saw Petitioner on April 13, 2015. He reviewed the December 2014 MRI scan of the lumbar spine and the radiology notes and found no evidence of a recurrent disc herniation. He also reviewed Petitioner's x-rays of her lumbar spine and found no evidence of instability in her spine.

PA Bryant added an Addendum to the April 13, 2015, office note stating he and Dr. Fleming reviewed the new imaging studies and compared them to the older imaging studies. He reiterated, "there is not a recurrent disc herniation at the L5-S1 level. There is no significant stenosis at L4-5 or L5-S1. This also concurs with the radiology report on the new studies as well as her previous studies last year. Dr. Fleming agreed to see her in clinic if she desires." (PX6)

Petitioner saw Dr. Criste, pain management doctor, on April 29, 2015, upon referral from Dr. Fleming. He noted Petitioner had seen two neurosurgeons who gave conflicting opinions. It was noted Dr. Fleming felt surgery would not be helpful, and he referred her for consideration for a spinal cord stimulator. (PX26, p. 88) Petitioner declined and requested an epidural steroid injection to which he agreed. Dr. Criste encouraged her to obtain a third medical opinion. On May 27, 2015, Petitioner advised Dr. Criste that she felt great and stopped taking her pain medication. (PX6)

In August 2015, Petitioner resumed registered nursing school at Shawnee Community College. (T. p. 53)

E10030W10S

Petitioner continued with physical therapy and on August 24, 2015, Petitioner reported no bilateral lower extremity radiculopathy. She rated her low back pain on a scale of 1/10 as currently at 0/10, and at its worst at 4/10. (PX14)

On August 27, 2015, Petitioner reported to the physical therapist that she had no pain in her lower back or leg region. She was feeling much better. By September 17, 2015, she reported she had returned to running at regular intervals. By September 22, 2015, she reported "abolished radicular symptoms" and improved activity tolerance. Likewise, on October 5, 2015, Petitioner reported to Dr. Gornet she was no longer taking narcotics and she was doing better. Her diagnosis was discogenic pain with annular tear and previous surgery at L5-S1. (PX 23) She was discharged from physical therapy on October 19, 2015. (PX14)

Dr. Gornet testified on September 2, 2015, that Petitioner had more of a structural problem at L5-S1 because of the prior discectomy and laminectomy which caused a destabilization of her spine at L5-S1 as well as an annular tear. Dr. Gornet opined the only way to stabilize the spine was to perform a fusion. (PX35. 22, 35-37).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Gornet on January 4, 2016. He noted that she was in nursing school. Dr. Gornet attributed Petitioner's condition of ill-being to the first accident on May 13, 2013, and the subsequent surgery. He opined the surgery caused destabilization of that segment of the spine. He ordered an MRI spectroscopy at L3-L4, L4-L5, and L5-S1 and he noted if Petitioner continued to have symptoms then the anterior fusion surgery at L5-S1 would be appropriate. (PX23)

Dr. Gornet next saw Petitioner on March 24, 2016, and he noted the MRI spectroscopy was positive for the presence of painful chemicals at L5-S1 and L4-L5. He described his exam of Petitioner as non-focal and recommended the anterior fusion at L5-S1.

Dr. Treister was deposed on December 19, 2016, and testified that Dr. Gornet's proposed anterior lumbar fusion at L5-S1 was not reasonable and necessary and he did not certify the procedure. (RX4, pp. 13-14) Dr. Treister opined an annular tear by itself should not be an indication for surgery. (RX4, p. 29) He stated that once a person has had a surgical intervention, an annular tear will always be found. (RX4, p. 30) Dr. Treister also noted Petitioner had been treated for anxiety and depression and that she should be evaluated before proceeding with surgery. (RX4, pp. 31-32) Dr. Treister noted Petitioner's Waddell findings when examined by Dr. Zelby and he noted that after one of the injections, Petitioner reported that her symptoms worsened. (RX4, pp. 22-23)

Dr. Treister reviewed Dr. Gornet's medical records. Specifically, in his progress report dated December 8, 2014, Dr. Treister noted a lack of description of Petitioner's subjective complaints or any findings on exam which comprise the basis for making any assessment. (RX4, pp. 17-20) He noted that when Dr. Gornet evaluated Petitioner on November 20, 2014, his findings correlated with nerve root pressure at L4-L5, not at L5-S1, and Dr. Gornet did not document any subjective complaints correlating to L5-S1. (RX4, pp. 15-16)

Dr. Treister testified the MRI spectroscopy was not generally used to evaluate spinal conditions. (RX4, pp. 35-26) The use of an MRI spectroscopy is in the earliest stages of experimental consideration and the test would be positive with any disc that had previously undergone spinal surgery. Furthermore, Dr. Treister testified, an L5-S1 fusion was not indicated because the pathology has to be defined by correlating subjective complaints, objective findings and radiologic testing. Here, there were no correlations substantiating the need for surgery. (RX4, pp. 36-40)

Dr. Gornet was deposed again on January 23, 2017. Dr. Gornet testified he was treating an objective structural problem at L5-S1. He further testified he objectively measured painful chemicals in the disc through the use of the MRI spectroscopy. Dr. Gornet relied on the EMG findings which he found were consistent with his findings of radiculopathy at L5-S1. He testified he did not record exam findings on every visit because there was no change as Petitioner's complaints remained essentially the same. Dr. Gornet testified Petitioner was no longer on narcotics and had a treatable condition.

On cross-examination, Dr. Gornet conceded that only three offices in the country use a spectroscopy to evaluate spinal patients. Dr. Gornet agreed that the presence of an annular tear, in and of itself, was not the basis for a surgical recommendation as many other factors need to be considered. (PX36, 28-31)

Dr. Zelby examined Petitioner again on April 23, 2018. His examination findings were objectively normal. Notably, he again found the presence of symptom magnification. He opined that the numerous epidural steroid injections Petitioner had received were not medically necessary because she had no condition which would be relieved by steroid injections. He opined the annular tear was of no clinical significance and the use of an MRI spectroscopy was not reasonable for determining treatment in spinal conditions. Dr. Zelby opined there was no objective evidence to support performing an L5-S1 fusion. (RX5)

Petitioner returned to Dr. Gornet on June 25, 2018, and again complained of low back and right leg pain. Dr. Gornet noted Petitioner had structural back pain and an annular tear at L5-S1 and again recommended a fusion at L5-S1.

Dr. Zelby was deposed a second time on July 9, 2018. Dr. Zelby opined that Petitioner had no residual recurrent disc issues or findings of radiculopathy. (RX6, pp. 21-22) He testified that it is pretty much mainstream spine knowledge that annular tears and lumbar discs heal completely in three to four months. Dr. Zelby testified he was trained in the use of spectroscopy, but he was not one of the three in the country to use it in his practice. In his practice it would be used for predictive value to determine if a brain tumor will recur after radiation treatment.

Dr. Zelby testified that epidural steroid injections were not reasonable and necessary to cure any condition in her spine. He testified on cross-examination that, "Ms. Lewis has no condition in her spine treated (sic) with the ongoing use of narcotic medications and their continued use is counterproductive for Ms. Lewis." (RX6, p. 49) He testified that multiple injections over a 42-month period would not be a reasonable treatment for chronic low back pain. (RX6, p. 50).

Dr. Zelby testified that even if an annular tear existed, independent of a disc herniation, if it were acute, in three or four months it was no longer a source of pain for Ms. Lewis. (RX6, p. 51). He addressed whether discectomies cause structural disc injuries and whether every patient who undergoes a discectomy needs a fusion to which he responded, "Absolutely not. I mean, I do probably sixty or eighty lumbar micro discs a year and in that group, I send people back to heavy physical labor all the time." (RX6, p. 52)

Dr. Gornet was deposed for the third time on August 13, 2018. On cross-examination, Dr. Gornet was asked about Petitioner's multiple steroid injections and whether they related to her avascular necrosis. Dr. Gornet testified that getting AVN from steroids is not due to a cumulative effect:

> ... as far as in studying under probably the leading person for avascular necrosis in the country, David Hungerford, who redeveloped all the scales, injections for steroids and the response of avascular necrosis is idiosyncratic. Which what that means is you can do one injection and the patient can get AVN, avascular necrosis. And so it's not a cumulative effect. And so we don't quite understand why that is. And so, we have seen it with patient's getting one injection and they get a result of AVN. (PX39, 16-18)

On September 21, 2018, Dr. Treister performed another Utilization Review regarding the reasonableness and necessity of the L5-S1 fusion and the multiple steroid injections. Dr. Treister opined the initial injections received were reasonable, specifically injections administered June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014. Dr. Treister noted there was no consideration given to the cumulative effect of the steroid injections Petitioner had received. He also opined that more likely than not the avascular necrosis (AVN) was referable to the cumulative effect of the steroid injections. (RX7)

Dr. Treister was deposed on September 24, 2018. Dr. Treister opined that there were no objective findings of radicular symptoms and moreover, Petitioner was not improving following the injections. He testified there was no medical basis to justify Petitioner having received 17 epidural steroid injections. (RX8, 21-23, 26-28).

Petitioner testified she wanted surgery for "quality of life." She testified that she lives with pain every single day. She wants to have kids. She wants to be able to wake up in the morning and know that "I'm not at risk of hurting myself worse every single day." She testified she has constant pain in her back. She is having a hard time sitting and has pain that radiates down both legs. She also testified she has neck pain that is an overall generalized pain that generates from her low back. (T. pp.60-62)

The Commission finds Petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence her current condition of ill-being in her lumbar spine is related to the accident of May 2, 2014. The Commission relies on the opinions of Dr. Zelby, Dr. Treister and Dr. Fleming that there was no evidence of a herniated disc or spinal instability on the diagnostic tests. The Commission finds these opinions to be more persuasive than the opinion of Dr. Gornet.

The Commission is not persuaded by Dr. Gornet's opinion that Petitioner requires a lumbar fusion as a result of spinal instability. First, his opinion that Petitioner has sustained spinal instability is disputed by Petitioner's other treating physicians, Dr. Fleming, Dr. Taveau and Physician's Assistant M. Bryant. Second, his reliance on a spectroscopy to form the basis of his opinion is unreliable. The fact that Dr. Gornet concedes that only three offices in the country are relying upon the procedure supports Dr. Treister's opinion that the procedure is experimental. Further, Dr. Zelby's testimony that it is not a diagnostic tool used for spinal conditions but used as a predictive value for brain tumor patients is persuasive.

The Commission relies upon Dr. Treister's opinions that under the Official Disability Guidelines, that Petitioner's objective findings do not correlate with her subjective complaints and the lumbar fusion is not reasonable and necessary.

The Commission finds Dr. Zelby's and Dr. Treister's opinions, that the lumbar fusion surgery at L5-S1 is not reasonable and necessary, to be more persuasive than Dr. Gornet's. The Commission relies upon Dr. Zelby's opinion that the results of the March 19, 2015, MRI scan of the lumbar spine at L5-S1 and the CT scan confirms resolution of the stenosis and neural impingement and there is no stenosis or neural impingement at any level. The Commission further finds this comports with Dr. Fleming's opinion that Petitioner is not a surgical candidate.

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds Petitioner has failed to prove her current condition of ill-being in her lumbar spine is causally related to the work-related accident.

Bilateral Shoulder Condition

In regard to Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition, the Commission finds it is not causally related to the accident of May 2, 2014. Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Paletta, and Respondent's Utilization Review physician, Dr. Treister, both opined the avascular necrosis was related to Petitioner's epidural steroid injections. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's conclusion that the epidural steroid injections after July 2, 2014, were not medically reasonable and necessary to cure the effects of the accident of May 2, 2014. Thus, the condition caused by unreasonable and unnecessary treatment is not related to the accident.

Medical

The Commission concludes that, except as noted herein, the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary and Respondent is liable for payment of the medical bills incurred therewith.

In regard to the epidural steroid injections, Respondent is liable for payment of the injections administered on June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014, (steroid injections administered in May through July 2013 were awarded in 13 WC 23310), but denies the epidural steroid injections subsequent to July 2, 2014, because they were unreasonable and unnecessary.

Respondent is not liable for payment of medical treatment provided to Petitioner for her bilateral shoulder condition because it is caused by or related to the excessive epidural steroid injections, which the Commission has determined to be not medically reasonable and necessary.

In regard to the MRI spectroscopy, Respondent is not liable for payment of the medical services incurred in connection with that diagnostic procedure because it was medically unreasonable and unnecessary.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule and as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, except for: 1) medical charges for epidural steroid injections administered to Petitioner after July 2, 2014; 2) medical charges for Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition; and 3) the MRI spectroscopy.

In regard to the epidural steroid injections administered to Petitioner, from May 2013, through December 2016, Petitioner underwent 19 steroid injections. Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, opined that the first 2 injections administered after the accident of May 2, 2014 (June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014) were medically reasonable and necessary, but the injections administered thereafter were not. He noted there was no consideration of the cumulative effect of these injections and he opined they contributed to the development of Petitioner's avascular necrosis. Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Paletta, also opined the avascular necrosis was secondary to the steroid injections.

In regard to Dr. Gornet's use of the MRI spectroscopy, Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, opined that measurement of the chemical content of the disc which has been operated upon has no significance. Dr. Gornet agreed it was only used as a diagnostic tool in spine cases in three offices in the country. The Commission finds that Dr. Treister's opinion is more persuasive than Dr. Gornet's opinion and is not persuaded that this diagnostic procedure was medically reasonable and necessary.

Prospective Medical

The Commission concludes Petitioner is not entitled to prospective medical treatment, the L5-S1 fusion surgery, recommended by Dr. Gornet.

In support of this conclusion the Commission notes the following:

Dr. Gornet opined Petitioner has a structural instability at L5-S1 and a fusion procedure is the only way to stabilize the spine. The Commission finds more persuasive the opinions of Dr. Zelby, Dr. Taveau and Dr. Fleming who find no instability in Petitioner's spine. The Commission further finds Dr. Gornet's reliance upon the spectroscopy results undermines his opinion. The Commission relies upon the opinion of Dr. Zelby that the Petitioner has no spine instability and the opinion of Dr. Treister that the fusion surgery is not reasonable and necessary.

TTD

The Commission concludes Petitioner is entitled to temporary total disability benefits of eight weeks (8) weeks commencing May 6, 2014, the date Dr. Alexander authorized Petitioner off work, through June 30, 2014. Petitioner was receiving medical treatment and authorized to be off work for the aforesaid period of time until she returned to work on light duty.

The Commission acknowledges Petitioner was authorized to be off work from April 27,

2017, through April 30, 2018, while being treated for bilateral shoulder condition. However, the Commission found this bilateral shoulder condition was not work-related. Accordingly, Respondent is not liable for temporary total disability benefits for that time period.

All else is affirmed.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed February 25, 2019, is hereby modified for the reasons stated herein, and otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Arbitrator's award of prospective medical for the lumbar fusion surgery is vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $242.87 per week for a period of eight weeks, beginning May 6, 2014 through June 30, 2014, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule and as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, except for: 1) medical charges for epidural steroid injections administered to Petitioner subsequent to July 2, 2014; 2) medical charges for Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition; and 3) the MRI spectroscopy.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $2,100.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner filed two Applications for Adjustment of Claim which alleged she sustained accidental injuries arising out of and in the course of her employment by Respondent. In case 13 WC 23310, Petitioner alleged that on May 13, 2013, "While working Petitioner sustained injuries during the course of employment" to the "MAW" (Arbitrator's Exhibit 2). In case 14 WC 22576, Petitioner alleged that on May 2, 2014, "While working Petitioner sustained injuries during the course of employment" to the "MAW" (Arbitrator's Exhibit 3). The cases were consolidated and tried in a 19(b) proceeding. Petitioner sought an order for payment of medical bills and temporary total disability benefits as well as prospective medical treatment. The prospective medical treatment sought by Petitioner was fusion surgery at L5-S1 that was recommended by Dr. Matthew Gornet, an orthopedic surgeon (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

Respondent stipulated Petitioner sustained a work-related accident on May 13, 2013, but disputed Petitioner sustained a work-related accident on May 2, 2014. Respondent disputed causal relationship in regard to both cases as well as the reasonableness and necessity of both past and prospective medical treatment (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

At trial, counsel for Petitioner and Respondent stipulated to the following: (1) Respondent had a policy of accommodating light duty work for employees with workers' compensation claims; (2) Petitioner voluntarily resigned her employment with Respondent on September 1, 2014; and (3) the job duties of a CNA were the same or substantially similar to the physical requirements of Petitioner's nursing school clinicals.

Petitioner worked for Respondent as a CNA. On May 13, 2013, Petitioner sustained an injury to her low back while lifting a patient. At trial, Petitioner testified she experienced a "jolting" pain in her back which went into her left leg.

Subsequent to the accident, Petitioner sought medical treatment from Dr. James Alexander, her family physician, who evaluated her on May 23, 2013. At that time, Petitioner complained of low back pain with radiating pain in the left buttock and pelvic area. Dr. Alexander diagnosed Petitioner with a lumbar sprain and administered an epidural steroid injection into the left hip. He also ordered an MRI scan (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

The MRI was performed on June 6, 2013. According to the radiologist, the MRI revealed a central bulging of the L5-S1 disc which resulted in mild encroachment on the ventral thecal sac (Petitioner's Exhibit 16).

Dr. Alexander saw Petitioner in June, 2013, and opined she had lumbosacral disc degeneration. He treated the condition conservatively with medication and physical therapy, but subsequently referred Petitioner to Dr. Jon Taveau, a neurosurgeon (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Taveau evaluated Petitioner on June 19, 2013. He examined Petitioner and reviewed the MRI scan. Dr. Taveau opined Petitioner had a disc herniation at L5-S1 and ordered additional physical therapy (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Petitioner was seen by Peggy Boyd, a Nurse Practitioner associated with Dr. Alexander on July 2, 2013, and July 22, 2013. On those occasions, NP Boyd administered epidural steroid injections (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Petitioner's condition did not improve and Dr. Taveau performed low back surgery on August 5, 2013. The procedure consisted of a L5 laminectomy and L5-S1 discectomy. Following surgery, Petitioner was seen by Robert Deaton, a Nurse Practitioner associated with Dr. Taveau, on August 20, 2013. At that time, NP Deaton authorized Petitioner to be off work, but she could continue nursing school with restrictions (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Dr. Taveau saw Petitioner on September 18, 2013, and authorized her to return to "unrestricted activity" on October 2, 2013. However, when Dr. Taveau subsequently saw Petitioner on October 24, 2013, November 25, 2013, and December 23, 2013, he authorized her to remain off work. When Dr. Taveau saw Petitioner on January 20, 2014, he authorized her to return to work on light duty with a limitation of 20 hours per week. On April 11, 2014, Dr. Taveau released Petitioner to return to work without restrictions (Petitioner's Exhibit 26). Following the surgery, Petitioner began nursing school to become an LPN.

In regard to the accident of May 2, 2014, Petitioner testified she returned to work approximately three weeks prior and had been working 12 hour shifts, three days per week. On May 2, 2014, Petitioner provided care to nine patients, four of which were "total lift" patients. Petitioner explained that a "total lift" patient required assistance doing virtually everything, such as going to the toilet, bathing, etc. It always required more than one person to assist these patients. The other five patients also required a significant amount of assistance. After working a portion of her shift, Petitioner began to experience low back pain with pain on the right side which she had not experienced with the prior injury. The accident was reported to Respondent the same day it occurred and an accident report was completed.

Following the accident, Respondent directed Petitioner to go to Dr. Steve Austin, who saw her that same day. According to Dr. Austin's record of that date, Petitioner "...does not feel that she has re-injured back but just took on too much work too fast." At that time, Petitioner completed and signed a form which noted she had been assisting four out of nine patients who required "total lifts/care" and her back was painful because of "activity and heavy lifting" (Petitioner's Exhibit 33).

Petitioner was subsequently seen by Dr. Alexander on May 6, 2014. According to his record of that date, Petitioner experienced a sudden onset of low back pain while at work on Friday, but there was no radiation of pain into the lower extremities. Dr. Alexander diagnosed Petitioner with a lumbar strain and authorized her to be off work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Alexander again saw Petitioner on May 15, 2014, and Petitioner continued to have low back pain but with radicular pain into the right lower extremity. Because Petitioner's symptoms had worsened, Dr. Alexander ordered an MRI scan of the lumbar spine (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

The MRI was performed on May 16, 2014. According to the radiologist, there was evidence of the previous laminectomy at L5-S1, scar tissue which may affect the descending S1 nerve roots and no evidence of recurrent disc protrusion (Petitioner's Exhibit 17).

Petitioner was subsequently seen by Dr. Taveau on May 19, 2014. Dr. Taveau noted Petitioner had symptoms of low back pain and right lower extremity radicular pain following a work-related injury of May 2, 2014. Dr. Taveau reviewed the MRI of May 16, 2014, and opined it revealed a recurrent disc herniation at L5-S1, paracentral right. He noted this was impinging on the right L5 and descending sacral nerve roots. He recommended conservative treatment including steroid injections, but that an L5-S1 fusion might be required (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

When Dr. Taveau saw Petitioner on May 28, 2014, he noted she recently had been to the ER because of an exacerbation of her symptoms. He restated his opinion Petitioner had a recurrent disc herniation at L5-S1. When he saw Petitioner on June 6, 2014, he ordered an EMG study (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

The EMG was performed on June 6, 2014. The study was consistent with right L5-S1 radiculopathy (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Alexander's office and received additional epidural steroid injections on June 9, 2014, October 27, 2014, and November 14, 2014. The injections were administered by Jennifer Alexander, a Physician Assistant (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Shortly after his last visit with Petitioner, Dr. Taveau made the decision to relocate his medical practice. He referred Petitioner to Dr. Matthew Gornet, an orthopedic surgeon.

On June 26, 2014, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Brent Newell, a pain management specialist. Petitioner complained of low back and leg pain, more on the right than left. Dr. Newell reviewed the MRI of May 16, 2014, and opined there was enhancing scar tissue in the L5-S1 disc affecting the S1 nerve roots, but no herniation. He recommended Petitioner undergo an epidural steroid injection. He administered bilateral epidural steroid injections at L5-S1 on July 2, 2014, and September 19, 2014 (Petitioner's Exhibit 13).

Petitioner received physical therapy from August 18, 2014, through October 30, 2014. When initially evaluated on August 18, 2014, Petitioner complained of low back and leg pain, right greater than left, but that the injections had given her some relief. When seen on October 30, 2014, the therapist noted Petitioner's complaints were in the right L4 dermatome and intermittently in the right L5-S1 dermatome (Petitioner's Exhibit 14).

At trial, Petitioner and Respondent stipulated Petitioner voluntarily resigned her employment with Respondent effective September 1, 2014. Petitioner testified she resigned because she had been accepted into nursing school (an RN program) and did not believe she could handle the physical and mental stress of working and going to school. At the time Petitioner resigned, Respondent was accommodating her light duty work/activity restrictions.

On October 30, 2014, Petitioner underwent another MRI of her lumbar spine. According the radiologist, post operative changes were noted at L5-S1, but no recurrent disc herniation (Petitioner's Exhibit 17).

Dr. Gornet initially evaluated Petitioner on November 20, 2014. At that time, Petitioner advised Dr. Gornet of both work-related accidents. Petitioner complained of low back and right leg pain with occasional left sided symptoms. Dr. Gornet reviewed all of the prior MRIs. He opined the MRI of May 16, 2014, and October 30, 2014, both revealed large annular tears at L5-S1. Dr. Gornet recommended Petitioner undergo a CT myelogram and another MRI. He imposed work/activity restrictions and opined Petitioner should undergo an anterior fusion at L5-S1 (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

In regard to causality, Dr. Gornet opined Petitioner sustained a disc injury as a result of the work-related accident of May 13, 2013, and this condition was aggravated by the work-related accident of May 2, 2014. He noted the initial surgery which included the discectomy and removal of part of the structure of the spine weakened the structure, which can lead to pain and symptoms. He opined both injuries played a role in Petitioner's current need for treatment (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

An MRI was performed on December 5, 2014. According to the radiologist, the MRI noted the prior disc surgery at L5-S1, moderate degenerative disc disease at L5-S1, but no evidence of recurrent disc herniation (Petitioner's Exhibit 17).

Dr. Gornet saw Petitioner on December 8, 2014, and reviewed the MRI of December 5, 2014. Dr. Gornet noted all of the discs appeared healthy with the exception of L5-S1. He did not specify what abnormalities were present at L5-S1 in his medical record of that date (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

Dr. Taveau was deposed on December 15, 2014, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Taveau's testimony was consistent with his medical records and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Dr. Taveau testified he performed disc surgery at L5-S1 on August 5, 2013, and the disc herniation was related to the accident of May 13, 2013 (Petitioner's Exhibit 34; pp 14-15).

In regard to his release for Petitioner to return to unrestricted activity as of October 2, 2013, and his subsequent note of October 24, 2013, wherein he authorized Petitioner to be off work, Dr. Taveau explained that he restricted Petitioner from returning to work as a CNA, but permitted her to perform her clinical tasks in nursing school. Dr. Taveau explained that Petitioner could be more protected and accommodated while performing her clinical duties in nursing school and not required to perform any tasks which could cause her to sustain an injury (Petitioner's Exhibit 34; pp 19-22).

In regard to the treatment Dr. Taveau provided to Petitioner after the accident of May 2, 2014, he noted Petitioner had radicular findings on the right that were not previously present as the prior findings were on the left. He testified this suggested a new condition and not just an exacerbation of the old condition. He opined the MRI performed on May 16, 2014, revealed a recurrent disc herniation at L5-S1 paracentral right. He recommended Petitioner attempt conservative treatment, but that if it did not help her, then she should undergo a fusion at L5-S1 (Petitioner's Exhibit 34; pp 30-34).

On cross-examination, Dr. Taveau agreed he was not restricting Petitioner from any activities in nursing school, including the clinicals. This was based on his understanding that Petitioner's professors would allow her to have accommodations during the clinicals, but he had no verification of this. In regard to the radiologist's interpretation of the MRI of May 16, 2014, not revealing a recurrent disc herniation at L5-S1, he acknowledged the radiologist disagreed with his interpretation of it (Petitioner's Exhibit 34; pp 59-63, 70-71).

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Andrew Zelby, a neurosurgeon, on January 14, 2015. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Zelby reviewed medical records and diagnostic studies provided to him by Respondent. Dr. Zelby opined the diagnostic studies performed after the accident of May 13, 2013, revealed a disc protrusion at L5-S1, but he opined there was no basis for Petitioner undergoing "urgent surgery," but he did not opine as to whether disc surgery was or was not appropriate. In regard to the diagnostic studies performed after the May, 2014, accident, Dr. Zelby opined there was no evidence of a recurrent herniated disc which was consistent with the opinion of the radiologist. In regard to the presence of an annular tear following surgery he opined this was meaningless and did not provide a basis to consider further surgery (Respondent's Exhibit 1).

Dr. Zelby's findings on examination of Petitioner were essentially normal and there were no objective findings to explain the persistence and severity of her symptoms. Dr. Zelby also noticed there were positive Waddell signs with significant symptom magnification. He opined there was no medical basis for Petitioner undergoing a fusion at L5-S1, Petitioner could work performing medium-heavy physical labor and Petitioner was at MMI as of January/February, 2014 (Respondent's Exhibit 1).

Petitioner was again seen by Dr. Gornet on March 19, 2015. Dr. Gornet also ordered a CT myelogram which was performed that same day (Petitioner's Exhibit 23). According to the radiologist, the study revealed an annular disc bulge and bilateral neural foraminal stenosis. The report did not address whether or not there was recurrent disc herniation (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

When Dr. Gornet saw Petitioner on March 19, 2015, he reviewed Dr. Zelby's report. Dr. Gornet did note he had some concerns about symptom magnification on the part of Petitioner, but that the diagnostic studies proved that Petitioner had a large annular tear at L5-S1. He renewed his recommendation Petitioner undergo an anterior lumbar fusion at L5-S1. He did note Petitioner would have to cease taking all narcotic medications prior to his performing surgery (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

Petitioner was subsequently evaluated by Michael Bryant, a Physician Assistant associated with Dr. Mark Fleming, a neurosurgeon (in the same office Dr. Taveau was previously associated with), on April 13, 2015. Petitioner advised she had been seen by Dr. Gornet who recommended she undergo lumbar fusion surgery. Petitioner complained of low back and right leg pain. PA Bryant reviewed the MRI scan from December, 2014, and opined it revealed no evidence of a recurrent disc herniation. Petitioner was then referred to Dr. Gerson Criste, for evaluation/treatment which included a possible dorsal column stimulator (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Dr. Criste saw Petitioner on April 29, 2015, and noted there were differing medical opinions as to whether Petitioner should undergo surgery. Because Petitioner continued to complain of radicular right leg pain, Dr. Criste recommended Petitioner undergo epidural steroid injections (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Dr. Criste administered epidural steroid injections at L5 on the right side on May 4, 2015, and May 19, 2015. Petitioner subsequently advised Dr. Criste the injections had relieved her symptoms and she began another course of physical therapy (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Dr. Gornet was deposed on September 21, 2015, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Gornet's testimony was consistent with his medical records and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Specifically, Dr. Gornet testified that both he and Dr. Taveau had opined Petitioner had a recurrent herniation and a structural annular tear at L5-S1. Both Dr. Gornet and Dr. Taveau recommended Petitioner undergo fusion surgery and Dr. Gornet attributed Petitioner's low back condition to her work-related injury (Petitioner's Exhibit 35; pp 9-10, 13-14).

On cross-examination, Dr. Gornet was questioned about Waddell findings and he noted Petitioner had undergone surgery at L5-S1 and Petitioner's marking on a pain diagram of her areas of complaint was in regard to both the L5 and S1 nerve roots. When questioned about Dr. Taveau's opinion that Petitioner had recurrent a disc herniation at L5-S1, Dr. Gornet testified Petitioner had more of a structural problem at L5-S1 because of her undergoing a prior discectomy and laminectomy at that level which caused a destabilization of her spine at L5-S1 as well as an annular tear. Dr. Gornet testified the only way to stabilize the spine was to perform a fusion (Petitioner's Exhibit 35; pp 22, 35-37).

Petitioner was again seen by Dr. Gornet on October 5, 2015. At that time, Petitioner was no longer taking narcotics and was doing better. Dr. Gornet opined Petitioner had discogenic pain with annular tear and a previous surgery at L5-S1 (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

Dr. Zelby was deposed on December 2, 2015, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Zelby's testimony was consistent with his medical report of January 14, 2015, and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Dr. Zelby testified that the need for original disc surgery at L5-S1 was questionable, and he opined that it was likely the condition would have resolved without the need for surgery. Dr. Zelby stated Petitioner's complaints did not correlate with her objective findings and there was no medical basis for performing an L5-S1 fusion because there was no instability (Respondent's Exhibit 2; pp 19-22).

On cross-examination, although Dr. Zelby questioned the need for disc surgery, he declined to state that Dr. Taveau committed medical malpractice by performing an unnecessary and unreasonable surgery. However, Dr. Zelby later commented that "Dr. Taveau seems plagued by a lack of detail in his notes." (Respondent's Exhibit 2; pp 33-34, 65-66).

Dr. Gornet saw Petitioner on January 4, 2016. At that time, Petitioner was in nursing school. Dr. Gornet's diagnosis continued to be discogenic pain at L5-S1. He attributed Petitioner's condition to the first accident (erroneously indicating it as "8/5/13", which was, in fact, the date the surgery was performed) and the surgery she underwent thereafter. He opined surgery caused destabilization of that segment of the spine. He ordered an MRI spectroscopy at L3-L4, L4-L5 and L5-S1 and noted if Petitioner continued to have symptoms then the anterior fusion surgery at L5-S1 would be appropriate (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

During the time Petitioner was being seen by Dr. Gornet, she continued to seek treatment from PA Alexander. PA Alexander administered epidural steroid injections on January 9, 2015, January 25, 2016, April 5, 2016, September 27, 2016, October 14, 2016, and December 6, 2016 (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Dr. Gornet subsequently saw Petitioner on March 24, 2016, and noted the MRI spectroscopy was positive for the presence of painful chemicals at L5-S1 and L4-L5. Dr. Gornet described his examination as non-focal and he recommended Petitioner proceed with the anterior fusion at L5-S1 (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

On March 27, 2016, Petitioner contacted Dr. Criste's office and advised her leg pain was returning and she wanted another injection. Dr. Criste administered an epidural steroid injection at L5 on the right on April 17, 2016 (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

At the direction of Respondent, Dr. Michael Treister, an orthopedic surgeon, performed a utilization review on April 11, 2016, in regard to the L5-S1 anterior lumbar fusion that was recommended by Dr. Gornet. In connection with his evaluation, Dr. Treister reviewed medical records, which included Dr. Zelby's report, which were provided to him by Respondent. Dr. Treister opined that an anterior L5-S1 fusion was not medically reasonable and necessary. This conclusion was based, in part, on the lack of examination findings in several of Dr. Gornet's medical records, in particular, Dr. Gornet's records of October 5, 2015, January 4, 2016 and March 24, 2016. He also noted Dr. Gornet did not make any reference to Petitioner's response to the epidural steroid injections (Respondent's Exhibit 3).

Dr. Gornet again saw Petitioner on June 27, 2016, September 29, 2016, and January 5, 2017. Petitioner's condition remained essentially the same and Dr. Gornet noted he was awaiting approval to proceed with the fusion surgery (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

On May 20, 2016, Petitioner contacted Dr. Criste's office and requested another injection. Dr. Criste subsequently administered epidural steroid injections at L5 on the right on July 6, 2016, and July 21, 2016 (Petitioner's Exhibit 26).

Dr. Treister was deposed on December 19, 2016, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Treister's testimony was consistent with his report and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Specifically, he initially noted that when Dr. Gornet evaluated Petitioner on November 20, 2014, his findings correlated with nerve root pressure at the L4-L5 and not the L5-S1 level. In his review of Dr. Gornet's records subsequent to that date, Dr. Treister noted the lack of a description of Petitioner's subjective complaints and any findings on examination. Dr. Treister also noted Petitioner's Waddell findings when examined by Dr. Zelby and that, after one of the epidural steroid injections, Petitioner's symptoms worsened (Respondent's Exhibit 4; pp 14-20).

Dr. Treister also noted Petitioner had been treated for anxiety and depression and that should be fully evaluated before proceeding to surgery. Dr. Treister also opined the use of MRI spectroscopy was not generally used to evaluate spinal conditions and a positive finding at L5-S1 was not supportive of Petitioner undergoing a fusion at that level. Dr. Trester testified an L5-S1 fusion surgical procedure was not indicated (Respondent's Exhibit 4; pp 31-40).

On cross-examination, Dr. Treister was questioned about his opinion regarding the use of the MRI spectroscopy. Dr. Treister testified the fact that the study revealed an abnormal chemical content was not of any significance because the disc was previously herniated and would have an abnormal chemical content (Respondent's Exhibit 4; pp 86-88).

Dr. Gornet was deposed for the second time on January 23, 2017, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. The primary reason Dr. Gornet was re-deposed was to rebut the opinions of Dr. Treister. Dr. Gornet testified he was treating an objective structural problem at L5-S1. In regard to the L5 nerve root, Dr. Gornet testified it was actually closer to L5-S1 than L4-L5. While the L5 nerve root can be irritated by pathology at L4-L5, it can also been irritated by pathology at L5-S1 (Petitioner's Exhibit 36; pp 7-9).

Dr. Gornet also reviewed the EMG study of June 6, 2014, and noted its findings of radiculopathy at L5-S1 and opined it was consistent with his findings. Dr. Gornet testified he did not record examination findings on every visit because there was no change as Petitioner's complaints remained essentially the same. In regard to Petitioner's depression, Dr. Gornet testified that patients who had appropriately selected pathology responded well to surgery. He specifically noted Petitioner was no longer on narcotics and had a treatable problem. Dr. Gornet also testified MRI spectroscopy was a reliable diagnostic tool to determine whether someone needed treatment or not (Petitioner's Exhibit 36; pp 17-23).

On cross-examination, Dr. Gornet agreed that were only three offices in the country that use spectroscopy to evaluate spinal patients. Dr. Gornet agreed that the presence of an annular tear, in and of itself, was not the basis for a surgical recommendation as many other factors needed to be considered (Petitioner's Exhibit 36; pp 28-31).

Petitioner began to experienced bilateral shoulder symptoms sometime in October, 2016. Petitioner initially sought medical treatment in December, 2016, at the office of Dr. Alexander, her family physician. On December 27, 2016, PA Alexander evaluated Petitioner and ordered x-rays and CT scans of both shoulders. The CT scans revealed the presence of avascular necrosis in both shoulders (Petitioner's Exhibits 2 and 6).

In regard to her shoulder condition, Petitioner was subsequently seen by Dr. George Paletta, an orthopedic surgeon, on January 18, 2017. At that time, Petitioner advised she had been diagnosed with avascular necrosis of both shoulders and had received steroids as part of her treatment for a back injury. Dr. Paletta ordered CT scans of both shoulders which also revealed avascular necrosis of both shoulders. Dr. Paletta's diagnosis was humeral head avascular necrosis (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

At trial, Petitioner testified she received at least 17 steroid injections as part of her treatment for her back injury. As noted herein, the medical records tendered at trial revealed Petitioner had, in fact, received 19 epidural steroid injections into her low back, from May 23, 2013, through December 6, 2016.

Dr. Paletta subsequently performed arthroscopic reconstructive surgery of the humeral heads on the left shoulder and right shoulder on April 25, 2017, and July 27, 2017, respectively. Dr. Paletta subsequently performed another right shoulder surgery on November 2, 2017, which consisted of an open repair of the subscapularis. He authorized Petitioner to be off work from April 25, 2017, through May 1, 2018 (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

Dr. Paletta was deposed twice, on August 18, 2017, and again on April 25, 2018. In both depositions, Dr. Paletta noted Petitioner had undergone multiple steroid injections and he attributed the avascular necrosis as being secondary to steroid use (Petitioner's Exhibit 37; pp 11-12; Petitioner's Exhibit 38; pp 11-12).

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined for the second time by Dr. Zelby on April 23, 2018. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Zelby reviewed medical records and diagnostic studies provided to him by Respondent. According to Dr. Zelby's report of that date, Petitioner advised him she sustained the injury of May 2, 2014, when she and two coworkers were attempting to lift a patient that weighed in excess of 300 pounds. She also advised him of having undergone 17 epidural steroid injections and the shoulder surgeries that were subsequently performed. Petitioner complained of low back and right leg pain (Respondent's Exhibit 5).

Dr. Zelby initially noted Petitioner provided a much different history of the accident of May 2, 2014, than what she previously told him. Dr. Zelby's findings on examination were objectively normal and he again noted the presence of symptom magnification. He also opined the numerous steroid injections were not medically necessary because she had no condition which would be treated with steroid injections. He opined the annular tear was no clinical significance and the use of MRI spectroscopy was not reasonable for determining treatment in spinal conditions. Dr. Zelby opined there was no objective evidence to support performing an L5-S1 fusion (Respondent's Exhibit 5).

When Dr. Gornet saw Petitioner on June 25, 2018, he renewed his recommendation Petitioner undergo a fusion at L5-S1. Petitioner continued to complain of low back and right leg pain. Dr. Gornet again noted Petitioner had structural back pain and an annular tear at L5-S1. Dr. Gornet reviewed Dr. Zelby's report of April 23, 2018, and noted Dr. Zelby had limited knowledge of the use of MRI spectroscopy. Dr. Gornet stated Rush Presbyterian Hospital had been in contact with him in regard to possibly using MRI spectroscopy (Petitioner's Exhibit 23).

Dr. Zelby was deposed on July 9, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Zelby's testimony was consistent with his report and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. He testified Petitioner had no residual recurrent disc issues or findings of radiculopathy. Dr. Zelby also noted that, in regard to the accident of May 2, 2014, Petitioner had previously advised she just sat down after work and experienced pain, but was now describing a specific accident (Respondent's Exhibit 6; pp 21-22).

On cross-examination, Dr. Zelby agreed that disc disruption at L5-S1 could cause L5 nerve irritation. In regard to the inconsistent history, Dr. Zelby agreed he did not have Petitioner complete any form as to how she sustained the injury, nor did he have any knowledge of what history Petitioner gave to the other medical providers (Respondent's Exhibit 6; pp 31-37).

Dr. Gornet was deposed for the third time on August 13, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. The primary reason for deposing Dr. Gornet at that time was so he could rebut Dr. Zelby's most recent report. Dr. Gornet testified Petitioner had objective findings which clearly showed on various MRIs scans and the MRI spectroscopy (Petitioner's Exhibit 39; pp 6-9).

On cross-examination, Dr. Gornet was asked about Petitioner's multiple steroid injections and whether they related to her avascular necrosis. He did not have an opinion regarding same (Petitioner's Exhibit 39; pp 16-17).

At the direction of Respondent, on September 21, 2018, Dr. Treister performed another utilization review regarding the medical reasonableness and necessity of the proposed L5-S1 fusion as well as the multiple steroid injections Petitioner had already undergone. Dr. Treister restated his opinion that there was no medical basis for an L5-S1 fusion. In regard to the epidural steroid injections, Dr. Treister opined the initial injections received on May 2, 2013, June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014, were medically reasonable, but the injections received thereafter were not. Dr. Treister did not opine as to the medical reasonableness and necessity of the injections Petitioner received on July 2, 2013, and July 22, 2013. Among other things, Dr. Treister noted there was no consideration given to the cumulative effect of the steroid injections Petitioner had received. In respect to the diagnosis of avascular necrosis, Dr. Treister opined it was more likely than not referable to the cumulative effect of all the steroids (Respondent's Exhibit 7).

Dr. Treister was deposed on September 24, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Treister's testimony was consistent with his medical report and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Specifically, Dr. Treister testified the injections Petitioner received on June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014 (the first two subsequent to the May, 2014, accident) were reasonable and necessary, but all of the injections received thereafter were not medically reasonable and necessary. Dr. Treister was not questioned about the early injections Petitioner had received in May through July, 2013. Dr. Treister explained that there were no objective findings of radicular symptoms and Petitioner was not getting any better following the injections. He also testified the steroid injections contributed to the development of avascular necrosis and there was no medical basis to justify Petitioner having received 17 steroid injections (Respondent's Exhibit 8; pp 21-23, 26-28).

At trial, Petitioner testified she has continued to live with constant low back pain with radiation into both legs, more on the right than left. She wants to proceed with the fusion surgery recommended by Dr. Gornet. Petitioner has returned to work as an RN, but is careful at work, avoids lifting patients without assistance, gets help when needed, etc.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issue (C) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of employment by Respondent on May 2, 2014.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner testified she had just returned to work approximately three weeks prior and was taking care of nine patients, four of which were "total lift" patients. Petitioner's job assignment required a significant amount of lifting. After working a portion of her shift, Petitioner began to experience low back as well as right side pain which she had not experienced with the prior injury.

Petitioner reported the accident to Respondent that same day and a written report was prepared. The written report was not tendered into evidence and Respondent tendered no live witnesses at trial to rebut Petitioner's testimony about what occurred on May 2, 2014.

Respondent's position that Petitioner did not sustain a work-related accident on May 2, 2014, was based, in part, on the record of Dr. Austin in which Petitioner stated she did not sustain a re-injury, but had taken on too much work too fast. However, in that same record, Petitioner specifically referenced the number of patients she had to care for, doing total lifts and heavy lifting.

At trial, Petitioner was not cross-examined about any of the statements she made to Dr. Austin.

Respondent also relied on the history of the accident of May 2, 2014, contained in Dr. Zelby's report of April 23, 2018, wherein Petitioner purportedly informed him that she had sustained an accident when she and a coworker attempted to lift a patient who weighed in excess of 300 pounds. Dr. Zelby specifically noted that this was not the history Petitioner had given to him when he previously examined her on January 14, 2015.

At trial, Petitioner was not cross-examined about whether or not she provided such a history to Dr. Zelby when he examined her on April 23, 2018.

The Arbitrator finds Petitioner was a credible witness at trial. This was amplified by the fact that while Petitioner was undergoing extensive medical treatment, she completed nursing school and was subsequently certified as both an LPN and RN.

While Petitioner did not describe a specific lifting incident and immediate onset of pain, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner's description of her work activities and complaints afterward were descriptive of an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of her employment by Respondent.

In regard to disputed issue (F) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is, in part, causally related to the accident of May 2, 2014. Specifically, the Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's current condition of ill-being in regard to her lumbar spine is causally related to the accident of May 2, 2014, but her bilateral shoulder condition is not related to the accident of May 2, 2014.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

At the time Petitioner sustained the accident on May 2, 2014, she experienced low back and right side pain and subsequently had right leg symptoms. When Petitioner sustained the prior work injury on May 13, 2013, she experienced low back and left leg pain.

When Petitioner was evaluated by Dr. Taveau (the physician who performed L5-S1 disc surgery on August 5, 2013), subsequent to the accident of May 2, 2014, Dr. Taveau noted Petitioner had low back pain and right lower extremity radicular pain. Dr. Taveau also opined Petitioner had sustained a recurrent disc herniation at L5-S1.

The fact Petitioner had pain in the right leg consistent with L5-S1 radiculopathy was confirmed by the EMG study performed on June 6, 2014.

In spite of the fact that the radiologist opined the MRI of May 16, 2014, did not reveal evidence of a recurrent disc herniation, Dr. Taveau opined there was a recurrent disc herniation and noted an L5-S1 fusion might be indicated.

Dr. Gornet opined the MRI studies revealed annular tears at L5-S1 and that Petitioner sustained a disc injury on May 13, 2013, which was aggravated by the accident of May 2, 2014.

Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Zelby, opined the diagnostic studies did not reveal a recurrent herniated disc at L5-S1 and Petitioner exhibited Waddell signs when he examined her on January 14, 2015. When Dr. Gornet reviewed Dr. Zelby's report, Dr. Gornet again noted the diagnostic studies revealed a large annular tear at L5-S1 and renewed his recommendation Petitioner undergo a fusion at that level.

The Arbitrator acknowledges that the radiologist who read various MRIs of Petitioner's lumbar spine opined there was not recurrent disc herniation; however, whether there was or was not a recurrent disc herniation is not the critical issue. When Dr. Gornet was deposed on September 21, 2015, he testified Petitioner had a structural problem which he described as destabilization of her spine at L5-S1 and that the only way to stabilize the spine was to perform a fusion.

Petitioner's prior treating physician, Dr. Taveau, has also recommended she undergo fusion surgery.

Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, opined fusion surgery was not appropriate because, in part, Dr. Gornet's findings on examination correlated with nerve root pressure at L4-L5 and not L5-S1. However, Dr. Gornet testified the L5 nerve root can be irritated at L4-L5 as well as at L5-S1. Further, when he was deposed, Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Zelby, agreed that disc disruption at L5-S1 could irritate the L5 nerve root.

Based upon the preceding, the Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Gornet and Dr. Taveau be more persuasive than those of Dr. Zelby and Dr. Treister.

In regard to Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition, it was not caused by the accident of May 2, 2014, but by an excessive amount of steroid injections. As noted herein, the Arbitrator concluded that most of the steroid injections were medically unreasonable and unnecessary.

Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Paletta, and Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, both opined the avascular necrosis was related to Petitioner's steroid injections.

In regard to disputed issue (J) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes that, except as noted herein, the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary and Respondent is liable for payment of the medical bills incurred therewith.

In regard to the epidural steroid injections, Respondent is liable for payment of the injections administered on June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014 (steroid injections administered in May through July, 2013, were awarded in 13 WC 23310), but none of the steroid injections subsequent to July 2, 2014, because they were unreasonable and unnecessary. As aforestated, Petitioner's bilateral shoulder conditions are related to Petitioner's steroid injections.

Respondent is not liable for payment of medical treatment provided to Petitioner for her bilateral shoulder condition because it is related to the steroid injections, which the Arbitrator has determined to be medically unreasonable and unnecessary.

In regard to the MRI spectroscopy, Respondent is not liable for payment of the medical services incurred in connection with that diagnostic procedure because it was medically unreasonable and unnecessary.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, except for all of the medical charges for epidural steroid injections administered to Petitioner subsequent to July 2, 2014, all of the medical charges for Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition and the MRI spectroscopy, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

As noted in disputed issue (F) the Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's current condition of ill-being in respect to her lumbar spine is causally related to the accident of May 2, 2014, for which Petitioner received significant medical treatment.

In regard to the epidural steroid injections administered to Petitioner, from May, 2013, through December, 2016, Petitioner underwent 19 steroid injections. Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, opined that the first two injections administered subsequent to the accident of May 2, 2014 (June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014) were medically reasonable and necessary, but the injections administered thereafter were not. He noted there was no consideration of the cumulative effect of these injections and he opined they contributed to the development of Petitioner's avascular necrosis. Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Paletta, also opined the avascular necrosis was secondary to the steroid injections.

In regard to Dr. Gornet's use of the MRI spectroscopy, Respondent's utilization review physician, Dr. Treister, opined that measurement of the chemical content of the disc which has been operated upon has no significance. Dr. Gornet agreed it was only used as a diagnostic tool in spine cases in three offices in the country. The Arbitrator was not persuaded that this diagnostic procedure was medically reasonable and necessary.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to prospective medical treatment including, but not limited to, the L5-S1 fusion surgery recommended by Dr. Gornet.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

As noted in the Arbitrator's conclusion of law in disputed issue (F), Dr. Gornet has opined Petitioner has a structural instability at L5-S1 and a fusion procedure is the only way to stabilize the spine.

The Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Gornet and Dr. Taveau to be more persuasive than those of Dr. Zelby and Dr. Treister.

In regard to disputed issue (L) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to temporary total disability benefits of eight and three-sevenths (8 3/7) weeks commencing May 2, 2014, through June 30, 2014.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner was receiving medical treatment and authorized to be off work for the aforestated period of time, until she returned to work on light duty.

The Arbitrator acknowledges Petitioner was authorized to be off work from April 27, 2017, through April 30, 2018, while being treated for bilateral shoulder condition. However, the Arbitrator found this shoulder condition was not work-related. Accordingly, Respondent does not owe temporary total disability benefits for that period of time.

DISSENT

I respectfully dissent from the opinion of the majority and would reverse the Arbitrator's Decision in part. After considering the totality of the evidence, I would affirm the Arbitrator's award of the proposed lumbar fusion surgery, temporary total disability, and certain medical expenses relating to Petitioner's lumbar spine. However, I would reverse the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner's diagnosis of avascular necrosis is not causally related to the May 2, 2014, work accident. Finally, I believe Petitioner met her burden of proving the bilateral shoulder surgeries performed by Dr. Paletta are causally related to the work accident.

The Arbitrator wrote an incredibly detailed and well-reasoned Decision in this matter. The credible evidence overwhelmingly supports the Arbitrator's conclusion that the work accident aggravated Petitioner's preexisting lumbar spine condition. This was not a temporary aggravation as Petitioner reported additional symptoms following the work accident. Petitioner testified credibly about her history of complaints and her treating physician, Dr. Gornet, was the most credible witness regarding the condition of Petitioner's lumbar spine. Dr. Gornet testified credibly that as a result of the work accident, Petitioner's spine is destabilized at L5-S1. According to Dr. Gornet, only a fusion surgery will stabilize Petitioner's spine. He thoroughly explained his opinions in his medical records and over the course of several evidence depositions. The opinions and testimony of Respondent's Section 12 examiners, Drs. Zelby and Treister, were less credible. For these reasons, I would affirm the Arbitrator's finding that Petitioner's lumbar spine condition is causally related to the May 2, 2014, work accident and would affirm the Arbitrator's award of the requested prospective lumbar spine surgery.

The causal connection of Petitioner's diagnosis of bilateral shoulder avascular necrosis and the subsequent bilateral shoulder surgeries is a much more difficult issue. The evidence unquestionably supports the Arbitrator's conclusion that the vast majority of Petitioner's epidural injections were unreasonable and unrelated to the work accident. However, Petitioner's diagnosis of bilateral shoulder avascular necrosis is a direct result of her undergoing epidural injections. This does not automatically mean that Petitioner's bilateral shoulder surgeries are not causally related to the May 2, 2014, work accident. After all, even the majority agrees with the Arbitrator's finding that only the epidural steroid injections performed after July 2, 2014, are not causally related to Petitioner's work injury. Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Treister, opined that the cumulative effect of a patient undergoing multiple epidural steroid injections can cause avascular necrosis. Dr. Gornet credibly testified that a single steroid injection can cause avascular necrosis. After carefully weighing the relevant evidence, I believe it is probable that one of the steroid injections the Commission finds were reasonable and necessary caused Petitioner's avascular necrosis. Respondent provided no credible evidence that the steroid injections Petitioner underwent on June 9, 2014, and July 2, 2014, did not cause or contribute to Petitioner's development of avascular necrosis. Based primarily on Dr. Gornet's testimony regarding the connection between a single epidural steroid injection and the potential development of avascular necrosis, I would reverse the Arbitrator's denial of the bilateral shoulder surgeries. I would also reverse the Arbitrator's denial of reasonable and necessary medical expenses relating to Petitioner's diagnosis of avascular necrosis.

For the forgoing reasons, I would reverse the Arbitrator's Decision in part and find Petitioner's diagnosis of avascular necrosis and the related bilateral shoulder surgeries are causally related to the May 2, 2014, work accident. I would affirm the remainder of the Arbitrator's Decision.

This corresponds to Petitioner's in-patient stay at Advocate Lutheran General Hospital. PX5. Section 8(b) provides, in relevant part, "If the period of temporary total incapacity for work lasts more than 3 working days, weekly compensation as hereinafter provided shall be paid beginning on the 4th day of such temporary total incapacity and continuing as long as the total temporary incapacity lasts." 820 ILCS 305/8(b). Therefore, Petitioner is entitled to TTD for September 8, 2010 and September 9, 2010.

All else is affirmed.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed June 4, 2018, as modified above, is hereby affirmed and adopted.

The Respondent-Employer's obligation to reimburse the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund, as set forth above, in no way limits or modifies its independent and separate liability for fines and penalties set forth in the Act for its failure to be properly insured.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of the Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Background

Yoan Mandujano ("Petitioner") alleged injuries arising out of and in the course of his alleged employment with D'Agostino Landscaping ("Respondent") occurring on 9/4/10. Ax1, Px3. Petitioner further alleged that on the date of accident, Respondent carried no workers' compensation insurance and amended his application for adjustment of claim to add the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund ("IWBF"). Ax1, Px3. On 3/13/18, by agreement between Petitioner and IWBF, along with notice to Respondent, this matter proceeded to hearing on all issues. Ax1. The IWBF challenged all issues, including whether notice of the trial date ws proper and whether Respondent lacked insurance. The following is a recitation of the facts adduced at trial.

Testimonial and Other Evidence

Petitioner testified that he was born in 1984 and was 34 years old at the time of trial with 5 children. On the alleged date of the accident, he had one child. Petitioner testified he worked for Respondent for 6 years, having been hired on the spot and that his dad also worked for Respondent. he testified that he was paid either with a personal check or in cash weekly. He worked Monday thru Saturday from 8am to 5pm. Petitioner testified that "he" decided what days were to be worked, that if Petitioner missed time, petitioner needed to tell him. He testified he worked approximately 48 hours per week. He testified that taxes were not taken out. Petitioner stated that there were some shirts with the company logo on it and that he usually wore a hat and boots.

Regarding duties, petitioner testified that his duties included cutting grass, trimming bushes, doing outdoor work, using equipment such as 5-speed lawn machines as provided by Stephan D'Agostino, using trimmers to trim bushes and using shovels. He testified that sometimes a supervisor would tell him what tool to use for what tasks but that other times, Petitioner already knew what to do. He testified they worked at several locations, did different routes every day. He said he would drive himself to a lot where they would all meet and from there they would drive the routes together, using company equipment to perform duties.

Petitioner testified that on 9/4/10, he worked for Respondent cutting grass with a lawnmower when he was stung by a bee in his stomach. He felt a burning sensation, stopped the machine and told his boss. He noticed a beehive and that the bees were "coming down like crazy" and that he ran. Petitioner said that Stephan D'Agostino told him to finish his shift or he would not get paid. After, he went to the emergency room.

Records show that on September 5, 2010, petitioner was admitted to Lutheran General Hospital. Px5. Diagnosis was abdominal cellulitis and secondary diagnoses included methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus, toxic effect of venom, sting of hornets/wasps/bees causing poisoning and toxic reaction, all present on admission. Petitioner underwent drainage of the skin and subcutaneous tissue. The discharge summary indicated that petitioner presented with pain and swelling to the side of a bee sting one day prior. He was noted to have cellulitis and was started on empiric antibiotics. There was a small abscess noted and this was incised and drained. The wound culture revealed MRSA. He was discharged and advised to follow a 10-day course of antibiotics for MRSA. Petitioner was it eventually discharged on September 9, 2010.

On September 17, 2010, petitioner followed up with Dr. Patel, who discharge petition or with light duty work of no lifting more than 50 pounds. The doctor ordered these restrictions good until September 24, 2010.

Petitioner said he was released after 4 days with pain medications. Petitioner said he was told he could not lift over 50 pounds. Petitioner said he told him 2-3 weeks after surgery and that he responded he was not going to pay the bills. Currently, Petitioner testified he does not feel pain and was diagnosed with MRSA. He said he has no symptoms now because it's been 7 years.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Arbitrator's Credibility Assessment

Petitioner was the only witness to testify at trial. The Arbitrator finds Petitioner to be truthful, candid and forthright regarding what he could recall surrounding the circumstances of his employment, the injury, his treatment and his current condition.

ISSUE (O) Arbitrator's Findings as Adequacy of Notice

No one purporting to be the representative Respondent Employer, D'Agostino, was present at the hearing. Petitioner provided one exhibit to support his contention that notice to Respondent Employer was proper. The record shows that on 2/12/18, Petitioner provided notice of a 3/13/18 trial date to Respondent's addresses, purportedly located at 4807 N. Crescent Ave., Harwood Heights, Illinois 60706. Px1. This letter states that it was sent via regular and certified mail. The bottom of the letter gives certified mail article number "7001 2510 0002 6388 1525." On 2/16/18, someone at the location in fact signed for the letter. The Arbitrator has considered the evidence presented, along with Petitioner's testimony and finds that notice of the hearing was sufficient.

ISSUE (O) Arbitrator's Findings as to Lack of Workers' Compensation Insurance

Regarding lack of insurance the Arbitrator finds that sufficient evidence was presented that Respondent did not carry workers' compensation insurance on the alleged date of accident. Px2.

ISSUE (A) Was Respondent operating under and subject to the Illinois Workers' Compensation or Occupational Diseases Act?
ISSUE (B) Was there an employee-employer relationship?

The Arbitrator finds that on 9/4/10, Respondent-Employer D'Agostino Landscaping was operating under and subject to the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act. Such evidence includes, but is not limited to, the unrebutted testimony of Petitioner that Respondent-Employer employed Petitioner to perform landscaping duties, which included the cutting of lawns and the using of gas powered machines such as a lawnmower, cutting tools such as a lawnmower and trimmer. Such actions result in Respondent being subject to the Act pursuant to Section 3(8) and (15).

Further, pursuant to the Act, Illinois may acquire jurisdiction over a claim (1) if the contract for hire was made in Illinois, (2) if the accident occurred in Illinois, or (3) if the claimant's employment was principally located in Illinois. 820 ILCS 305/1(b)(2). Petitioner's un-contradicted testimony shows that he was hired by Stephan D'Agostino, whose job site was located in Illinois. Petitioner credibly testified he was hired in Illinois.

Based upon the above, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent was operating under and subject to the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act on 9/4/10. The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner presented sufficient, credible evidence that on 9/4/10 an Employee-Employer Relationship existed. Such evidence includes, but is not limited to, the unrebutted testimony of Petitioner that she was hired by Respondent-Employer on the spot and that he found this work thru his father, who already worked for Respondent-Employer, that he was paid $480.00 per week, that he worked up about 48 hours per week, that he was paid weekly by personal check or in cash and that no taxes were taken out, that Petitioner would wear a company shirt provided for by the Respondent-Employer, that he was directed where to meet, which routes to perform and what work was to be carried out. Such evidence demonstrates that Respondent exercised control over Petitioner's method and manner of work, that Respondent controlled the method of payment, that Respondent exercised the right to hire and therefore likely controlled the right to discharge Petitioner and that Respondent provided the tools, materials and/or equipment in Petitioner completing the work for which he was ultimately hired to do.

ISSUE (C) Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent?
ISSUE (D) What was the date of the accident?
ISSUE (E) Was timely notice of the accident given to Respondent?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Petitioner alleges that he injured himself while working Respondent-Employer on 9/4/10. Specifically, he stated that he was mowing a lawn and was stung by a bee. He noticed a bee nest nearby, felt a pain and notified his supervisor. He testified that Stephan D'Agostino was present that day, was aware he had been stung and directed him to continue working anyway.

Based on the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds that the date of the accident is 9/4/10 and that on that date, Petitioner was in the course of his employment as he was on the clock working for Respondent and a location where he was expected to be mowing a lawn. In addition, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's injury arises out of his employment with Respondent as he was performing duties directly related to his employment, namely, that of mowing a lawn when he was stung by a bee. Finally, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner gave proper notice when he notified his supervisor of the sting the same day.

ISSUE (F) Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being as it relates to the bee sting and resultant cellulitis and MRSA is causally related to his work accident. Petitioner was in a state of good health immediately before the accident and following the accident, he said he noticed a sting and burning sensation. Medical records corroborate this history and onset. Based upon a chain of events theory, the Arbitrator concludes that his condition of ill-being is causally related to the work accident.

ISSUE (G) What were Petitioner's earnings?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner earned $480.00 per week at the time of his injury. Petitioner's testimony is instrumental in this regard. Petitioner testified he made around $480.00 a week while working for Respondent-Employer. This arrangement was made when Petitioner was hired. No exhibits or evidence was introduced to dispute Petitioner's testimony. Therefore, the Arbitrator adopts Petitioner's testimony in this regard and concludes Petitioner earned $480.00 per week.

ISSUE (H) What was Petitioner's age at the time of the accident?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner was 26 years old at the time of the accident. In so finding, the Arbitrator relies on Petitioner's undisputed testimony and on her medical records, which corroborate same.

ISSUE (I) What was Petitioner's marital status at the time of the accident?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner was single at the time of his accident. In so finding, the Arbitrator relies on Petitioner's undisputed testimony. Petitioner alleged he had one dependent and submitted evidence to corroborate same. Px4. The Arbitrator finds in favor of Petitioner for same.

ISSUE (J) Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Respondent has not yet paid for reasonable and necessary medical services. At trial, Petitioner alleged outstanding bills due and owing as a result of this accident. Ax1. Petitioner testified none were paid. The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner's medical treatment was reasonable and necessary to treat his cellulitis and MRSA. No contrary evidence was submitted to challenge the treatment from Lutheran, Access or Dr. Mauer. Therefore, Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services of $16,966.49, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act.

ISSUE (K) What temporary benefits are in dispute?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner has proven he was entitled to TTD from 9/5/10 thru 9/9/10, representing the time in which he was hospitalized inpatient for cellulitis and the MRSA as a result of the bee sting. Upon his discharge from Lutheran, petitioner was not issued any work restriction. Petitioner failed to provide evidence that after being discharged he could not work. There was no evidence he contacted his employer and attempted to return to work. Thereafter, Petitioner saw Dr. Patel, who placed him on light duty of no lifting greater than 50 pounds from 9/17/10 thru 9/24/10. Px6. However, petitioner did not testify that he attempted to return to work within these restrictions. Therefore, Respondent shall pay Petitioner temporary total disability benefits of $320.00/week for 5/7th weeks, commencing 9/5/10 through 9/9/10, as provided in Section 8(b) of the Act. Respondent shall pay Petitioner the temporary total disability benefits that have accrued from 9/5/10 through 9/9/10, and shall pay the remainder of the award, if any, in weekly payments.

ISSUE (L) What is the nature and extent of the injury?

The Arbitrator incorporates the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law as though fully set forth herein. Having found in favor of Petitioner on the foregoing issues, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner has proven he is entitled to permanency for his injury. Petitioner's work accident resulted in a cellulitis and MRSA. He underwent inpatient hospitalization, irrigation and drainage and medications.

Petitioner last treated in 2010 and he has not treated since. Accordingly, his claim for any PPD is ripe for adjudication.

The Arbitrator finds that the nature and extent of the injury to be 1% man as a whole. The medical records and testimony of Petitioner are instrumental in this regard. Petitioner testified that he has no symptoms from this incident. Respondent shall pay Petitioner permanent partial disability benefits of $288.00/week for 5 weeks, because the injuries sustained caused the 1% loss of the man as a whole, as provided in Section 8(d)2 of the Act.

SPECIAL CONCURRENCE/DISSENT

I concur with the majority in all aspects of its decision other than its order to compel Respondent to authorize medical treatment. This issue was previously addressed by the Court in Hollywood Casino-Aurora, Inc. v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2012 IL App (2d) 110426WC, which is dispositive. The Court noted "Assuming for the sake of analysis that this provision of the Act [Section 8(a)] is sufficiently broad so as to include a requirement that an employer authorize medical treatment for an injured employee in advance of the services being rendered, the fact still remains that there is no provision in the Act authorizing the Commission to assess penalties against an employer that delays in giving such authorization." Id. at ¶ 19. Ordering Respondent to authorize medical treatment is meaningless where no enforcement mechanism exists under the Act. In accordance with Section 8(a) of the Act and the Court's holding in Hollywood Casino, I would order Respondent to provide and pay for the awarded medical expenses and/or treatment.

Statement of Facts

Petitioner John Rachuy testified that on July 3, 2014 he was employed by Respondent Service Sanitation as a pickup and delivery driver. He started with Respondent in April 2014. His duties were to drive to locations to deliver, pickup and service porta-potties. He testified that he was a one-man crew. He would go to the location and load or unload the porta-potties by hand. There was no lift gate on his truck. He would use a dolly to move them to the truck. He would lift them manually onto the truck. The porta-potties weighed about 70 to 100 pounds. If they contained waste, they would be heavier. The handicap and ADA handicap units weighed more. He testified that 10 to 12 porta-potties would fit on the truck. He would deliver 12 to 20 per day. If there was a special event, he could deliver or pick up 3 to 4 truckloads per day. The job description of a Service Technician was admitted at RX 4. It notes Petitioner would require the ability to lift 80 pounds regularly and repeatedly. Prior to his accident, Petitioner had no injuries, treatment, or lost time for his low back. Petitioner has a hearing loss. He wears two hearing aids and reads lips. He has difficulty with phone calls or in noisy environments.

Petitioner testified that on July 3, 2014, he went to pick up an ADA unit at a baseball field. It was 40 to 50 feet from the truck. He dragged it to the truck and emptied it. As he lifted it onto the truck, he felt a pop in his back and shooting pain down his left leg to his foot. He called dispatch to report he injured his back. He drove back to the yard. Petitioner prepared an Accident Report with a consistent description of the accident and pain in the back down the leg (PX 14). The dispatcher drove him to the doctor.

On July 3, 2014, Petitioner was seen at Comprehensive Care by Dr. David Foreit, DO (PX 4). Petitioner provided a consistent history of accident. He denied any previous injury or trauma to the back. He complained of back pain with a throbbing and tingling sensation down to his foot. Dr. Foreit diagnosed an acute low back injury, acute thoracic and lumbar strain and spasm, and left leg pain and paresthesia. He performed a decompression, prescribed medication, and took Petitioner off work (PX 4).

On July 7, 2014, Petitioner noted some improvement. He reported no leg pain but a tingling sensation that goes down to his foot. Petitioner appeared much more comfortable. Dr. Foreit performed decompression treatment on Petitioner's lumbar spine (PX 4). Petitioner continued treatment with Dr. Foreit who performed additional osteopathic manipulation for Petitioner's lower back pain. Dr. Foreit released Petitioner to work with light duty restrictions of lifting 5-10 pounds on July 14, 2014 (PX 4). Petitioner returned to work for Respondent. Petitioner testified that he drove the pickup and delivery truck and had a helper riding with him to do the lifting. On July 18, 2014, Petitioner was referred for physical therapy. On July 21, 2014, Petitioner began a course of physical therapy (PX 4).

On August 18, 2014, Petitioner sought emergency medical care at Franciscan Health. He reported left flank and groin pain since 5 AM and burning on urination. Petitioner reported he had not experienced this type of pain before. He noted a hernia repair three months ago. Urine analysis and CT of the abdomen/pelvis was normal. Dr. Hussain noted tenderness at the hernia surgical scar. He ordered blood work and a repeat CT scan with contrast for a possible bowel inflammation. The repeat CT scan was also unremarkable. Petitioner was discharged with an assessment of groin pain and back pain (PX 6).

Petitioner underwent physical therapy and treatment with Dr. Foreit through August and September 2014. He reported improvement of his pain levels and he was doing well working within his restrictions, On September 10, 2014 range of motion was 100%. Petitioner reported no low back pain and hoped to be released to return to full duty. On September 11, 2014, Dr. Foreit recommended 2 more weeks of therapy and a full ergonomics test. He increased Petitioner's lifting restriction to 25 pounds. On September 24, 2014, Dr. Foreit noted that Petitioner was not experiencing pain down the leg, numbness or loss of function. Dr. Foreit cleared the Petitioner to work at full duty and recommended that he continue with decompression treatments once per week for 2-3 weeks (PX 4).

Petitioner testified that he attempted to work at full duty for Respondent. After one day of work, he experienced increased lower back and left leg pain and went back to light duty work. On October 8, 2014, Dr. Foreit noted that Petitioner had an exacerbation of his pain after one day of work and that he had been back to working light duty since that day. Dr. Foreit diagnosed a suspected disc herniation, recommended that Petitioner undergo an MRI, reinstated his light duty work restrictions and ordered physical therapy (PX 4). The October 14, 2014 lumbar MRI at Northwestern Medical Imaging found no evidence of disc herniation. There was an L4-5 mild posterior bulge and mild disc desiccation at L5-S1 with a mild disc bulge (PX 9).

Petitioner continued treatment with Dr. Foreit through October 2014. On October 29, 2014, Petitioner reported feeling the same with pain of 2-3/10. He was not complaining of any leg pain or numbness or tingling. Petitioner noted some discomfort with treatments, so they were put on hold by Dr. Foreit. Petitioner remained on light duty restrictions. On November 19, 2014, Dr. Foreit noted that Petitioner has not gained complete resolution of his injury and referred Petitioner for an orthopedic spine evaluation with either Dr. Khanna or Dr. Tyndall. He last saw Petitioner on December 3, 2014 and continued his 25-pound restriction (PX 4).

Petitioner testified that he was laid off from Respondent in November 2014. Petitioner testified that he was laid off with other workers. The work for Respondent was from spring through the fall. Petitioner and Respondent stipulated that temporary total disability benefits were due beginning on November 12, 2014 (Arb. Ex. 1).

On December 12, 2014, Petitioner was seen for a Section 12 examination by Dr. Charles Slack at Respondent's request. His report of the examination was admitted at RX 5. He testified by evidence deposition taken November 7, 2018 (RX 6). Dr. Slack performed a physical examination of Petitioner and reviewed his diagnostic films and medical records. He diagnosed Petitioner with a persistent symptomatic aggravation of degenerative lumbar disc and facet disease which has been ongoing since July 3, 2014 accident. He opined that this condition of ill-being is causally related to his incident on the job of July 2014. Dr. Slack did not feel that Petitioner had reached a healing plateau and recommended continued treatment including considering diagnostic lumbar facet blocks to determine if the facet spondylosis is causing the patient's ongoing pain. If indeed the diagnostic facet block does give some temporary relief, the patient would then be a candidate for radiofrequency lesioning of those facets. He suggested using medications such as Neurontin or Lyrica. If the patient's pain can then be better controlled, then he would suggest progressing to a functional capacity evaluation and possible work conditioning to determine his physical abilities. If the patient does not get any response with the additional medication or the facet assessment, the patient may then need to consider a lumbar discography to determine if the ongoing pain response has been emanating from a discogenic pain response. If that was the case, the patient then may possibly require a lumbar fusion type procedure. Dr. Slack recommended that Petitioner remain on light duty work restrictions (RX 5, RX 6).

On December 19, 2014, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Dwight Tyndall at Orthopaedic Specialists of Northwest Indiana upon the referral from Dr. Foreit. After examining the Petitioner and reviewing his MRI, Dr. Tyndall recommended that Petitioner undergo facet injections at L4-5 and L5-S1 bilaterally. Dr. Tyndall referred Petitioner to Dr. Christopher Dewald for treatment of his lower back pain (PX 3).

On January 30, 2015, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Dewald at Midwest Orthopedics at Rush. Dr. Dewald examined Petitioner and reviewed his MRI, which he felt showed disc degeneration at L5-S1 and some bulging and mild desiccation with no herniation. Dr. Dewald's impression was low back strain. He recommended that Petitioner undergo physical therapy and an epidural steroid injection. He did not recommend surgery at that time (PX 2).

On February 5, 2015, Petitioner began a course of physical therapy at ATI Physical Therapy through July 22, 2015 (PX 5). On March 6, 2015, Dr. Dewald noted Petitioner was trying to lose weight. Physical therapy had not helped significantly. He noted that Petitioner had lower back pain and left sided buttock pain. He diagnosed Petitioner with mechanical low back pain related to an injury at work. He provided an off-work slip (PX 2).

On April 24, 2015, Dr. Dewald drafted a letter in response to a Utilization Review from the Respondent's workers' compensation insurance carrier denying additional physical therapy. Dr. Dewald stated than Petitioner was undergoing treatment for low back pain sustained while lifting a heavy object while at work. Dr. Dewald stated that Petitioner was not a surgical candidate and recommended he follow up with a physiatrist or rehabilitation physician. On April 30, 2015, Dr. Dewald noted Petitioner was still significantly disabled by his pain. Physical examination was unchanged. He noted that the MRI did show an abnormal signal at L4 and L5 which could possibly be a spondylolysis. He prescribed diagnostic injections or facet blocks as recommended by Dr. Slack, a CT scan of the lumbar spine and continued physical therapy. Petitioner was advised to continue activity as tolerated (PX 2). A CT scan on May 4, 2105 noted no change since the October 2014 MRI. No pars defect was noted. The study was noted as limited (PX 2).

On May 11, 2015, Petitioner saw Dr. Shaun Kondamuri at Midwest Interventional Spine Specialists for lower back and left leg pain since his July 3, 2014 work accident. He recommended L4-5 transforaminal epidural steroid injections and continued physical therapy. Petitioner was to remain on light duty work restrictions with lifting up to 30 pounds (PX 7). On June 3, 2015, Petitioner underwent a L4-5 transforaminal epidural steroid injection. On June 22, 2015, Petitioner followed up with Dr. Kondamuri who indicated that neither the injection nor continued therapy had given Petitioner relief of his lower back or occasional leg pain. Dr. Kondamuri recommended L3, L4 and L5 medial nerve branch blocks and referred Petitioner to see Dr. Dewald to discuss this option (PX 7).

Petitioner saw Dr. Dewald on July 9, 2015. Dr. Dewald noted no relief from the injections and physical therapy. He assessed chronic low back pain and recommended that Petitioner see Dr. Cheng for pain management and one of his colleagues in Northwest Indiana, either Dr. Khanna or Dr. Thompkins, for a second surgical opinion. He stated that Petitioner's symptoms seemed to be discogenic in nature. His surgical options would be a L4-5 fusion, but he would like to avoid this at this time (PX 2).

On July 20, 2015, Petitioner saw Dr. Anton Thompkins at Lakeshore Bone and Joint Institute upon referral from Dr. Dewald. Dr. Thompkins reviewed Petitioner's MRI and CT scans. He stated the CT showed possible left sided foraminal stenosis due to a disc osteophyte complex on the left side which could correspond to his symptoms. The MRI did not show significant neural compromise, but was not an ideal study. Dr. Thompkins stated, "I have asked him to consider getting a new MRI to get a better understanding of soft tissue anatomy, but if it does show a structural problem in that particular area that is still there, I would recommend that Dr. Dewald consider just a discectomy. In knowing that, I told the patient that a discectomy will only help leg symptoms. It will not help his back pain fully and he understands that. I think a discectomy is a far lateral approach. If that structural problem is there on a new MRI, would be a reasonable option to help this gentleman for his lumbar radiculopathy, but again, would not help his back pain" (PX 1). The impression of the July 31, 2015 MRI was very early degenerative disc disease, no evidence of disc herniation, spinal stenosis or significant neural foraminal stenosis (PX 1).

On August 11, 2015, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Cheng for low back pain and intermittent left leg pain. Dr. Cheng diagnosed an L4-5 disc bulge with no significant foraminal, lateral recess or central stenosis. He recommended light duty work, prescribed medications and recommended another epidural injection if Petitioner's symptoms continued. On August 26, 2015, Petitioner reported no improvement. Dr. Cheng noted that Petitioner's symptoms are more severe than he would anticipate for his condition. He recommended work conditioning (PX 2).

On August 17, 2015, Dr. Thompkins reviewed the MRI and went over it with the radiologist. He stated that the report is not ideal but agreed with the radiologist that Petitioner had foraminal narrowing at the left-hand side at L4-5, which corresponded to his clinical findings and history. Dr. Thompkins recommended that Petitioner undergo a repeat L4-5 left-sided transforaminal injection. If he does get benefit and his pain should come back, Dr. Thompkins indicated that a surgical decompression and discectomy would be appropriate (PX 1). On September 10, 2015, Petitioner underwent a L4-5 transforaminal epidural steroid injection L4-5 (PX 1).

On September 28, 2015, Dr. Thompkins noted that Petitioner did not have long term benefit from his latest injection but only had short term. Dr. Thompkins noted findings consistent with radiculopathy, foraminal stenosis on the left side at L4-5. He recommended a decompression foraminotomy surgery at L4-5 (PX 1). On October 7, 2015, Dr. Thompkins drafted a letter indicating his basis for recommending surgery. He stated that Petitioner's left sided radicular symptoms were consistent with the left sided neuroforaminal stenosis seen on Petitioner's MRI. In terms of his neurologic symptoms, he has a lumbar radiculopathy which is defined as pain, numbness and tingling down his leg on that left-hand side, which corresponds to his structural problems. It is, once again, recommended he undergo a decompression for the appropriate management of his symptoms. Otherwise, it would be considered negligence (PX 1). On October 30, 2015, Petitioner underwent a decompression laminectomy, partial facetectomy as well as foraminotomy on the left side with full neural element decompression at L4 and L5 (PX 1).

On November 9, 2015, Petitioner reported that his left leg symptoms had completely resolved. Dr. Thompkins provided Petitioner with 10-pound lifting restrictions on December 7, 2017 (PX 1). Petitioner underwent a course of post-surgical physical therapy at ATI beginning on December 11, 2015 (PX 5). On January 14, 2016, Petitioner complained of increased back achiness, stiffness and pain, but no true radicular symptoms. Dr. Thompkins stopped therapy. On February 22, 2016, Dr. Thompkins resumed physical therapy and to progress to work hardening. Dr. Thompkins stated that he realized that Petitioner would not be going back to his previous job but should maximize his nonoperative care (PX 1). Petitioner was discharged from physical therapy on March 23, 2016 (PX 5).

On March 21, 2016, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Thompkins who reported Petitioner was doing better. He does not have as much pain. He has some tightness in the morning which gets better. Petitioner did not do work hardening since he is no longer going to be doing that type of job. Petitioner was concerned that reinstating heavy lifting would create similar problems for him. Dr. Thompkins stated that if Petitioner does not have further worsening and does his home exercises, he can be seen as needed. Petitioner has reached maximum medical improvement. Petitioner was released with permanent physical restrictions of no lifting over 20 pounds, no pushing or pulling over 40 pounds and no repetitive twisting (PX 1).

On May 16, 2016, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Andrew Zelby at Respondent's request (RX 1). Petitioner advanced complaints of pain in the back and left buttock, not extending into the left leg. Dr. Zelby notes non-organic findings of pain on superficial light touch, pain on simulation and diminished with distraction. He notes intermittent antalgic gait favoring the left. He finds no spasm. Strength, reflexes and sensation are normal. Dr. Zelby reviewed the diagnostic testing. He noted degenerative changes and an L4-5 disc bulge on the October 2014 MRI and May 2015 CT scan. In the July 31, 2015 MRI, he also noted a new broad based left sided L4-5 disc protrusion at L4-5 not seen in the early study with moderate left foraminal stenosis. Following review of the treating medical records, Dr. Zelby concluded that Petitioner's symptoms as of that date were due to symptom amplification and not due to any condition of his spine based upon the disparity between his subjective complaints and objective findings. He notes Petitioner has 3/5 positive Waddell signs. He further opined that Petitioner's surgery was not causally related to his work injury, as the October 2014 MRI did not show a herniated disc and "multiple surgeons" did not recommend surgery for more than a year after the accident. Dr. Zelby stated that Petitioner would have easily reached maximum medical improvement for his work injury by October or November 2014 at the latest and that he could return to work at full duty as of that date. Dr. Zelby stated that Petitioner was not in need of any further diagnostics or treatment for his low back. Dr. Zelby disagreed with the 20-pound lifting restriction but, based upon the fact that the Petitioner had undergone a single level hemilaminectomy and foraminotomy, he recommended that Petitioner remain on work restrictions of lifting 50-60 pounds occasionally and 25-30 pound frequently. Dr. Zelby did not feel that the need for those restrictions was related to Petitioner's work accident (RX 1).

Dr. Zelby testified by evidence deposition taken May 10, 2018 (RX 2). He testified to his findings on examination including the history taken, the physical examination, and the review of diagnostic testing and medical records. He provided opinions as contained in his report. He had not reviewed any updated records since March 2016. He agreed that Petitioner had initial complaints of left leg pain and after the surgery, the left leg pain resolved. Dr. Zelby testified that the herniated disc had nothing to do with his injury. He opined that the accident caused a temporary exacerbation of a preexisting degenerative condition. That condition was not aggravated or accelerated (RX 2).

On June 2, 2016, Petitioner followed up with Dr. Thompkins who noted that while Petitioner's left leg symptoms had resolved, he had increasing lower back pain. Physical examination showed Petitioner was neurologically intact. Dr. Thompkins stated that he believed Petitioner was developing discogenic pain for the disc injury he sustained and recommended an updated lumbar MRI (PX 1). The June 24, 2016 MRI impression was an overall unremarkable MRI with a left L4-5 disc bulge with minimal foraminal stenosis (PX 1). On June 24, 2016, Dr. Thompkins reviewed the lumbar MRI which showed some mild disc protrusion at L4-5, but Dr. Thompkins did not feel that was the source of Petitioner's back pain. He recommended a diskography to determine the source of Petitioner's discogenic pain (PX 1).

On July 13, 2016, Dr. Thompkins reviewed the Section 12 report from Dr. Zelby. Dr. Thompkins stated that Dr. Zelby "misrepresented" that Petitioner did not have a structural problem that required surgical intervention. Dr. Thompkins explained that Petitioner's July 2015 MRI showed severe left-sided neural foraminal stenosis with severe left subarticular zone narrowing, which correlated with Petitioner's lumbar radiculopathy. Dr. Thompkins stated that Petitioner had developed discogenic back pain post-surgery at the surgical site and it would require a discography to define his pain generator (PX 10).

On July 27, 2016, Petitioner underwent a discogram and post discogram CT scan of the lumbar spine at the L3-4, L4-5 and L5-S1 levels. The discogram impression was normal at L3-4 and recreated Petitioner's low back pain at L4-5 and L5-S1 (PX 1). The CT scan impression was abnormal morphologic appearance of L4-5 and L5-S1 with an annular tear at L4-5 with extravasation of contrast into the left side (PX 8).

On August 3, 2016, Dr. Thompkins noted Petitioner had a 2-level positive discogram at L4-5 and L5-S1. Dr. Thompkins offered the Petitioner the option of a 2-level fusion, a hybrid construct with a fusion at one level and an artificial disk at the other level. Dr. Thompkins recommended that he continue pain management with Dr. Roa and possibly physical therapy to avoid surgery due to his young age (PX 1).

Dr. Thompkins testified by evidence deposition taken January 29, 2018 (PX 11). He testified to his treatment of Petitioner including his reading of the July 31, 2015 MRI as showing significant narrowing in the foramen at L4-5 on the left-hand side which was causing nerve irritation. Dr. Thompkins believed that this finding was consistent with Petitioner's leg pain in the L4 nerve root distribution, his recommendation for injections and surgery. He testified to his post-operative care and his July 13, 2016 response to Dr. Zelby's report. Dr. Thompkins noted that Dr. Dewald had recommended a decompression and possible fusion prior to Petitioner seeing Dr. Thompkins. Dr. Thompkins performed a different surgery in order to try to avoid fusion in such a young patient. Dr. Thompkins stated that Petitioner developed post-surgical back pain with discogenic findings. Dr. Thompkins felt that a discography was reasonable to define Petitioner's pain generator. Dr. Thompkins testified that the discogram was positive at two levels. He stated that the outcomes for two level positive screens is not ideal. He discussed possible surgical options with Petitioner. Petitioner chose to continue pain management. Dr. Thompkins has not seen Petitioner since August 3, 2016 (PX 11).

Based upon his treatment of Petitioner, his review of medical imaging and the medical records he reviewed, Dr. Thompkins' opined that the current condition of ill-being in Petitioner's lumbar spine is causally related to his July 3, 2014 work accident. Dr. Thompkins opined that Petitioner had a structural issue in his spine that stemmed from his work accident, which was surgically treated and led to continued back pain. Dr. Thompkins opined that the surgery performed on Petitioner was causally related to his July 3, 2014 work accident and that all treatment to Petitioner's lumbar spine had been reasonable and necessary (PX 11). Dr. Thompkins confirmed that he knew of no injuries to or treatment of Petitioner's lumbar spine prior to his work injury. Dr. Thompkins testified that foraminal stenosis can be caused by a degenerative process. If Petitioner had any preexisting stenosis, it was asymptomatic until the work accident. A discogram requires the patient to tell the truth (PX 11).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Roa on August 25, 2016. She performed a lumbar medial branch nerve block on September 7, 2016 at L3-L5, injecting 6 facets. Petitioner indicated that these injections reduced his pain for approximately 4-5 hours. Dr. Roa suggested doing a second series of blocks (PX 1).

On September 15, 2016, Petitioner returned to Dr. Dewald. He noted Petitioner's leg pain has resolved but he still has significant back pain which is believed to be discogenic. He notes the diagnostic findings on MRI, CT scan and discogram. Dr. Dewald's assessment and plan states that the patient has exhausted nonoperative management of his chronic low back pain. Although he does not have radiculopathy complaints and significant signs of neurocompression posteriorly, his disk degeneration has proven to exhaust conservative management. We have thus discussed fusion of the L5-S1 level, which has the most apparent degeneration radiographically, but with inclusion of the L4-L5 level due to the positive findings on the discogram. Therefore, we would like to plan an ALIF at these two levels with percutaneous instrumentation posteriorly. The patient understands the risks, benefits, and alternatives of the proposed procedure and would like to proceed (PX 2). On September 23, 2018, Dr. DeWald provided a note indication that he has not seen Petitioner since September 15, 2016 because of his workers compensation status which as delayed treatment (PX 12).

Petitioner testified that he has not seen Dr. Dewald since September 15, 2016. He has attempted to return to see Dr. Dewald, but has been unable due to non-approval by workers' compensation. Petitioner testified that he is in pain every day and cannot do a whole lot. When Petitioner attempts to do chores, his pain becomes so great that he has to rest the remainder of the day. Petitioner cannot sweep the floor or vacuum without pain. He is not doing his exercises. Petitioner wants to undergo the surgery he had previously discussed with Dr. Dewald. Petitioner has not contacted Respondent since his layoff for employment. He applied for unemployment compensation in Indiana. He has no resume or any job logs.

Lisa Helma prepared a vocational report (PX 16) and testified by evidence deposition taken January 3, 2019 (PX 17). She testified that she is a certified rehabilitation counselor who performed a vocational evaluation of Petitioner. Ms. Helma reviewed Petitioner's accident history, work restrictions, educational history and current functional status. In analyzing whether Petitioner is a candidate for vocational rehabilitation, Ms. Helma concluded that Petitioner would be a candidate for vocational rehabilitation, depending on which work restrictions were applied. Ms. Helma opined that if Dr. Dewald's restrictions were followed (currently recommending that Petitioner remain off work pending fusion surgery), then there would be no labor market available to Petitioner at this time. If the restrictions recommended by Dr. Thompkins were adopted, then Petitioner would be a candidate for vocational rehabilitation and could be expected to find a position earning approximately $9.00 to $12.00 per hour. If the restrictions recommended by Dr. Zelby were adopted and found to be related to Petitioner's work accident, then Petitioner again would be a candidate for vocational rehabilitation and would be able to earn approximately $10.00 to $15.00 per hour. Ms. Helma testified to her opinions regarding a proper training plan for Petitioner and her recommendations for a formal vocational rehabilitation under the restrictions of Dr. Thompkins or Dr. Zelby (PX 17).

Conclusions of Law

In support of the Arbitrator's decision with respect to (F) Causal Connection, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

A Workers' Compensation Claimant bears the burden of showing by a preponderance of credible evidence that his current condition of ill-being is causally related to the workplace injury. Horath v. Industrial Commission, 449 N.E.2d 1345, 1348 (Ill. 1983) citing Rosenbaum v. Industrial Com. (1982), 93 Ill.2d 381, 386, 67 Ill.Dec. 83, 444 N.E.2d 122). The accident need not be the sole or principal cause, as long as it was a causative factor in a claimant's condition of ill-being. Lopez v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2014 IL App (3d) 130355WC-U, P25 (Ill. App. Ct. 3d Dist. 2014). Nothing in the statutory language requires proof of a direct causal connection. Sperling v. Industrial Comm'n, 129 Ill. 2d 416, 421, 544 N.E.2d 290, 292 (1989). A causal connection may be based on a medical expert's opinion that an accident "could have" or "might have" caused an injury. Consolidation Coal Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 265 Ill. App. 3d 830, 839, 639 N.E.2d 886, 892 (1994). In addition, a chain of events suggesting a causal connection may suffice to prove causation even if the etiology of the disease is unknown. Id. Prior good health followed by a change immediately following an accident allows an inference that a subsequent condition of ill-being is the result of the accident. Navistar International Transportation Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 315 Ill. App. 3d 1197, 1205 (2000).

Petitioner sustained an undisputed accident on July 3, 2014 in which he suffered an injury to his lower back. His unrebutted testimony and medical histories state that he had no prior low back injuries or treatment. Thereafter, he has been treated consistently for complaints of back pain and intermittent left leg pain. Petitioner had some initial improvement with treatment by Dr. Foreit sufficient to attempt a return to full duty work. But after suffering a return of symptoms after only one day, Dr. Foreit place Petitioner back on restrictions and referred his to an orthopedic surgeon. Although released to full duty work in September, Dr. Foreit had continued treatment and had not released Petitioner from further care.

On December 12, 2014, Petitioner was seen for a Section 12 examination by Dr. Charles Slack at the request of the Respondent. He diagnosed Petitioner with a persistent symptomatic aggravation of degenerative lumbar disc and facet disease causally related to his incident on the job of July 2014. Dr. Slack recommended continued treatment included considering diagnostic lumbar facet blocks to determine if the facet spondylosis is causing the patient's ongoing pain. If indeed the diagnostic facet block does give some temporary relief, the patient would then be a candidate for radiofrequency lesioning of those facets. If the patient does not get any response with the additional medication or the facet assessment, the patient may then need to consider a lumbar discography to determine if the ongoing pain response has been emanating from a discogenic pain response. If that was the case, the patient then may possibly require a lumbar fusion type procedure. Dr. Slack recommended that Petitioner remain on light duty work restrictions

Dr. Tyndall recommended that Petitioner undergo facet injections at L4-5 and L5-S1 bilaterally. Dr. Tyndall referred Petitioner to Dr. Christopher Dewald for treatment of his lower back pain. Dr. Dewald reviewed the MRI, which he felt showed disc degeneration at L5-S1 and some bulging and mild desiccation with no herniation. He recommended that Petitioner undergo physical therapy and an epidural steroid injection. He did not recommend surgery at that time.

On March 6, 2015, Dr. Dewald noted physical therapy had not helped significantly. He diagnosed Petitioner with mechanical low back pain related to an injury at work. On April 24, 2015, Dr. Dewald stated that Petitioner was not a surgical candidate and recommended he follow up with a physiatrist or rehabilitation physician. On April 30, 2015, Dr. Dewald noted Petitioner was still significantly disabled by his pain. Physical examination was unchanged. He noted that the MRI did show an abnormal signal at L4 and L5 which could possibly be a spondylolysis. He prescribed diagnostic injections or facet blocks as recommended by Dr. Slack, a CT scan of the lumbar spine and continued physical therapy. On May 11, 2015, Petitioner underwent a L4-5 transforaminal epidural steroid injection. On June 22, 2015, Dr. Kondamuri indicated that neither the injection nor continued therapy had given Petitioner relief of his lower back or occasional leg pain. On July 9, 2015. Dr. Dewald noted no relief from the injections and physical therapy. He assessed chronic low back pain and recommended that Petitioner see Dr. Cheng for pain management and either Dr. Khanna or Dr. Thompkins for a second surgical opinion. He stated that Petitioner's symptoms seemed to be discogenic in nature. His surgical options would be a L4-5 fusion, but he would like to avoid this at this time.

On July 20, 2015, Petitioner saw Dr. Thompkins who reviewed Petitioner's MRI and CT scans. He stated that the CT scan showed possible left sided foraminal stenosis due to a disc osteophyte complex on the left side which could correspond to his symptoms. Dr. Thompkins ordered a new MRI. Dr. Thompkins reviewed the July 31, 2015 MRI and went over it with the radiologist. He stated that Petitioner had foraminal narrowing at the left-hand side at L4-5, which corresponded to his clinical findings and history. Dr. Thompkins recommended that Petitioner undergo a repeat L4-5 left-sided transforaminal injection. If he does get benefit and his pain should come back, Dr. Thompkins indicated that a surgical decompression and discectomy would be appropriate. On September 10, 2015, Petitioner underwent a L4-5 transforaminal epidural steroid injection L4-5. On September 28, 2015, Dr. Thompkins noted that Petitioner did not have long term benefit from his latest injection but only had short term. He notes findings consistent with radiculopathy, foraminal stenosis on the left side at L4-5. He recommended a decompression foraminotomy surgery at L4-5. On October 7, 2015, Dr. Thompkins drafted a letter indicating his basis for recommending surgery. He stated that Petitioner's left sided radicular symptoms were consistent with the left sided neuroforaminal stenosis seen on Petitioner's MRI. On October 30, 2015, Petitioner underwent a decompression laminectomy, partial facetectomy as well as foraminotomy on the left side with full neural element decompression at L4 and L5.

On November 9, 2015 Petitioner reported that his left leg symptoms had completely resolved. Dr. Thompkins provided Petitioner with 10-pound lifting restrictions on December 7, 2017. Petitioner underwent a course of post-surgical care. On March 21, 2016, Petitioner was seen by Dr. Thompkins. Petitioner was concerned that reinstating heavy lifting would create similar problems for him. Dr. Thompkins stated that if Petitioner does not have further worsening and does his home exercises he can be seen as needed. Petitioner has reached maximum medical improvement. Petitioner was released with permanent physical restrictions of no lifting over 20 pounds, no pushing or pulling over 40 pounds and no repetitive twisting.

On June 2, 2016, Petitioner followed up with Dr. Thompkins who noted that while Petitioner's left leg symptoms had resolved, he had increasing lower back pain. Dr. Thompkins stated he believed that Petitioner was developing discogenic pain for the disc injury he sustained and recommended an updated lumbar MRI. Dr. Thompkins reviewed the June 24, 2016 lumbar MRI which showed some mild disc protrusion at L4-5, but Dr. Thompkins did not feel that was the source of his back pain. He recommended a diskography to determine the source of Petitioner's discogenic pain. On July 27, 2016, Petitioner underwent a discogram and post discogram CT scan of the lumbar spine at the L3-4, L4-5 and L5-S1 levels. The discogram impression was normal at L3-4 and recreated Petitioner's slow back pain at L4-5 and L5-S1. The CT scan impression was abnormal morphologic appearance of L4-5 and L5-S1 with an annular tear at L4-5 with extravasation of contrast into the left side. On August 3, 2016, Dr. Thompkins noted Petitioner had a 2-level positive diskogram at L4-5 and L5-S1. Dr. Thompkins offered the Petitioner the option of a 2-level fusion, a hybrid construct, with a fusion at one level and an artificial disk at the other level. Dr. Thompkins recommended that he continue pain management with Dr. Roa and possibly physical therapy to avoid surgery due to his young age.

Dr. Roa performed a lumbar medial branch nerve block on September 7, 2016 at L3-L5. Petitioner indicated that these injections reduced his pain for approximately 4-5 hours. On September 15, 2016, Petitioner returned to Dr. Dewald who noted Petitioner's leg pain has resolved but he still has significant back pain which is believed to be discogenic. He notes the diagnostic findings on MRI, CT scan and discogram. Dr. Dewald's assessment and plan states that the patient has exhausted nonoperative management of his chronic low back pain. Although he does not have radiculopathy complaints and significant signs of neurocompression posteriorly, his disk degeneration has proven to exhaust conservative management. We have thus discussed fusion of the L5-S1 level, which has the most apparent degeneration radiographically, but with inclusion of the L4-L5 level due to the positive findings on the discogram. Therefore, we would like to plan an ALIF at these two levels with percutaneous instrumentation posteriorly.

Respondent has disputed causal connection based on the opinions of Dr. Zelby. Dr. Zelby concluded that Petitioner's symptoms were due to symptom amplification and not due to any condition of his spine based upon the disparity between his subjective complaints and objective findings. He notes Petitioner has 3/5 positive Waddell signs. He further opined that Petitioner's surgery was not causally related to his work injury, as the October 2014 MRI did not show a herniated disc and "multiple surgeons" did not recommend surgery for more than a year after the accident. Dr. Zelby stated that Petitioner would have "easily" reached maximum medical improvement for his work injury by October or November of 2014 at the latest and that he could return to work at full duty as of that date. Dr. Zelby stated that Petitioner was not in need of any further diagnostics or treatment for his low back. Dr. Zelby testified that the herniated disc had nothing to do with his injury. He opined that the accident caused a temporary exacerbation of a preexisting degenerative condition. That condition was not aggravated or accelerated.

Dr. Thompkins reviewed the report from Dr. Zelby. Dr. Thompkins stated that Dr. Zelby "misrepresented" that Petitioner did not have a structural problem that required surgical intervention. Dr. Thompkins explained that Petitioner's July 2015 MRI showed severe left-sided neural foraminal stenosis with severe left subarticular zone narrowing, which correlated with Petitioner's lumbar radiculopathy. Dr. Thompkins stated that Petitioner had developed discogenic back pain post-surgery at the surgical site and it would require a diskography. to define his pain generator. Dr. Thompkins' opined that the current condition of ill-being in Petitioner's lumbar spine is causally related to his July 3, 2014 work accident. Dr. Thompkins opined that Petitioner had a structural issue in his spine that stemmed from his work accident, which was surgically treated and lead to continued back pain. Dr. Thompkins opined that the surgery performed on Petitioner was causally related to his July 3, 2014 work accident.

It is the Commission's province to assess the credibility of witnesses, draw reasonable inferences from the evidence, determine what weight to give testimony, and resolve conflicts in the evidence, particularly medical opinion evidence. *Berry v. Having heard the testimony and reviewed the exhibits, the Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Zelby unpersuasive and finds the opinions of Dr. Thompkins and Dr. Dewald persuasive and supported by the Petitioner's credible testimony and symptoms, the diagnostic testing, physical examinations and the findings and opinions of Dr. Slack, Dr. Kondamuri, Dr. Tyndall, Dr. Foreit and Dr. Roa. The Arbitrator finds Dr. Zelby's statement that there was no surgical recommendation by multiple surgeons inaccurate. Dr. Dewald discussed surgical options. Dr. Slack discussed possible fusion. Dr. Thompkins performed surgery. All of the statements concerning Petitioner not being a surgical candidate were qualified by plans to first exhaust conservative measures in light of Petitioner's young age. The Arbitrator also does not find Dr. Zelby's attribution of Petitioner's current symptoms to symptom amplification supported by the evidence. Petitioner returned to work with restrictions and, when released to full duty, made an attempt, although unsuccessful. There is no other evidence to support a claim of symptom magnification. The Petitioner's presentation at his medical treatment has been consistent. None of the multiple treating physicians has raised any question as to the validity of his complaints. The Arbitrator finds Petitioner a credible witness. The Arbitrator finds that the treatment provided to Petitioner was a cautious and measured attempt to address the symptoms and supported by the diagnostic testing and to avoid invasive surgery until other more conservative options were exhausted. The progression of physical therapy, injections, microsurgery, facet blocks and ultimately the recommendation for a fusion is the exact progression outlined by Dr. Slack if Petitioner did not obtain relief of his symptoms.

Based upon the record as a whole, including the credible testimony of Petitioner and the persuasive opinions of his treating medical providers, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that his current condition of ill-being in the lower back is causally connected to the accidental injuries sustained on July 3, 2014.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision with respect to (J) Medical, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Under §8(a) of the Act, a claimant is entitled to recover reasonable medical expenses that are causally related to the accident and that are determined to be required to diagnose, relieve, or cure the effects of a claimant's injury. The claimant has the burden of proving that the medical services were necessary, and the expenses incurred were reasonable. City of Chicago v. Illinois Workers ' Compensation Commission, 409 Ill. App. 3d 258,267 (1st Dist., 2011). In weighing the reasonableness and necessity of treatment, the Commission considered the medical opinions presented. Madison Mining Company v. Industrial Commission, 309 Ill. 591, 138 N.E. 211 (1923). Based on the Arbitrator's finding with respect to Causal Connection, reasonable and necessary medical expenses related to Petitioner's low back condition would be causally connected to the accident. Petitioner has admitted unpaid medical bills claimed as PX 15. Respondent has admitted a payment log as RX 3.

The Arbitrator's review of these exhibits finds that the bills from Franciscan Alliance for treatment on August 18, 2014 claimed by Petitioner have not been paid by Respondent. The Arbitrator has reviewed the treatment records for this date contained in PX 6. Petitioner sought emergency medical care reporting left flank and groin pain since 5 AM and burning on urination. Petitioner reported he had not experienced this type of pain before. He noted a hernia repair three months ago. Urine analysis and CT of the abdomen/pelvis was normal. Dr. Hussain noted tenderness at the hernia surgical scar. He ordered blood work and a repeat CT scan with contrast for a possible bowel inflammation. The repeat CT scan was also unremarkable. Petitioner was discharged with an assessment of groin pain and back pain. The Arbitrator finds that this treatment for flank pain and vomiting was not related to Petitioner's injury to the low back. The testing and diagnosis focused solely on abdominal and pelvic issues. The bills for this treatment are denied.

With respect to the balance claimed to ATI, RX 5 contains the treatment records for this physical therapy from December 2015 through March 2016 as ordered by Petitioner's treating medical providers. This treatment was reasonable, necessary and causally related to the accident. RX 3 does show the claimed unpaid dates of treatment from December 2015 through March 2016 and the billing for these, but there are no headings on the columns shown on the exhibit. By comparing the amount on RX 3 to the payments documented on PX 15, it appears that this figure is not the payment made but rather the charges received. The Arbitrator notes that there appear to be additional columns which have been cut off of the printed exhibit submitted which may indicate some payments made on these bills since the date of the preparation of the ATI statement included in PX 15, but the amount cannot be definitively established.

Based upon the record as a whole and the Arbitrator's finding with respect to Causal Connection, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services, pursuant to the medical fee schedule, of $8,214.44 to ATI as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. Respondent shall receive credit for any additional payments made on the unpaid balances.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision with respect to (K) Prospective Medical, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Under §8(a) of the Act, a claimant is entitled to recover reasonable medical expenses that are causally related to the accident and that are determined to be required to diagnose, relieve, or cure the effects of a claimant's injury. The claimant has the burden of proving that the medical services were necessary, and the expenses incurred were reasonable. City of Chicago v. Illinois Workers ' Compensation Commission, 409 Ill. App. 3d 258,267 (1st Dist., 2011). In weighing the reasonableness and necessity of treatment, the Commission considered the medical opinions presented. Madison Mining Company v. Industrial Commission, 309 Ill. 591, 138 N.E. 211 (1923). Based on the Arbitrator's finding with respect to Causal Connection, reasonable and necessary prospective medical treatment related to Petitioner's low back condition would be causally connected to the accident.

As more fully addressed in the Arbitrator's finding with respect to Causal Connection above, the Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Thompkins and Dr. Dewald persuasive. Dr. Dewald has recommended that Petitioner undergo another surgery including an ALIF at L4-5 and L5-S1 with percutaneous instrumentation posteriorly. Fusion surgery was discussed by Dr. Slack, Dr. Dewald and Dr. Thompkins as an option if Petitioner did not obtain relief from more conservative treatment. The evidence documents that he has not. Having heard the testimony and reviewed the evidence, the Arbitrator finds Dr. Dewald's recommendations reasonable, necessary and causally related.

Based upon the record as a whole and the Arbitrator's finding with respect to Causal Connection, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that Respondent shall authorize and pay for additional reasonable and necessary treatment consistent the recommendations of Dr. DeWald including surgical intervention including an ALIF at L4-5 and L5-S1 with percutaneous instrumentation posteriorly, any post-operative treatment, physical therapy or other reasonable and necessary care.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision with respect to (L) Temporary Compensation, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Temporary compensation is provided for in Section 8(b) of the Workers' Compensation Act, which provides, weekly compensation shall be paid as long as the total temporary incapacity lasts, which has interpreted to mean that an employee is temporarily totally incapacitated from the time an injury incapacitates him for work until such time as he is as far recovered or restored as the permanent character of his injury will permit. It is a well-settled principle that when a claimant seeks TTD benefits, the dispositive inquiry is whether the claimant's condition has stabilized, i.e., whether the claimant has reached maximum medical improvement. Westin Hotel v. Industrial Comm'n, 372 Ill. App. 3d 527, 542, 865 N.E.2d 342, 310 Ill. Dec. 18 (2007).

Petitioner worked light duty from the date of the accident through November 2014. The parties stipulated that Petitioner began missing work as of November 12, 2014. He has not returned to work thereafter. The parties stipulated that Petitioner received temporary compensation through July 19, 2016 totaling $45,645.43 and further stipulated that he received other benefits of $4,615.70.

Based upon the Arbitrator's findings with respect to Causal Connection and Prospective Medical, Petitioner is in need of additional treatment and has not yet reached maximum medical improvement. He would remain entitled to temporary compensation through the date of the hearing.

In cross examining Dr. Thompkins and Petitioner, Respondent raised questions concerning the exact physical nature of Petitioner's job and Petitioner's effort to return to work. The Act provides incentive for the injured employee to strive toward recovery and the goal of returning to gainful employment by providing that TTD benefits may be suspended or terminated if the employee if the employee refuses work falling within the physical restrictions prescribed by his doctor. See 820 ILCS 305/8(d) (West 2004); Hartlein v. Illinois Power Co., 151 Ill. 2d 142, 166, 601 N.E.2d 720, 176 Ill. Dec. 22 (1992); Hayden v. Industrial Comm'n, 214 Ill. App. 3d 749, 574 N.E.2d 99, 158 Ill. Dec. 305 (1991). Based upon Petitioner's credible testimony and the job description admitted, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's regular job was more physical that the persuasive restrictions place upon him by his treating doctors or even the restrictions stated by Dr. Zelby. While Petitioner's November 2014 lay off was part of a seasonal force reduction, no evidence was admitted that Petitioner was offered the light duty driving job driving with a helper the next spring or any date after his layoff or that such work would have been available to him.

Based upon the record as a whole and the Arbitrator's findings with respect to Causal Connection and Prospective Medical, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has proved by a preponderance of the evidence that he is entitled to 217 3/7 weeks of temporary total disability benefits commencing November 12, 2014 through January 11, 2019, as provided in Section 8(b) of the Act. Respondent shall be given a credit of $45,645.43 for TTD and $4,615.70 for other benefits, for a total credit of $50,261.13.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Petitioner timely filed a Petition for Review of the Decision of the Arbitrator finding Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment, and his condition of ill-being reached maximum medical improvement on August 9, 2013. Notice having been given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of causation, wages, medical expenses, temporary disability, permanent disability, and credit, and being advised of the facts and law, adopts the Arbitrator's Findings of Fact, reverses the denial of causation in part, and modifies the awards of medical expenses and permanent disability.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW:

I. Causation

The Arbitrator found Petitioner's second and third surgeries were not causally related to the work injury. The Commission views the evidence regarding Petitioner's second surgery differently.

The record reflects Petitioner was discharged from post-operative physical therapy on August 9, 2013; at that time, Petitioner reported ongoing pain at 3/10. PX13. Only three days later, on August 12, 2013 Petitioner presented for his next follow-up appointment with Dr. Li. At that re-evaluation, Dr. Li memorialized Petitioner had "continued" pain complaints, and Dr. Li documented objective physical examination findings of pain with palpation as well as decreased flexion. Diagnosing "residual medial pain" status post left knee arthroscopy with abrasion chondroplasty of the patella and repair of the patella tendon, Dr. Li administered a corticosteroid injection to ameliorate Petitioner's ongoing complaints and provided pain medication. PX11. When Petitioner returned to Dr. Li on October 11, 2013, Petitioner stated the injection provided only a week of relief and reported pain at 6/10. Dr. Li ordered an MRI to investigate the cause of Petitioner's pain. PX11. The prescribed MRI was performed on October 14, 2013, and the radiologist's report identified the following: 1) postoperative change along the course of the patellar tendon, which demonstrates diffuse thickening along its course; 2) probable small vertical tear of the anterior horn of the lateral meniscus reaching the inferior articular surface; 3) small joint effusion; and 4) intact cruciate and collaterals. PX7, PX11. Upon reviewing the MRI results on October 16, 2013, Dr. Li recommended arthroscopic repair, which was subsequently carried out on December 3, 2013. PX8. Post-operatively, Petitioner again underwent physical therapy. The February 24, 2014 discharge summary reflects Petitioner demonstrated "no significant objective or functional limitation at this time and has returned to full functional mobility"; the therapist further documented Petitioner met all therapy goals. PX12. On February 26, 2014, Dr. Li released Petitioner to advance activities as tolerated. PX11.

Dr. Li and Dr. Monaco provided conflicting opinions regarding causation. Dr. Li concluded the initial accident resulted in a patella tendon rupture which required surgery and subsequent therapy leading to a weakening of Petitioner's lateral meniscus. PX2, PX11. Dr. Monaco disagreed and opined no causal connection exists. In so doing, Dr. Monaco placed great significance on the fact neither the original MRI nor the March 8, 2013 operative report reveal evidence of meniscal injury or pathology:

> The first surgery involves a rupture of the patellar tendon appropriately treated with repair. At the time of that surgery there was no evidence of any other damage inside the joint, specifically no injury to the lateral meniscus. Subsequently, there was further complaints of pain leading to another MRI which showed signal changes consistent with a small possible, it looked like, vertical tear of the anterior portion of the lateral meniscus. This was not seen at the time of the previous surgery or at the time of the previous MRI. There was no history in the medical record to indicate any connection between that finding and his original injury. In fact, there was the disconnect of a normal MRI and a normal surgery in regards to the lateral meniscus prior to this tear showing up later on the second MRI. RX2, p. 21-22.

According to Dr. Monaco, since nothing in the medical record suggests a further incident which could cause the lateral meniscus tear subsequently shown on the October 2013 MRI, the injury could not be related to the original injury/surgery. The flaw in Dr. Monaco's opinion is there are in fact records evidencing such an incident in physical therapy: on June 14, 2013, the therapist memorialized, "Patient reported a 'pop' at knee during floor-waist lifts with some burning sensation following. He reports he has been feeling this occasionally. This exercise was stopped. No more complaints of popping were reported however some remaining burning remained." PX14. The Commission observes a "pop" and burning sensation in the knee while squatting with weights is consistent with a meniscal injury. See Krantz v. Industrial Commission, 289 Ill. App. 3d 447, 450-51, 681 N.E.2d 1100 (1997) (The Commission is an administrative tribunal that hears only workers' compensation cases and deals extensively with medical issues.); Long v. Industrial Commission, 76 Ill. 2d 561, 566, 394 N.E.2d 1192 (1979) (The Commission possesses inherent expertise regarding medical issues). The Commission finds it significant Dr. Monaco was not provided with and did not review these records, and as a result, we find Dr. Monaco's causation opinion as to the meniscal tear is entitled to little weight. See, e.g., Sunny Hill of Will County v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2014 IL App (3d) 130028WC, ¶36, 14 N.E.3d 16 (Expert opinions must be supported by facts and are only as valid as the facts underlying them.)

Where the work injury itself causes a subsequent injury the chain of causation has not been broken: "In this context, the cases have applied a 'but for' test, basing compensability for an ultimate injury or disability upon a finding that it was caused by an Event which would not have occurred had it not been for the original injury...Clear illustrations of this chain of causation relationship are cases where a second injury occurs due to treatment for the first (Citations)...." International Harvester v. Industrial Commission, 46 Ill.2d 238, 245, 263 N.E.2d 49 (1970). Petitioner is a relatively young person with no prior history of left knee problems who sustained what Dr. Li described as a severe trauma to his knee. Following surgical repair of the ruptured patellar tendon, Petitioner commenced physical therapy. During one of the therapy modalities, he experienced a pop and burning of the knee which the Commission finds is consistent with a tear of his weakened meniscus. The Commission finds Petitioner's meniscal tear is a natural consequence flowing from the original injury.

However, while we conclude Petitioner's meniscal injury is causally related to the March 1, 2013 work injury, the Commission does not find Petitioner's 2015 complaints or treatment to be causally related. In denying causation, the Commission emphasizes the 19-month gap in treatment following the February 26, 2014 appointment with Dr. Li at which time Petitioner's knee condition had stabilized. PX11. The medical records from Petitioner's February 26, 2014 appointment memorialize that Petitioner's knee examination was entirely normal. No swelling, bruising, or redness was noted, and Petitioner's range of motion was normal and all ligaments stable. PX11. Dr. Li testified as of February 26, 2014 "Everything was looking good," and Dr. Li "released him to return to work, continue home exercise program, and see me only on an as-needed basis." PX1, p. 20.

Petitioner testified he returned to work full duty as of January 13, 2014 and worked without incident. T. 89. Petitioner further testified following the second surgery- "It went well" (T. 51) until he noticed a gradual onset of swelling in July or August of 2015 necessitating a consultation with Dr. Li on September 9, 2015. T. 52;54. Dr. Li's September 9, 2015 records memorialize the following history: "Patient stated that he has had increased pain in his Left knee for about 2 months with no knowns cause." PX11. We find it highly significant that on April 10, 2015, Petitioner advised Dr. Monaco that he "ha[d] had no problems since" April 2014, and in fact had recently traveled to Washington DC, and New York and walked approximately 40 miles over a five-day family vacation. RX1; T. 91-92.

The Commission finds Petitioner's subsequent development of pain complaints and re-initiation of treatment are not causally related to his work accident. To be clear, we are not persuaded by Dr. Li's assertion that Petitioner's accident caused an injury to the femoral trochlea given Dr. Li's testimony that the March 4, 2013 MRI evidenced intact cartilage in the femoral trochlea; therefore, no injury to this area. PX1, p. 41.

The Commission finds Petitioner's condition of ill-being reached maximum medical improvement as of February 26, 2014. The Commission observes Petitioner was authorized off work as of the December 3, 2013 surgery, and he returned to work on January 13, 2014. PX12; T. 89. Given our finding the December 3, 2013 surgery is causally related to the work injury, Petitioner is entitled to the associated 5 6/7 weeks of Temporary Total Disability benefits. This is consistent with the Request for Hearing, which reflects this period of Temporary Total Disability benefits was not in dispute, and Respondent was entitled to a credit for the Temporary Total Disability benefits paid.

II. Medical

Petitioner's Exhibit 16 contains medical bills associated with treatment of Petitioner's left knee. The Commission finds the charges incurred through February 26, 2014 are causally related to Petitioner's work injury and are reasonable and necessary as provided in Section 8(a).

III. Permanent Disability

As Petitioner's accident occurred after September 1, 2011, §8.1b applies. Section 8.1b(b) requires permanent partial disability be determined following consideration of five factors: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a); (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b(b).

Section 8.1b(b)(i) – §8.1b(a) impairment report

Neither party submitted a §8.1b(a) impairment report. As an impairment report is not a prerequisite to an award of permanent partial disability benefits (Corn Belt Energy Corp. v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2016 IL App (3d) 150311WC, ¶47, 56 N.E.3d 1101), the Commission will assess Petitioner's permanent disability based upon the remaining enumerated factors.

Section 8.1b(b)(ii) – occupation of the injured employee

Petitioner returned to his pre-injury job as a warehouse laborer/forklift operator. The Commission finds Petitioner's successful return to unrestricted work is significant and indicative of reduced permanent disability.

Section 8.1b(b)(iii) – age of the employee at the time of the injury

Petitioner was 38 years old on the date of his accidental injury. Petitioner is a relatively young man and will, therefore, have to live with his residual complaints for a longer period. The Commission finds this factor weighs in favor of increased permanent disability.

SQ1ACC018

Section 8.1b(b)(iv) - future earning capacity

No evidence was offered to suggest the injury had an adverse impact on Petitioner's future earning capacity. The Commission finds this indicative of reduced permanent disability.

Section 8.1b(b)(v) – evidence of disability corroborated by treating medical records

As noted above, Dr. Li explained Petitioner suffered a severe injury to his left knee. On March 8, 2013, Dr. Li performed left knee arthroscopy with abrasion chondroplasty of the patella and repair of patella tendon to address Petitioner's left patella tendon rupture and grade-2 chondral injury of the patella. On December 8, 2013, Dr. Li performed a second surgery: left knee arthroscopy with partial lateral meniscectomy; abrasion chondroplasty of the patella; and debridement of scar tissue of the patellar tendon. Post-operatively, Petitioner underwent physical therapy; the therapy records indicate Petitioner had mild residual complaints of weakness and stiffness, but no "significant objective or functional limitation" and had achieved all therapy goals. PX12. On February 26, 2014, Dr. Li released Petitioner to advance activities as tolerated. PX11. The record reflects Petitioner returned to full duty work and was able to successfully perform his job duties. Moreover, Petitioner confirmed he was able to engage in activities such as walking 40 miles while on a week-long family vacation. The Commission observes, however, Petitioner was not symptom-free: Petitioner described a constant sore, aching feeling; pain with changes in the weather, difficulty squatting and kneeling, and occasional giving way. RX1. The Commission finds these facts are mildly indicative of increased permanent disability.

Based on the above, the Commission finds Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 30% loss of use of the left leg under Section 8(e)12. The Commission notes the statutory minimum permanent partial disability rate under Section 8(b)2.1 is implicated. Petitioner's PPD award is to be paid at $319.00 per week. 820 ILCS 305/8(b)2.1.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment on March 1, 2013, and his left knee condition of ill-being reached maximum medical improvement on February 26, 2014.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay the reasonable, necessary and causally related medical expenses incurred through February 26, 2014 pursuant to Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $319.00 per week for a period of 64.5 weeks, as provided in §8(e)12 of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused the 30% loss of use of the left leg.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

8100301109

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $18,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

MEMORANDUM OF DECISION OF ARBITRATOR

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner testified that on the date of accident he was working for Advanced Services but had been placed at Syngenta Seeds, and that his job was that of a warehouse laborer/forklift operator. He testified that on the date of accident, his job duties included moving pallets from cold storage to the warehouse, and that this was done with a forklift and pallet jack. He testified that at the time of the accident, he was lifting up a pallet with the jack, that he had jacked it 1-2 inches up off the floor and that when he pushed to get momentum, his left knee buckled and he fell. He testified that he felt a big pop and also heard a pop as well. He testified that he went straight to the floor and that he hit his knee when he hit the floor, as he fell directly on his kneecap. He testified that after he hit the ground, he was not able to move his leg. He testified that his co-workers helped him and set him up against a pallet and that after reporting the accident, he was ultimately taken to the hospital. He testified that he was ultimately seen and treated by Dr. Li.

Petitioner testified that he saw Dr. Li on the afternoon of March 4th and that he ordered an MRI. He testified that Dr. Li recommended surgery and that he underwent his first surgery on March 8, 2013. He testified that he returned to Dr. Li post-operatively and that he underwent post-operative physical therapy, among other forms of treatment. He testified that when he saw Dr. Li on June 11, 2013 his pain was a lot better, the swelling had subsided substantially, his mobility was a lot better and he was completely weighbearing without the aid of crutches or a cane. He testified that when he saw Dr. Li again on August 24, 2013, he still had some swelling but that it was not the extent of what it had been prior.

Petitioner testified that he had been getting better for a while and that he had been released to full duty work, but that he noticed slowly that it felt like his knee was catching and that he did not trust it. He testified that he was unable to bear weight all the time and that he would have to stop and rest, then continue walking. He testified that when he saw him on October 11th, Dr. Li recommended that another MRI be performed. He testified that the MRI revealed that he had a tear in the meniscus that needed to be repaired. He testified that after the second surgery was performed, he again underwent post-operative physical therapy and continued off work. He testified that he believed that he was released to full duty on or about February 26, 2014 and that when he saw Dr. Li on that date for his final visit, he had very little pain.

Petitioner testified that things went well after he was released that he still had pain if he stepped on uneven ground. He testified that he had decent motion in his knee but was unable to bend it all the way, that getting into a car was easier, that he had some instability and that he also had some weakness and loss of range of motion. He testified that in July or August 2015, he noticed that the swelling started to come back in his knee. He denied having had any falls, impacts, twists or other trauma to his left knee.

Petitioner testified that on September 9, 2015, he again saw Dr. Li and stated that he was having pain again and that he denied having had any trauma since the last surgery. He testified that he underwent another MRI and that Dr. Li recommended that he undergo additional physical therapy. He testified that he ultimately underwent a third surgery by Dr. Li on December 2, 2015. After outlining his post-operative treatment, Petitioner testified that he believed that he was released to full duty work again on or about March 22nd.

Petitioner testified that he still has some issues with his left knee, that it feels like his kneecap shifts occasionally and that he has to push it back. He testified that he still has weakness and that when he gets in a car, he occasionally has to lower himself while getting in using the frame of the car for assistance. He testified that he feels that his knee buckles from time to time.

Petitioner testified that he is currently performing similar duties with forklift operations for Respondent and that during the spring, he runs a planter on occasion. He testified that during the summer he walks bean fields which are uneven, and that he needs to make sure that he is not stepping into a hole.

Petitioner testified that he used to go hiking but that he no longer does so as it is extremely difficult. He testified that he is not as active as he used to be because his left knee hurts. He denied ever having been pain-free during the period when he underwent surgeries.

On cross examination, Petitioner testified that he had had issues with buckling of his right knee prior to the accident at issue.

On cross examination, Petitioner testified that when he raised the pallet up and when trying to get it to move he had to lean back a little bit in order to momentum, and that that was when his knee popped and buckled. He testified that the pallet likely weighed nearly 1,200 pounds.

The transcript of the deposition of Dr. Lawrence Li dated June 2, 2016 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 1. Dr. Li testified that his specialty is that of orthopedic surgery and that he is board-certified by the American Board of Orthopedic Surgery. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that he first saw Petitioner on March 4, 2013, at which time he told him that he was moving a pallet at work and felt a pop in his knee, that his knee buckled, that he then fell directly over his kneecap and scraped it, and that he had been unable to bend or straighten his knee. He testified that he reviewed the x-rays which showed a high-riding patella suggestive of a patella tendon rupture, and that he recommended getting an MRI. He testified that the MRI showed a completely ruptured patella tendon and that he recommended arthroscopic surgery and open repair of the patella tendon. He testified that surgery was performed on March 8, 2013 and consisted of a left knee arthroscopy with abrasion chondroplasty of the patella and repair of the patella tendon. He testified that when he saw Petitioner on March 14, 2013, he was using the Game Ready vasopneumatic device to reduce post-operative pain, to reduce his narcotic use and to reduce the swelling. He testified that Petitioner was also using a CPM machine to help him with his range of motion. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that when he saw Petitioner on April 4, 2013, his pain was better than before surgery, the therapy was progressing well and the Game Ready and CPM were both helping. He testified that he recommended that Petitioner continue the anti-inflammatory medications and that he return to work in two weeks with restrictions. He testified that when he saw him on May 2nd Petitioner's pain was improved but continued, and that he was still using the Game Ready system because he continued to have some swelling. He testified that he continued physical therapy on that date and recommended that Petitioner continue taking anti-inflammatory medications. He testified that when he saw him on June 11, 2013, he noted that therapy was improving but that Petitioner still could not squat, that he still had weakness with stairs and that he had mild pain with prolonged activities. He testified that things were improving but that Petitioner still at that time had mild to moderate quad atrophy. He testified that he prescribed Mobic to decrease the inflammation, Dendracin to help with the pain and Prilosec to protect the GI system, as well as having prescribed continued physical therapy. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that when he saw him on August 12, 2013, Petitioner's complaints were that he had continued medial pain with standing and walking, that his pain was aggravated with just daily activities and that it was also bothering him at night and interfered with his sleep. He testified that on physical examination, Petitioner had pain with palpation anterior to medially. He testified that he performed an injection on that date because of Petitioner's increased pain, and that he continued him on Mobic, Prilosec and Dendracin. He testified that when he saw him on October 11, 2013, Petitioner's pain was in the patella tendon, worse with use, and that he indicated that the injection had helped for a week. He testified that he recommended an MRI because he was concerned by possibly incomplete healing of the patella tendon or some other cause of the pain. He testified that he saw Petitioner in follow-up on October 16th, and that the MRI results were that the patella tendon looked appropriate and consistent for a post-operative tendon, that there was a small vertical tear on the anterior horn of the lateral meniscus, and that there was some swelling in the knee. He testified that he recommended that they proceed with left knee arthroscopy to address the lateral meniscus tear. He testified that the overall clinical picture supported the need for a surgical procedure, and that Petitioner had persistent pain and the inability to functional normally without pain and had been treated with injections, medications and extensive therapy. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that Petitioner underwent surgery on December 3, 2013 and that the post-operative diagnosis was that of a lateral meniscus tear, chondral injury to the patella and scar tissue in the patella tendon. He testified that there was a causal relationship between the surgical procedure on December 3, 2013 and the original injury because Petitioner had a chondral injury of the patella from his original injury, that he had scar tissue in the patella tendon from the patella tendon repair and that he had altered knee mechanics. He testified that Petitioner had very weak quadriceps for a very long time and that that caused him to have abnormal biomechanics into the knee as he tried to progress and function, and that that would affect the kinematics of the knee and could cause a meniscal tear. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that when he saw him on December 10, 2013, Petitioner had typical post-operative pain and that the Game Ready was definitely reducing the swelling and narcotic use, and that he had some redness around the portal incisions. He testified that he continued to prescribe the Game Ready system and physical therapy. He testified that the moderate swelling indicated that Petitioner still needed the Game Ready and that the quad atrophy and lack of range of motion indicated that Petitioner needed therapy. He testified that when he saw him on December 30, 2013 Petitioner's pain was better than before the surgery, that the Game Ready was working well and that the medications were helping his pain. He testified that when he saw him on January 29, 2014, Petitioner still had a significant strength deficit and that he continued to prescribe medications and physical therapy because of the quad atrophy. He testified that when he saw him on February 26, 2014, Petitioner had less pain and that his goals in therapy were achieved. He testified that Petitioner did not have any more swelling, that he had no bruising or redness, that he had full range of motion and that everything was looking good. He testified that he released Petitioner to return to work as of that date, and that he recommended that he continue his home exercise program and return as needed. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that he saw Petitioner on September 9, 2015 when he indicated that over the last couple of months he had had increased pain in the left knee, that there was no known injury, and that he had complaints of popping, catching and giving out. He testified that he recommended an MRI and that he next saw Petitioner on September 15th when they discussed MRI results. He testified that the MRI showed that Petitioner had had previous lateral meniscectomy, no new lateral meniscus tear, a high-grade chondral defect along the femoral trochlea with underlying subchondral bone marrow edema that was new since the examination, and that he had some high-grade chondromalacia along the lateral femoral condyle that was new since the last MRI. He testified that the chondral defect on the femoral trochlea was the area right opposite the patella and that when Petitioner fell and injured the patella tendon and the patella, he also injured the side opposite the side on the femur that the patella articulated with. He testified that at the time of the initial surgery they did not see anything, but that as time went on this area degenerated and became a high-grade chondral defect. He testified that the chondromalacia of the lateral femoral condyle was due to the abnormal kinematics of the knee and that the abnormal kinematics were due to the two prior surgical procedures, and that the quads were not as strong as they were initially. He testified that the physical examination performed on September 15th revealed moderate swelling, positive medial McMurray's and pain to palpation of the medial joint line and posteriorly. He further testified that range of motion was a little less than normal as well. He testified that he recommended a corticosteroid injection and physical therapy. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that when he saw him on October 13, 2015 Petitioner reported that he was about 20% better after the injection but still had pain, and that he had pain over the lateral aspect of the knee. He testified that the findings on exam with pain of the patella compression correlated well with the femoral trochlea lesion, the positive medial and lateral McMurray's and the medial joint line tenderness consistent with the chondral injury on the lateral femoral condyle. He testified that he recommended continued therapy. He testified that when he saw him on November 10, 2015, Petitioner through additional therapy had no improvement, the injection wore off and the pain had gotten worse. He testified that he recommended a corticosteroid injection to relieve the pain and felt that Petitioner had failed non-operative treatment, so they were planning for a left knee arthroscopy. He testified that when he saw him on November 23, 2015, Petitioner complained of severe pain and could not tolerate it anymore. He testified that he recommended surgery. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that surgery was performed on December 2, 2015 and consisted of a left knee arthroscopy with microfracture of the femoral trochlea and lateral femoral condyle, partial lateral meniscectomy and removal of loose bodies. He testified that the diagnosis was left knee chondral lesion of the femoral trochlea and lateral femoral condyle that were Grade 4 lesions, a lateral meniscus tear and multiple loose bodies of the left knee. When asked whether there was a causal relationship between this surgical procedure, the prior surgical procedures performed on Petitioner and the injury that he reported to him, Dr. Li responded in the affirmative. He testified that when Petitioner's knee buckled and he fell directly on the patella which then hit the femoral trochlea, this led to the Grade 4 lesion on the femoral trochlea. He testified that subsequent to the repair of the patella tendon Petitioner had abnormal kinematics that led to the lesion on the lateral femoral condyle, and that that led to the lesion on the lateral meniscus. He agreed that the first surgical procedure did not show the Grade 4 femoral trochlea injury as the original injury did not cause any "mackeral" damage to the cartilage. He testified that it was injured and only after rehabilitation and resumption of normal activities did it wear out a lot easier than the rest of the knee. He testified that subsequent to Petitioner resuming daily activities such as walking and climbing stairs, that area weakened and broke up. He testified that it took time for it to develop. When asked how the lateral meniscus tear that he repaired was causally related to the earlier surgical procedures, Dr. Li responded that Petitioner had had a lateral meniscus tear before in the second surgery that this would be related to and that it was related in the same way of the abnormal gait or kinematics of the knee. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that when he saw him on December 9, 2015, Petitioner had swelling but the Game Ready was helping and he was progressing with therapy. He testified that he continued to prescribe the Game Ready system on that visit and that the lack of range of motion and swelling supported the need for that equipment. He testified that he also prescribed physical therapy and medications. He testified that when he saw him on January 7, 2016, Petitioner's pain was better than before surgery and that the Game Ready was reducing the swelling. He testified that he recommended continuing therapy and the anti-inflammatory medications. He testified that he did not have the exact date for when the Game Ready system was ended, but that he may have continued it for another week because Petitioner still had moderate swelling. He testified that when he saw him on February 4, 2010 [sic], Petitioner was progressing with therapy but was still weak. He testified that he prescribed continued physical therapy. He testified that when he saw him on March 3, 2016, Petitioner was doing better with therapy, that he still needed Mobic to control his pain and that he had mild swelling, range of motion 0 - 110 and mild quad atrophy. He testified that he continued Petitioner on the Mobic because he needed it for his pain, that he continued him on a home exercise program and that he was to return to work full duty. (PX1).

Dr. Li testified that his diagnosis of Petitioner was that of a patella tendon injury and that he also had an associated patella chondral fracture. He testified that subsequent to that as Petitioner was recovering and dealing with the sequela of his patella tendon injury, he developed a lateral meniscus tear and that also as a result of hitting his patella he suffered an injury to the femoral trochlea that did not manifest from an arthroscopic-identifiable standpoint until later. He testified that he thought that there was a clear relationship between the injury and the development of the patella tendon rupture and the chondral injury of the patella, and that those injuries then contributed to the development of the lateral meniscus tear, to the chondral injury of the patella, and to the femoral trochlea and lateral femoral condyle. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li agreed that he kept an accurate history of all the complaints, treatment and recommendations in his records. He agreed that it was rare to see patella tendon tear. When asked whether he knew if Petitioner was pulling or pushing the pallet, Dr. Li responded that he did not know and that he assumed that he was pulling as it was more likely to be the mechanism of injury. He testified that the patella tendon rupture would cause Petitioner's knee to buckle. He testified that the fall itself only had a causal connection to the extent that when Petitioner hit his patella he caused a chondral fracture of the patella, and then the subsequent injury to the femoral trochlea that he was not aware of until the third surgery. He testified that he was not aware of any other specifics of the pallet that Petitioner was moving such as the size or weight. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li testified that the initial MRI of March 4, 2013 only showed a rupture of the patella tendon as well as small suprapatellar effusion. He testified that in terms of the patella cartilage it showed mild chondromalacia of the patella and that the femoral trochlea had intact cartilage. When asked whether anything in the MRI and his post-operative diagnosis in 2013 in the first surgery was inconsistent, Dr. Li responded that he thought that they were totally consistent. He agreed that when he was in surgery, he did not notice or see any other lateral meniscus or chondral issues and that that was consistent with the MRI he had reviewed. He testified that the MRI of March 2013 did not reflect any of the findings of the second and third surgery. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li testified that at the August 12, 2013 visit, Petitioner had persistent residual medial knee pain so he was given a cortisone injection but had been discharged from physical therapy. He agreed that this was inconsistent and testified that it was not the patella nor the patella tendon. He testified that he did not think that Petitioner was ever "done" with patella-type pain, but that it was manageable as of August 2013. He agreed that when Petitioner returned in October 2013 there was no new incident reported and that Petitioner just stated that he had pain over the patella tendon with use. He agreed that patella tendon complaints were the focus on that visit, not medial complaints. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li testified that the MRI in October 2013 was different than the first MRI and that it showed a patella tendon repair that had expected scar tissue, that there was an effusion in the knee, that there as an intact medial meniscus, that there was a lateral meniscus tear and that there was some damage along the inferior pole of the patella where the patella origin is located. He agreed that the patella tendon healed from the repair. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li agreed that on direct examination he did not mention anything about a disruption of blood supply causing the anterior horn lateral meniscus tear. He testified that the disrupted blood supply weakened the lateral meniscus, but that one needed to have some sort of kinetic movement in order to get the tear. He agreed that the disruption of blood supply in and of itself did not cause the tear, but testified that it made it easier for the tear. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li agreed that he authored a report to Petitioner's counsel dated May 29, 2015 and that in that report he no longer talked about the disruption of blood flow but rather talked about a weakening of the knee. When asked why the change from November 2013 to 2015, Dr. Li responded that it was not really a change and that he was trying to give a brief answer to a non-medical person. (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li agreed that following the second surgery and physical therapy Petitioner was discharged in February 2014. He agreed that Petitioner had had good results from the second surgery as well. He agreed that Petitioner was not only discharged from physical therapy but was also returned to work full duty and discharged from care. He agreed that when Petitioner returned in September 2015, he came back with ongoing pain. He agreed that in all three instances where Petitioner came back and in all three instances where he had surgery, he only ever related one specific incident to him of pulling a pallet and feeling a pop with his knee buckling and falling. (PX1).

On cross examination when asked how the MRI of 2015 was in any way inconsistent with the two prior MRIs, Dr. Li responded that there was a high-grade chondromalacia along the lateral femoral condyle and also a chondral injury along the femoral trochlea aside from the patella tendon rupture and repair. He agreed that there was no new lateral meniscus tear detected. He testified that the tear that was repaired in the third surgery was an extension of the previous tear. When asked where the pain was located in the knee prior to the third surgery, Dr. Li responded that the worst pain was still over the medial aspect of the knee, and that Petitioner also had some pain over the front part of the knee as well. He testified that the first surgery was for such a severe injury in the knee and that Petitioner had pain everywhere in the knee, and that it was impossible to pinpoint pain because it was painful "everywhere." (PX1).

On cross examination, Dr. Li testified that Petitioner had good results from the third and final surgery, and that they were able to successfully return him to work. He agreed that Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement and full duty. When asked what activities would cause the need for the two additional surgeries from the weakening of the first surgery, Dr. Li responded that with the femoral trochlea it would be activities like climbing stairs and activities where the knee bent and extended and that for the lateral lesion it would simply be walking, and that if one turned corners or pivoted, that would make things even worse. He testified that biking would do it if the seat was really low with aggravation of the femoral trochlea lesion. (PX1).

On redirect when asked whether simple walking, climbing stairs or riding a bicycle would likely cause the surgical procedures that he performed absent the initial trauma and surgical procedure, Dr. Li responded in the negative. He testified that normal biking, climbing stairs and walking in a healthy knee with normal kinematics was very unlikely to result in those injuries because the amount of sheer stress was not very much, and the amount of muscle support provided to the knee and shock absorption provided to the knee with good normal muscle support would not subject those structures such as the meniscus and the articular cartilage to the stresses necessary to cause tears. He testified that in a knee that was weakened that did not have good muscle support where the cartilage, meniscus and other structures had to absorb more of the stresses, then it was much more likely. (PX1).

On redirect when asked how the lack of blood supply, kinetics and biomechanical movement of the knee fit together to cause the lateral meniscus tear in the second surgery, Dr. Li responded that because of the weakened muscle and because of the abnormal kinematics parts of the knee were subjected to higher than normal stress doing things like walking, and that the uninjured knee would get less stress than the injured knee. When asked to explain how the left knee chondral injury Grade 4 femoral trochlea and lateral femoral condyle were related to the patella tendon tear, Dr. Li responded that when Petitioner ruptured his patella, he stated that he landed on his patella which overlay the femoral trochlea, and that it caused a force right directly on that area. He testified that in a chondral injury where the patella surface became abnormal, it rubbed against the femoral trochlea and caused abnormal stresses. He testified that it could be seen in the first surgical procedure but that it was not severe enough to cause changes right away, and that it broke away after Petitioner resumed normal activities. (PX1).

On redirect when asked why the tear of the lateral meniscus was not repaired the first time, Dr. Li responded that during the very first surgery Petitioner did not have a lateral meniscus tear. He testified that he did remove the torn portion of the meniscus but that meniscal tears had laminations, and that they did not remove every fragment that had a laminated tear because to do so would be to remove the entire meniscus and the patient would suffer even more. (PX1).

On further cross examination when asked if Petitioner had not fallen directly on the knee and whether that could or would change his opinion, Dr. Li responded that it would because he repaired the patella tendon and that it resulted in the abnormal kinematics of the patella femoral joint. (PX1).

The Letter of Dr. Li dated May 29, 2015 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 2. The letter reflects that Dr. Li opined that the March 1, 2013 injury at work caused a patella tendon rupture leading to the surgery of March 8, 2013 and subsequent therapy, and that it also lead to a weakening of Petitioner's lateral meniscus which lead him to require a second surgery on December 3, 2013. (PX2).

The medical records of OSF Occupational Health were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 3. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen on March 1, 2013, at which time it was noted that he was complaining of pain in the left knee, that he leaned back on a pallet jack while moving a heavy pallet when his left knee popped/buckled and bent inwards, and that he landed with all weight on his left knee. It was noted that Petitioner had tried catching himself, that he had a cut on his left palm, and that his knee felt most comfortable when fully extended. The assessment was noted to be that of left knee pain/swelling. Petitioner was given a knee immobilizer, was given crutches, was given a prescription for Vicodin and was recommended to take over-the-counter Ibuprofen as needed and to return in 7-10 days. Petitioner was also issued work restrictions. (PX3).

Petitioner underwent a CT of the left knee, which was interpreted as revealing soft tissue swelling, fluid and air in the soft tissues of the knee anteriorly and including intraarticular air and fluid; no fracture visualized. The final diagnosis was noted to be that of effusion of lower leg joint and fall from other slipping, tripping or stumbling. Petitioner was discharged to home. (PX4).

The medical records of Dr. Li were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 11. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen on March 4, 2013, at which time it was noted that he was moving a pallet at work on Friday, that he felt a pop in his left knee and that the knee buckled, that he then fell directly onto the patella and had a scrape over it, that he had been unable to bend or extend the knee, that the pain over the patella tendon was worse and that he had no previous knee injury. The diagnosis was noted to be that of a left knee patella tendon rupture. Petitioner was recommended to undergo an MRI and was to follow-up to determine the treatment plan. Petitioner was also dispensed Mobic. At the time of the March 5, 2013 visit, Petitioner was recommended to undergo left arthroscopic knee surgery and patella tendon reconstruction. Petitioner was also dispensed Norco on that date. (PX11).

It was noted that Game Ready Vasopneumatic compression therapy was helping to reduce swelling. Petitioner was dispensed Norco and was recommended to start physical therapy, to continue the CPM machine and Game Ready Vasopneumatic compression therapy, and to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the April 4, 2013 visit it was noted that Petitioner's pain was better than before surgery, that therapy was progressing well, that Petitioner's pain was improving, that the Game Ready Vasopneumatic therapy was helping a lot, and that the CPM machine was helping with range of motion. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and Dendracin, was allowed to return to work in two weeks with restrictions and was recommended to follow-up in four weeks. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on May 2, 2013, at which time it was noted that his pain was improving, that therapy was progressing well, that the Game Ready Vasopneumatic therapy was helping a lot and that his range of motion was much improved but that he was still weak. At the time of the August 12, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had had continual medial-side pain with standing and walking, that his pain was aggravated by activities of daily living and limited the lifestyle desired, and that pain also interfered with sleep and woke him up. It was also noted that Mobic and Dendracin helped reduce the pain. Petitioner was dispensed a two-month supply of Mobic and Dendracin and underwent a corticosteroid injection. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on October 11, 2013, at which time it was noted that he had pain in the patella tendon worse with use, that the corticosteroid injection helped for a week and that both Mobic and Dendracin reduced the pain. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on December 10, 2013, at which time it was noted that he had typical post-operative pain, that the Game Ready Vasopneumatic Cryotherapy was reducing swelling and narcotic use significantly, and that he had redness around the portal incisions. Petitioner was dispensed Keflex and Dendracin, was recommended to continue Game Ready Vasopneumatic compression therapy, was recommended to continue physical therapy and was to follow-up in three weeks. At the time of the December 30, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and Dendracin, that he was to continue Game Ready Vasopneumatic compression therapy, was recommended to continue physical therapy and was to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the January 29, 2014 visit, it was noted that Petitioner's pain was better than before surgery, that he was progressing well with therapy, that his strength was improved and that he still had a significant strength deficit. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic, was recommended to continue physical therapy and was to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the February 26, 2014 visit, it was noted that Petitioner's pain was better than before surgery, that his goals in therapy had been achieved, and that the Mobic and Dendracin were reducing his pain significantly. Petitioner was dispensed a two-month supply of Mobic and Dendracin, was recommended to continue a home exercise program and was to advance activities as tolerated. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on September 9, 2015, at which time it was noted that he stated that he had had increased pain in his left knee for about two months with no known cause and that he reported no new injury but now complained of popping, catching and giving out. The diagnosis was noted to be that of left knee medial meniscus tear. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic, was recommended to undergo an MRI and was to follow-up to determine a treatment plan. At the time of the September 15, 2015 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had had increased pain in the left knee for about two months with no known cause, that he reported no new injury but now complained of popping, catching and giving out, and that the swelling had improved with Meloxicam. The assessment was noted to be that of left knee chondral injury femoral trochlea and lateral femoral chondral. Petitioner was given a Kenalog injection into the medial femoral condyle on that date, was referred to physical therapy and was recommended to follow-up in four weeks. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on October 13, 2015, at which time it was noted that he reported that his knee was about 20% better after the injection but that he still had pain, and that the pain was over the lateral aspect of the knee. The diagnosis was noted to be that of left knee chondral injury femoral trochlea and lateral femoral chondral. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and Lido Pro, was recommended to continue physical therapy and was to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the November 10, 2015 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had been through additional therapy without improvement, that his injection had worn off and that his pain was getting progressively worse. It was noted that Petitioner's pain was worse over the medial aspect and that he had pain anteriorly. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and Dendracin and was given a Kenalog injection. It was noted that Petitioner had failed non-operative treatment and that the plan was for left arthroscopic knee surgery. At the time of the November 23, 2015 visit, it was noted that Petitioner's surgery had been denied but that his pain was too severe to tolerate. Petitioner was again recommended surgery. (PX11).

The records of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on December 9, 2015, at which time it was noted that he had typical post-operative pain, that vasopneumatic compression therapy was helping reduce swelling and pain, and that he was progressing as expected with therapy. The diagnosis was noted to be that of left knee arthroscopy with microfracture of the femoral trochlea and lateral femoral condyle; partial lateral meniscectomy; removal of loose bodies. Petitioner was dispensed Norco, Dendracin and Ultram, and he was recommended to continue physical therapy and to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the January 7, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner's pain was better than before surgery, that he was progressing as expected with therapy, and that vasopneumatic compression therapy was helping reduce swelling and pain. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and was recommended to continue physical therapy and to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the February 4, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his pain was better than before surgery and that he was progressing as expected with therapy but was still weak. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic and was recommended to continue therapy and to follow-up in four weeks. At the time of the March 3, 2016 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had done well with therapy but still needed Mobic to keep his pain under control. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic, was allowed to return to work full duty, was recommended to continue his home exercise program and was recommended to follow-up in four weeks. (PX11).

Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 12. The records reflect that a Discharge Summary was issued on February 24, 2014, at which time it was noted that Petitioner demonstrated no significant objective or functional limitation at that time and that he had returned to full functional mobility. It was noted that Petitioner had met all his goals of physical therapy. At the time of the Initial Evaluation on September 18, 2015, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he had been doing great, that about three weeks ago it (i.e., his left knee) started hurting again and was really swollen, that it was doing a lot of popping and grinding, and that he did not recall an incident where he would have hurt or hit it. It was noted that Petitioner denied falling and that stairs, climbing in and out of the tractor at work and climbing ladders hurt. At the time of the November 4, 2015 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee pain seemed to have gotten worse over the last couple of weeks since he had been standing in one place more often at work, where he worked six days per week. At the time of the February 21, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his left knee was feeling better from the fall. (PX12).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on October 9, 2015, at which time it was noted that he reported that his knee was still bothering him and that he reported the whole knee hurt on that date, and that he got "popping" when he descended stairs. At the time of the October 23, 2015 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he had had to be standing most of the time at work on hard concrete and that it had been very painful to his knee. At the time of the October 30, 2015 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee was still sore and about the same overall, that he felt that he had less pain approximately two weeks ago but now was standing on concrete most of the day which had made it worse again, and that he reported that the swelling was not quite as bad as it had been. At the time of the December 17, 2015 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that he had been feeling some intermittent pain in the back center of his knee with exercises. At the time of the December 23, 2015 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he had some general soreness in the knee on that date and that he had some catching in the knee at times at the top of it. At the time of the January 5, 2016 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he started to experience popping in the knee a couple of days ago on the top of his knee but that there was no pain associated with it, and that he stated that it was more annoying than anything. (PX12).

Additional Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 13. At the time of the Initial Evaluation on March 14, 2013, it was noted that Petitioner was at work and lifting a pallet with a pallet jack and that as he leaned back, he heard and felt a loud pop and his left knee buckled under him. It was noted that Petitioner had undergone surgery on March 8, 2013 and had been referred for physical therapy. At the time of the April 10, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner had made excellent progress since beginning physical therapy and was progressing faster than would be expected. At the time of the May 10, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner's chief complaint was that his knee still gave out and felt weak, that he was unable to go hiking, camping or play sports with his son, and that he was unable to work full duty. At the time of the July 19, 2013 visit, it was noted that Petitioner had made significant progress with physical therapy thus far, that his pain was under control and the swelling had decreased, that his range of motion had improved to within normal limits and that his primary deficit at that time was decreased strength of the involved extremity which limited function, specifically that he was still unable to play sports with his children and climb down stairs easily as he had decreased eccentric control of his quads. It was noted that Petitioner was back to work full regular duty and was doing fine with it. The Discharge Note dated August 9, 2013 noted that Petitioner's chief complaint was that he was still unable to run and that he had not tried hiking. It was noted that Petitioner had made excellent progress with physical therapy, that he was able to perform all activities of daily living and work activities without difficulty, that he was able to jog around the gym and jump on a trampoline without pain but that he felt "funny" as he had not yet performed these types of activities, and that he had been educated in a home exercise program to be performed indefinitely. (PX13).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner underwent an Initial Evaluation on December 6, 2013, at which time it was noted that he was a return patient, that he had had a patellar tendon repair earlier that year, did well, was discharged from physical therapy and returned to work, and then had a meniscus tear that needed surgery. At the time of the January 31, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner's knee was really sore having to be up and down more, and that he reported some insulation fell on him and his neck was really itchy and was his main concern. At the time of the February 4, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner was progressing nicely, that he tolerated walking lunges with no pain, that he was ambulating with no deviations and reported no issues with work, and that he had no pain through or at the end of his session. The Discharge Note dated February 24, 2014 noted that Petitioner's chief complaint was that he just felt "weird" on that date and that he demonstrated no significant objective or functional limitation at that time and had returned to full functional mobility. It was noted that Petitioner was advised in a final home exercise program and that he had met all goals of physical therapy and was discharged. (PX13).

Additional Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 14. At the time of the March 27, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee was doing well, that his pain levels were under control and that he did fine after the last session. At the time of the April 1, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that he did fine after his last therapy session, that he stated that he had a little soreness but stated it was from a busy day yesterday, and that he also stated that he had some mild tightness behind the knee. At the time of the April 5, 2013 physical therapy session, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he saw the physician who felt that he was doing well and could return to work on April 22nd with restrictions of no more than three hours of standing. At the time of the April 12, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he thought his strength had improved since he would walk more normally. At the time of the April 24, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he was doing pretty good on that date as his knee felt good, but that he did feel lack of control at end range of knee extension in standing and walking. At the time of the April 29, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee was doing okay, that it was not 100% but better than two weeks ago, and that his pain was at a 2/10. (PX14).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on May 2, 2013, at which time it was noted that he reported that he just saw the doctor and was told to keep doing what he was doing, and that it looked good but was still weak. At the time of the May 13, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee was sore that morning and that he was not sure why. At the time of the May 17, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee was feeling a lot better that week and that he reported that he had been stretching and performing his home exercise program. At the time of the May 24, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported after feeling the sharp pain at the last session he was quite sore the next day and had difficulty walking correctly. At the time of the May 28, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he worked all weekend and so his knee was sore that morning but that he did wear a brace, and that he barely had time to do his home exercise program as he was so tired when he got done with work but that he tried. At the time of the May 31, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee was feeling really good. (PX14).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on June 4, 2013, at which time it was noted that he reported that his knee was stiff but not painful, that he stated that he did not do much over the weekend as far as stretching, and that he stated that he did fine after the last session and had been doing well overall with strengthening progression. At the time of the June 12, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee swelling continued to be present but that the doctor told him that it was normal at this stage, that the doctor released him to full duty and to continue therapy per therapist discretion, and that the most difficult tasks he would have to do at work was lifting 80# bags and carrying them across a field a range of distances. At the time of the June 14, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported a "pop" at the knee during floor-waist lifts with some burning sensation following, and that he reported he had been feeling this occasionally. (PX14).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on June 24, 2013, at which time it was noted that he reported that his knee had been feeling better but was still sore on the medial knee. At the time of the June 26, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee had been feeling good and had no complaints after the last session, that he stated that he had to do walking in the field on unlevel ground at work after the last session but did fine, and that he reported that his knee actually felt pain-free on that date. At the time of the July 15, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner had stiffness in the knee but only minimal soreness. At the time of the July 26, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his knee was sore from work. At the time of the July 30, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he was feeling better and that his knee was sore after walking around Springfield all day on Saturday, but that he had rested and the soreness went away. At the time of the August 2, 2013 physical therapy session, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he walked a total of 10 miles the day before, so his knee was somewhat sore. (PX14).

The Physical Therapy Notes of Dr. Li reflect that Petitioner was seen on December 12, 2013, at which time it was noted that he described his knee pain as "minimal." At the time of the December 18, 2013 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee was doing better and that he still had some soreness, but that it was mild and that stairs were the most challenging for him. At the time of the January 8, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee was doing good, that he shoveled a little bit on Monday and that his knee tolerated it, and that he was no longer taking pain medications and had not for over three weeks. At the time of the January 15, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he had been working all that week, that he reported that it had been doing well but that he had had to do some kneeling, and that he reported the kneeling had made his knee sore some but overall was doing okay. At the time of the January 24, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his right calf had been cramping up lately and that he rated his knee pain at 2-3/10 but described it as sore and not painful. At the time of the January 29, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner stated that his knee was sore on that date but that he had been going up and down ladders at work that week and that his doctor had recommended three more weeks of therapy and then another follow-up to determine possible discharge. At the time of the February 12, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he was now able to kneel down as long as he was wearing knee pads for cushion. At the time of the February 17, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he had fallen last week at work twice due to ice patches and had been very sore since then. At the time of the February 21, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that his left knee was feeling better from the fall. At the time of the February 19, 2014 physical therapy visit, it was noted that Petitioner reported that he still had a little soreness on his left knee where it hit the ground when he fell on the ice the other day, but other than that had no complaints. (PX14).

Pay Stubs were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 15. The Medical Bills Exhibit was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 16. Additional Pay Stubs were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 17.

The IME Report of Dr. Joseph Monaco dated April 20, 2015 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 1. The report reflects that Petitioner was seen on April 10, 2015 for a Section 12 examination. It was noted that based on Dr. Monaco's review of the medical records and his evaluation, there was no evidence of any pre-existing condition involving the left knee. It was noted that Petitioner indicated that currently he was functioning well and did "tons of walking and hiking," and that he also just completed a trip to Washington, D.C. and New York City where he reported walking about 40 miles. It was noted that Petitioner noted that he could not run or play baseball but that he could jog lightly, and that he further indicated that he could not jump. (RX1).

The report reflects that Dr. Monaco opined that the ruptured left patellar tendon was the result of the work-related injury and not of any other pre-existing condition or activity, and that there was no evidence to indicate that Petitioner's subsequent surgery with arthroscopy for a tear of the lateral meniscus was related to the work-related incident of March 1, 2013. It was noted that review of the medical records indicated that there was no reported incident or injury following the initial injury and subsequent surgery with repair of the patellar tendon on March 8, 2013, and that Petitioner underwent an extensive course of physical therapy. It was noted that review of the therapy records did not reveal any indication of any subsequent incident or injury to Petitioner's left knee and that there was ongoing complaint of soreness, which would be expected following the rupture of the infrapatellar tendon. It was noted that Petitioner did go back to work to regular duty and did notice there was some discomfort and that he had had continued complaints of pain, but that he noted the pain was mostly in the area of the infrapatellar tendon, which would be completely expected in the post-operative period. It was noted that the only other complaint noted was that of "medial knee pain." It was noted that nowhere in the medical records did Petitioner indicate any complaints of pain in the anterolateral aspect of the left knee and that he had had a negative examination with McMurray's testing negative pre-operatively, that at the time of the initial MRI there was a normal-appearing lateral meniscus, that at the time of the initial surgery on March 8, 2013 there was a normal-appearing lateral meniscus, and that there was no indication of an occupational or non-occupational injury or incident in the post-operative period consistent with tearing of the lateral meniscus. (RX1).

The report reflects that Dr. Monaco opined that Petitioner had mild complaints of constant aching in the left knee which did not impair his functional activity other than as noted with certain activities such as playing baseball and running, and that he was able to hike and walk and coached baseball and football. It was noted that when seen for evaluation Petitioner had an essentially normal examination of his left knee other than decreased sensation in an area over the anterior aspect of his knee lateral to the medial parapatellar scar, and that he also indicated that he recently had been using kneepads which had eliminated any difficulty or discomfort he was having when kneeling. The report further reflects that Dr. Li had cited a lack of circulation as a result of the original surgery as the cause of the tear of the lateral meniscus, and that Dr. Monaco was unable to find any medical evidence to support that theory. It was noted that Dr. Monaco opined that there were no clinical signs of a tear of the lateral meniscus, no evidence of any joint line tenderness or positive McMurray test, that subjectively the complaints were of pain in the patellar tendon as would be expected following repair of the ruptured patellar tendon, and that any other complaints involved the medial aspect of the knee, unrelated to any lateral compartment abnormalities. (RX1).

The report reflects that Dr. Monaco opined that Petitioner had very minor current subjective complaints with a normal physical examination, that it was his opinion that the current complaints were causally related to the initial injury of March 1, 2013 with rupture of the patellar tendon and that on exam, there were no objective signs of any further pathology involving the left knee other than decreased sensation lateral to the medial parapatellar scar, and that the complaint would be causally related to the work-related incident and subsequent surgery. It was noted that Dr. Monaco opined that Petitioner had reached maximum medical improvement and was able to work without restrictions in regard to the work-related incident of March 1, 2013, and that no further medical treatment was reasonable, necessary or indicated in reference to the March 1, 2013 work injury. (RX1).

The report reflects that Dr. Monaco further opined that the subsequent left knee arthroscopic surgery performed in December 2013 was unrelated to the work-related incident of March 1, 2013 and that based on his review of the medical records, he was unclear of the surgical indication other than the MRI finding of a small vertical tear of the lateral meniscus. It was noted that at the time of the surgery Petitioner was having problems mostly with pain over the patellar tendon which would be expected following the repair in March 2013, and that the only other complaints noted were of medial knee pain without any clinical signs of meniscus tear medially or laterally on examination noted in the medical records. It was noted that Dr. Monaco was unable to find any evidence to support Dr. Li's theory that the tear of the meniscus was related to the initial injury, that at the time of the initial injury the MRI showed no evidence of any tear of the lateral meniscus, that the operative note noted that there was an intact lateral femoral condyle, lateral tibial plateau and lateral meniscus, that there was no further injury subsequent to the surgery done in March of 2013, and that there were no clinical symptoms present prior to the December 2013 surgery to indicate a clinically-significant meniscal injury. (RX1).

The transcript of the deposition of Dr. Monaco dated December 8, 2016 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 2. Dr. Monaco testified that he is an orthopedic surgeon and that he has been board-certified in orthopedic surgery since 1978. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that he took a history from Petitioner as part of the IME that was performed and that it confirmed the history that had been found in the medical records of an injury at work where he was pushing a pallet when he backed up and his left knee gave out, and that he felt and heard a pop. He testified that this was the only mechanism of injury that Petitioner provided to him in his history. He testified that Petitioner indicated that he underwent surgery on March 8, 2013 and went through a course of physical therapy at Dr. Li's office which he completed in October of 2013, and that he returned to work full duty in June of 2013. He testified that in October 2013 Petitioner went back to see Dr. Li because the knee was hurting and swelling, and that a tear of the meniscus was found and surgically repaired by Dr. Li on December 3, 2013. He testified that Petitioner reported that he was released for full duty work without restrictions in April 2014, and that he indicated he had had no problems since. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that Petitioner indicated to him that since he had returned to work he had been very active on his job and had done tons of walking and hiking, that two weeks prior to being examined he went on a four-day trip to Washington, D.C. and New York City with his family where he walked about 40 miles, that he indicated he currently could jog lightly but could not really jump, and that he also indicated that he just needed to be aware and cautious about walking in the field so that he did not step into a hole. He testified that Petitioner noted that there was an area of numbness which was lateral to his incision, that he was also complaining of a sore, achy feeling which was there almost constantly that he said felt like a stiffness, that he would use ice and take Naproxen periodically that seemed to help, and that he noticed sometimes the symptoms were worse with weather changes such as storms. He testified that Petitioner also indicated that he had some trouble squatting and kneeling although since he started using kneepads kneeling had been okay, that on occasion there was a popping sensation that caused a transient burning feeling, and that the knee on occasion gave way while walking, but that he had not actually fallen to the ground. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that it was his opinion that as a result of the work-related incident of March 1, 2013, Petitioner incurred a rupture of his patellar tendon. He testified that it was his opinion that there was no evidence to indicate Petitioner's subsequent surgery with arthroscopy for the tear of the lateral meniscus was related to the work-related incident of March 1, 2013. He testified that according to the operative report, the diagnostic arthroscopy revealed no evidence of any pathology involving the medial or lateral meniscus, the medial or lateral tibiofemoral condyle or tibiofemoral compartments which included the tibial plateau and the femoral condyles, and that there was some mild chondromalacia of the patella and a normal-appearing trochlea. He testified that Petitioner had ongoing complaints which he felt were due to the patellar tendon injury and repair and that Dr. Li recommended an MRI, which looked unremarkable other than showing the post-operative changes of the patellar tendon and what looked like a vertical tear which reached the surface of the inferior surface of the lateral meniscus anteriorly. He testified that to him this was clinically insignificant as there had never been in the records any complaints of pain over the lateral meniscus area, and that the complaints were almost completely restricted to the patellar tendon with one mention of medial knee pain. He testified that there was nothing in the medical records to suggest that there had been any new injury to the knee that could explain the fact that there was no lateral meniscus injury seen on the first MRI, that there was no lateral meniscus injury seen at the time of surgery, that the lateral meniscus injury seen on the second MRI was minor in nature and not consistent with the clinical complaints, and there was no history of any further incident or trauma that would have potentially caused a meniscal tear. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that even if there was some merit to the idea that doing a patellar tendon repair could cause some kind of vascular damage to the knee it would not cause any damage to the circulation to the lateral meniscus in areas where it already had no circulation, which was the area where the tendon was found in the "white zone." When asked whether, absent some type of disruption of the blood circulation, it was possible that there could just be a simple weakening of the knee from the first surgery to cause the need for the second surgery, Dr. Monaco responded in the negative and further testified that there was no medical evidence to support that the normal course of treatment such as physical therapy and ambulation was going to cause tearing of the meniscus. He testified that the first surgery involved a rupture of the patellar tendon appropriately treated with repair, that at the time of that surgery there was no evidence of any other damage inside the knee joint, specifically no injury to the lateral meniscus, that subsequently there were further complaints of pain leading to another MRI which showed signal changes consistent with a small vertical tear of the anterior portion of the lateral meniscus that was not seen at the time of the previous surgery or at the time of the previous MRI, and that there was no history in the medical records to indicate any connection between that finding and Petitioner's original injury. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that the first surgery was consistent with the pre-operative evaluation, including clinical evaluation as well as MRI, in regard to the diagnosis and the treatment did not involve at all any treatment of the medial or lateral compartments, specifically no medical lateral meniscal pathology or treatment was found or treatment given. He testified that with the second surgery it was noted at the time of the arthroscopy that that there was known to be some scar tissue around the patellar tendon which Dr. Li debrided, but that the main procedure that he performed was a partial lateral meniscectomy. He testified that the third procedure was completely intraarticular, that there was nothing to do with the patellar tendon injury which was the original injury, and that there were noted to be findings not consistent with the initial arthroscopy, including Grade 4 injury to the articular cartilage of the trochlea which was noted to be normal on the two previous surgeries, there was Grade 4 damage with loss of articular cartilage down to the bone or the lateral femoral condyle not present at either of the previous two surgeries, and that there were chondral loose bodies found which were not present in either of the prior two surgeries. (RX2).

Dr. Monaco testified that his review of the third surgery did not change his opinion at all on whether the treatment or restrictions for any condition other than the patella treatment were related to work at all. He testified that his opinion remained that the injury sustained by Petitioner on March 1, 2013 was clear and consistent with the clinical picture and the subsequent findings which was a rupture of the patellar tendon, that there was never any history of complaints involving the lateral meniscus, that there were never any findings of injury to the lateral meniscus at the time of the initial MRI and subsequent surgery, and the fact that there were further changes in the knee on the third surgery had nothing to do with the original injury to the patellar tendon. (RX2).

When asked whether he had formulated any opinions as to whether Petitioner could return to work or what his work restrictions at the time, Dr. Monaco responded that it was his opinion that Petitioner had reached maximum medical improvement and was able to work without restrictions regarding the work-related incident of March 1, 2013. He testified that he also opined that no further treatment was necessary. (RX2).

On cross examination, Dr. Monaco agreed that on the first procedure on March 8, 2013 Dr. Li performed a chondroplasty of the patella, and further testified that on the second procedure he did a debridement to remove scar tissue around the patella rupture. When asked whether that would be related to the first surgery, Dr. Monaco responded that one would never consider doing arthroscopic surgery to remove scar tissue just for itself. (RX2).

On cross examination when asked if someone had decreased range of motion in the knee and atrophy in the quad and whether that would suggest that they were having some kind of deficit or problems with the knee, Dr. Monaco responded that it would be normal to find that after having an injury of the patellar tendon and surgery. He testified that if it never got any better, it would be a deficit. He agreed that in 2015 Petitioner had swelling and decreased range of motion. When asked whether in 2013 and 2014 Petitioner had swelling, decreased range of motion and atrophy, Dr. Monaco responded that it was intermittent. (RX2).

On redirect, Dr. Monaco testified that at the time of the first surgery Dr. Li noted Grade 2 chondromalacia of the patellar facet and that the remainder of the articular cartilage was normal. He testified that in the second operation the findings by Dr. Li were similar with no chondromalacia of the medial or lateral tibia femoral compartments, including the femoral condyle and tibial plateau, and no chondromalacia of the trochlea and Grade 2 chondromalacia of the patellar. He testified that in the third operation Dr. Li indicated that the patellar cartilage looked okay, that there was a new area of damage involving the trochlea which was Grade 4, and that there was also a Grade 4 finding on the lateral femoral condyle with loss of articular cartilage on the bone. He testified that the areas of significant chondral injury were completely normal at the time of the first two surgeries but were now abnormal in a significant way, and that the chondromalacia of the patella, which was present the first two, was not really an issue. (RX2).

The November 4, 2013 Letter of Dr. Li was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 3. When asked if the recent findings on the MRI and the need for the recommended left arthroscopic knee surgery was a direct result of the work-related condition for which he had been treating Petitioner, Dr. Li responded that the anterior horn lateral meniscus tear most likely resulted from the disruption of blood supply as a result of the patellar tendon rupture and subsequent surgery. (RX3).

The Payment Ledgers were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 4. The Wage Statement was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 5.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

With respect to disputed issue (C) pertaining to the issue of accident, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner did sustain an accident that arose out of and in the course of employment with Respondent on March 1, 2013. The Arbitrator further finds that such work-related accident occurred to Petitioner's left patellar tendon on that date, as the initial medical records and exhibits taken as a whole document that there was no meniscal injury sustained in the accident of March 1, 2013. Furthermore, the Arbitrator finds that the evidence reveals that there were no other aggravations alleged to have worsened the condition, nor any other Applications for Adjustment of Claim filed related thereto, and that Petitioner further testified there were no other work-related incidents or intervening events involving the left knee.

With respect to disputed issue (F) pertaining to the issue of causation, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has met his burden of proving that his left patellar tendon injury is causally related to the accident of March 1, 2013, but that Petitioner has not met his burden of proving that his current condition of ill-being in the left knee is causally related to the accident of March 1, 2013.

At the outset, the Arbitrator notes that both Dr. Li and Dr. Monaco agreed that Petitioner's first knee surgery was causally related to the accident of March 1, 2013. (PX1; RX2). The causation dispute in the case, then, effectively surrounds the purported causal connection between Petitioner's second and third surgeries and the underlying work accident at issue.

Having considered and reviewed the entirety of the medical evidence, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's second and third surgeries were not natural consequences that flowed from the initial injury that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment with Respondent on March 1, 2013, but rather that the second and third surgeries were entirely new and separate injuries - albeit to the same body part - but in separate compartments of the knee, i.e., the patella versus the meniscus. That said, the Arbitrator finds that the chain of causation was broken following Petitioner's discharge from post-operative physical therapy on August 9, 2013.

In support of this finding, the Arbitrator finds to be significant the fact that Petitioner was able to work full duty and was discharged from physical therapy following the first surgery, the fact that there was a clear change in pathology following the first MRI and surgery as compared to the subsequent MRIs and surgeries, and the inconsistences between Dr. Li's rationale for the second surgery as indicated in the November 4, 2013 letter to Corvel as compared to the rationale as indicated in the narrative report authored on May 29, 2015. (PX11; PX5; PX7; RX3; PX2). As a result of the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds to be more persuasive the opinions of Dr. Monaco rather than those proffered by Dr. Li in this matter.

Dr. Monaco testified that it was his opinion that as a result of the work-related incident of March 1, 2013, Petitioner incurred a rupture of his patellar tendon. Dr. Monaco testified that it was his opinion that there was no evidence to indicate Petitioner's subsequent surgery with arthroscopy for the tear of the lateral meniscus was related to the work-related incident of March 1, 2013 and that, according to the operative report, the diagnostic arthroscopy revealed no evidence of any pathology involving the medial or lateral meniscus, the medial or lateral tibiofemoral condyle or tibiofemoral compartments which included the tibial plateau and the femoral condyles, and that there was some mild chondromalacia of the patella and a normal-appearing trochlea. Dr. Monaco testified that Petitioner had ongoing complaints which he felt were due to the patellar tendon injury and repair and that Dr. Li recommended an MRI, which looked unremarkable other than showing the post-operative changes of the patellar tendon and what looked like a vertical tear which reached the surface of the inferior surface of the lateral meniscus anteriorly. Dr. Monaco testified that to him this was clinically insignificant as there had never been in the records any complaints of pain over the lateral meniscus area, and that the complaints were almost completely restricted to the patellar tendon with one mention of medial knee pain. Dr. Monaco further testified that there was nothing in the medical records to suggest that there had been any new injury to the knee that could explain the fact that there was no lateral meniscus injury seen on the first MRI, that there was no lateral meniscus injury seen at the time of surgery, that the lateral meniscus injury seen on the second MRI was minor in nature and not consistent with the clinical complaints, and there was no history of any further incident or trauma that would have potentially caused a meniscal tear. Dr. Monaco also testified that his review of the third surgery did not change his opinion at all on whether the treatment or restrictions for any condition other than the patella treatment were related to work at all, that his opinion remained that the injury sustained by Petitioner on March 1, 2013 was clear and consistent with the clinical picture and the subsequent findings which was a rupture of the patellar tendon, that there was never any history of complaints involving the lateral meniscus, that there were never any findings of injury to the lateral meniscus at the time of the initial MRI and subsequent surgery, and the fact that there were further changes in the knee on the third surgery had nothing to do with the original injury to the patellar tendon. (RX2).

Based upon the evidence in its entirety, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has met his burden of proving that his left patellar tendon injury is causally related to the accident of March 1, 2013, but that Petitioner has not met his burden of proving that his current condition of ill-being in the left knee is causally related to the accident of March 1, 2013. Related thereto, the Arbitrator further finds that Petitioner attained maximum medical improvement from the left patellar tendon injury as of his discharge from post-operative physical therapy on August 9, 2013, and that Petitioner's second and third surgeries were not natural consequences that flowed from the initial injury that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment with Respondent on March 1, 2013, but rather that the second and third surgeries were entirely new and separate injuries - albeit to the same body part - but in separate compartments of the knee, i.e., the patella versus the meniscus.

With respect to disputed issue (G) pertaining to the issue of Petitioner's earnings, having considered and reviewed the entirety of the testimony and documentation entered into evidence on the issue, the Arbitrator finds that in the year preceding the injury, Petitioner earned $25,503.40 and that the average weekly wage, calculated pursuant to Section 10 of the Act, was that of $490.45. Related thereto, the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner did not testify as to the existence of any mandatory overtime.

With respect to disputed issue (J) pertaining to necessary medical services, in light of the Arbitrator's aforementioned conclusions, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's care and treatment of the left patellar tendon injury was reasonable, necessary and causally related to his work accident of March 1, 2013. As a result, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent shall pay all reasonable and necessary medical services for medical services rendered up to and including August 9, 2013 as set forth in Petitioner's Exhibit 16, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule. Respondent shall be given a credit for all medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

With respect to disputed issue (K) pertaining to the issue of temporary total disability benefits, the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner seeks the recovery of additional temporary total disability benefits for the timeframe of December 2, 2015 through March 3, 2016, which pertains to the timeframe related to Petitioner's third surgery. (AX1). In light of the Arbitrator's findings as to the issue of causation, Petitioner's request for the recovery of such additional temporary total disability benefits is hereby denied. Respondent shall be given a credit of $4,680.26 for temporary total disability benefits already paid, which the Arbitrator notes includes an overpayment of temporary total disability benefits following the second surgery from December 3, 2013 to January 12, 2014.

With respect to disputed issue (L) pertaining to the nature and extent of Petitioner's injury, and consistent with 820 ILCS 305/8.1b, permanent partial disability shall be established using the following criteria: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a) of Section 8.1b of the Act; (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b. No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. Id.

With respect to Subsection (i) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that neither party submitted an AMA rating. The Arbitrator places no weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (ii) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner testified that he continues to work for Respondent and is performing the same job tasks as prior to the March 1, 2013 accident. The Arbitrator places greater weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (iii) of Section 8.1b(b), Petitioner was 38 years old on his date of accident. Given the age of Petitioner and the fact that his treating physician has placed him under no restrictions, the Arbitrator places lesser weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (iv) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that, following his work injury, Petitioner returned to work for Respondent in a full duty capacity. As there was no evidence of reduced earning capacity contained in the record, the Arbitrator places lesser weight on this factor when making the permanency determination.

With respect to Subsection (v) of Section 8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner testified that he still has some issues with his left knee, that it feels like his kneecap shifts occasionally and that he has to push it back. Petitioner testified that he still has weakness and that when he gets in a car, he occasionally has to lower himself while getting in using the frame of the car for assistance. Petitioner further testified that he feels that his knee buckles from time to time. At the time of the March 3, 2016 visit with Dr. Li, it was noted that Petitioner had done well with therapy but still needed Mobic to keep his pain under control. Petitioner was dispensed Mobic, was allowed to return to work full duty, was recommended to continue his home exercise program and was recommended to follow-up in four weeks. (PX11). The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner's evidence of disability at the time of arbitration, namely his continued complaints and limitations, were somewhat corroborated by his treating records at the conclusion of his treatment with Dr. Li. The Arbitrator accordingly places lesser weight on this factor in determining permanency.

The Arbitrator notes that the determination of permanent partial disability benefits is not simply a calculation, but an evaluation of all of the factors as stated in the Act in which consideration is not given to any single factor as the sole determinant. Based on the above factors and the record in its entirety, the Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 20% loss of use of the left leg under Section 8(e) of the Act.

With respect to disputed issue (N) pertaining to the issue of credit for Respondent, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent is entitled to a credit of $4,680.26 for temporary total disability benefits already paid, which the Arbitrator notes includes an overpayment of temporary total disability benefits following the second surgery from December 3, 2013 to January 12, 2014; that Respondent is entitled to a credit in the amount of $68,830.16 in medical payments made on Petitioner's behalf; and that Respondent is further entitled to a credit in the amount of $65,382.36 in medical bills through its group medical plan for which credit may be allowed under Section 8(j) of the Act.

No. 14 INC 69,

Stefan N. Koev, individually and as owner and d/b/a Koev Moving,
Respondent.

20IWCC0017

DECISION AND OPINION RE: INSURANCE NON-COMPLIANCE

Petitioner Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission brings this action by and through the Office of the Illinois Attorney General against the above-captioned Respondent. Petitioner alleges a violation of section 4(a) of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act (the Act) for Respondent's failure to procure mandatory worker's compensation insurance. Proper and timely notice was given to all parties.

Petitioner alleges that Respondent knowingly and willfully lacked workers' compensation insurance for a total of 898 days between May 31, 2012 and November 14, 2014. A hearing was held before Commissioner Barbara N. Flores in Chicago, Illinois, on October 8, 2019. Petitioner appeared and presented the testimony of Investigator Antonio Smith. Respondent, Stefan N. Koev, failed to appear through counsel or pro se.

The Commission sought a fine under the Act of $429,000 for the 898 days Mr. Koev did business individually and as owner of Koev Moving and allegedly failed to provide coverage for his employees, plus $24,766.57 which the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund (IWBF) paid to Respondent's injured worker, for a total of $473,766.57.

The Commission, after considering the record in its entirety and being advised of the applicable law, finds that Respondent Stefan Koev did business individually and as owner of Koev Moving, and knowingly and willingly violated section 4(a) of the Act during the period in question. As a result, Respondent shall be held liable for non-compliance with the Act and shall pay a penalty in accordance with section 4(d) of the Act. The Commission hereby assesses the penalty of $400.00 per day for 898 days ($359,200.00), plus $24,766.57 for a total of $383,966.57.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Commission's records show that the IWBF paid $24,766.57 to Respondent's injured worker, Charles Bauer, pursuant to the December 30, 2013 decision in claim 12 WC 33444. The decision in that claim found Respondent did not carry workers' compensation insurance on July 16, 2012, the date of Bauer's injury.

Investigator Smith testified he investigated Koev Moving. He stated that he believed Koev Moving was required to carry insurance under section 3 of the Act because it used electronic or gasoline powered equipment as a moving company.

On May 26, 2015, Investigator Smith sent Respondent a Notice of Insurance Compliance Hearing. The notice alleged Respondent was in non-compliance with the mandatory insurance coverage provisions of the Act during the period from July 20, 2005 to March 19, 2014, or during periods in business as applicable. The hearing was set for July 7, 2015. Investigator Smith received no response from Koev Moving.

Investigator Smith obtained records from the Illinois Secretary of State indicating the business was incorporated on May 31, 2012 and dissolved on November 14, 2014. The owners of the business were Koev Moving, LLC and Stefan Koev, individually. The records also indicate Koev was the sole member of the LLC.

Investigator Smith testified he conducted additional steps in his investigation of Respondent. He checked three different addresses with the Commission's Office of Self-Insurance and learned that Koev Moving was not self-insured. He submitted the three addresses to the National Council on Compensation Insurance (NCCI) and received signed certifications from an NCCI Proof of Coverage Analyst which indicated that Respondent was without workers' compensation insurance from July 20, 2005 to September 16, 2019. Records from the Illinois Department of Revenue indicated that Respondent filed no quarterly withholding tax returns from March 2009 through March 2014. Based on his investigation, Investigator Smith opined that Respondent did not carry workers' compensation insurance during the time requested.

Petitioner also submitted a number of exhibits in support of its case. Petitioner's Exhibit 1 was a copy of the Notice of Insurance Compliance Finding of Default and Scheduled Hearing on the Merits for October 8, 2018. The notice refers to an Order of Default signed by Commissioner Flores on August 6, 2019. An unsigned copy of the order was attached to the exhibit.

Petitioner's Exhibits 2 and 3 were comprised of what Investigator Smith testified were true and accurate copies of the records he obtained from the Illinois Secretary of State. Petitioner's Exhibit 4 was a copy of the Notice of Insurance Compliance Hearing for July 7, 2015. Petitioner's Exhibit 5 was the Decision of the Arbitrator filed on December 30, 2013 regarding Bauer's claim against Respondent and the IWBF. Petitioner's Exhibit 6 contained the certifications provided by the Commission's Office of Self-Insurance. Petitioner's Exhibit 7 contained the certifications provided by the NCCI.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to section 3 of the Act, certain employers and their employees are automatically subject to the provisions of the Act if they engage in specific businesses, including "any business or enterprise in which electric, gasoline or other power driven equipment is used in the operation thereof." 820 ILCS 305/3(15) (West 2010).

The Commission finds that, based on the work performed by Koev Moving as disclosed in the unrebutted testimony of Investigator Smith, Respondent automatically falls under the provisions of section 3 of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act and is required to carry workers' compensation insurance.

Regarding the issue of penalties, section 4(d) of the Act states in part:

> "Upon a finding by the Commission, after reasonable notice and hearing, of the knowing and willful failure or refusal of an employer to comply with any of the provisions of paragraph (a) of this Section or the failure or refusal to comply with any order of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission pursuant to paragraph (c) of this Section disqualifying him or her to operate as a self insurer and requiring him or her to insure his or her liability, the Commission may assess a civil penalty of up to $500 per day for each day of such failure or refusal after the effective date of this amendatory Act of 1989. The minimum penalty under this Section shall be the sum of $10,000. Each day of such failure or refusal shall constitute a separate offense." 820 ILCS 305/4(d) (West 2010).

Here, the records obtained from the Illinois Secretary of State establish that Mr. Koev was the owner of Koev Moving on May 31, 2012, signed the forms for Koev Moving's annual report on April 30, 2013, and remained the sole member of the LLC when it was involuntarily dissolved on November 14, 2014. The certifications from NCCI show that Respondent was without workers' compensation insurance from July 20, 2005 to September 16, 2019.

The Commission finds that Respondent is liable for a penalty for failure to comply with section 4(a) of the Act. Accordingly, the Commission turns to consider the amount of the penalty to be assessed. The Commission considers a number of factors in determining the amount of penalties to assess against an employer for such failure: "1) the length of time in which the employer had been violating the Act; 2) the number of settled/pending workers' compensation claims against the employer; 3) whether the employer had been made aware of his conduct in the past; 4) the number of employees working for the employer; 5) the employer's ability to secure and pay for future (or recently obtained) workers' compensation insurance premiums; 6) whether the employer has shown any mitigating circumstances, such as a willingness to cooperate, comply and settle; and 7) the ability of the company to pay the assessed penalty." Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n v. EJC Engineering and Construction, 98 INC 181.

In this case, the Commission finds that the length of time in which the Respondent had been violating the Act in failing to obtain worker's compensation insurance was significant. The Respondent failed to have insurance for 898 days. However, the Commission has before it only one underlying workers' compensation claim. Petitioner presented no evidence that Respondent was made aware of his conduct in the past. The Decision of the Arbitrator refers only to the claimant and one co-worker. The Commission does not find there are mitigating factors, as Mr. Koev failed to appear, let alone demonstrate a willingness to cooperate, comply and settle. There is also no evidence regarding Respondent's ability to secure and pay for future (or recently obtained) workers' compensation insurance premiums, or to pay for the assessed penalty.

The Commission finds that Petitioner has met its burden of proving that Respondent was operating a business in Illinois, and was properly served with notice, was legally required to maintain workers' compensation insurance, but conducted business for 898 days without workers' compensation insurance. The Commission also finds that Petitioner proved that such violation was willful given that Mr. Koev was warned previously that his failure to appear would result in a finding of knowing and willful non-compliance. Accordingly, the Commission finds that Respondent is liable for a penalty for failure to comply with section 4(a) of the Act. The Commission hereby assesses against Respondent a total fine of $383,966.57, representing the period of 898 days that Respondent was without workers' compensation insurance coverage ($359,200.00), plus the $24,766.57 paid by the IWBF.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Stefan N. Koev, individually and as owner of Koev Moving, pay to the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission the sum of $383,966.57, as provided in section 4(d) of the Act.

Pursuant to Commission Rule 9100.90, once the Commission assesses a penalty against an employer in accordance with section 4(d) of the Act, payment shall be made according to the following procedure: 1) payment of the penalty shall be made by certified check or money order made payable to the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission; 2) payment shall be mailed or presented within 30 days after the final Order of the Commission or the order of the court on review after final adjudication to:

Workers Compensation Commission,
Insurance Compliance Division

Suite 8-328

3) or as otherwise directed by www.iwcc.il.gov.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $75,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in the Circuit Court.

Respondent.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review under §§19(b) and 8(a) having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, medical expenses, prospective medical care, temporary disability benefits, penalties or fees, and chain of referrals, and being advised of the facts and law, affirms and modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Commission, 78 Ill. 2d 327 (1980).

I. Evidentiary Issues

In this case, Respondent objected to the admission of Petitioner's §19(b)/8(a) petition as untimely filed. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator in overruling this objection to the extent that the original version of the petition was timely filed. However, the Commission sustains Respondent's objection to the admission of Petitioner's subsequent petition for penalties and fees, which was initially included in an amended petition and untimely. Accordingly, the Arbitrator's denial of penalties and fees is rendered moot.

50 ::CC0018

Respondent also objected on hearsay grounds to the admission of Dr. Wingate's notes dated August 17, 2018 and Dr. Koutsky's notes dated November 6, 2018. Both sets of notes were included in Petitioner's Exhibit 5. Respondent argues these notes were prepared for use in litigation and therefore not admissible under §16 of the Act.

The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's decision to overrule this objection. Although Dr. Wingate's notes referred to Dr. Bernstein's IME report, when read in their entirety and in context of the chronology of Petitioner's treatment, the Commission concludes that these notes were prepared in the course of treatment and not for use in litigation. Thus, Dr. Wingate's notes were admissible pursuant to §16 of the Act. Similarly, Dr. Koutsky's surgical recommendation was based on the diagnostic records, physical examination and subjective complaints of Petitioner and not solely for use in litigation as Respondent asserts. Moreover, the Commission concludes Dr. Koutsky's notes were not created solely to cure defects that would exist if Respondent's objection to Dr. Wingate's notes had been sustained. Accordingly, Dr. Koutsky's notes also were admissible pursuant to §16 of the Act.

II. The Merits

The Commission further affirms the rulings of the Arbitrator on the merits of Petitioner's claims of accident, causal connection, medical expenses, prospective medical care, temporary disability benefits, and chain of referrals. The Commission adds that it places greater weight on the opinions of Dr. Koutsky than those of Dr. Bernstein. It is the function of the Commission to resolve conflicts in medical testimony; greater weight may be attached to the opinion of the treating physician. See ARA Services, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 226 Ill. App. 3d 225, 232 (1992) (citing International Vermiculite Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 77 Ill. 2d 1, 4 (1979)).

In this case, as noted above and in the Arbitrator's decision, the opinions and recommendations of Petitioner's treating physicians were clearly supported by objective findings and Petitioner's medical records as a whole. Even Dr. Bernstein noted Petitioner's history of accident and indicated that Petitioner may have suffered an aggravation of a preexisting degenerative condition.

Excepting the modifications stated above, the Decision of the Arbitrator is affirmed and adopted in all other respects.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed February 22, 2019, is hereby affirmed and adopted with the modifications noted above.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $52,400.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS:

Petitioner testified that as of November 30, 2017, he had been working for Respondent for approximately 2 ½ months and was assigned to work at a client of Respondent, DHL Supply Chain, in the position of an inventory specialist/forklift driver. Petitioner testified that he was tasked with locating inventory material that could not be found throughout the warehouse, driving a forklift to take incoming materials from the receiving dock to racked space or to their locations. Petitioner provided that in essence, he would bring materials into the warehouse, rack it and find lost inventory. Petitioner explained that while racking (putting it away), he had to manually lift the materials. Petitioner testified that November 30, 2017 was a particularly busy day. The type of material that came in that particular day included "a lot of iron parts, a lot of motors, actuators, a lot of heavy equipment." Petitioner testified that he was tasked with racking drill bits. He had to lift the drill bits, bend underneath racks and transfer the materials into three or four-foot crates. Petitioner provided that the bending placed him in awkward positions and the materials could weigh between 15 to 20 pounds. Petitioner testified that while performing this function, he began to experience lower back pain. Petitioner stated, "it was really taxing on my back; and toward the end of the night, I felt it got to be excruciating." Petitioner testified that he was in a lot of pain and decided that he should let someone know that he was hurt. Petitioner indicated that since his immediate supervisor had already left for the day, he talked to the lead worker who informed him to go to the Shipping Department and tell Ricky who was the highest-ranking manager that evening. Petitioner stated that Ricky instructed him to write out an injury statement on a blank sheet of paper and sign it. Thereafter, "he gave me the okay to go ahead and clock out." Petitioner testified that he went home, soaked his back with Epsom Salt, and took a couple pain pills.

Petitioner testified that he returned to work the following day, December 1, 2017. Petitioner stated that he did not do much and stayed on the forklift and lifted whatever that could be lifted by the forklift. Petitioner also testified that he informed his immediate supervisor, at the beginning of his shift, that "...yesterday evening was kind of taxing. I hurt myself, so I'm going to be taking it easy today." Petitioner testified that his supervisor responded "okay, just keep me posted." Petitioner testified that he was not asked to fill out any official paperwork nor was he offered any medical attention.

Petitioner testified that after working his full regular shift on December 1, 2017, he was asked to turn-in his badge and key card. Petitioner testified that in the ensuing days, he attempted to contact Respondent to inquire about the status of his work assignment at DHL Supply Chain to which he received no response. Petitioner testified that thereafter on December 7, 2017, he received a telephone call from a representative of Respondent who advised him of his termination from DHL Supply Chain.

Petitioner testified that he did not seek immediate medical attention until he saw Dr. Sajjad Murtaza at Illinois Orthopedic Network (ION) on December 7, 2017. Petitioner testified that between November 30 and December 7, 2017, he attempted soaking, stretching, and taking ibuprofen. He indicated the pain would not abate. Records submitted show Petitioner presented to Dr. Murtaza and reported that he developed low back pain with radiating pain to the right lower extremity while doing heavy lifting at work. Dr. Murtaza noted that his clinic had treated Petitioner for a low back injury two years prior for which Petitioner underwent two epidural steroid injections. The doctor noted that Petitioner "...had no___ after that." Upon physical examination, Petitioner had a mildly antalgic gait; 40 degrees of flexion, 10 degrees of extension, 20 degrees of right and left lateral bending. He had negative straight leg raises bilaterally but the doctor noted Petitioner 45 plantar and dorsiflexion weakness. Dr. Murtaza recommended a lumbar spine MRI, physical therapy, and prescribed Naproxen and Flexeril refills. Petitioner was also kept off work. (PX 5)

The MRI was completed on December 12, 2017. The study demonstrated a diffuse disk bulge and large right paracentral/lateral-recess extrusion measuring 8-9 mm thick and extruded 17 mm cranially at L4-5. There was moderate to severe foraminal narrowing, mild to moderate on the left. The spinal canal was mildly narrowed. The impression was right sided herniation L4-5 with underlying bulge narrowing the foramina right worse than left. (PX 5)

Records submitted show Petitioner then sought treatment with Dr. Bialon-Wnek at Bone & Joint Clinic on December 13, 2017. At that time, Dr. Bialin-Wnek wrote, "[Petitioner] was involved in a work-related incident on Thursday, November 30, 2017. At the time of the incident, Mr. Edwards was working for Randstad. Mr. Edwards works as a forklift operator and was moving heavy load from one destination to another. Once the item got to the other destination it is his job to lift and adjust the product to place on shelves. After doing this all shift he began to feel a pain in his back which radiated down the right leg." Petitioner reported that he immediately reported the incident to his operations supervisor who did not send him to a doctor. According to the doctor, Petitioner also reported that he was hurt in the same area previously. Dr. Bialon-Wnek performed an examination observing moderate inflammation and moderate trigger points in the lower back. Lumbar flexion measured 40 degrees with pain, extension was at 10 degrees with pain, lateral flexion was at 20 degrees with pain and 20 degrees with pain during right lateral flexion. Chiropractic treatment was recommended for diagnoses of low back pain and right leg pain. (PX 6)

Petitioner commenced the recommended therapy sessions on December 14, 2017. By January 10, 2018, he had completed eleven sessions. Dr. Bialon-Wnek noted that although Petitioner was responding well to his care, he continued with symptoms of lower back and right leg pain. According to Dr. Bialon-Wnek, Petitioner described lower back pain that was sharp, shooting with motion and throbbing. His right leg pain was described as shooting with motion. (PX 6)

Petitioner returned to Dr. Murtaza on January 11, 2018. Dr. Murtaza reviewed the MRI of Petitioner's lumbar spine and opined Petitioner had a large disk herniation. Dr. Murtaza recommended Petitioner undergo steroid injections, which Petitioner wanted some time to consider. Dr. Murtaza also recommended an EMG to correlate with Petitioner's MRI and continued him off work completely. (PX 5)

On January 16, 2018, Petitioner returned to Dr. Bialon-Wnek and reported his current back pain level and right leg pain level were 1/10. Dr. Bialon-Wnek performed another physical examination and noted significant improvement since the last visit. (PX 6)

Petitioner commenced another round of physical therapy on January 16, 2018. By February 23, 2018 he had undergone twelve (12) sessions. Therapy records noted that Petitioner reported he was doing better and rated his low back pain at 2/10 and right leg pain at 0/10. He reported that his low back pain was sharp and throbbing. (PX 6)

Petitioner returned to ION on March 1, 2018. At that time, he saw Dr. Krishna Chunduri with complaints of low back pain and right leg numbness, tingling, weakness down to his foot. Petitioner rated his pain at 5/10. According to Dr. Chunduri, Petitioner reported that his symptoms started as a result of a work injury that occurred on 11/30/2017. Dr. Chunduri wrote, "[o]n the day of the injury he works as a forklift operator. He is transporting and moving motors that weigh up to 80-90 pounds and he states after he moves them, he has to place the motors on shelves and he has to lift them manually in a bent over position, lifting up, placing them and adjusting them. These are all 80-90 pounds or greater. He states as a result of this, he notices the pain in his lower back…" The doctor also noted that Petitioner reported a prior facet joint injury in 2015 which had been treated and subsequently resolved. The doctor noted that Petitioner "…is now here with what appears to be a different problem." After performing an examination and reviewing the previously taken MRI, Dr. Chunduri felt Petitioner was "…suffering from a large disk herniation with extrusion that is resulting in his current symptoms, which is the result of the severe nerve compression." The doctor stated that Petitioner's symptoms were "...a very different injury compared to his 2015 injury, which was a facet sprain. It does appear to me this is a new injury as the result of his current injury..." Dr. Chunduri recommended a right L4-L5 transforaminal epidural injection. Petitioner was continued off work and an additional round of therapy was ordered. (PX 5, PX 6)

Petitioner began participating in the ordered therapy sessions on March 2, 2018. At that time, Petitioner reported low back pain was at 3/10 and his right leg complaint was at 1/10. By March 22, 2018, he had completed five (5) therapy sessions. At that time, he reported that his symptoms were about the same, i.e., low back at 3/10 and right leg at 1/10. (PX 6)

Petitioner returned to Dr. Chunduri on March 22, 2018. The doctor noted Petitioner had undergone the previously prescribed injection (The Arbitrator notes the medical bills submitted show the injection was carried out on March 8, 2018) and reported significant improvement. Petitioner indicated that his pain waxed and waned, depending on activity, and could be as high as 5/10 with radiation down his right leg. Dr. Chunduri recommended a repeat injection noting that if same did not provide further improvement, a surgical evaluation was likely. (PX 5)

At Respondent's request, Petitioner underwent a Section 12 examination with Dr. Avi Bernstein on May 7, 2018. Dr. Bernstein performed an examination and reviewed medical records of Dr. Murtaza and Dr. Bialon-Wnek through January 16, 2018. The doctor also reviewed the December 12, 2017 MRI and a CT scan report dated May 19, 2015. Dr. Bernstein provided the MRI scan was of poor quality but nevertheless demonstrated degenerative changes from L4-S1. The doctor indicated he was unable to identify a distinct disc herniation in the lumbar spine or evidence of nerve root compression. He noted the report described an extruded right lateral disc herniation, but he felt same was an artifact. Dr. Bernstein also noted that he reviewed a CT scan report dated May 19, 2015. The doctor stated the report described facet arthrosis at L4-5 with a moderate diffused disc bulge. Endplate spurs were also identified on the right side. Dr. Bernstein assessed continued right-sided low back pain and radiating leg pain of unclear etiology. The doctor stated "[Petitioner] has a degenerative condition of the lumbar spine from L4-S1 and he has a pre-existing history of low back pain and right-sided radiating leg pain for which he was treated in 2015." The doctor opined that it was possible Petitioner suffered an aggravation of his degenerative condition as a result of the work incident. The doctor stated Petitioner had improvement in his condition "to a 1/10 level" by mid-January which strongly supported his position that Petitioner had a temporary duration. Dr. Bernstein opined that Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement and required no further therapeutic modalities or diagnostic workups. He felt Petitioner could return to work full duty work as a forklift driver. (RX 2)

Dr. Chunduri performed the repeat injection on May 10, 2018. (PX 5) Petitioner testified that the injections did not provide lasting relief.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Chunduri on June 28, 2018. Petitioner reported that the injection provided temporary relief and rated his pain at 6/10. Petitioner also reported that his right leg symptoms continued but were more intermittent. Dr. Chunduri recommended a spine surgery evaluation. (PX 5)

On August 17, 2018, Petitioner presented to Dr. Jeffrey K. Wingate for a surgical consultation. Dr. Wingate documented that Petitioner reported with a chief complaint of 5/10 low back pain and bilateral leg pain. Petitioner conveyed that on November 20, 2017, he experienced increasing low back pain after a particularly heavy day of bending and twisting in a confined space. Petitioner also reported to a self-limited episode of low back pain in 2015 which was treated conservatively and "...completely putting all of his back pain behind him and returning to full employment status." Dr. Wingate noted that he reviewed the December 2017 MRI scan as well as the report. The doctor felt same demonstrated a very large right paracentral extrusion of disk material that had migrated cephalad up under the right L4 pedicle. The doctor stated that he concurred with the report transcribed by the radiologist, Dr. Eugene Pai. After performing an examination, Dr. Wingate's impression was right L4-5extruded HNP with radiculopathy. Dr. Wingate felt that the "..single best option for [Petitioner was] a hemilaminectomy with discectomy and decompression of the neural elements." The doctor noted that he had not seen an EMG study but speculated same would likely be positive and would nevertheless change the findings on the MRI scan. Dr. Wingate also commented that he had the opportunity to review Dr. Bernstein's IME report. Dr. Wingate wrote, "My opinion differs dramatically from that of Dr. Bernstein. None of these records nor any of these images, in my opinion, indicate any canal lesions or any extruded disk fragments, nor is the patient having clinical symptoms at the time leading up to the injury on 11/30/2017…I would like to proceed with a ___ standing MRI scan including flexion, extension studies to help resolve the issue of canal-encroaching lesion at L4-5 which is the central issue here and to which I find no reference from information provided to me." Dr. Wingate felt that the lifting on November 30, 2017 was "causally related to the work-derived injury…" (PX 5)

Petitioner underwent an EMG/NCV study on September 12, 2018. The study was deemed abnormal demonstrating evidence of a bilateral L5 lumbar spine radiculopathy. There was no evidence of a distal right or left lower extremity peripheral neuropathy. (PX 5)

Petitioner returned to ION on November 6, 2018 where he was seen by Dr. Kevin Koutsky for an orthopedic evaluation. The doctor recorded Petitioner's complaints of lower back pain that radiated down both lower extremities, right more than left. Petitioner reported that his symptoms began on November 30, 2017 after lifting motors, actuators and digging equipment which weighed between 75 and 200 pounds. Dr. Koutsky performed a physical examination and reviewed the MRI and EMG studies. He noted the MRI revealed a large right paracentral disk extrusion with cranial migration. Also noted was that the EMG revealed bilateral L5 radiculopathy with no evidence of any peripheral neuropathy. Dr. Koutsky felt Petitioner had a right L4-5 disk extrusion after sustaining a work-related injury on November 30, 2017. The doctor recommended a lumbar decompression. (PX 5)

Mr. Adrian Ortiz was called to testify on behalf of Respondent. Mr. Ortiz testified that he had been employed by Respondent as a Senior Staffing Manager for 1 ½ years prior to the hearing. Mr. Ortiz testified that as a Senior Staffing Manager, he was familiar with the procedures that take place when an employee of Respondent reports that he had a work-related injury on assignment at a client location. Specifically, Mr. Ortiz testified that after Respondent is notified of a work injury by either the employee or borrowing employer, Respondent then interviews the employee about the nature of the injury and whether the employee wants/needs to seek immediate medical treatment, and if the employee does not, then the employee is asked to come into the office to fill out and file an injury report. Mr. Ortiz testified that when the employee comes into the office to fill out the employer's injury report, Mr. Ortiz gathers as much information as possible from the employee for his report, and then also instructs the employee to fill out his own report using the same internal computer system. Mr. Ortiz testified that thereafter, the employee is scheduled for a medical evaluation and drug screening. Mr. Ortiz testified that after all of the initial investigation reports are prepared and completed, Respondent then maintains a file containing all of the reports that were completed during that investigation process.

Mr. Ortiz testified that prior to the hearing, he personally reviewed all of the investigation reports and documents in Petitioner's file that was prepared after Petitioner reported he sustained an injury while working for Respondent. Mr. Ortiz testified that based upon his personal review of that file, Petitioner called the branch office on December 7, 2017 to inquire about why his assignment had ended with DHL Supply Chain at which time he was informed that he had been terminated from his employment position due to poor performance related issues. Mr. Ortiz testified that after Petitioner was informed that he had been terminated for poor performance related issues, Petitioner then alleged that he had sustained a work-related injury on November 30, 2017. Mr. Ortiz further testified that investigation report specifically documented that during that telephone conversation on December 7, 2017, Petitioner initially reported that he had bumped his head on November 30, 2017 and then subsequently reported that his back started to hurt on November 30, 2017.

Mr. Ortiz testified that there was no documentation that Petitioner reported a work injury to anyone on November 30, 2017. Mr. Ortiz testified that based upon his review of the supervisor's report, Petitioner was observed on November 30, 2017 holding his back and was subsequently questioned by the supervisor. Mr. Ortiz testified that the supervisor's report did not document that Petitioner reported a work-related incident or injury at that time.

Petitioner testified that he never complained or treated for a head injury. Petitioner testified that he did injure his back in 2015 for which he filed a workers' compensation claim (15 WC 23202). That matter ultimately settled on April 1, 2016. According to the settlement contract, the nature of the injury was "lumbar sprain/strain with facet pain and dysfunction." Medical records submitted show Petitioner received facet joint injections on June 25, 2015 and July 23, 2015. He was released to return to full duty work without restrictions on August 21, 2015. (PX 3)

Petitioner testified that he continues to experience lower back pain. Petitioner stated the pain "doesn't allow me to do the normal things that I would do on a daily basis." Petitioner provided that he has difficulty standing for long periods. He no longer jogs, household chores can be difficult and he has trouble sleeping at night. Petitioner related that he experiences radiating pain down his leg. He rated his pain level at 6/10 or 7/10 depending on activity. Petitioner also testified that he has not worked since the accident. He has looked for work, but the only job that called him back violated his restrictions set by his doctor.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding C.) Whether an accident occurred that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Respondent, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Petitioner testified that he was tasked with locating inventory material that could not be found throughout the warehouse, driving a forklift to take incoming materials from the receiving dock to racked space or to their locations. Petitioner explained that while racking (putting it away), he had to manually lift the materials. Petitioner testified that November 30, 2017 was a particularly busy day. Petitioner testified that he was tasked with racking drill bits. He had to lift the drill bits, bend underneath racks and transfer the materials into three or four-foot crates. Petitioner provided that the bending placed him in awkward positions and the materials could weigh between 15 to 20 pounds. Petitioner testified that while performing this function, he began to experience lower back pain. Petitioner stated, "it was really taxing on my back; and toward the end of the night, I felt it got to be excruciating." Petitioner testified that because his immediate supervisor had already left for the day, he informed "Ricky" who was the highest-ranking manager that evening. Petitioner stated that "Ricky" instructed him to write out an injury statement on a blank sheet of paper and sign it. The Arbitrator notes that "Ricky" was not called to testify.

Petitioner testified that he returned to work the following day, December 1, 2017. Petitioner testified that he informed his immediate supervisor, that "...yesterday evening was kind of taxing. I hurt myself, so I'm going to be taking it easy today." Petitioner testified that his supervisor responded "okay, just keep me posted." Petitioner testified that he was not asked to fill out any official paperwork nor was he offered any medical attention.

Petitioner's account of the events is consistent with his representations to the medical professionals who treated him in this matter. On December 7, 2017, Petitioner presented to Dr. Murtaza and reported that he developed low back pain with radiating pain to the right lower extremity while doing heavy lifting at work. On December 13, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. Bialon-Wnek at Bone & Joint Clinic. At that time, Dr. Bialin-Wnek wrote, "[Petitioner] was involved in a work-related incident on Thursday, November 30, 2017. At the time of the incident, Mr. Edwards was working for Randstad. Mr. Edwards works as a forklift operator and was moving heavy load from one destination to another. Once the item got to the other destination it is his job to lift and adjust the product to place on shelves. After doing this all shift he began to feel a pain in his back which radiated down the right leg." Petitioner reported that he immediately reported the incident to his operations supervisor who did not send him to a doctor. On March 1, 2018, Petitioner saw Dr. Krishna Chunduri. According to Dr. Chunduri, Petitioner reported that his symptoms started as a result of a work injury that occurred on 11/30/2017. Dr. Chunduri wrote, "[o]n the day of the injury he works as a forklift operator. He is transporting and moving motors that weigh up to 80-90 pounds and he states after he moves them, he has to place the motors on shelves and he has to lift them manually in a bent over position, lifting up, placing them and adjusting them. These are all 80-90 pounds or greater. He states as a result of this, he notices the pain in his lower back..." On August 17, 2018, Petitioner presented to Dr. Jeffrey K. Wingate for a surgical consultation. Dr. Wingate documented that Petitioner conveyed that on November 20, 2017, he experienced increasing low back pain after a particularly heavy day of bending and twisting in a confined space. Lastly, Petitioner saw Dr. Kevin Koutsky for an orthopedic evaluation on November 6, 2018. The doctor recorded Petitioner's symptoms began on November 30, 2017 after lifting motors, actuators and digging equipment.

Respondent suggests Petitioner designed that he sustained an injury only after he was terminated. Respondent presented the testimony of Mr. Adrian Ortiz, Respondent's Senior Manager, to support its position. According to Mr. Ortiz, he reviewed investigative materials and documents related to this claim. Mr. Ortiz indicated the materials show Petitioner called the branch office on December 7, 2017 to inquire as to why his assignment ended with DHL Supply Chain. At that time, Petitioner was informed that he had been terminated from his employment position due to poor performance related issues. Mr. Ortiz testified Petitioner then conveyed that he had sustained a work-related injury on November 30, 2017, reporting that he bumped his head and that his back started hurting on November 30, 2017. Mr. Ortiz also testified that based upon his review of the supervisor's report, Petitioner was observed on November 30, 2017 holding his back and was subsequently questioned by the supervisor. Mr. Ortiz testified that the supervisor's report did not document that Petitioner specifically reported a work-related incident or injury at that time. The Arbitrator notes that the supervisor's report was not introduced at trial. The Arbitrator further notes Petitioner's testimony that he never complained or treated for a head injury. His testimony is buttressed by the medical documentation that does not reference any complaint or treatment for a head injury.

Relying on Petitioner's credible testimony, the consistent medical records, and Mr. Ortiz's testimony that Petitioner was observed on November 30, 2017 holding his back, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner sustained an accident that arose out of and in the course of his employment with Respondent on November 30, 2017.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding F.) Whether the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to a work injury, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner established a causal connection between the onset of pain in his lower back to the bending and lifting heavy items and an awkward position. Petitioner credibly testified that prior to the accident he was not experiencing any back pain. It is undisputed that Petitioner suffered a previous back injury in 2015. Medical records show Petitioner was treated for diagnoses of facet syndrome and lumbar spondylosis. He received two injections and was released to full duty without any restrictions on October 15, 2015.

Subsequent to the present accident, Petitioner primarily treated with physicians at Illinois Orthopedic Network. On December 7, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. Murtaza. Petitioner testified that between November 30 and December 7, 2017, he attempted soaking, stretching, and taking ibuprofen. He indicated the pain would not abate. Petitioner presented to Dr. Murtaza and reported that he developed low back pain with radiating pain to the right lower extremity while doing heavy lifting at work. Dr. Murtaza noted that his clinic had treated Petitioner for a low back injury two years prior for which Petitioner underwent two epidural steroid injections. The doctor noted that Petitioner "...had no___ after that." After obtaining an MRI, which demonstrated a diffuse disk bulge and large right paracentral/lateral-recess extrusion measuring 8-9 mm thick and extruded 17 mm cranially at L4-5, Dr. Murtaza diagnosed Petitioner with a large disk herniation. Petitioner next saw Dr. Chunduri with complaints of low back pain and right leg numbness, tingling, weakness down to his foot. In addition to recording a history of accident, the doctor also noted that Petitioner reported a prior facet joint injury in 2015 which had been treated and subsequently resolved. The doctor noted that Petitioner "...is now here with what appears to be a different problem." After performing an examination and reviewing the previously taken MRI, Dr. Chunduri felt Petitioner was "...suffering from a large disk herniation with extrusion that is resulting in his current symptoms, which is the result of the severe nerve compression." The doctor stated that Petitioner's symptoms were "...a very different injury compared to his 2015 injury, which was a facet sprain. It does appear to me this is a new injury as the result of his current injury..." Dr. Chunduri treated Petitioner conservatively with injections, medication and physical therapy referrals. By March 22, 2018, Dr. Chunduri reported that Petitioner's symptoms continued indicating his pain waxed and waned, depending on activity. Ultimately, Dr. Chunduri recommended a spine surgery evaluation.

Petitioner presented to Dr. Wingate for a surgical consultation on August 17, 2018. Dr. Wingate documented that Petitioner experienced increasing low back pain after a particularly heavy day of bending and twisting in a confined space on November 30, 2017. The doctor also noted that Petitioner had a self-limited episode of low back pain in 2015 which was treated conservatively and "...completely putting all of his back pain behind him and returning to full employment status." Dr. Wingate reviewed the December 2017 MRI scan feeling same demonstrated a very large right paracentral extrusion of disk material that had migrated cephalad up under the right L4 pedicle. After performing an examination, Dr. Wingate's impression was right L4-5 extruded HNP with radiculopathy. Dr. Wingate felt that the "..single best option for [Petitioner was] a hemilaminectomy with discectomy and decompression of the neural elements." Dr. Wingate felt that the lifting on November 30, 2017 was "causally related to the work-derived injury..."

Petitioner returned to ION on November 6, 2018 where he was seen by Dr. Kevin Koutsky for an orthopedic evaluation. The doctor recorded Petitioner's complaints of lower back pain that radiated down both lower extremities, right more than left. Petitioner reported that his symptoms began on November 30, 2017 after lifting motors, actuators and digging equipment. Dr. Koutsky reviewed the MRI and a subsequent EMG study. He noted the MRI revealed a large right paracentral disk extrusion with cranial migration. Also noted was that the EMG revealed bilateral L5 radiculopathy with no evidence of any peripheral neuropathy. Dr. Koutsky felt Petitioner had a right L4-5 disk extrusion after sustaining a work-related injury on November 30, 2017. The doctor recommended a lumbar decompression.

At Respondent's request, Petitioner underwent a Section 12 examination with Dr. Avi Bernstein on May 7, 2018. Dr. Bernstein reviewed Petitioner's medical records through January 16, 2018. The doctor reviewed the December 12, 2017 MRI and a CT scan report dated May 19, 2015. Dr. Bernstein provided the MRI scan was of poor quality but nevertheless demonstrated degenerative changes from L4-S1. The doctor indicated he was unable to identify a distinct disc herniation in the lumbar spine or evidence of nerve root compression. He noted the report described an extruded right lateral disc herniation, but he felt same was an artifact. Dr. Bernstein also noted that he reviewed a CT scan report dated May 19, 2015. The doctor stated the report described facet arthrosis at L4-5 with a moderate diffused disc bulge. Endplate spurs were also identified on the right side. Dr. Bernstein assessed continued right-sided low back pain and radiating leg pain of unclear etiology. The doctor stated "[Petitioner] has a degenerative condition of the lumbar spine from L4-S1 and he has a pre-existing history of low back pain and right-sided radiating leg pain for which he was treated in 2015." The doctor opined that it was possible Petitioner suffered an aggravation of his degenerative condition as a result of the work incident. The doctor stated Petitioner had improvement in his condition "to a 1/10 level" by mid-January which strongly supported his position that Petitioner had a temporary duration. Dr. Bernstein opined that Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement and required no further therapeutic modalities or diagnostic workups. He felt Petitioner could return to work full duty work as a forklift driver.

The Arbitrator notes that at the hearing, Respondent raised an evidentiary objection to the submission of the medical reports contained within Petitioner's Exhibit 5 namely the notes authored by Dr. Wingate on August 17, 2018. Respondent contended the medical report of said physician was made for the purposes of litigation, and as such, the medical report is hearsay and not admissible. The Arbitrator overruled Respondent's objection but reserved the right to change said ruling after reviewing the totality of the records. After reviewing the records, the Arbitrator stands by the initial ruling. In doing so, the Arbitrator notes the records demonstrate that on March 22, 2018, Dr. Chunduri recommended a repeat injection noting that if same did not provide further improvement, a surgical evaluation was likely. Prior to undergoing the recommended repeat injection Respondent procured a Section 12 examination with Dr. Bernstein which took place on May 7, 2018. As noted above, Dr. Bernstein expressed his opinion regarding the MRI scan findings as well as his opinion regarding Petitioner's diagnosis and his ability to return to work. Subsequent to the Section 12 examination, Dr. Chunduri performed the repeat injection, on May 10, 2018, which provided no lasting relief. Thereafter, Dr. Chunduri specifically recommended a spine surgery evaluation. Petitioner then presented to Dr. Wingate for the recommended surgical consultation on August 17, 2018. In his notes dated same, Dr. Wingate not only documents Petitioner's history, his review of diagnostics, examination findings, and ultimate conclusions, the doctor also references his disagreements with the diagnostic interpretations and opinions of Dr. Bernstein. Dr. Wingate's notes and/or comments do not appear to be prompted or elicited from an outside source, i.e. narrative request, but was noted to support his treatment recommendation.

Based on all the above, the Arbitrator finds that a causal relationship exists between Petitioner's present condition of ill-being and the accident sustained on November 30, 2017. The Arbitrator is persuaded by the opinions of Petitioner's treating physicians over those of Dr. Bernstein. The Arbitrator notes that notwithstanding the Arbitrator ruling on Dr. Wingate's notes, the remaining records are sufficient enough to find in favor of Petitioner.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding J.) Whether the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary. Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services; and K.) Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Petitioner submitted the following medical bills into evidence:

Illinois Orthopedic Network:	$16,846.73
Il bone & Joint:	$8,360.71
Midwest Specialty Pharmacy:	$2,330.90
Preferred Open MRI	$1,500
Midwest Ann.	$2,159.69

Having found the requisite causal relationship, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent shall pay the above referenced reasonable and necessary medical bills in the amount of $31,198.03, as provided in sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act.

With respect to prospective medical care, Dr. Wingate diagnosed right L4-5 extruded HNP with radiculopathy. Dr. Wingate felt that the "...single best option for [Petitioner was] a hemilaminectomy with discectomy and decompression of the neural elements." The doctor noted that he had not seen an EMG study but speculated same would likely be positive and would nevertheless change the findings on the MRI scan.

Thereafter, an EMG/NCV study was completed and was deemed abnormal demonstrating evidence of a bilateral L5 lumbar spine radiculopathy. Petitioner next saw Dr. Koutsky for an orthopedic evaluation. The doctor reviewed the MRI and EMG studies. He noted the MRI revealed a large right paracentral disk extrusion with cranial migration. Also noted was that the EMG revealed bilateral L5 radiculopathy with no evidence of any peripheral neuropathy. Dr. Koutsky felt Petitioner had a right L4-5 disk extrusion and recommended a lumbar decompression.

Based on the above, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent shall authorize and pay for the surgical recommendation as prescribed.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding L.) What temporary benefits (TTD) are in dispute, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Records submitted show the initial authorization for an off-work status was prescribed by Dr. Mutaza on December 7, 2017. Petitioner has been kept off work since that time by his treating physicians. As noted in paragraph F.), the Arbitrator is not persuaded by Dr. Bernstein opinion and relies on the opinions of his treating physicians.

Based upon the evidence presented, Arbitrator finds that Petitioner is entitled to temporary total disability for the period of December 7, 2017 through January 3, 2019, a period of 56-1/7

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding M.) Should penalties or fees should be imposed upon Respondent, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

Respondent's accident dispute was not unreasonable. As such, Petitioner's request for penalties and fees are denied.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding O.) Chain of referrals under Section 8(a) of the Act, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The Arbitrator finds that all treatment rendered was carried out by multiple physicians at Illinois Orthopedic Network. All of the physical therapy sessions were prescribed by his treating physicians. As such the Arbitrator finds Petitioner did not exceed his choice of doctors with the confines of Section 8(a) of the Act.

ORDER

This cause comes before the Commission on Respondent's Motion to Dismiss Petitioner's Petition for Review of the Arbitration Decision. A hearing was held before Commissioner Marc Parker in Collinsville, IL, on November 12, 2019. Both parties were present, and a record of the hearing was taken.

Petitioner's underlying claim was tried before an Arbitrator at the Commission on October 26, 2017, and on December 4, 2017, proofs were closed. On February 25, 2019, the Arbitrator issued his decision. On March 26, 2019, Petitioner filed a pro-se Petition for Review. On that date, Petitioner also filed a Notice of Motion for a hearing to have her fees waived as a poor person under Section 20, along with a document setting forth her reasons. At the time of that filing, no hearing date was requested. For reasons unknown, the Commission's mainframe computer did not reflect that Petitioner had filed a Section 20 Petition.

On August 2, 2019, the pro-se Petitioner appeared before an Arbitrator sitting at the Collinsville Commission and presented her Section 20 Petition. That Arbitrator signed an order purporting to grant the Petition to allow Petitioner's fees to be waived. On September 27, 2019, Respondent filed its Motion to Dismiss Petitioner's Petition for Review.

The Commission finds that Petitioner's Section 20 Petition was timely filed on March 26, 2019, and that it effectively tolled the deadline for perfecting her Petition for Review of the Arbitration Decision; and specifically, Petitioner's deadline to file an agreed statement of the facts or transcript of evidence in connection with her Petition for Review. The Commission also finds that the Arbitrator who signed the August 2, 2019 order purportedly granting Petitioner's Section 20 Petition, was without jurisdiction to do so. Accordingly, the Commission finds that August 2, 2019 order void, and that Petitioner's Section 20 Petition remains pending.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent's Motion to Dismiss Petitioner's Petition for Review is hereby denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Arbitrator's August 2, 2019 order granting Petitioner's Section 20 Petition, is hereby vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's Section 20 Petition filed March 26, 2019 is hereby set for hearing before Commissioner Marc Parker at the Workers' Compensation Commission, Collinsville, IL, at 10:30 am on January 28, 2020.

ORDER

This matter comes before the Commission on Petitioner's petition for penalties and attorney fees, with proper notice given. Having carefully considered the entire record, the Commission finds and orders as follows:

On April 16, 2014, an Arbitrator approved a settlement contract in this matter, which provides in pertinent part that Respondents would pay, pursuant to the fee schedule, certain medical bills. On February 19, 2016, Petitioner filed a petition for penalties and attorney fees alleging that Respondents failed to pay outstanding medical bills in the sum of $13,507.21[1] from Franciscan/St. James health system. The matter was continued while Respondents were making installment payments on the outstanding medical bills. However, Respondents stopped paying the installments in February of 2019.

On September 12, 2019, Commissioner Stephen Mathis held a hearing on the petition. Petitioner appeared through counsel. Respondents did not appear despite receiving notice of the hearing. At the time of the hearing, the outstanding amount was $5,508.63, the last payment having been made on January 25, 2019.

The Commission finds Respondents liable to pay to Petitioner section 19(k) penalties of $2,754.32, section 19(l) penalties of $6,930.00 (from January 25 through September 12, 2019) and section 16 attorney fees of $550.86.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the petition for penalties and attorney fees is granted.

GALE MATHUS, as Grandfather and next Friend of AUSTIN MICHAEL INZERMA, a minor, Petitioner,

v.

CONTINENTAL TIRE,

Respondent.

12 WC 013080

ORDER

On March 14, 2018 an Arbitration Decision was filed in the above-entitled matter making an award of benefits under various sections of the Act. This matter comes before the Commission on the Motion to Substitute Representative Petitioner which was filed during pendency of the Petition for Review filed by Respondent.

David Mathus, now deceased, suffered grievous injuries in a work-related accident that occurred on December 23, 2010. On April 14, 2012 the original Application for Adjustment of Claim was filed bearing the signature of David Mathus. David Mathus died on December 20, 2014 of causes unrelated to his injuries. David Mathus is survived by his minor son, Austin Michael Izerma, date of birth March 14, 2007.

At hearing, Petitioner presented documentary evidence which established that David Mathus was Austin's biological father and a copy of the Uniform Order of Support entered in the Circuit Court of the Second Judicial District Circuit, Jefferson County reflecting decedent's child support obligation in the amount of $434.00 per month. The order references Evelyn Izerma as Austin Michael Izerma's legal representative.

An Amended Application for Adjustment of Claim was filed on February 15, 2017 by Gale Mathus, the father of decedent, captioned:

Gale Mathus, as Grandfather and Next Best Friend of Austin Michael Izerma, a minor,

Petitioner,

v. 12 WC 013080

Continental Tires/ The Americas, LLC.

Respondent.

The Amended Application was signed by Gale Mathus. The attorney of record was Brian T. Morrow. The filing was not accompanied by any documentation identifying Gale Mathus as the duly appointed legal guardian of Austin Michael Izerma the minor, who was the lineal heir of decedent, David Mathus.

The matter proceeded to hearing on June 8, 2017 before Arbitrator Hemenway. No evidence was elicited at hearing regarding the guardianship of the minor or any legal authority vested in Gale Mathus to act on the minor's behalf. Further, there was no evidence that Petitioner's attorney, Mr. Morrow had been properly retained as counsel to represent the interests of the minor. No objection was ever raised by Respondent to the authority of Gale Mathus to represent the interests of the minor or the representation by Mr. Morrow nor was the issue raised by the Arbitrator.

Gale Mathus died during the pendency of review. On November 6, 2019 a motion was filed by attorney Brian T. Morrow to Substitute Representative Petitioner seeking to substitute Austin's grandmother, Elizabeth Mathus. The motion was not accompanied by any documentation demonstrating that Elizabeth Mathus was the duly appointed representative of Austin Michael Izerma.

IT IS THERFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the matter is entered and continued generally pending presentation of evidence of proper appointment of a legal representative to retain counsel and represent the interests of the minor, AUSTIN MICHAEL IZERMA in the prosecution of this matter.

IT IS THERFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the matter is entered and continued generally pending presentation of evidence of proper appointment of a legal representative to retain counsel and represent the interests of the minor, AUSTIN MICHAEL IZERMA in the prosecution of this matter.

INJURED WORKERS' BENEFIT FUND,

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issue of nature and extent, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

The Commission initially notes that Respondent's Petition for Review also listed "Maintenance – Duration" as an issue on Review. However, maintenance benefits were never an issue in this case and Respondent's brief only argued the issue of nature and extent.

We hereby modify the Arbitrator's decision and find that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 15% loss of use of the left thumb, which we analyze pursuant to §8.1b(b) of the Act as follows:

i) Neither party submitted an AMA Rating, so this is given no weight.

ii) Occupation: We agree with the Arbitrator's finding that "Petitioner's installer job with Respondent involved manual labor, as does his current job for a different flooring contractor. Petitioner credibly testified to having difficulty using his left thumb to grasp small items such as nails. Petitioner also testified to a lack of sensation in the tip of the thumb. His records show he lost the fat pad of the thumb secondary to the injury." Dec. at 7. We find that this factor deserves the greatest weight. Petitioner's testimony regarding the loss of sensation and difficulty grasping small items is credible and consistent with the medical records indicating that a portion of Petitioner's fat pad was gone.

iii) Age: We give this factor minimal weight. Although Petitioner could potentially remain in the workforce for another 35 to 40 years, we have already considered his difficulty manipulating small objects under the occupation factor above.

iv) Future Earning Capacity: Petitioner eventually returned to work full duty in the same occupation as a flooring installer but for a different employer. Although he testified that he now earns "around half" of what he previously earned, there is no evidence that this loss of income is related to his injury. The Commission, therefore, gives this factor no weight since there is no evidence that Petitioner's injury has caused a diminution of his future earning capacity.

v) Evidence of Disability Corroborated by the Treating Records: The Commission gives this factor some weight but notes that the partial loss of the fat pad on Petitioner's left thumb was already considered and given weight under the "occupation" factor. Petitioner never followed up with a physician after the emergency room visit so there are no medical records to corroborate Petitioner's current complaints and there is no medical evidence of any nerve damage caused by the laceration. However, we find that his testimony is consistent with the partial loss of the fat pad.

All else is affirmed and adopted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $600.00 per week for a period of 3-4/7 weeks, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $540.00 per week for a period of 11.4 weeks, as provided in §8(e)1 of the Act, for the reason that the injuries sustained caused the loss of use of 15% of Petitioner's left thumb.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $2,577.00 for medical expenses under §8(a) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

SOINCC0018

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

The Illinois State Treasurer as ex-officio custodian of the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund was named as a co-Respondent in this matter. The Treasurer was represented by the Illinois Attorney General. This award is hereby entered against the Fund to the extent permitted and allowed under §4(d) of the Act, in the event of the failure of Respondent-Employer to pay the benefits due and owing the Petitioner. Respondent-Employer shall reimburse the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund for any compensation obligations of Respondent-Employer that are paid to the Petitioner from the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $11,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DISSENT

I believe the Arbitrator's award of 25% loss of use of the left thumb pursuant to §8(e)1 was entirely justified under the circumstances.

The record shows that on the date of the accident Petitioner suffered a soft tissue amputation of his left thumb while using a table saw and working for an uninsured employer. Lake Zurich paramedics arrived and noted a 1" laceration to the mid thumb, down to the bone. Mr. Suarez was taken to the Advocate Good Shepherd Hospital Emergency Department where it was noted that he sustained an avulsion type wound of the thumb pad with some tissue loss, specifically of the fat pad. Mild debridement of the necrotic skin was performed and the wound was closed, at which time sagging of the volar pad was noted due to loss of the subcutaneous tissues. Petitioner was advised to see orthopedic surgeon Dr. Mo, given the complexity of the laceration. However, he indicated that he did not seek follow-up care thereafter.

Petitioner attempted to return to work for Respondent but, not surprisingly, was told by his supervisor he was not needed anymore. He never returned to work for Respondent. He indicated that he worked light duty for a friend for about three months before obtaining full duty work for another employer earning half the salary that he was making while working for Respondent.

Currently, Petitioner testified that he lacks sensitivity in the tip of his left thumb and that he cannot control the thumb the way he could before the accident. He noted the thumb feels weak and that it is difficult for him to grasp small objects. In addition, he indicated that when he uses a hammer he cannot use his left thumb to grip the nail and that he has to position the nail between his left index and middle fingers. He also stated his left thumb feels numb when it is cold outside and that he experiences cramping when he tries to grip something. Petitioner is right handed.

Furthermore, the Arbitrator viewed the injured appendage, which we did not, and noted "... the lack of a fat pad and a horizontal, suture-related scar on the tip of the left thumb" as well as the fact that "[t]he tip of the left thumb was noticeably thinner than the tip of the right thumb." (Arb.Dec., p.3). The Arbitrator also found Petitioner to be very credible and his account of the injury consistent with the records. (Id., p.4).

Based on the above, particularly the impact this injury has had on Petitioner's occupation and future earning capacity as a manual laborer, not to mention his young age and his credible complaints of diminished sensation and grip strength, I believe the Arbitrator's award of 25% loss of use of the left thumb was more than warranted.

Therefore, I respectfully dissent.

Erasmo Suarez v. Arch Flooring Company and Illinois State Treasurer as ex officio custodian of the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund
15 WC 33777

Summary of Disputed Issues

Petitioner claims he began working as an installer for Respondent Arch Flooring Company about 2 or 2 ½ years before his claimed accident. He testified his job involved using electrical saws to cut wood. He lacerated his left thumb while using a saw on April 1, 2015. He testified that Daniel, Respondent's owner, was at the jobsite where the injury occurred and came to his aid immediately afterward.

Petitioner was transported via ambulance to an Emergency Room shortly after the accident. He underwent X-rays and closure of the wound. The Emergency Room physician noted the loss of the fat pad from the thumb. He recommended that Petitioner seek follow-up care with an orthopedic surgeon but Petitioner did not do so. Petitioner attempted to return to work for Arch Flooring but was not taken back. He testified he was off work through April 26, 2015 and began performing light duty for a friend on April 27, 2015. He eventually returned to full duty, albeit at a significantly reduced rate of pay.

All issues other than penalties and fees are in dispute.

Arbitrator's Findings Concerning Notice of Hearing and Insurance Coverage

Petitioner filed his original Application for Adjustment of Claim, naming Arch Flooring Company as Respondent, on October 21, 2015. Petitioner subsequently amended the Application to name the Injured Workers' Benefit Fund [hereafter "the Fund"] as an additional Respondent. At no time did Respondent Arch Flooring Company file an appearance.

In March 2019, the Arbitrator set a trial date of June 11, 2019, with Petitioner's counsel and counsel for the Fund agreeing to this setting. The hearing began at 10::30 AM on June 11th. At no time between 8:30 AM and 10:30 AM did any individual purporting to represent Arch Flooring Company check in with the Arbitrator. During the hearing, counsel for Petitioner and the Fund denied having any prior contact with anyone purporting to represent Arch Flooring Company. Petitioner's counsel offered into evidence, with no objection from the Fund, copies of a letter he sent to Arch Flooring Company (using two different Chicago addresses and one Wilmette address) on March 15, 2019. In the letter, he advised Arch Flooring Company of the hearing scheduled for 9:00 AM on June 11, 2019. He sent each letter via regular and certified mail. He indicated he obtained the Chicago addresses from Petitioner. All three envelopes are marked "return to sender." Two indicate the addressee was unknown and left no forwarding information. PX 4A-B. The third reflects the mailing was unclaimed. PX 4C.

Based on the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner made an adequate attempt to notify Arch Flooring Company of the hearing.

Petitioner also offered into evidence, with no objection from the Fund, a Certification dated March 7, 2019 signed by Roguens Loriston, an employee of NCCI. In this document, Loriston affirmed that NCCI's database showed no workers' compensation insurance coverage information for Arch Flooring Company, at an address on Kedzie in Chicago, as of April 1, 2015. PX 5. By agreement, the parties re-opened proofs on June 18, 2019. On that date, Petitioner offered into evidence, with no objection from the Fund, a Certification dated January 21, 2016, signed by Lain Hines, an employee of NCCI. In this document, Hines affirmed that NCCI's database showed the cancellation of workers' compensation insurance coverage for Arch Flooring, at a location in Wilmette, Illinois, effective December 13, 2014. PX 6.

Based on PX 5 and PX 6, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent Arch Flooring Company lacked workers' compensation coverage as of Petitioner's alleged injury on April 1, 2015.

Arbitrator's Findings of Fact

Petitioner testified through a Spanish-speaking interpreter.

Petitioner testified he was born on April 13, 1986. As of April 1, 2015, he was single and had one dependent child. As of the hearing, that child was eleven years old.

Petitioner testified he began working for Respondent Arch Flooring Company two or two and a half years before the accident of April 1, 2015. His job for Respondent involved installing wooden floors in apartments that were being renovated. He used two types of electrical circular saws to cut the wood that was used for the flooring. He used his hands to feed the pieces of wood into the saws.

Petitioner testified that Arch Flooring Company provided all of the tools and materials he used on the job.

Petitioner testified that, prior to the accident, he worked for Arch Flooring Company from Monday through Saturday. He was paid $150 per day. He received his weekly pay in cash each Saturday.

Petitioner testified he typically began his workday at 7:30 AM. Each morning he met his supervisor Daniel at a storage facility located at Kedzie and Belmont in Chicago. Arch Flooring Company stored its tools at this facility. Daniel would then give him a ride to the jobsite. Daniel supervised the work he did at the jobsites. Daniel was typically present at those sites. At the end of each workday, Daniel would drive him back to the storage facility and he would go home from there.

Petitioner testified he is right-handed. He denied injuring his left thumb before or after the accident of April 1, 2015.

Petitioner testified he worked at a jobsite in Barrington, Illinois, on April 1, 2015. At about 1:00 PM that day, he using a circular table saw to cut a piece of wood when he cut his left thumb. He felt pain and saw blood right after the accident. His co-worker, Juvenal, witnessed the accident. Daniel was present at the site and came to the scene within minutes of the accident. Daniel observed the condition of his left thumb. Daniel called 911.

Petitioner testified he was transported via ambulance to the Emergency Room at Advocate Good Shepherd Hospital shortly after the accident. At the hospital, he underwent X-rays. His wound was sutured and he was given medicine. The doctor recommended he seek follow-up care but he did not do so.

The certified Emergency Room records (PX 1) contain a seven-page report from the Lake Zurich Fire/Rescue Department. The report reflects that paramedics encountered Petitioner at a residence in Barrington, Illinois at about 2:33 PM on April 1, 2015. The report also reflects that Petitioner reported cutting his left thumb while using a table saw. The paramedics noted a 1-inch laceration to "mid thumb, down to the bone." They indicated there was no apparent alcohol or drug use. They provided wound care and administered pain medication. PX 1, pp. 9-11 of 64.

The Emergency Room records identified Arch Flooring Company as Petitioner's employer. PX 1, p. 3 of 64. The history reflects that Petitioner "was at work today, using a power saw and actually cut his left thumb." The examining physician, Robert Romolo, D.O., noted a "stellate avulsion laceration of the volar thumb paid of the left hand." He described the laceration as 3 centimeters long. Left thumb X-rays showed no foreign body or fracture. PX 1, pp. 33 and 51 of 64. Dr. Romolo explored the wound, noting that the fad pad was missing. He did not visualize bones or tendons. He debrided necrotic skin and "approximated the wound as best as possible." He noted "some sagging of the volar pad due to loss of the subcutaneous tissues." He noted "good motion" after closing the wound. Via a telephone interpreter, he advised Petitioner that the laceration was complex and that he should see Dr. Mo, an orthopedic surgeon, the following day. He provided Petitioner with Cephalexin, an antibiotic, and a prescription for pain medication. PX 1, pp. 7, 19, 31-33 and 41 of 64. He also provided Petitioner with written instruction sheets directing him to keep the wound "clean and dry" and change the dressing at least once a day. PX 1, p. 26 of 64.

Petitioner testified that Daniel drove him home from the Emergency Room on the day of the accident.

Petitioner testified he later contacted Daniel via telephone in an effort to return to work for Arch Flooring Company. Daniel told him he was not needed anymore. He never resumed working for Respondent.

Petitioner testified that, after the accident, he remained off work through April 26, 2015. On April 27, 2015, he began performing a light duty job for a friend. He continued performing light duty for about three months and was then able to resume full duty, albeit at about half the salary he earned at Arch Flooring Company.

Petitioner testified he lacks sensitivity in the tip of his left thumb. He cannot control the thumb the way he could before the accident. The thumb feels weak. It is difficult for him to grasp small objects. When he uses a hammer, he cannot use his left thumb to grip the nail. He has to position the nail between his left index and middle fingers. When it is cold outside, his left thumb feels numb. When he tries to grip something, using the thumb, he experiences cramping.

The Arbitrator viewed both of Petitioner's hands. She noted the lack of a fat pad and a horizontal, suture-related scar on the tip of the left thumb. The tip of the left thumb was noticeably thinner than the tip of the right thumb.

Under cross-examination, Petitioner testified he originally found Arch Flooring Company through friends. Daniel owned Arch Flooring Company. When he first met Daniel, he did not sign any contracts. He did not undergo any formal training before being sent out to jobsites but Daniel showed him how to use a table saw. He and Daniel communicated via telephone to set his work schedule. He typically worked from 7:30 AM to 5:00 PM. If Daniel did not have work available, he did not work, but this happened "very little." During the two months preceding the accident, he worked Monday through Saturday each week. He did not use any of his own equipment or wear a uniform while working for Arch Flooring Company. He could not have any outside work with a different employer during the time he worked for Arch Flooring Company. After the accident, he initially informed his co-worker of his injury and then told Daniel. He did not complete any documents concerning the accident. He did not undergo any treatment other than the treatment he received at the Emergency Room. He does not have any documents memorializing the pay he received from Arch Flooring Company.

On redirect, Petitioner reiterated that Daniel called an ambulance after the accident and drove him home from the Emergency Room.

In addition to the exhibits previously described, Petitioner offered into evidence itemized bills from Advocate Good Shepherd Hospital (PX 2) and Tri-County Emergency Physician (PX 3) relating to the care he underwent on April 1, 2015. The Fund raised no objection to the bills.

The Fund did not call any witnesses or offer any documentary evidence.

Arbitrator's Credibility Assessment

Petitioner responded to questions in a calm, direct manner. The Arbitrator found him very credible. His account of his injury is consistent with the Fire Department and hospital records. PX 1.

Arbitrator's Conclusions of Law

On April 1, 2015, were Petitioner and Arch Flooring Company operating under the Act and was their relationship one of employee and employer?

The Arbitrator finds that, as of April 1, 2015, Petitioner and Arch Flooring Company were operating under the Act. Petitioner credibly testified he was injured on that date while using an electrically powered table saw to cut wood. His Emergency Room records document an injury related to table saw usage. This evidence establishes the automatic coverage afforded by Section 3(8) and (15) of the Act.

The Arbitrator further finds that Petitioner was an employee of Arch Flooring Company prior to and as of the accident of April 1, 2015. Petitioner credibly testified he found Arch Flooring Company through friends and worked as an installer for the company for two or two and a half years before the accident. Petitioner also credibly testified that Daniel, Arch Flooring Company's owner, set his hours and directed his work during this period. Petitioner indicated that Daniel provided rides to him each workday and was usually present at the jobsites. Petitioner also credibly testified that Arch Flooring Company provided all of the tools and materials he used at these sites. Under cross-examination, he denied being able to work for any additional employers during his tenure with Arch Flooring Company. He also denied signing any contracts when Daniel first hired him.

The Illinois courts have long held that it is the element of control, and specifically the right to control, that is most significant in determining whether an individual was an employee or independent contractor. Roberson v. Industrial Commission, 225 Ill.2d 159 (2007). In the instant case, Arch Flooring Company, via its owner, Daniel, controlled Petitioner's work to the extent of transporting him to and from a designated location each day, scheduling his hours, providing him with tools and materials and directing his tasks. The Arbitrator finds credible Petitioner's testimony that Daniel was present at most of the sites where he worked and that he was not able to accept outside employment. The "nature of the work" test also supports a finding of employment. The installation work that Petitioner performed was in the nature of Arch Flooring Company's business. While Petitioner was paid in cash, the courts have given less weight to the "method of payment" factor than to the issues of control and "nature of the work."

The Arbitrator also notes that the Emergency Room records identify Arch Flooring Company as Petitioner's employer as of the accident. PX 1.

Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Arch Flooring Company? What is the date of the accident?

Petitioner credibly testified his accident occurred on April 1, 2015, while he was using a table saw to cut wood at a residential jobsite in Barrington, Illinois. Petitioner's testimony is completely consistent with the histories recorded by the paramedics and hospital workers who rendered care on April 1, 2015. PX 1. There is no suggestion that Petitioner injured his left thumb in a non-work setting.

The Arbitrator finds that the accident occurred on April 1, 2015 and that it arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment by Arch Flooring Company. Petitioner was performing a work-related task, i.e., cutting wood to be used in the flooring process, at the time of the accident. His injury took place at a residential jobsite during his regular work hours.

Did Petitioner provide timely notice of his accident to Arch Flooring Company?

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner provided timely notice of his injury to Arch Flooring Company. Petitioner credibly testified he cut his left thumb in the presence of Juvenal, a co-worker. Petitioner also credibly testified that Daniel, Arch Flooring Company's owner, came to his aid and observed his left thumb within minutes of the accident. Petitioner indicated it was Daniel who dialed 911 and later gave him a ride home from the hospital.

Did Petitioner establish a causal connection between the accident of April 1, 2015 and his current left thumb condition of ill-being?

The Arbitrator finds in Petitioner's favor on the issue of causation. In so finding, the Arbitrator relies on the following: 1) Petitioner's credible denial of any pre-accident left thumb injuries; 2) Petitioner's credible account of the mechanism of injury; 3) the Fire Department and Emergency Room records (PX 1), which reflect Petitioner was injured while working; 4) Petitioner's credible denial of any post-accident re-injuries; 5) the viewing and comparison of the appearance of the left and right thumbs; and 6) Petitioner's credible testimony concerning his ongoing left thumb symptoms and limitations.

In finding causation as to Petitioner's current left thumb condition, the Arbitrator also notes that the Fund did not offer any medical evidence.

What were Petitioner's earnings?

Petitioner testified he typically worked from 7:30 AM to 5:00 PM, Monday through Saturday. He also testified that Arch Flooring Company paid him, in cash, at the rate of $150 per day. He indicated he received his pay each Saturday. Under cross-examination, he acknowledged that Daniel did not always have work available for him during his tenure with Arch Flooring Company but indicated this was unusual. He testified he worked his usual schedule during the two months preceding the accident.

Petitioner did not offer any wage-related documents but the Arbitrator finds credible his testimony as to his schedule, rate of pay and method of payment. The Arbitrator relies on that testimony in finding that Petitioner's average weekly wage was $900.

What was Petitioner's age as of the accident? What was Petitioner's marital status as of the accident? Did he have any minor dependents?

Petitioner testified he was born on April 13, 1986. This is the birth date reflected in his medical records. PX 1. The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner was 28 years old as of the April 1, 2015 accident.

Petitioner credibly testified he was single and had one minor child as of the accident. He indicated this child was eleven years old as of the hearing. His hospital records describe him as single. PX 1. The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner was 28 years old and single, with one dependent child, as of the accident.

Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Arch Flooring Company paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?

Petitioner claims bills from Advocate Good Shepherd Hospital (PX 2, $2,019.00) and Tri-County Emergency Physician (PX 3, $558.00). Both of these bills relate to the Emergency Room care Petitioner underwent on April 1, 2015. The Arbitrator finds that care to be causally related to the left thumb laceration. The Arbitrator also finds the treatment reasonable and necessary. The Arbitrator awards the claimed bills, subject to the fee schedule.

Is Petitioner entitled to temporary total disability benefits?

Petitioner claims he was temporarily totally disabled from April 2, 2015, the day after the accident, through April 26, 2015, the day before he began performing light duty for a friend.

While the Emergency Room records of April 1, 2015 do not contain any note directing Petitioner to refrain from working, they do contain instructions sheets directing him to keep his thumb wound "clean and dry." Petitioner testified the work he performed for Respondent involved cutting wood and installing floors. These duties are incompatible with the instructions Petitioner received. Petitioner was also given narcotic pain medication that could have affected his ability to safely operate electrical saws or other machinery.

Petitioner testified he contacted Daniel, Respondent's owner, in an effort to return to work but was rebuffed.

The Fund offered no evidence refuting the Emergency Room directives or suggesting Petitioner could have resumed working prior to April 27, 2015.

The Arbitrator finds that Petitioner was temporarily totally disabled from April 2, 2015 through April 26, 2015, a period of 3 4/7 weeks.

What is the nature and extent of the injury?

Because the accident occurred after September 1, 2011, the Arbitrator looks to Section 8.1b of the Act for guidance in assessing permanency. That section sets forth five factors to be considered in determining the nature and extent of an injury, with no single factor predominating. The Arbitrator assigns no weight to the first factor, any AMA Guides impairment rating, since neither party offered such a rating into evidence. The Arbitrator assigns weight to the second and third factors, Petitioner's occupation and age at the time of the injury. Petitioner's installer job with Respondent involved manual labor, as does his current job for a different flooring contractor. Petitioner credibly testified to having difficulty using his left thumb to grasp small items such as nails. Petitioner also testified to a lack of sensation in the tip of the thumb. His records show he lost the fat pad of the thumb secondary to the injury. Petitioner was 28 years old as of the accident. He could potentially remain in the workforce for another 35 to 40 years. During that time, he will continue to have difficulty manipulating small objects. The Arbitrator also assigns weight to the fourth factor, future earning capacity. Petitioner testified he was eventually able to resume full duty for a different contractor following the accident. He did not claim any diminution of wages. As for the fifth and final factor, evidence of disability corroborated by the treatment records, the Arbitrator notes the Emergency Room physician's description of the nature of the laceration and the loss of the fat pad. PX 1.

Based on the foregoing, as well as the viewing, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner established permanency equivalent to 25% loss of use of the left thumb, representing 19 weeks of benefits under Section 8(e) of the Act.

DECISION ON REVIEW AND ORDER

This matter comes before the Commission on Respondent's review of Arbitrator Glaub's order granting Petitioner's petition for reinstatement as well as Respondent's Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract. Notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues and being advised of the facts and law, affirms the Arbitrator's Order granting reinstatement, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. Further, as set forth below, the Commission grants Respondent's Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract and remands the matter to the Arbitrator.

FINDINGS OF FACT:

1. On March 20, 2015, Petitioner filed Applications for Adjustment of Claim alleging a right thumb injury on January 22, 2014 (15 WC 9372) and a left thumb injury on January 13, 2015 (15 WC 9373). The claims were subsequently consolidated.

2. On August 28, 2018, Arbitrator Glaub dismissed Petitioner's claims for want of prosecution.

3. On August 31, 2018, E-Notices of Dismissal were generated by the Commission.

4. On November 20, 2018, Petitioner filed a Petition to Reinstate the consolidated claims. The Petition reads as follows:

> On 8/28/18, this case was dismissed for want of prosecution. I received the dismissal order on 11/15/18. On 12/12/18. I will present this petition to reinstate the case before Arbitrator Michael Glaub for the following reason: We did not receive proper notice. (Emphasis in original.) ArbX1.

5. On January 4, 2019, counsel for both parties appeared before Arbitrator Glaub to argue the merits of Petitioner's Petition to Reinstate. A record was made.

Petitioner's Counsel argued reinstatement was warranted because the claims were being actively moved toward resolution prior to dismissal, and he did not receive the E-Notice of dismissal but rather learned of the dismissal from his clerk when he attempted to secure a trial date at the November 15, 2018 call:

> After this case was dismissed on August 28, 2018, my office did not receive any e-mail indicating the case has been dismissed, nor did we receive any notice in the regular mail that this case had been dismissed. While this case was up and pending before your Honor and even after it was dismissed, the Petitioner and Petitioner's attorneys were diligently pursuing resolution of this claim. As Respondent I'm sure is going to mention, there was a settlement contract for a final offer that had been sent to Petitioner's counsel. There were outstanding medical bills which were in the process of being resolved. Unfortunately, that took a little bit longer than Petitioner anticipated due to some changes in the billers. But regardless, those actions were ongoing and being undertaken during the pendency of this claim before it was dismissed and even after it was dismissed.
> In fact, Petitioner's attorneys found out the case was dismissed when they attempted to get a trial date in November. The Petitioner's clerk informed Petitioner's attorneys that she couldn't get a date because the case had been dismissed and asked if we had a petition to reinstate. It was at that moment - - and that was November 15, 2018. So that was the day Petitioner received notice that the case was dismissed.
> Petitioner did not receive notice from the Commission itself, but from Petitioner's attorney's clerk. So almost immediately thereafter, Petitioner's counsel filed the present motion to reinstate. It was filed on November 20. Petitioner's attorney continued to work to resolve the case; and, in fact, the Petitioner finally agreed to accept the settlement offer and signed settlement contracts, which prior to this hearing today have actually been sent in the mail to your Honor. I understand those won't be approved, obviously, until this is resolved.
> This is a situation where the case was dismissed for want of prosecution despite Petitioner actively pursuing the case. Petitioner's counsel did not receive notice and continued to work on it and continued to pursue resolution, and my position – our Petitioner's position is we have a resolution now. So the case should be reinstated so that it can be finalized, so that it can be resolved. T. 9-11.

Respondent's Counsel countered the petition to reinstate was not filed within 60 days of the E-Notice, and therefore, the Arbitrator had no jurisdiction to reinstate:

> Opposing counsel was sent a settlement contract, that is true, on September 15 of 2017. Between then and around Christmas, December 2018, Respondent had assumed the Petitioner was lost, because there's been about [three] or [four] motions to dismiss. You did not dismiss the claim. The claim was not dismissed the first time it was up.
> There had been numerous efforts to try to stimulate activity, resolution of the case. It was finally dismissed, as stated, in both petitions on August 28, 2018. We received an e-mail notice, which is attached to my motion - - or objection. It's Respondent's A. We received it on September 4 on both consolidated cases, it's reflected that it was - - the notice date was August 31, 2018. It was Labor Day weekend. We received it September 4, 2018.
> I understand the Commission policy which was adopted July 1, 2018, that all Commission notices were going to be sent by e-mail with the presumption that notice was received by the next business day. All firms are to have a proper registration of their firm address or e-mail.
> The notice that we received on both cases shows - - doesn't show an e-mail address by either party, but it does show it was sent to John S. Eliasik at 180 North LaSalle, Suite 3700, Chicago, Illinois 60601. There is a presumption that it was sent on August 31. The next business day would have been September 4, 2018. And that is, in fact, when the Commission notice was received at Respondent's counsel's office at Krakar, Fanning and Olsen - - it's Grant and Fanning on the notice. The name was subsequently changed.
> Given the presumptive notice that was given to the Law Firm of John Eliasik as of September 4, he had 60 days…
> Obviously, yesterday we filed a written objection to the reinstatement. At the call, an attorney from my office appeared to object to the reinstatement or approval of the settlement contracts, because you or the Commission doesn't have jurisdiction as the case is still dismissed and needed to be reinstated first.
> The petition of Petitioner's counsel merely states we did not receive proper notice. There is a presumption that must be rebutted that he did not receive notice in this case. The rules state the parties permitted to present evidence in support of or in opposition to the petition, and the Commission can set forth grounds relied on by the Petitioner, the objection of the Respondent, and the precedence set forth in Commission decisions.
> For whatever reason, Petitioner's office didn't reinstate the case within 60 days of September 4, 2018; and, therefore, the case should remain dismissed, and not reinstated. T. 11-14.

In response, Petitioner's Counsel asserted the time lapsed before the contract was executed is irrelevant given Respondent never rescinded the offer and moreover his firm has a registered email and a subsequent review of that email account confirmed no notice was received:

> …it's not relevant to whether the case was reinstated, because the fact is Petitioner's counsel and Petitioner actively pursued settlement. The best proof of that is the signed settlement contract by the Petitioner.

Furthermore, I don't believe at any time despite Respondent complains that it took a long time they withdrew their offer or decided we don't want to settle it anymore or we want to go to trial now, the deal is off the table, that never happened.
The only thing that happened was that this case was up. It was dismissed, and we didn't get notice. And counsel is right. There is a rebuttable presumption that we received notice; but, in fact, we didn't. The fact that the notice that he received has our address on it, it doesn't matter at all, particularly if the Commission has switched their system, and they are e-mailing them. And there is no e-mail address on the notice of dismissal, as counsel indicated. So the fact is we did not receive notice.
The other thing - - I would also like to point out that we are registered with the Commission. In fact, we checked after this that we're registered. I'm not sure what happened. I know we did not receive notice. T. 15-16.

Petitioner's Counsel later reiterated, "What I'm saying in this case there was no notice. This wasn't our failure to check our e-mail. We just never got it." T. 21.

6. On January 24, 2019, Respondent's Counsel emailed the following message to Petitioner's Counsel:

> Failure to register a firm e-mail at the Commission is not a valid defense. Therefore in light of your rejection of the compromise $3000 offer, the offer is rescinded, just like the void settlement contract on the dismissed case, which was executed by Petitioner 1 1/3 years after receipt of the contract offer. (Mot. Exhibit 5)

7. On February 6, 2019, Arbitrator Glaub issued an Order granting reinstatement of Petitioner's claims:

> The Arbitrator bases his Decision on petitioner's attorney representation that he never received a Written Notice of Case Dismissal from the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration that petitioner's attorney had been attentive to these claims and had performed all the work necessary to put the claims in a position to be resolved. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration that the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission had just implemented a new system of tendering written Notice of Cases Dismissals. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration the fact that the Motion to Reinstate was filed promptly after he discovered that the cases were dismissed and that the Motion to Reinstate was only filed 17 days after the 60 day period to file a Motion to Reinstate had expired had petitioner's attorney received a Written Notice of Case Dismissal on September 4, 2018 as the respondent's attorney represented that he received it. The Arbitrator also strongly takes into consideration that the petitioner has been located by [his] attorney, has signed the settlement contracts, or in the alternative, is prepared to proceed to Arbitration.

8. On February 7, 2019, Respondent filed a Petition for Review of Arbitrator Glaub's reinstatement order. The matter was assigned to Commissioner Coppoletti.

9. On February 22, 2019, Arbitrator Glaub approved the settlement contract which had been previously tendered to him.

10. On March 22, 2019, Respondent filed a Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract.

11. On May 17, 2019, the parties appeared before Commissioner Coppoletti to present arguments on Respondent's motion. A record was made, and the matter was taken under advisement with a decision from the full panel to issue.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I. Petition to Reinstate

Rule 9020.90 governs reinstatement and provides, in pertinent part:

> a) When a cause has been dismissed from the Arbitration call for want of prosecution, the parties shall have 60 days from receipt of the dismissal order to file a Petition to Reinstate the cause onto the Arbitration call. Notices of dismissal shall be sent to the parties.
> b) Petitions to Reinstate must be in writing. The Petition shall set forth the reason the cause was dismissed and the grounds relied upon for reinstatement. The Petition must also set forth the date on which the Petitioner will appear before the Arbitrator to present the Petition. A copy of the Petition must be served on the other side at the time of filing with the Commission in accordance with the requirements of Section 9020.70. The Respondent may file a response to the Petition.
> c) Petitions to Reinstate shall be docketed and heard by the same Arbitrator to whom the case is assigned. Both parties must appear at the time and place set for hearing. Parties will be permitted to present evidence in support of, or in opposition to, the Petition. The Arbitrator shall apply standards of fairness and equity in ruling on the Petition to Reinstate and shall consider the grounds relied on by the Petitioner, the objections of the Respondent, and the precedents set forth in Commission decisions. A record shall be made of a hearing on any contested Petition. 50 Ill. Adm. Code 9020.90.

As such, the Commission is tasked with analyzing both the timeliness and the merits of Petitioner's petition for reinstatement.

A. Timeliness

According to the plain language of Rule 9020.90(a), "receipt of the dismissal order" triggers the 60-day filing period for a Petition to Reinstate. Therefore, the Commission must determine when Petitioner received the dismissal order.

Petitioner's Petition to Reinstate was filed on November 20, 2018, and it reflects the dismissal order was received on November 15, 2018. At the reinstatement hearing, Petitioner's Counsel asserted his office never received a notice of dismissal from the Commission then explained he did not become aware of the dismissal until his clerk attempted to obtain a trial date at Arbitrator Glaub's November 15, 2018 call. T. 10.

In challenging the timeliness of the petition, Respondent emphasizes the E-Notice of Dismissal was sent on August 31, 2018, and there is a presumption the parties received it the next business day, September 4, 2018. Respondent argues Petitioner's Counsel's statement that he did not receive the E-Notice is insufficient to rebut the presumption, and instead counsel was required to perform a "forensic investigation"; because Petitioner's Counsel "did not exercise any intellectual curiosity or diligence" to conduct such an investigation, the presumption was not rebutted. The Commission disagrees.

The E-Notices themselves do not disclose the recipient email, so there is no evidence on the face of the document to establish to whom it was sent. Petitioner's Counsel asserted on the record before Arbitrator Glaub that his firm does have a registered email address as required by the Commission; the firm has verified the email address is properly recorded with the Commission; and yet despite being in compliance with the Commission rule, a search of the firm's email account revealed no E-Notice of Dismissal was received. T. 16, 21. The Commission finds Petitioner's Counsel's statements are credible, and we accept them as truthful. The Commission notes all practicing attorneys are bound by the Rules of Professional Conduct, including the rule requiring candor toward the tribunal: Rule 3.3 of the Illinois Rules of Professional Conduct provides, "A lawyer shall not knowingly: (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the lawyer." Ill. R. Prof. Cond. 3.3(a)(1) (eff. Jan. 1, 2010).

The Commission finds the affirmative statement on the record from an officer of the court is sufficient to rebut the E-notice presumption. The Commission finds Petitioner's Counsel did not receive notice of the dismissal until November 15, 2018, and therefore the November 20, 2018 petition to reinstate was timely.

B. Merits of reinstatement

"A party must exercise due diligence in pursuing his or her claim before the Commission." Banks v. Industrial Commission, 345 Ill. App. 3d 1138, 1143, 804 N.E.2d 629 (2004). On a petition to reinstate before the Commission, the burden is on the claimant to allege and prove facts justifying the relief sought. Banks, 345 Ill. App. 3d at 1140. Petitioner argues the claims merit reinstatement because they have been diligently pursued, and despite the fact the interactions with billing providers extended the process longer than expected, the claims are at the point of resolution, either via settlement or trial on the merits. The Commission agrees and finds Petitioner exercised due diligence in prosecuting the claims. In so doing, the Commission places great emphasis on the fact that prior to learning of the dismissal, Petitioner's Counsel prepared for, and requested, a hearing on the merits. The Commission finds Petitioner diligently prosecuted the claims and demonstrated sufficient justification for reinstatement. The Commission finds the Petition to Reinstate was properly granted, and we affirm and adopt the Arbitrator's order.

II. Respondent's Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract

On February 22, 2019, Arbitrator Glaub approved the settlement contract. Respondent argues the settlement contract should be rescinded because there was no meeting of the minds. In so doing, Respondent suggests the original offer was orally revoked by a counteroffer made the morning of January 4, 2019 and revoked in writing in his January 24, 2019 email, yet despite it being "crystal clear" there was no meeting of the minds, "Petitioner's counsel essentially misrepresented to the Arbitrator that there was an agreement to settle the case for $5,768.40 when he submitted settlement contracts for approval, under the totality of the circumstances."

A. January 4, 2019

At the January 4, 2019 hearing, Petitioner's Counsel made the following statements:

> Petitioner's attorney continued to work to resolve the case; and, in fact, the Petitioner finally agreed to accept the settlement offer and signed settlement contracts, which prior to this hearing today have actually been sent in the mail to your Honor. I understand those won't be approved, obviously, until this is resolved. (T. 10-11) (Emphasis added); and
> Furthermore, I don't believe at any time despite Respondent complains that it took a long time they withdrew their offer or decided we don't want to settle it anymore or we want to go to trial now, the deal is off the table, that never happened. (T. 15).

The Commission finds these statements evidence Petitioner's Counsel was clearly operating under the understanding that the settlement agreement remained in effect. We emphasize Respondent was present when Petitioner advised the Arbitrator that the executed settlement contracts had already been mailed to him, with approval dependent on how the reinstatement petition was resolved, and did nothing to suggest the contract was void. Instead, Counsel's statement to Arbitrator Glaub reflects the only issue with the contract was the petition to reinstate must be resolved first:

> I feel this is a jurisdictional argument; and that unless you reinstate, there is no jurisdiction to approve the contracts, and I attach the case to my motion which specifically holds or demonstrates the failure to read an e-mail or failure to properly register a firm's e-mail address with the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission is not an excuse or valid defense to proper notice of an e-mail being sent. T. 19.

The Commission finds the record does not support Respondent's contention there was no longer a meeting of the minds as of January 4, 2019. To be clear, when the parties appeared before Arbitrator Glaub, nothing was said or done which would indicate the offer had been revoked and the parties' executed contract was no longer valid. The Commission finds the tenor of Respondent's brief is unnecessarily obstreperous, and we are troubled by the casual accusation of malfeasance.

B. January 24, 2019 Email

The Commission finds the January 24, 2019 email served as a clear statement that the settlement agreement was no longer in effect. Therein, Respondent's Counsel expressly stated the compromise offer was rescinded and indicated he considered the original offer void:

> Failure to register a firm e-mail at the Commission is not a valid defense. Therefore in light of your rejection of the compromise $3000 offer, the offer is rescinded, just like the void settlement contract on the dismissed case, which was executed by Petitioner 1 1/3 years after receipt of the contract offer.

At that point, there was definitive evidence there was no longer a meeting of the minds. Unfortunately, that was not communicated to the Arbitrator prior to his approval of the contract. The Commission grants Respondent's Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract and remands the matters to the Arbitrator.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Arbitrator's Order granting reinstatement is hereby affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent's Motion to Rescind Approved Settlement Contract is granted, and the cases are remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision.

ORDER

The Petitioner's Motion to Reinstate cases 15 WC 9372 and 15 WC 9373 is allowed. The Arbitrator notes that the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission implemented a new system to send out Notices of Dismissal. That new system was only implemented on July 1, 2018. Under the new system, written Notice of Dismissals were to be send out via electronic mail transmission. Under the prior system, written Notice of Dismissals were sent out via US Mail.

The Arbitrator had granted Respondent's Motion to dismiss these matters on August 28, 2018. The Arbitrator notes that the cases were above the Red Line on August 28, 2018 and that the Arbitrator had denied multiple previous requests from the respondent's attorney to dismiss this claim. The Arbitrator notes petitioner's attorney was not present on August 28, 2018.

Respondent's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that he received a Notice of Case dismissal on September 4, 2018. The Notice of Case Dismissals are dated 8/31/18 by the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission. Respondent's attorney advised the Arbitrator that he did not mail or e-mail a copy of Notice of Case Dismissals that he received to the petitioner's attorney.

Petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that he never received a copy of the Notice of Case Dismissal via e-mail or via US Mail from the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission. Petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that he only discovered on November 15, 2018 that the cases had been dismissed when he requested his clerk obtain a trial date at the next status call. Petitioner's attorney represented that when his clerk advised him that the cases had been dismissed, he promptly filed a Motion to Reinstate on November 20, 2018. The Notice of Motion filed with the Commission indicated that the Motion would be presented to the Arbitrator on 12/12/18. The parties by agreement reset that the Motion to the 1/2/19 status call. The parties selected a Hearing date of 1/4/19 for full arguments On the Record.

The Arbitrator further notes that the petitioner's attorney had been actively working on these claims. Specifically, petitioner's attorney had actually worked out a resolution of these claims with respondent's attorney. Petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that he had been working to resolve disputed medical bills. The petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator he had been unable to locate his client to execute the settlement contracts. The petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that subsequent to filing his Motion to Reinstate, he had located his client. Petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator on 1/4/19 that his client had signed the settlement contracts. Petitioner's attorney represented to the Arbitrator that he would also be prepared to proceed Arbitration.

The Arbitrator bases his Decision on petitioner's attorney representation that he never received a Written Notice of Case Dismissal from the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration that petitioner's attorney had been attentive to these claims and had performed all the work necessary to put the claims in a position to be resolved. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration that the Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission had just implemented a new system for tendering written Notice of Cases Dismissals. The Arbitrator strongly takes into consideration the fact that the Motion to Reinstate was filed promptly after he discovered that the cases were dismissed and that the Motion to Reinstate was only filed 17 days after the 60 day period to file a Motion to Reinstate had expired had petitioner's attorney received a Written Notice of Case Dismissal on September 4, 2018 as the respondent's attorney represented that he received it. The Arbitrator also strongly takes into consideration that the petitioner has been located by her attorney, has signed the settlement contracts, or in the alternative, is prepared to proceed to Arbitration.

Based on all of the above, the Arbitrator grants the petitioner's attorney Motion to Reinstate consolidated cases 15 WC 9372 and 15 WC 9373.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review under §19(b) having been filed by the Respondent and Petitioner herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of causation, temporary disability, medical expenses, and prospective medical, and being advised of the facts and law, reverses the Corrected Decision of the Arbitrator. The Commission finds Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment on June 8, 2015 which stabilized by September 18, 2015, and his current condition of ill-being is not causally related to that work injury. The Commission remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Commission, 78 Ill. 2d 327, 399 N.E.2d 1322 (1980).

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Petitioner's Testimony

This matter proceeded to arbitration on three separate occasions: November 18, 2016 (hereinafter TA); July 13, 2017 (hereinafter TB); and July 19, 2017 (hereinafter TC). Petitioner testified he was employed by Respondent as a field installer which required him to travel to customers' homes to install Lifeline equipment. TA. 20. On June 8, 2015, while traveling to a customer's home for an installation, Petitioner was involved in a motor vehicle accident. TA. 22. Petitioner testified he was jolted by the force of impact causing his neck to snap forward and backwards as well experiencing pain in his back. TA. 22. Petitioner was transported via ambulance to St. Bernard Hospital in Chicago. TA. 24.

Petitioner testified upon discharge from St. Bernard Hospital he was instructed to follow-up with his primary care physician who evaluated Petitioner the following day. TA. 27; 30. Petitioner subsequently sought treatment from Advance Physical Medicine (APM) consisting of physical therapy, stimulation treatment, and heat packs. TA. 31. On referral from APM, Petitioner testified he sought treatment from Dr. Jain who administered injections which provided little relief. TA. 33. Petitioner testified on July 15, 2015 he underwent an MRI regarding the lumbar spine and right elbow. TA. 35. Petitioner completed his treatment with APM and Dr. Jain on August 15, 2015. TA. 36.

Petitioner testified he returned to work full-duty but continued to experience leg pain and constant back pain. TA. 36; 39. On November 9, 2015, Respondent terminated Petitioner's employment which Petitioner believed to be in retaliation for his reporting of unsanitary conditions at a HUD residence. TA. 43.

Petitioner testified due to ongoing pain, he sought further medical care from Dr. Glaser who continues to treat Petitioner. TA. 46. Dr. Glaser provides Petitioner with medication-Oxycodone which helps with his pain. TA. 49. On the referral of Dr. Glaser, Petitioner was evaluated on April 5, 2016 by Dr. Miz who is recommending a fusion. TA. 50; 52. Petitioner testified he previously underwent three spinal fusions- June 2007, July 2008, and August 2009. TA. 53. Following the third spinal fusion, Petitioner continued to experience back pain but was able to return to work. TA. 54.

Petitioner testified his employment history includes working as a home health aide; a counselor; and at Dish Satellite Company which required him to crawl, carry ladders and equipment as well as wear a utility belt. TA. 56. Petitioner subsequently left Dish Satellite Company to work for Respondent due to its superior benefits. TA. 57-58. Petitioner began his employment with Respondent in December of 2014 at which time he continued to experience small amounts of back pain requiring some medication. TA. 62. Petitioner testified prior to his accident on June 8, 2015, he rated his pain two to three on a scale of ten and after, seven to eight on a scale of ten. TA. 66. Petitioner testified he is not currently working and would like to undergo the procedure being recommended by Dr. Miz. TA. 70-71.

The hearing was thereafter continued to a later date. On July 13, 2017, the hearing resumed with additional testimony, the commencement of Respondent's cross-examination of Petitioner.

On cross-examination, Petitioner testified prior to his accident, he took both Tramadol for back pain and diazepam for anxiety. TB. 10. Petitioner confirmed he advised the personnel at the emergency room regarding his history of chronic back pain. TB. 11. Petitioner confirmed he sought treatment with his primary care physician, Dr. Sedicase [sic] at the emergency room's referral. TB. 17. Petitioner agreed Dr. Sedicase [sic] released Petitioner to return to work full-duty as of June 29, 2015, but he did not return to work until August of 2015. TB. 20-21. Petitioner testified he was unable to return to work in June of 2015 due to new symptoms of shooting pain down his right leg and increased back pain. TB. 22.

Petitioner was unable to recall who referred him to Dr. Goldvekht for treatment. TB. 23. Petitioner treated with both Dr. Goldvekht who released him to return to work without restrictions as of August 21, 2015 and Dr. Jain who released him to return to work without restrictions as of August 17, 2015. TB. 25-27. Petitioner testified he sought treatment with Dr. Glaser on November 17, 2015 as a second opinion and continues to treat with Dr. Glaser. TB. 32-33.

Petitioner testified he advised Dr. Glaser regarding his prior three surgeries as well as his use of opioids for the past ten years. TB. 33-34. Petitioner confirmed he submitted to a drug test which tested positive for cocaine. TB. 38-39. Petitioner denied using cocaine to Dr. Glaser and believed he was inadvertently exposed due to his mother's use of cocaine. TB. 39-40.

Petitioner was tendered RX22- medical records of Dr. Glaser dated September 19, 2016 which he agreed memorialized a positive drug test for cocaine use. TB. 42-44. Petitioner's counsel made a standing objection to relevancy which was allowed by the arbitrator relative to the questions posed to Petitioner regarding his drug use. TB. 45.

Petitioner testified he was referred to Dr. Miz by a friend. TB. 49. Petitioner underwent a discogram as recommended by Dr. Miz. TB. 49-50. Petitioner agreed he consulted with physicians beginning in 2005 for his back condition, and his first fusion surgery performed was due to a work-related injury. TB. 50-51.

Petitioner reviewed the medical record of Dr. Payne dated June 30, 2008 which memorialized Petitioner's use of methadone. TB. 64. Petitioner testified he used methadone in 2008. Id. Over Petitioner's attorney's continued objection, Petitioner testified Dr. Payne's records memorialized that Petitioner was unable to attend the June 30, 2008 appointment due to cocaine use. TB. 66. Petitioner stated it was his mother and not he who called Dr. Payne's office regarding the missed appointment. Id. Petitioner denied having missed the appointment due to cocaine use. TB. 67. Petitioner denied ever using cocaine. TB. 68. Despite testing positive for cocaine, Petitioner again denied using cocaine. TB. 72.

Petitioner testified he injured his back on February 19, 2015 while moving an elliptical machine necessitating treatment at St. Mary's Hospital in Dyer, IN. TB. 75-76. Petitioner agreed Dr. Payne's records memorialized a history of chronic back pain since Petitioner's third surgery. TB. 77. Petitioner testified he did not seek treatment with Dr. Payne after the visit of February 19, 2015 associated with the elliptical incident. TB. 78.

Petitioner testified he treated with Dr. An in relation to his 2005 back injury. TB. 80. Dr. An performed two surgeries, on July 14, 2008 and July 30, 2009. TB. 81. Petitioner could not recall attending a functional capacity evaluation (FCE) request by Dr. An. TB. 82. Petitioner was tendered RX10, a report of an FCE dated March 16, 2010. TB. 82. Petitioner reviewed the record and agreed it stated Petitioner failed to provide maximal effort rendering the test invalid. TB. 83.

Petitioner testified while under the care of Dr. An, he also treated with Dr. Buvanendran, a pain physician. TB. 84. Dr. Buvanendran provided injections, and during Petitioner's treatment, he again tested positive for cocaine use. TB. 85. Petitioner agreed he tested positive for cocaine use in 2010 but again denied ever using cocaine. TB. 94. Petitioner explained he lived with his drug-addicted mother, and because of the living arrangements, he inadvertently ingested cocaine. TB. 95. Petitioner emphatically stated he did not use cocaine. TB. 98. Petitioner could not recall having been administered other drug tests besides the two about which he previously testified. TB. 101.

Petitioner testified in 2011 he was under the care of Dr. Budanendran for pain management. When asked about a drug test administered in 2011 wherein he again tested positive for cocaine use, he could not recall the test. TB. 103. When shown a document memorializing that Petitioner was discharged from pain management due to testing positive for cocaine use, Petitioner agreed. TB. 104. Petitioner testified he was discharged by Dr. An as no further treatment could be provided for his back condition. Id.

Petitioner was questioned regarding his smoking habit while treating with Dr. An and Dr. Budanendran and testified he both smoked and did not smoke. TB. 105. Petitioner was tendered a complete copy of Dr. An's medical records and was asked to read the following passage from the September 11, 2009 record: "The patient did verbalize that he did quit smoking which he stated that is critical for fusion to occur. We have filled out a Workers' Compensation letter for him. We will see him back in two-weeks at a time." TB. 108. Petitioner was tendered a note dated July 17, 2009 which states "The patient states he's now stopped smoking. He understands that smoking increases his risk for pseudarthrosis, right?" Id. Petitioner was tendered a note dated March 6, 2009 which states "We have had the opportunity to discuss this and the possibility that smoking may have contributed to the fusion non-union. The patient denies vehemently having smoked." TB. 109. Petitioner agreed both Dr. An and Dr. Buvanendran advised smoking was not helpful for recovery from a spinal fusion. TB. 110. Petitioner testified he continued to smoke, but despite the prior failed surgeries, he wished to proceed with another surgery. TB. 111-12.

Petitioner testified he was evaluated by Dr. Candido pursuant to Section 12 of the Act on September 29, 2015. TB. 113. Petitioner testified he fully cooperated with Dr. Candido and provided a history of prior back surgeries. TB. 113-14. Petitioner could not recall telling Dr. Candido that he did not smoke. TB. 115. Petitioner could not recall discussing illicit drug use with Dr. Candido or discussing his prior positive drug test. TB. 116.

Petitioner verified his receipt of temporary total disability benefits from the insurance carrier for the period of June 19, 2015 through August 23, 2015. TB. 116-17. Petitioner agreed he worked at Dish Network from April to December of 2014, and his work duties required significant physical activity. TB. 119. Petitioner testified he was terminated from Respondent's employ due to a conflict of interest. TB. 112. Petitioner testified he was notified of his termination on November 19, 2015. TB. 128.

On November 2, 2015, Petitioner used a vacation day and visited his mother. TB. 129. Even though Petitioner was on vacation, he wore his uniform while visiting his mother and spoke with her landlord threatening to report him to the state on abuse grounds. TB. 129. Petitioner denied using the visit for a non-work-related matter and explained he was attempting to obtain two more referrals. TB. 130. Respondent's counsel began questioning Petitioner regarding his unemployment hearing, and Petitioner's counsel's objection was sustained. Respondent's counsel requested an offer of proof be allowed as to the unemployment records, and his request was denied. TB. 134.

Petitioner reiterated he experienced a small amount of pain necessitating medication prior to his work injury. TB. 135. Petitioner testified he was not currently seeking medical treatment for his neck. TB. 136. The hearing was thereafter continued to a later date. TB. 138.

On July 19, 2017, the hearing resumed with additional testimony on cross-examination. Petitioner was tendered RX24, a record from Domain Diagnostics dated July 16, 2010. TC. 7-8. Petitioner verified the test evidenced positive use of cocaine. TC. 8. Petitioner reviewed another Domain Diagnostics record dated September 3, 2010 which also evidenced the use of cocaine by Petitioner. TC. 9-10. Petitioner reiterated he did not use cocaine but came into contact with it as he lived with his drug-addicted mother. TC. 11-12.

On re-direct examination, Petitioner testified he has a terrible memory, and he answered the questions posed to the best of his recollection. TC. 13. Petitioner testified he now recalled that Dr. Glaser referred Petitioner to Dr. Miz, and his friend referred him to Dr. Glaser and not Dr. Miz. TC. 14.

As for his back pain, Petitioner rated it on a scale of ten as a one or two prior to his accident and seven or eight after the accident. TC. 16. On re-cross examination, Petitioner was questioned as to his admitted terrible memory and how he was, though, able to remember the exact nature of his back pain prior to the accident. TC. 19. Petitioner testified he remembers some things. TC. 20. As for his memory regarding the referral to Dr. Miz, Petitioner testified Brian Odaneal was the friend who provided the referral. Petitioner conceded his testimony during the present hearing regarding the referral is different than the testimony he provided six days prior. TC. 23.

B. Medical Treatment

The medical records evidence the Chicago Fire Department was dispatched on June 18, 2015 at 10:24AM. Petitioner was found sitting in his vehicle restrained. There was no airbag deployment, and minimal damage to the vehicle. Petitioner complained of back and neck pain and was transported to St. Bernard Hospital ER. PX6.

Petitioner was evaluated at St. Bernard Hospital ER where he complained of low back pain. A CT scan was undertaken which evidenced post-surgical changes in the low back. Petitioner was provided morphine which did not relieve his pain which Petitioner attributed to his chronic use of pain medications. PX5.

On June 19, 2015, Petitioner presented to Dr. Settecase, his primary care physician, for follow-up as directed by the emergency room personnel. Petitioner complained of general soreness and stiffness throughout his body but especially in his neck and back. Dr. Settecase diagnosed an acute exacerbation of chronic back pain; renewed Petitioner's prescription for Tramadol and Norco; and authorized Petitioner off-work through June 29, 2015. PX3.

On June 22, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht evaluated Petitioner who provided a history of a motor vehicle accident resulting in pain in his neck, right elbow, mid and lower back. Dr. Goldvekht diagnosed a sprain/strain and prescribed Flexeril and Naproxen as well as physical therapy. On July 6, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht re-evaluated Petitioner who continued to complain of neck and back pain with severe pain in the elbow. Dr. Goldvekht prescribed Mobic, Flexeril and Protonix; recommended Petitioner continue with physical therapy; and recommended an MRI of the right elbow. PX4.

Thereafter, Petitioner presented to Dr. Jain, a pain specialist, on July 13, 2015. Petitioner provided a history of a motor vehicle accident causing substantial low back pain radiating into his right leg as well as right elbow pain. Dr. Jain recommended an MRI of the spine as well as injections. A caudal epidural steroid injection was provided. Petitioner was advised to continue physical therapy and current medications. Petitioner's off-work status was maintained. PX2.

On July 15, 2015, an MRI of the lumbar spine was performed which evidenced post-surgical changes as well as a protrusion at the L3-L4 level. A right elbow MRI was performed which was normal. PX2.

On July 17, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht evaluated Petitioner who continued to complain of significant back pain which was temporarily relieved by the injection. Dr. Goldvekht recommended Petitioner continue medications and treatment prescribed by Dr. Jain as well as physical therapy. Petitioner's work status remained unchanged. PX4.

On July 27, 2015, Dr. Jain reviewed the MRI finding a herniated disc at the L3-L4 level as well as L2-L3 level. Dr. Jain recommended transforaminal injections as well as possible facet injections. On August 3, 2015, Dr. Jain performed bilateral L2-L3 and L3-L4 transforaminal ESI with selective nerve root block. PX2.

On August 7, 2015, Petitioner presented to Dr. Goldvekht with continued complaints of pain in the back, neck, and elbow. Petitioner advised the injections provided him mild improvement relative to his back pain. Dr. Goldvekht recommended continued physical therapy and released Petitioner to return to work with restrictions of no lifting, alternating between sitting and standing, and no driving more than 45 minutes continuously. PX4.

On August 17, 2015, Dr. Jain evaluated Petitioner who advised the injections provided 50% relief. Petitioner stated:

> he did an hour and half of driving without stopping to evaluate whether he could return to work. He then attempted to do three installations of the product that he installs, which is lifeline for elderly people. He attempted the installations > consecutively after driving an hour and a half. The patient reports that he was able to complete the simulated work successfully and feels that he would like to go back to do a trial of full duty at work.

Dr. Jain released Petitioner for a trial return to work with a refill of his Norco medication. PX2.

On August 21, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht evaluated Petitioner who advised his lower back was improving, but he was still unable to sit for an extended period of time. Dr. Goldvekht advised Petitioner to cease physical therapy and released Petitioner to return to work without restrictions with the caution that if a flair up in symptoms occurred, Petitioner should not wait to be seen at the four-week follow-up appointment. On September 18, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht evaluated Petitioner for a final time. Petitioner continued to complain of intermittent pain in his back and neck but was otherwise fine. Dr. Goldvekht placed Petitioner at maximum medical improvement and stated, "his condition is now stable." PX4.

On November 17, 2015, Petitioner presented to Dr. Glaser for evaluation. Petitioner provided a history of back pain due to a motor vehicle accident occurring on June 18, 2015. Petitioner complained of bilateral back pain, right buttock and leg pain. Petitioner advised he previously underwent interventional treatment with Dr. Jain as well as physical therapy neither of which improved his pain. Dr. Glaser diagnosed lumbar radiculopathy, hip pain, and post-laminectomy syndrome of the lumbar spine. The implantation of a spinal cord stimulator (SCS) was discussed, and Petitioner was advised to follow-up in two weeks. On December 4, 2015, Dr. Glaser re-evaluated Petitioner whose complaints were unchanged. Dr. Glaser again discussed the implantation of SCS and continued Petitioner's medications. On January 4, 2016, Petitioner presented to Dr. Glaser with consistent complaints of pain. Dr. Glaser reviewed the IL PMP which was found inconsistent. Petitioner was cautioned and remined of his contract wherein he agreed that no other physicians would provide opioid medication. PX9.

Petitioner continued to treat with Dr. Glaser on a monthly basis from February 3, 2016 through June 22, 2016. Throughout his treatment, Petitioner complained of increased back pain with a corresponding increase in medication usage. On June 22, 2016, Petitioner advised Dr. Glaser regarding his recent evaluation with Dr. Miz who recommended a fusion at the L3-L4 level with hardware removal. PX9.

In the interim, on April 5, 2016, Dr. Miz evaluated Petitioner who complained of low back and neck pain due to a work-related injury. Petitioner recounted his prior surgeries which resulted in ongoing mechanical back pain. Petitioner denied experiencing radicular symptoms in relation to his prior back surgeries and resultant problems. Petitioner provided an additional history of a motor vehicle accident wherein he was rear-ended leading to an immediate onset of pain. Petitioner related his low back pain began to radiate into his right lower extremity. Petitioner explained his prior medical treatment consisting of multiple injections and physical therapy none of which provided sustained relief. Dr. Miz reviewed the MRI from July finding it evidenced an L3-L4 right-sided disc bulge and recommended further pain management; a possible discogram; and depending on the results of the discogram, surgery. As for the cervical spine, Dr. Miz felt surgery was not indicated. PX7.

Petitioner subsequently underwent the discogram on April 28, 2016, and, thereafter, presented to Dr. Miz on May 10, 2016. Dr. Miz reviewed the discogram and felt it was indicative of the L3-L4 disc being the pain generator. Dr. Miz recommended surgery consisting of an extension of the prior fusion to the L3 level with removal of the old instrumentation and replacement with new hardware. PX7.

Regarding Petitioner's prior back history of injury and treatment, Petitioner underwent a fusion at the L4-L5 and L5-S1 levels performed by Dr. Payne on July 26, 2006. (Dr. Payne also evaluated Petitioner on February 15, 2015 due to increased back complaints associated to Petitioner's lifting of an elliptical machine. Dr. Payne diagnosed a strain.) RX23. Due to ongoing pain complaints, Petitioner underwent revision surgeries performed by Dr. An on July 14, 2008 (two level fusion due to non-union) and July 30, 2009 (three level fusion due to pseudarthrosis). Dr. An discharged Petitioner from care but noted residual back pain. Dr. An released Petitioner to return to work with a 25 lbs. lifting restriction and avoidance of repetitive bending and twisting. Petitioner was advised to continue pain management with Dr. Buvanendran. RX24.

C. Expert Testimony

On July 28, 2016, Dr. Miz provided testimony via evidence deposition. PX1. Dr. Miz testified he is a board-certified orthopedic physician. PX1, p. 15. Dr. Miz testified consistent with his medical records. Petitioner presented on April 5, 2016 complaining of back pain radiating into the right leg. PX1, p. 10. Dr. Miz performed a physical examination and diagnosed right lumbar radiculopathy at L3-L4. PX1, p. 12. Dr. Miz testified he recommended ongoing pain management such as injections and therapy, and if such failed, then a discogram. PX1, p.13. Dr. Miz testified he re-evaluated Petitioner on May 10, 2016 following the completion of the discogram performed on April 28, 2016. PX1, p. 16. Petitioner continued to complain of pain and radicular symptoms. Id. Dr. Miz reviewed the CT scans post-discogram which he opined evidence an annular tear with dye leaking into a herniation at the L3-L4 level. PX1, p. 17. Given Petitioner's symptoms, Dr. Miz optioned Petitioner was "a reasonable candidate for his extension of decompression and fusion to the L3 level." PX1, p. 18.

Dr. Miz testified based upon a reasonable degree of medical and surgical certainty, Petitioner's current low back complaints are related to the June 18, 2015 injury. PX1, p. 18. Dr. Miz based his opinion on Petitioner's ability to function reasonably well regarding his significant back problems, albeit with some pain, but the work injury caused an onset of back pain particularly right leg pain which was previously absent. PX1, p. 19. Dr. Miz recommended further surgery consisting of an extension of the fusion to the L3-L4 level. PX1, p. 20.

On cross-examination, Dr. Miz testified he has not reviewed medical records concerning Petitioner's prior back surgeries, but he had requested Petitioner obtain the records as it would be necessary for him to review the same prior to undertaking surgery. PX1, p.24. Dr. Miz testified he reviewed the MRI images performed on July 15, 2015 and determined there were right-sided bulging discs at the L3 and L4 levels with foraminal stenosis. PX1, p.24. Respondent's counsel tender DepExRx1, a CT lumbar spine report dated October 2, 2008, to Dr. Miz who agreed such evidences findings at the L3-L4 level. PX1, p. 26-27. Dr. Miz testified the findings from the CT scan and the MRI bore some similarities but explained the CT scan describes a diffuse disc bulge whereas the MRI describes a right-sided foraminal encroachment. PX1, p. 27. Dr. Miz further explained the difference between a CT scan and an MRI- that being CT scans evaluate bone detail well, and an MRI evaluates soft tissues such as discs and nerves well. PX1, p. 28. Respondent's counsel tendered DepExRX2, a CT lumbar spine with contrast post-myelography dated April 8, 2009, to Dr. Miz who agreed it evidences a "mild diffuse posterior disc bulge with a small disc herniation in the right neuroforamen without significant stenosis." PX1, p. 29. Dr. Miz opined neither report caused him to alter his opinions as to causation. PX1, p. 30.

Dr. Miz agreed Petitioner suffered from lumbar spondylosis which was classified as a chronic condition not associated with Petitioner's motor vehicle accident. PX1, p. 32. Dr. Miz testified he discussed with Petitioner the possibility of further pain management, but Petitioner did not pursue such treatment prior to the surgical recommendation. PX1, p. 35.

Dr. Miz confirmed Petitioner continued to smoke and use tobacco. PX1, p. 37. Dr. Miz explained smoking has a significant effect and a negative impact on fusion success especially in light of Petitioner's prior failed fusions. PX1, P. 38.

On October 20, 2016, Dr. Candido provided testimony via evidence deposition. RX17. Dr. Candido testified he is a board-certified anesthesiologist with an added qualification in pain management. RX17, p.5. Dr. Candido evaluated Petitioner on September 29, 2015 pursuant to Section 12 of the Act. RX17, p. 9. Dr. Candido obtained a history from Petitioner who stated he suffered from chronic lumbar pain and was involved in a motor vehicle accident on June 18, 2015. RX17, p. 14. Petitioner described pain in his neck, both shoulders, his trunk, right chest area, and right elbow. RX17, p. 14-15. Petitioner reviewed his prior treatment with Dr. Settecase, Dr. Goldvekht, and Dr. Jain. Dr. Jain provided several injections. RX17, p. 16. Petitioner described his back pain as an 8 or 8 1/2 as well as intermittent muscle spasms. RX17, p. 16-17. Petitioner was able to drive 40 minutes before experiencing shooting pains down his leg. RX17, p. 17.

Dr. Candido stated Petitioner's medications were as follows: Norco, Tramadol, diazepam, Oxybutynin, Albuterol, Nebulizer, a transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulator, and a Polar Ice Machine. RX17, p.18. Dr. Candido performed a physical evaluation from head to feet with positive findings in the lumbar spine specifically tenderness at the lumbar L4 facet joints and "radiating pain in a dermatomal distribution at L4-L5 bilaterally, but sensation was intact in all dermatomes." PX17, p. 21. Dr. Candido opined Petitioner's cervical and right elbow exhibit no problems in relation to the work-related injury; as for Petitioner's lumbar spine, the motor vehicle accident resulted "in a transient worsening of the lumbar facet joints at L4 and possibly at L5 and that the transient worsening was not expected to be permanent or to result in any long-term impairment." RX17, p. 24-5. Dr. Candido based his opinion, in part, on Petitioner's history of a lack of back problems and very little pain prior to the motor vehicle accident. RX17, p. 25-6. Dr. Candido explained his opinion regarding the July 15, 2015 MRI- that the MRI evidenced a long-term degenerative process and not an acute trauma. RX17, p. 27. Dr. Candido opined Petitioner suffered an acute exacerbation of his chronic lumbar spondylosis which was improving as of September 25, 2015. RX17, p. 28. Dr. Candido found no evidence of radiculopathy only pain in the lumbar facet joints. Id.

Dr. Candido performed Waddell testing and identified only one of five positive categories. RX17, p.30. Dr. Candido was perplexed as to why Petitioner underwent epidural steroid injections as Petitioner's examination was negative for radiculopathy. RX17, p. 31. Dr. Candido recommended lumbar facet and/or medial branch block injections. RX17, p. 32. At the time of the evaluation, Petitioner was working full-duty, and Dr. Candido expected maximum medical improvement to be obtained in four weeks' time. RX17, p. 33.

Dr. Candido was subsequently provided with additional medical records and, thereafter, prepared an addendum report. RX17, p. 34. Based on his review of the additional records, Dr. Candido opined Petitioner's lumbar facet syndrome was not related to the motor vehicle accident. RX17, p. 35. Dr. Candido explained the records he reviewed evidence a lengthy history of low back pain with an injury in February of 2015 and chronic pain since Petitioner's third surgery. RX17, p. 36. The medical records contradicted Petitioner's history of an asymptomatic back prior to the motor vehicle accident. RX17, p. 35-6. Dr. Candido testified it was his opinion Petitioner suffered from chronic lumbar spondylosis which pre-dated the motor vehicle accident. RX17, p.37. Dr. Candido neither agreed nor disagreed with Dr. Settecase's opinion that the motor vehicle accident caused an acute exacerbation of Petitioner lumbar pain as Dr. Candido did not evaluate Petitioner until September 29, 2015 at which time he found no condition of ill-being associated to the motor vehicle accident. Id. Dr. Candido testified the transforaminal and caudal injections were not reasonable as they were not medically indicated. RX17, p. 39.

On cross-examination, Dr. Candido testified he is not board-certified in either orthopedics or neurosurgery and has not performed fusion surgery. RX17, p.42-3. Dr. Candido testified he did not review the actual films from the diagnostic tests, only the reports. RX17, p.45. Dr. Candido reviewed the CT scan report from October 2, 2008 which found "a diffuse disc bulge, mild central canal stenosis, mild bilateral foramina, and moderate to severe facet joint arthropathy; and there is a laminectomy at L4 with bilateral pedicle screws" and the CT scan report of April 7, 2009 which found "a mild diffuse disc bulge rightward, a small disc herniation in the right neural foramen without significant stenosis." RX17, p. 46. Dr. Candido reviewed the MRI report of July 15, 2015 which "showed lumbar spondylosis with a right paracentral, slash, neural foraminal disc/osteophyte complex at L3-4 contributing to right neural foraminal and lateral recess stenosis at this level." RX17, p. 47. Dr. Candido explained, "I think it's not a fair comparison to compare a CT scan with an MRI. The two imaging modalities are grossly inconsistent one with the other." RX17, p. 48. Dr. Candido further explained CT scans are useful for identifying bone structures but much less useful for identifying soft tissues like discs and ligaments whereas an MRI visualizes soft tissue structures exceptional well. RX17, p. 48-9. Dr. Candido explained the CT scan and MRI are different studies such that the language used is different, but the ultimate findings are essentially the same. RX17, p.50

Dr. Candido testified Petitioner complained of right leg pain during his evaluation. RX17, p. 53. Dr. Candido explained right leg pain can be caused by stenosis as well as a variety of other causes. RX17, p. 53. Dr. Candido further explained radiculopathy is not solely pain but implies pain coupled with sensory changes, motor weakness, and reflex change. RX17, p. 56. Dr. Candido testified an asymptomatic disc herniation can become symptomatic due to a car accident as well as with no provocation at all. RX17, p.59. Dr. Candido re-iterated his opinion regarding causation changed after he was provided medical records which contradicted Petitioner's history to him of no pain following Petitioner's back surgeries and an immediate onset of pain after the motor vehicle accident. RX17, p. 60.

CONCLUSION OF LAW

A. Accident/Average Weekly Wage

It is undisputed Petitioner sustained an accident on June 18, 2015 when he was involved in a motor vehicle collision which lead to an injury to his back. The parties stipulated to an average weekly wage equaling $640.00.

B. Causal Relationship

The Commission finds Petitioner sustained a temporary aggravation of his lumbar spine condition (chronic lumbar pain with three prior fusion surgeries) which stabilized as of September 18, 2015, the date of maximum medical improvement as found by Dr. Goldvehkt and consistent with the opinions of Dr. Candido. For the reasons stated below, Petitioner failed to prove his current condition of ill-being and need for treatment is related to his accident of June 18, 2015.

"[T]he Commission is not bound by the arbitrator's findings and may properly determine the credibility of witnesses, weigh their testimony and assess the weight to be given to the evidence. [citation omitted]." R.A. Cullinan and Sons v. The Industrial Commission, 216 Ill. App. 3d 1048, 1054, 575 N.E.2d 1240 (1991). The "interpretation of the testimony of medical witnesses is particularly within the province of the Industrial Commission. [citation omitted]." A.O. Smith Corporation v. The Industrial Commission, 51 Ill. 2d 533, 537, 283 N.E.2d 875 (1972).

Immediately following the accident, Petitioner was transported via ambulance to St. Bernard Hospital ER where he complained of back pain. A CT scan was performed evidencing post-surgical changes with the remainder of findings normal. PX5. On June 19, 2015, at the direction of the emergency room personnel, Petitioner sought treatment with his primary care physician, Dr. Settecase complaining of general soreness especially in his neck and back. Dr. Settecase diagnosed an acute exacerbation of Petitioner's chronic back pain and authorized him off-work for ten days. PX3.

Due to Petitioner's continued back pain, he sought treatment with both Dr. Goldvekht and Dr. Jain, simultaneously. Both Dr. Goldvehkt and Dr. Jain prescribed physical therapy and medications. Dr. Jain additionally provided injections in July and August of 2015. On August 7, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht released Petitioner to return to work of no lifting, alternating between sitting and standing, and no driving more than 45 minutes continuously. PX4.

On August 17, 2015, Dr. Jain evaluated Petitioner who advised the injections provided 50% relief. Petitioner stated:

> he did an hour and half of driving without stopping to evaluate whether he could return to work. He then attempted to do three installations of the product that he installs, which is lifeline for elderly people. He attempted the installations consecutively after driving an hour and a half. The patient reports that he was able to complete the simulated work successfully and fells that he would like to go back to do a trial of full duty at work.

Dr. Jain released Petitioner for a trial return to work with a refill of his Norco medication. PX2.

Petitioner testified he returned to work for Respondent in August of 2015 performing his full-duty responsibilities. TA. 36. Petitioner continued to work full-duty until his termination by Respondent in November of 2015. TB. 119.

During his return to full-duty work from August to November of 2015, Petitioner was re-evaluated by Dr. Goldvekht on two occasions, August 21, 2015 and September 18, 2015. During both evaluations Petitioner voiced improvement with his complaints focused on intermittent back pain. Dr. Goldvekht placed Petitioner at maximum medical improvement as of September 18, 2015 finding Petitioner's condition had stabilized, and Petitioner sought no further treatment from either Dr. Goldvekht or Dr. Jain thereafter.

At trial Petitioner testified he continued to experience significant low back pain as well as a new symptom of right leg pain. The Commission affords little weight to Petitioner's testimony in this regard as the medical records fail to support the same. On August 21, 2015, Dr. Goldvekht specifically advised Petitioner to return sooner if he should experience any increase in symptoms. More importantly, the medical records relating to Petitioner's treatment prior to November of 2015 fail to memorialize right leg pain save one history provided to Dr. Jain on July 13, 2015. In the emergency room, Petitioner denied experiencing lower extremity symptoms and made no mention of such symptoms to either Dr. Settecase or Dr. Goldvekht. Moreover, there is no question Petitioner suffered from a long-standing pre-existing back condition necessitating the continued use of narcotic pain medication. The records memorialize a significant history of ongoing back pain as well as radiculopathy regarding the lower extremities. RX23; RX24.

During the multiple days of testimony, Petitioner was questioned repeatedly regarding his illicit drug use specifically as to his cocaine use as well as his history of smoking. Petitioner's explanations regarding his positive drug testing results strain credibility, and Petitioner was certainly less than forthright to his medical providers concerning his smoking habit; neither issue, though, bears on Petitioner's credibility as it relates to his testimony concerning his back and leg pain post-accident. As stated above, Petitioner's credibility is impugned by the contemporaneous medical records as well as the pre-accident records.

Additionally, Dr. Goldvekht's opinion placing Petitioner at maximum medical improvement as of September 18, 2015 is supported by the opinions of Dr. Candido. Dr.

Candido initially found a causal relationship between Petitioner's accident and his condition of ill-being and need for treatment. As Dr. Candido explained he predicated his opinion on the history provided by Petitioner "—the low back condition had been relatively quiescent until the motor vehicle accident had occurred." RX17, p.25. Moreover, as of September 29, 2015, Dr. Candido found no evidence of radiculopathy. RX17, p.28. Once Dr. Candido was presented with additional medical documentation, he revised his opinion finding Petitioner's present condition of ill-being and need for ongoing treatment was unrelated to his accident but due to his chronic degenerative condition. RX17, p. 36. Dr. Candido explained Petitioner's underlying condition of chronic lumbar spondylosis and chronic failed lumbar spine surgeries as well as chronic pain complaints were long-standing in nature as evidenced by the medical records as well as the diagnostic testing which pre-dated his work accident. RX17, p.36-7.

Both Dr. Candido and Dr. Miz testified at length regarding the differences between a CT scan image and MRI image, and both agreed each scan evaluated different body structures with more precision, CT scan- bone structures and MRI- soft tissues and discs. PX1, p. 28; RX17, p. 48-9. Ultimately, Dr. Candido opined Petitioner's pre and post-accident scans evidence essentially the same findings. RX17, p. 50.

Certainly, Dr. Miz offered an opinion contrary to that of Dr. Candido in finding the accident aggravated Petitioner's long-standing condition. PX1, p. 19. Dr. Miz, though, predicated his entire opinion on Petitioner's subjective history of increase of back pain and new right leg symptoms, admitting he had requested pre-accident medical records but had failed to receive and review the same. PX1, p.24. An expert's opinion is only as valid as the facts upon which it is based. Gross v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2011 IL App (4th) 100615WC. Dr. Miz did not alter his opinion as to causation when presented with Petitioner's pre-accident scans, but given Dr. Miz' lack of a complete understanding of Petitioner's long-standing pre-existing medical condition, the Commission affords little weight to his opinion.

Therefore, based on the opinion of Dr. Goldvekht finding Petitioner sustained a sprain/strain and his back condition stabilized as of September 18, 2015 which is further supported by the opinions of Dr. Candido, the Commission finds Petitioner failed to prove a causal relationship between his work accident and his current condition of ill-being and need for additional treatment.

C. Temporary Total Disability Benefits

"To show entitlement to TTD benefits, claimant must prove not only that he did not work, but that he was unable to work. [citation omitted]." City of Granite City v. The Industrial Commission, 279 Ill. App. 3d 1087, 1090, 666 N.E.2d 827 (1996). Further "[t]he dispositive test is whether the claimant's condition has stabilized, that is, whether the claimant has reached maximum medical improvement. [citation omitted]." Mechanical Devices v. The Industrial Commission, 344 Ill. App. 3d 752, 759. Petitioner reached maximum medical improvement as of September 18, 2015.

20IWCC0021

The Commission finds Petitioner entitled to temporary total disability benefits for the period of June 19, 2015 through August 23, 2015, the date Petitioner returned to work full duty. The Respondent is granted a credit of $5904.16 for benefits paid.

D. Medical Expenses

Section 8(a) of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act entitles a claimant to recover medical expenses which are reasonable, necessary, and causally related to an accident. 820 ILCS 305/8(a) (West 2010); Zarley v. The Industrial Commission, 84 Ill. 2d 380, 418 N.E.2d 718 (1981). The same standard applies to prospective medical care. Homebrite Ace Hardware v. The Industrial Commission, 351 Ill. App. 3d 333, 814 N.E.2d 126 (2004). Petitioner sustained a temporary aggravation to his low back condition due to his accident of June 8, 2015 with maximum medical improvement being reached by September 18, 2015. The Commission finds Petitioner's treatment rendered through September 18, 2015 is causal connected to his work accident, and the medical expenses associated with that care are reasonable and necessary under Section 8(a) of the Act. Petitioner's request for prospective medical care is denied.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner's condition of ill-being following his undisputed June 18, 2015 work accident reached maximum medical improvement as of September 18, 2015.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay to the Petitioner the sum of $426.67 per week for a period of 9 3/7 weeks, representing June 19, 2015 through August 23, 2015, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b), and that as provided in §19(b) of the Act, this award in no instance shall be a bar to a further hearing and determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay the reasonable, necessary and related medical expenses as contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 2 incurred prior to and including September 18, 2015, pursuant to §8(a) of the Act, subject to the Medical Fee Schedule pursuant to §8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent is entitled to a credit under §8(j) of the Act; provided Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims and demands by any providers of the benefits for which Respondent is receiving credit under this order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury. The Respondent paid $5,904.16 in benefits.

Bond for the removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $47,800.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DISSENT

I find that the evidence supports that Petitioner's current condition is causally related to his June 18, 2015 accident and further would order the Respondent to provide and pay for the surgery proposed by Dr. Miz.

The Petitioner openly testified that he had three prior fusions. The first was performed in June 2007; the second in July 2008; and, the third in August 2009. Following the third fusion, Petitioner testified that he was able to return to work despite experiencing a little pain. Between the third fusion in August 2009 and the start of his employment with Respondent in December 2014, Petitioner worked as a home health care aide, a counselor at a juvenile sex offender facility, and with Dish Satellite Company. While employed with Dish, he would install satellite dishes, which required him to carry 50-pound ladders, carry equipment up the ladders, wear a utility belt, make connections, and crawl on his hands and knees. He described his job duties as physical in nature. Despite experiencing a small amount of pain, he was able to work without any restrictions. Petitioner was then hired by the Respondent on December 8, 2014. At the time of his hire, he testified that he had a small amount of back pain for which he would take Ibuprofen or Tramadol. He rated his pain as a 2-3 out of 10, and he was able to work without restrictions.

On February 15, 2015, Petitioner injured his back while moving an elliptical. Petitioner presented to Dr. Payne and was taken off work for this non-work-related event. Petitioner returned to work one week later and last saw Dr. Payne on February 19, 2015. Petitioner continued to work without restrictions thereafter.

Petitioner was involved in a motor vehicle accident on June 18, 2015. He was rear ended while driving the company vehicle. This caused damage to the rear of the vehicle. Petitioner was transported via ambulance to St. Bernard Hospital where he was treated and released. Petitioner followed-up with his primary care physician and later received physical therapy and injections for lumbar pain radiating to the right leg.

Petitioner underwent a lumbar MRI on July 15, 2015. The MRI revealed postsurgical changes from the posterior spinal fusion and laminectomies with mild postcontrast enhancement consistent with scar tissue/fibrosis. The MRI also revealed lumbar spondylosis with a right paracentral/neural foraminal disc/osteophyte complex at L3-4 contributing to right neural foraminal and lateral recess stenosis at this level.

Petitioner testified that following the accident, his pain was 7-8 out of 10. He described his pain as constant and severe, and never goes away.

It is well established that employers take their employees as they find them. O'Fallen School District No. 90 v. Industrial Comm'n, 313 Ill. App. 3d 413, 417, 729 N.E.2d 523, 246 Ill. Dec. 150 (2000). To result in compensation under the Act, a claimant's employment need only be a causative factor in his condition of ill-being; it need not be the sole cause or even the primary cause. Sisbro Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 207 Ill. 2d 193, 205, 797 N.E.2d 665, 278 Ill. Dec. 70 (2003). "[A] preexisting condition does not prevent recovery under the Act if that condition was aggravated or accelerated by the claimant's employment." Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 92 Ill. 2d 30, 36, 440 N.E.2d 861, 65 Ill. Dec. 6 (1982). Further, a chain of events which demonstrates a previous condition of good health, an accident, and a subsequent injury resulting in disability may be sufficient circumstantial evidence to prove a causal nexus between the accident and the employee's injury. Int'l Harvester v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Ill. 2d 59, 63-64 (1982).

Without question, Petitioner had a pre-existing back condition that was causing him some pain. While he was not in a condition of "good health" prior to the accident, he was able to work full-duty and without restriction until the accident. Since the accident, Petitioner has complained of constant pain, an increase in his pain level, and has been taken off work. I find that the Respondent has offered no credible evidence that his current condition is related to anything other than the accident. Because of this, I would find that the accident, in the very least, caused an aggravation of his pre-existing condition and that his current condition is causally related to the work accident.

The Respondent argues that the Petitioner's credibility was so damaged by his denials concerning drug use that his claim should be denied. I agree that the Petitioner's credibility is suspect but find that the objective evidence in this matter supports his claim. He was in a motor vehicle accident requiring emergency room care. The MRI done within one month of the accident showed objectively that the Petitioner has pathology at the level of L3-4, the level above his prior fusions. While a discogram does include some subjective components, the Petitioner did show damage to the L3-4 disc which corresponded to his MRI findings. Dr. Miz, whom I find persuasive, based his opinions on those objective test findings.

I find the opinion of Dr. Miz more persuasive than the opinion of Dr. Candido. Dr. Miz opined that Petitioner's current condition and need for the L3-L4 fusion was related to the motor vehicle accident. His opinion was based, in part, upon the fact that Petitioner was functioning reasonably well and working full-time at the time of the accident. He was involved in the accident and developed a subsequent onset of back pain including radicular right leg pain that Dr. Miz noted was not present prior to the accident.

Dr. Miz noted that the July 15, 2015 MRI revealed right sided bulges and some foraminal stenosis at L3-L4. He noted that this finding was different than the prior CT scan which described a diffused disc bulge. Dr. Miz noted that the July 15, 2015 MRI revealed a more significant condition than the older diagnostic studies. He noted that the stenosis seen on the MRI correlated with the radicular symptoms and was not present on the prior reports.

Dr. Candido's opinion is not supported by the evidence. Dr. Candido diagnosed Petitioner with facet joint syndrome that was not related to the accident. His opinion was based on the prior medical records and he noted that the injury from moving the elliptical caused an additional exacerbation of Petitioner's underlying condition. He notes, however, that the work accident did result in transient worsening of Petitioner's L4 lumbar facet joint, but it was not expected to be permanent. After reviewing the record, I find no evidence that Petitioner's post-accident condition was temporary or ever returned to its pre-accident condition.

Therefore, I would find the Petitioner's current condition is causally related to his accident and that the proposed surgery is a reasonable treatment option warranted under Section 8 of the Act.

FINDINGS OF FACT 15 WC 034 957

The Arbitrator notes the hearing in this matter occurred on three separate dates including November 18, 2016, July 13, 2017 & July 19, 2017.Citations to the transcript include specific testimony date where necessary.

Petitioner, a 35-year-old male, worked for Respondent as a Field Installer, which entails installing "Lifeline" devices in customers' homes (Tx. 20). Petitioner claims a date of accident of June 18, 2015 on his Application. He testified that on June 18, 2015 he was driving to his next installation. While driving on Interstate – 94 he was in a motor vehicle accident (Tx. 21). He was rear-ended then immediately driven via ambulance from the scene of the motor vehicle accident to St. Bernard Hospital. (Tx. 22).

Petitioner's Medical Treatment

Petitioner was seen at the emergency department of St. Bernard Hospital on June 18, 2015. Petitioner testified the examining physician at St. Bernard instructed him to follow up with his primary care physician (11/18/2016 Tx. 27). Emergency room referrals do not under law constitute a first choice of doctors by the patient under case law for section 8 choice purposes.

On direct examination, Petitioner testified he did not treat with his primary care doctor, Dr. Michael Settecase (Tx. 30). However he later said he saw Dr. Settecase as a follow-up from the emergency room visit, and the attending physician at St. Bernard Hospital told him to see Dr. Settecase (07/13/2017 Tx. 17). Petitioner testified he has been seeing Dr. Settecase since 2004 (Tx. 17). A work status letter dated June 19, 2015 by Dr. Settecase is Rx. 1). Dr. Settecase wrote Petitioner may return to work on June 29, 2015 "after reevaluation due to motor vehicle collision." (Rx. 1) Petitioner testified he did not return to work for Philips after the June 29, 2015 full duty release date (Tx. 20). He stated he did not return to work for Philips until August of 2015 (Tx. 21).

Petitioner testified when he started working for Respondent he still had small amounts of pain in his back (11/18/2016 Tx. 62). He noted he was taking Ibuprofen throughout the day, and his doctor gave him a narcotic to help sleeping at night. He testified Dr. Settecase, his primary care physician, is the doctor who gave him pain medications (Tx. 62).

Petitioner testified he next went to Advanced Physical Medicine to obtain treatment (11/18/2016 Tx. 30). He stated that at Advanced Physical Medicine he was provided physical therapy, stim treatments and heat packs (Tx. 31). On cross examination, Petitioner testified he could not recall who referred him to see Dr. Goldvekht at Advanced Physical Medicine (07/13/2017 Tx. 23). While treating at Advanced Physical Medicine Petitioner was referred to Dr. Jain for injections in his mid-back (11/18/2016 Tx. 32). Dr. Jain issued a Patient Status Form through Pinnacle Pain Management Specialists indicating that Petitioner may continue regular duty work as of August 17, 2015. (Rx. 2). Petitioner testified he also underwent MRI scans to the lumbar spine and right elbow (Tx. 35).

Petitioner testified he was released to work without any restrictions as of August 21, 2015 by Dr. Goldvekht at Advanced Physical Medicine, and he did in fact return to work at that time (07/13/2017 Tx. 26-27). Advanced Physical Medicine and Dr. Goldvekht records read Petitioner was released to return to work with no restrictions as of September 18, 2015. (Rx. 4). Petitioner confirmed on cross examination that he did return to work without restrictions for Philips after the September 18, 2015 Disability Release was issued (Tx. 28). On direct examination, Petitioner testified he returned to work for Philips shortly after he completed his treatment with Advanced Physical Medicine (11/18/2016 Tx. 36). He was performing his full job duties when he returned to work (Tx. 37).

Petitioner testified he next sought further treatment with Dr. Glaser with Pain Specialists (11/18/2016 Tx. 46). He testified he decided to seek a "second opinion" with Dr. Glaser (Tx. 46). On cross examination, Petitioner testified he did not recall originally stating he sought a second opinion for his back pain with Dr. Glaser (07/13/2017 Tx. 29). He later testified that he was referred to Dr. Glaser by his friend named Brian (07/19/2017 Tx. 14, 21). Petitioner's initial visit with Dr. Glaser was on November 17, 2015. (Rx. 5). He was still following up with Dr. Glaser as of the hearing on November 18, 2016, and continued to follow up with Dr. Glaser as of the hearing on July 13, 2017 (07/13/2017 Tx. 32). Petitioner testified he notified Dr. Glaser of the three prior surgical procedures performed on his back (Tx. 33-34).

On direct examination, Petitioner testified that there was a time on one occasion where he failed a drug test and tested positive for an illicit narcotic (11/18/2016 Tx. 72). Petitioner testified on cross examination that he has never "knowingly" used cocaine (07/13/2017 Tx. 39).
The Arbitrator finds no proof of intoxication exists under the 2005 reform section 11 of the Act.

On cross examination, Petitioner admitted that he answered in the affirmative on direct examination when he was asked whether there was an instance that he tested positive for cocaine (07/13/2017 Tx. 37). Petitioner admitted that he underwent drug testing through Dr. Glaser's practice on August 22, 2016, and further admitted that he tested positive for cocaine on this date (Tx. 47). Dr. Glaser's office visit notes dated September 19, 2016 indicate Petitioner's last drug test was on 08/22/2016, which "was inconsistent with medications prescribed + cocaine, benzo, opiates, oxycodone." (Rx. 22). Dr. Glaser's notes from this date also state, "Pt remains adamant that he did not take cocaine." (Rx. 22).

Petitioner testified that on October 21, 2016, during his visit with Dr. Glaser he told Dr. Glaser that his mother had been using cocaine (Rx. 6; 07/13/2017 Tx. 38). He also admitted that he told Dr. Glaser his mother had been staying with him during that time (Tx. 38). Petitioner testified that the drug test to which he submitted indicated a positive result for cocaine (Tx. 39). However, Petitioner testified that he told Dr. Glaser that any cocaine detected in his system was inadvertent. He testified, "I never knowingly used cocaine" (Tx. 39). When Petitioner was asked to clarify on cross examination how he would test positive for cocaine while never having knowingly used cocaine, Petitioner stated, "My guess is cleaning up after my mother, there is residue on countertops that you think was sugar, was wiping it off, it turns out to be or inadvertently injecting [sic] it somehow, getting through the pours [sic], I don't know." (Tx. 39-40). When asked during cross examination whether he previously testified that he had used cocaine, Petitioner stated, "I can't recall. I can't recall." (Tx. 42). Petitioner testified that the drug test in question, in which he blamed his mother for the positive result, took place on August 22, 2016 (Tx. 47).

The evidence or reasonable inference of addictive behavior is not determinative of the ultimate prescriptive advice on the medical side- whether Dr. Miz' surgical recommendation is reasonable, necessary and causally related to the accident. Assuming the addictive behavior underscored heavily upon cross examination under a continuing objection of relevance, is accepted , it did not rise to the level of required proof under the specific black letter law of section 11 of the 2005 " reform" Act. Respondent's intent is on an attack of credibility as indicated on the record.

Petitioner testified that he was seen by Dr. George Miz, who recommended further surgery to the lumbar spine, but he has not received the recommended treatment to date (11/18/2016 Tx. 70). He testified that he wishes to proceed with the surgical treatment that has been recommended (Tx. 70). With regard to his treatment with Dr. Miz, Petitioner testified he was referred to Dr. Miz by a friend (07/13/2017 Tx. 49). Petitioner later said Dr. Glaser had referred him to Dr. Miz (07/19/2017 Tx. 14). Respondent holds to the first testimony , however, the records of the doctors indicate and are the best evidence of the actual referral by Dr. Glaser to Dr. Miz Petitioner testified Dr. Miz recommended that Petitioner undergo a lumbar discogram (07/13/2017 Tx. 49).

Petitioner testified he received Temporary Total Disability benefits for the time period of June 19, 2015 through August 23, 2015 (07/13/2017 Tx. 117).

Moreover, Mr. Crawford testified he underwent three previous lumbar surgeries (11/18/2016 Tx. 53). The first fusion procedure occurred in 2007, the second was in July of 2008, and the third was in July of 2009 (Tx. 53). Petitioner testified after the third procedure in 2009, there was still pain, but it was enough to manage to go back to work (Tx. 54).

When he was asked during redirect examination how his memory is in general, Petitioner responded, "It's terrible" (07/19/2017 Tx. 12).

Prior Medical Treatment with Dr. William Payne

On cross examination, Petitioner testified he has been seeing doctors for treatment to his back since 2005 (07/13/2017 Tx. 50). Petitioner testified that he treated with Dr. William Payne in 2006 and 2007 for his low back as part of a work-related injury (Tx. 51). Dr. Payne's treatment records are contained in a response pursuant to subpoena and identified as Rx. 23. Petitioner was asked if he believes he has an addictive personality, and testified, "I smoke cigarettes for 20 years." (Tx. 60). The medical records of Dr. Payne dated June 3, 2008 indicate Petitioner had been taking Methadone (Rx. 23). Petitioner admitted on cross examination that he had been taking Methadone at that time (Tx. 64). Petitioner admitted that on June 3, 2008 Dr. Payne stated Petitioner's mother called him and said he could not attend his appointment because of cocaine use (Rx. 23; Tx. 66). However, Petitioner testified he did not actually miss that appointment due to cocaine use (Tx. 67). He testified, "Dr. Payne stated that my mother called and stated that, that is not coming from me. I missed the appointment due to transportation issues probably he's getting that from my mother, not me" (Tx. 67). Petitioner reiterated during his testimony on cross examination that he has not used cocaine in the past (Tx. 68). He testified, "My mother has been an addict since I was born." (Tx. 68).

Petitioner testified on cross examination that he injured his back in February of 2015 when he was trying to move an elliptical machine. (Rx. 23, 07/13/2017 Tx. 73). Petitioner was shown the office notes of Dr. Payne dated February 19, 2015 and admitted the notes state he injured his back while trying to move an elliptical machine on February 15, 2015 (Tx. 75). He stated he was working for Philips at the time of that incident, and he noted this was not a work-related injury (Tx. 76). Petitioner admitted that he had been moving an elliptical machine in his home at the time of that incident. He also stated he was experiencing pain in his back after the incident occurred on February 15, 2015 (Tx. 76). He testified he was taken off work for one week following the incident with the elliptical machine (Tx. 77). He testified he has not seen Dr. Payne since February 19, 2015 (Tx. 78).

Prior Medical Treatment with Dr. Howard An

Petitioner testified his treatment with respect to his 2005 injury included treatment with Dr. Howard An (07/13/2017 Tx. 80). Dr. An's medical records returned pursuant to subpoena were admitted into evidence as Rx. 24. Petitioner underwent two separate surgical procedures with Dr. An. (Rx. 24). Dr. An performed surgery to Petitioner's lumbar spine on July 14, 2008 and July 30, 2009 (Rx. 24; Tx. 81). Petitioner testified that while he was under Dr. An's care, he was also seeing Dr. Buvanendran for pain management, which included injections to the lumbar spine (Tx. 84).

On cross examination Petitioner admitted that while he was treating with Dr. An and Dr. Buvanendran in 2010, he tested positive for cocaine (07/13/2017 Tx. 84-85). When Petitioner was asked what happened in 2010 that would lead to a positive test, he stated, "I was living with my mother I was kicked out of my house at that time" (Tx. 94). Petitioner elaborated with regard to his mother and testing positive for cocaine: "Because I was living with my drug addict of a mother again, and she is a drug addict. There is stuff around. I inadvertently ingested it, it gets in your pours [sic]. It's water soluble, I don't know, it just happens. That's what happens when you take care of a drug addict mother" (Tx. 95). Petitioner was asked whether he was going to stand by his answer that he has never knowingly ingested cocaine before. He responded, "Not on my own free will, not taking it for the drug to get high" (Tx. 98).

Petitioner testified that from 2005 to 2011 he cannot remember anything because of the surgeries (07/13/2017 Tx. 100-101). He testified he could not recall whether he was discharged from the pain clinic in May of 2011 for another positive test for cocaine, and he testified he doesn't know if he was told by the pain clinic that his positive test had violated the pain management contract (Rx. 24; Tx. 103).

Petitioner testified with regard to his current and past cigarette smoking habit. Petitioner was shown a portion of Rx. 24, Dr. An notes dated July 17, 2009, and acknowledged that the notes state, "the risks and benefits of the procedure were discussed at length. The patient states he's now stopped smoking. He understands that smoking increases his risk for pseudoarthrosis" (07/13/2017 Tx. 108). Another portion of Dr. An's records read as follows: "We have had the opportunity to discuss this and the possibility that smoking may have contributed to the fusion non-union. The patient denies vehemently having smoked" (Rx. 24; Tx. 109).

Petitioner acknowledged he was told by multiple doctors that smoking increases the risk of non-union for a spinal fusion (Tx. 110). He admitted he was still smoking as of the hearing date on July 13, 2017; he was told by treating doctors that he should not smoke cigarettes because his fusion may fail (Tx. 111).

Testimony of Dr. George Miz

The deposition of Dr. Miz took place on July 8, 2016 (Px. 1). He testified he first saw Petitioner on April 5, 2016, and was referred by Dr. Glaser (Px. 1 p. 8). Dr. Miz testified Petitioner had a history of back problems dating back to approximately 2007, and he had undergone three surgeries to complete healing for an L4-S1 fusion (Px. 1 p. 9). Upon review of the lumbar spine MRI, Dr. Miz testified that Petitioner had a right-sided disc bulge with narrowing of the foramen (Px. 1 p.12). He testified that he diagnosed Petitioner with right lumbar radiculopathy corresponding with L3-L4 findings on the MRI.

Dr. Miz testified that, in his opinion, the Petitioner's spine condition is causally related to the June 18, 2015 incident (Px. 1 p.18). The reasoning for this opinion was that, despite Petitioner's previous back problems, he was functioning reasonably well and working full time at the time of the injury, with only residual pain, and the radicular pain in the right leg had not been present at any time before (Px. 1 p. 19). (emphasis added.)

The Arbitrator notes, during the deposition, Respondent raised an objection to Dr. Miz's opinion testimony with regard to the causal connection between Petitioner's spine condition and the June 18, 2015 motor vehicle accident. Respondent objected to Dr. Miz's testimony based on the grounds that Dr. Miz's causation opinions were not disclosed in any treatment notes or narrative reports previously made available to Respondent, pursuant to Ghere v. Industrial Commission, 278 Ill. App. 3d 840 (4th Dist. 1996). Subsequent cases and Commission decisions indicate that if causation, for example is clearly an issue before the deposition then any Ghere objection is not applicable. Dr. Miz answers need not be, as a scrivener, emboldened in the records before a deposition. It is clear causation has been, is plus will be a continuing issue in the case. No surprise to either side can be inferred. The Ghere objection is overruled.

On cross examination, Dr. Miz reviewed a report with regard to a CT scan of the lumbar spine dated October 2, 2008, and testified that the findings included diffuse disc bulging, mild spinal stenosis and a moderate-to-severe facet joint arthropathy at the L3-L4 level (Px. 1 p. 26). Dr. Miz admitted on cross examination that nicotine use does have a negative impact with regard to fusion success, and may have contributed to Petitioner's previous fusion recovery (Px. 1 p. 38). Dr. Miz testified nicotine's effects on recovery really matter only post-surgery, and if Petitioner were able to cease using nicotine for about three months post-surgery, his risk on non-union would return to that of a non-smoker (Px. 1 p. 39).

Dr. Candido performed a Section 12 examination of Petitioner on September 29, 2015. Petitioner testified on cross examination he told Dr. Candido about his prior back problems since 2005, as well as his three previous lumbar spine surgeries (07/13/2017 Tx. 114-115). Petitioner testified he does not recall whether he told Dr. Candido about any of the previous positive drug test results (Tx. 116).

Dr. Candido's deposition took place on October 20, 2016. (Rx. 17). Dr. Candido testified that he is board certified by the American Board of Anesthesiology, and through that board he also has qualifications in pain medicine (Rx. 17 p. 5). He specializes in anesthesiology and pain medicine (Rx. 17 p. 7). Dr. Candido testified his report prepared in conjunction with the September 29, 2015 evaluation was based on medical records reviewed, which dated from June 18, 2015 through August of 2015; the records dating back to 2006 were not available until the addendum report that he authored on March 10, 2016 was prepared (Rx. 17 p. 13). Dr. Candido testified the Petitioner admitted to having chronic lumbar back pain prior to June 18, 2015 and had surgery with Dr. Payne in 2007 as well as Dr. An at Rush in 2008 and 2009 (Rx. 17 pp.13-14).

Dr. Candido testified that Petitioner stated he was operating his work vehicle when he was struck in the rear of his vehicle. It was about ten o'clock in the morning and he was driving about 35 miles per hour. He called his supervisor and a technical team to alert them that he was in an accident. (Rx. 17 pp. 13-14). Dr. Candido noted Petitioner went to St. Bernard Hospital, had CT scans and X-rays. His primary care provider, Dr. Settecase, told him he had only whiplash. (Rx. 17, p.15). He noted Petitioner had four epidural steroid injections in July of 2015; he underwent additional injections in August 2015 (Rx. 17 p. 16).

Dr. Candido testified he performed a physical examination of Petitioner, which elicited the following findings: Normal range of motion for the neck (Rx. 17 p. 20); negative Tinel's sign for the bilateral upper extremities (Rx. 17 p. 21); sensation was intact to all dermatomes; straight leg raise was negative bilaterally at 60 degrees (Rx. 17 pp. 21-22). Dr. Candido testified that he assessed no cervical spine issues, and sensation and range of motion of the neck were normal (Rx. 17 p. 23). He stated Petitioner had some tenderness at the right lateral epicondyle, which Dr. Candido said may be a mild form of tennis elbow, but he could not link this condition to the June 18, 2015 accident, as tennis elbow is a repetitive motion injury (Rx. 17 p. 23).

Dr. Candido testified Petitioner had pain with extension and tenderness to palpation over the facet joints at L4 bilaterally, and that this was possibly a response to an acceleration process which was superimposed on a history of three prior lumbar spine surgeries (Rx. 17 p.24). He stated he did not identify any radiculopathy with regard to the lumbar spine because there was no radiating leg pain or indication of sensory or motor deficits in the lower extremities (Rx. 17 p. 24).

This expert witness testified his diagnosis based on the examination was lumbar facet joint syndrome on a pre-existing condition and history of post-laminectomy syndrome. He testified his opinion was that the post-laminectomy syndrome was unrelated to the work accident and the lumbar facet syndrome was possibly related, with the understanding that the condition was based on a compromise underlying a chronic degenerative lumbar spondylosis condition (Rx. 17 p. 24).

Dr. Candido went on to testify that the accident likely resulted in a transient worsening of L4 and L5 lumbar facet joints but said worsening was not expected to be permanent or result in long-term impairment (Rx. 17 p. 24).

The expert testified the lumbar spine MRI dated July 15, 2015 did not show an acute injury to the lumbar spine. Rather, the MRI findings were consistent with chronic, stable, long term degenerative processes related to prior surgery and trauma, not an acute process (Rx. 17 p. 24). Dr. Candido testified Petitioner's symptoms during the evaluation on September 29, 2015 were due to an acute exacerbation of a chronic underlying lumbar spondylosis (Rx. 17 p. 28). Dr. Candido testified there was a strong probability that some of Petitioner's then-current symptoms were directly related to the chronic underlying lumbar spondylosis and the accident may have triggered a transient exacerbation of those symptoms (Rx. 17 pp.30-31). He stated he felt the diagnostic testing had been reasonable and necessary; Although he did note he was perplexed that caudal epidural injections and lumbar transforaminal injections were performed, since Dr. Candido's examination was inconsistent with the diagnosis of radiculopathy. Dr. Candido reiterated in his testimony that the Petitioner's pain on examination only came from one source: the lumbar facet joints, pinpointed at L4 and possibly L5 (Rx. 17 p. 31).

Dr. Candido testified certainly rather speculatively Petitioner "should"have reached maximum medical improvement with regard to the reported conditions within four weeks from the evaluation date on September 29, 2015, and Petitioner would not have any permanency related to the motor vehicle accident on June 18, 2015 (Rx. 17 p. 33).

Any cervical symptoms resulting from the June 18, 2015 motor vehicle accident had resolved by the September 29, 2015 evaluation date as well (Rx. 17 p. 35). He further testified Petitioner had also exacerbated his underlying condition when lifting an elliptical machine, and this was contrary to Petitioner's reporting of being asymptomatic at the time of the Section 12 evaluation (Rx. 17 pp. 35-36). The Arbitrator finds this to be a litigation driven non-sequitur given the records in their entirety.

Dr. Candido testified to preparing an addendum report on March 10, 2016 after being provided with additional medical records for review. Dr. Candido testified that after reviewing additional materials, his diagnosis was chronic lumbar spondylosis and chronic failed lumbar spine surgery (Rx. 17 p. 36). Dr. Candido testified that no interventional treatment could be linked to the June 18, 2015 motor vehicle accident because there were no new acute issues and no radiculopathy (Rx. 17 p. 39). He confirmed his opinion that Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement for the June 18, 2015 accident as of the date of the addendum report on March 10, 2016 (Rx. 17 p. 39). (emphasis added)Additionally, Dr. Candido testified that despite Petitioner reporting he did not smoke cigarettes and had no history of drug use, past treatment notes mentioned extensively that Petitioner had a history of smoking, chemical substance abuse and an addictive personality condition (Rx. 17 p. 40-41). Dr. Candido noted that studies show people with these conditions describe pain excessive to what a person without these conditions would describe. Dr. Candido's IME report and addendum report were entered into the record as Respondent's Deposition Exhibits 2 and 3. (Rx. 17).

On cross examination, Dr. Candido testified that hypothetically, spinal stenosis could be caused by an acute injury (Rx. 17 p. 52). He testified Petitioner's right leg pain was only indicative of radicular pain, not radiculopathy, as the latter involves weakness, sensory change, and reflex changes, which Petitioner did not have (Rx. 17 p. 56).

He testified that at any time, with or without provocation, a herniated disc can become symptomatic. When asked on cross examination why his causation opinion changed in his addendum report, Dr. Candido testified,

"It changed because I carefully queried Mr. Crawford about any pain condition and after he told me he had no pain at all since his prior surgeries, medical documentation became available that showed an ongoing history of repetitive low back pain, which included a February 2015 note suggesting that he had been lifting an elliptical machine and had sustained one of several exacerbations of his chronic underlying condition. And at that point, I felt that the veracity of his history was subject to some scrutiny, and I didn't think that he would benefit from those treatments except as they would be useful to him to treat his chronic underlying degenerative condition but not as a result of a discrete event such as the motor vehicle accident." (Rx. 17 p. 60-61).

Prior IWCC Cases

Respondent submitted into evidence information from the IWCC regarding Petitioner's prior Illinois Workers' Compensation claim while working for the State of Illinois (Rx. 21). Petitioner admitted on cross examination that he received a settlement payment in conjunction with this prior IWCC claim (07/13/2017 Tx. 134). Petitioner testified on cross examination that his claims before the IWCC that were settled emanated from a 2005 injury to the low back, which necessitated Petitioner's three surgical procedures. No credit, if any, is allowable in the case at bar, nor is the settlement of cases probative of the issue of accident or causation at bar without medical opinion on each event. See Voykin and Vogel cases.

Utilization Review

Respondent obtained a Utilization Review (medical opinion review) dated May 3, 2016 with regard to the requested lumbar discography at L3-4 with post CT scan. (Rx. 19). According to the Review Determination Recommendation, the tests were non-certified.

Utilization review reports can be one piece of medical evidence in a case, they are noted herein. The ODG are not considered as binding in the State of Illinois workers compensation Act.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "C" – Did an accident occur that arose out of and in the course of Petitioner's employment with Respondent, the Arbitrator finds the following:

Petitioner was involved in a motor vehicle accident on June 18, 2015 when he was driving a company vehicle that was struck from behind by another motorist. He testified he was working on behalf of Respondent when the accident occurred. Petitioner sought medical attention on the date of accident and continued to seek care for injuries allegedly sustained in the June 18, 2015 motor vehicle accident. Moreover, he was provided with treatment modalities and medication as a result of the June 18, 2015 incident.

His testimony about exposure to drugs may possibly show addictive behavior or self denial-but is not determinative in terms of denying the accident at the case at bar. Nor does it negate causation even as found in the anesthesia's expert report from Dr. Candido. No section 11 proof required by the reform legislation, so to speak -by statutory mandate was submitted. The Arbitrator acknowledges this persons deficit in recollection and being a self admitted poor historian.

Based upon the totality of the evidence adduced over three hearings, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has met the burden of proving-by a preponderance of the evidence - that he sustained an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment with Respondent as alleged in the case at bar.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "F" - Is the petitioner's present condition of ill-being causally related to the injury, plus issue " O" whether the Petitioner is entitled to Prospective 4th low back surgery, the Arbitrator finds the following:

This case was highly disputed on both sides for the obvious reasons after hearing the testimony and studying the medical evidence. Both sides completed their advocacy at the highest level despite weaknesses in both cases. The medical testimony on both sides has inherent weaknesses. Dr. Miz had challenges regarding the facts of three prior back surgeries despite the actual return to work of the patient for the Respondent at bar. Dr. Candido.

Based upon the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator gives greater weight in determining this issue of causation to the opinions of this very experienced, treating orthopedic surgeon who has treated the Petitioner over the years over the less weight of an anesthesiologist , a non surgeon, who examined this Petitioner on a limited time frame as a Sect.12 expert.

Dr. Candido's deposition reads more akin to a legal argument than a sophisticated, medical opinion. Dr. Candido's opinion that the accident may have aggravated the preexisting condition can not be dismissed. Contrawise, his statement that the condition should have resolved in some hypothetical type frame is extremely speculative.

Frankly, neither doctor's deposition testimony was of the greatest of weight over the other, and somewhat speculative on parts of both doctors. No rising phoenix of medical opinion/logic/ testimony, so to speak lifted one side or the other to great heights in terms of great persuasiveness. That conclusion only fuels the disputes on most issues.

As to the issue of need for future surgery, this patient has significant challenges replete in the record, and underscored in long and deliberate cross examination; The Arbitrator can not simply defer to the 4th surgical recommendation of Dr. Miz , whose testimony in this regard reads more like a default, fall- back option so to speak. Given all the prior opinions early on in the chronology, the Arbitrator will not rely upon Dr. Miz's simple conclusion akin to saying unless my surgery is approved, the patient can not work. The Arbitrator on these points can not ignore all the prior doctor's findings plus ignore Dr. Candido's expressed concern about the reasonableness/necessity of any contemplated, additional spine surgery given all the facts of the case. This is so despite his lack of surgical credentials plus his opinions reading like bent for litigation purposes.

Thus, based upon the totality of the evidence, albeit highly disputed and subject to various interpretations, the Arbitrator finds causation between the accident and his cervical plus lumbar condition in favor of the Petitioner - but at the same time denies the prospective, fourth low back surgery to this Petitioner.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "J" – Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary, and "O" the Two Doctor Rule, , plus second issue " O" prospective medical treatment, the Arbitrator finds the following:

The Arbitrator finds the Petitioner did not exceed the Act provision called the two doctor rule. First of all, the rule includes two doctors of the patient's choice plus all those doctors" referrals" from those doctors. Many stakeholders misunderstand the concept of the emergency room doctor's referral to an outside practitioner, as being a "1st choice".

Secondly, the IWCC has since its inception via case law affirmed in the Appellate Court that, as in the case at bar, any referral by an emergency room doctor to another outside doctor does not mean the patient seeing than " referred doctor" on his own volition actually chooses that referred doctor as his first choice, or any choice for that matter. No distinction is made if the "referred doctor" by the ER is the Petitioner's PCP, prior treating doctor or even for example – an orthopedic doctor of the petitioner's own choice. This issue has been litigated ad nausem before the IWCC.

Based upon the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has not exceeded the two-physician rule with regard to his medical treatment. The ER records are crystal clear that the emergency doctor referred the patients in the actual notes to his personal doctor, as fully described, infra.

St Bernards ER doctor referred the Petitioner to a "primary care doctor" i.e. to his personal doctor for follow up care. That is an ER referred doctor and not deemed a first choice by the Patient under the case law. Petitioner was treated by Dr. Settecase via ER referral.

The Patient's first choice of providers under the first reform Act, so to speak , terms is best deemed APM; he chose Advanced Physical Medicine, where he treated with Dr. Goldvekht and Dr. Jain. This was Petitioner's first choice of physician under the Act, as amended.

. Petitioner admitted he then took the recommendation of a friend and chose Dr. Scott Glaser. This was Petitioner's second legally interpreted choice of physician-under section 8, as amended.

Dr. George Miz is clearly a referred doctor from Dr. Glazer as shown in the records (Px.9) in evidence, deemed most reliable given the Petitioner's memory issues.

Respondent entered into evidence a May 3, 2016 Medical Opinion Review and Review Determination Recommendation disputing the reasonableness and necessity of the lumbar discography at L3-4 and post-CT scan ordered by Dr. Miz. (Rx. 19). According to the Review Determination Recommendation, the testing in question was non-certified. Neither Petitioner nor the provider requested the clinical rationale used to determine the non-certification finding, and there was no appeal requested with regard to this non-certification recommendation.

The Arbitrator notes this Medical Opinion Review and Review Determination Recommendation dated May 3, 2016 deemed the lumbar discography and post-discography CT scan non-certified. Respondent contends this testing was not reasonable or necessary. Neither Petitioner nor Dr. Miz requested the clinical rationale used to determine the non-certification finding, and there was no appeal requested with regard to this non-certification recommendation of the testing in question. Further, the Arbitrator notes the physician advisor review appears to satisfy the requirements of Section 8.7 of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act. 820 ILCS 305/8.7 (West 2011). Medical ReviewStream by Concentra is a URAC-accredited provider of Utilization Reviews in accordance with Section 8.7(b) of the Act.

The Arbitrator adopts the opinion of the treating doctor over the UR; ODG guidelines are just guidelines- to be taken along with all the medical evidence in the case. UR is not an elevated piece of evidence nor are ODG guidelines adopted as a matter or law or even preference in the State of Illinois. All the relevant medical evidence must be evaluated in any case.

Thus, based upon the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator finds by a preponderance of said evidence , that all the medical treatment the Petitioner has received to date has been reasonable and necessary under section 8 of the Act. The Repondent is liable for said treatment per the terms of section 8, including 8a and 8.2.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "K" – What temporary benefits are in dispute, the Arbitrator finds the following:

The Arbitrator finds Petitioner was placed off work by Dr. Settecase from his visit on June 19, 2015 through the full-duty return to work on June 29, 2015. Petitioner testified that he did not return to work for Respondent at that time, despite being released to unrestricted duty by Dr. Settecase. On August 23, 2015 Dr. Jain released Petitioner to regular duty with no restrictions. Petitioner testified that he returned to work for Philips in August of 2015 after being released by Dr. Goldvekht and Dr. Jain. Petitioner testified that he received Temporary Total Disability benefits while he was off work per Dr. Settecase, Dr. Goldvekht and Dr. Jain from June 19, 2015 through August 23, 2015.

The next period of compensable lost time under section 8 is again from November 17th, 2015 to April 5th, 2016. This last date found in Dr. Scott Glazer's treatment records is not at all long after Dr. Candido the expert for the Respondent in definitive terms said on March 10th, 2016 the patient was at maximum medical improvement. Dr. Miz's referral from Dr. Scott Glazer occurred on said date of April 5th, 2016.

Dr. Glaser and later Dr. Miz placed Petitioner off work after Dr. Settecase and Advanced Physical Medicine, Petitioner was released from treatment and was working full duty without restrictions.

The Arbitrator further notes Dr. Candido opined Petitioner was able to return to work without restrictions as of the exam date on September 29, 2015. Dr. Candido also opined Petitioner was at maximum medical improvement as of that ate. However, Dr. Candido went on to say that essentially he expected that the injury would improve and resolve. Simple reading proves that the statement that the Petitioner reached maximum medical improvement is totally inconsistent with his final conclusion that the injury would improve and resolve. This is where Dr. Candido opinion sounds more like a legal argument. Dr. Candido's inconsistent, weak opinion is disregarded on the issue of the Petitioner reaching maximum medical improvement yet the injury would improve and resolve is disregarded in relation to cutting off reasonable and necessary treatment. Said treatment continued up through the last visit with Dr. Miz. Dr. Candido's statements are a total non-sequitor.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "L" – What is the nature and extent of the injury, the Arbitrator finds the following:

The Arbitrator finds it is premature to rule on the issue of the nature and extent of the injury given the testimony of Dr. Miz.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Disputed Issue "N" – Is Respondent due any credit, the Arbitrator finds the following:

The Arbitrator finds that Respondent is entitled to a credit in the amount of $4,368.16 for initial benefits paid to Petitioner. Petitioner testified that he received TTD benefits from June 19, 2015 to August 23, 2015. Respondent also submitted a payment ledger into evidence, detailing the payments made to Petitioner. (Rx. 14).

The Arbitrator also finds that Respondent is entitled to an credit in the amount of $1,536.00 for additional compensation paid. Petitioner stipulated to this payment according to the Request for Hearing form (Arb. Ex. 1).

The Arbitrator further sayeth naught.

DISSENT

I believe that Petitioner proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that she sustained accidental injuries arising out of and in the course of her employment on or about 2/3/17 with respect to her right/left shoulders, in addition to her right/left hands and right arm, and that a causal relationship exists between said accidental injuries and Petitioner's current condition of ill-being. As a result, I cannot join in the majority's summary affirmance of the Arbitrator's decision in this matter.

The Arbitrator determined that Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and right epicondylitis conditions were causally related to the accident, and a manifestation date of 2/3/17, but that her bilateral shoulder condition was not. I disagree.

The record shows that Petitioner submitted more than sufficient evidence of the repetitive nature of her job, including overhead work. Along these lines, Petitioner testified that she has worked for Respondent for 13 years and that she has done factory work the entire time. She noted that in 2011 she began to have problems with her hands, elbows and shoulders, including pain in her elbows and shoulders as well as numbness and tingling in her hands. She reported her problems to the company's medical department, treated with heat and splints and was assigned to a new job in quality control. She noted that her symptoms improved, and she was transferred back to her previous job as a cap operator in July of 2016. She continued to work in this capacity through February of 2017, performing her full-time job, 8 hours a day, 5 to 6 days a week. As part of her job responsibilities she noted that she would have to, among other things, lift overhead and below waist level throughout the day. She indicated the job video submitted into evidence by Respondent did not accurately reflect the pace at which the cap operator job was performed, or all of the job duties associated with same. As a result of these activities, Petitioner noted that she developed pain in her shoulders, in addition to her elbows, as well as numbness and dropping things with her hands. She returned to the medical department with these complaints, noting that they were now worse than before.

Petitioner's testified credibly as to the onset of her symptoms, and her job responsibilities, and the re-emergence of her symptoms, including those associated with her shoulders, following her return to her cap operator job in July of 2016. While she admittedly would rotate tasks with her co-workers, and while some of those tasks involved reaching below or at mid-chest level, Petitioner's unrefuted testimony described activities that would also place a strain, on a repetitive basis, on her shoulder joints – including the act of reaching under a table while she was sitting on a chair that was higher up in order to scoop out primers to pour over the boards using a tin cup.

Furthermore, Dr. Vest persuasively testified that Petitioner's job activities contributed to her bilateral shoulder problems. Given what I would consider Petitioner's credible testimony regarding the repetitive and intensive hand/arm activities associated with her job, including those performed at or above shoulder level, I have no reason not to accept Dr. Vest's opinion on the question of causation, nor should this Commission.

As a result, I would modify the decision of the Arbitrator to find accident and causation with respect to Petitioner bilateral shoulder condition, in addition to the right/left hands and right arm injuries, and award benefits accordingly.

Therefore, I respectfully dissent.

Findings of Fact

Petitioner filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim which alleged she sustained a repetitive trauma injury arising out of and in the course of her employment by Respondent. The Application alleged a date of accident (manifestation) of February 3, 2017, and that Petitioner sustained "Repetitive trauma" to the "Bilateral hands, arms, shoulders & Body as a whole" (Arbitrator's Exhibit 2). Respondent disputed liability on the basis of accident and causal relationship (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

Petitioner became employed by Respondent in 2006, and initially worked as a cap operator. Petitioner worked as a cap operator until sometime in 2011, when she began to experience symptoms in her hands, elbows and shoulders. Petitioner was transferred to a new position in quality control. At trial, Petitioner testified the quality control position was less hand and arm intensive and she experienced improvement of her symptoms, although she still continued to have numbness in her hands.

In July, 2016, Petitioner returned to working as a cap operator. Petitioner was working in that position at the time of the alleged date of manifestation of February 3, 2017.

Petitioner testified that when she was a cap operator, she usually work eight hours per day, five to six days per week. Petitioner's job duties included taking primers out of tin cups and placing them on metal boards which had holes. The boards were then placed on a machine which vibrated causing the primers to fall into the holes. The boards were then removed and turned over when a second board was placed on top of the original board. The boards were then placed back on the vibrating machine. The boards would then be removed and rubber banded so that they were bound together. The bound boards would then be taken to cases at or above shoulder height approximately one every two minutes. At trial, Petitioner testified she was required to forcefully grasp the boards with both hands and the job required repetitive flexion and extension of her wrists. Further, Petitioner stated both of her elbows were virtually always in a flexed position. When Petitioner stacked the cases at or above shoulder level, she would stack a case at the rate of about one every two minutes. Petitioner would rotate from one job task to another during a shift so she would do several different tasks in the course of a shift.

Respondent tendered into evidence a video of other individuals performing the duties of a cap operator. The Arbitrator watched the video and observed individuals putting caps on a rectangular shaped piece of metal which had holes. The piece of metal was then put in a machine which vibrated causing the caps to fall into the holes. The Arbitrator saw individuals using both hands to move the piece of metal, put it in the machine and remove it from the machine; however, none of the individuals touched the piece of metal while it was being vibrated. Upon removing the piece of metal with the caps, it would be moved to a table adjacent to the machine. Subsequently, two of the metal plates were bound together with rubber bands and placed in a stack. The Arbitrator did not observe the individuals performing any overhead work. The Arbitrator noted that during virtually all of the activities he observed, the individuals had their elbows in a flexed position (Respondent's Exhibit 1). At trial, Petitioner testified she watched the video and that it was not accurate because it did not show the pace she worked at and it did not show all of her job duties.

On February 3, 2017, Petitioner was seen at the plant medical department. At that time, Petitioner complained of tingling in both hands and pain in both elbows and shoulders. It was noted Petitioner had reported the symptoms years ago and, because she had returned to production, she was again having the symptoms. Petitioner was given wrist and elbow supports and directed to return to work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Petitioner returned to work, but she was again seen in the plant medical department on February 10, 2017. At that time, Petitioner complained of bilateral hand numbness and bilateral elbow and shoulder pain. Petitioner attributed her symptoms to the job she was performing, specifically, closing plates. Petitioner was diagnosed with bilateral hand neuropathy, bilateral epicondylitis and median elbow pain. Petitioner was given bands and splints and directed to return to work (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Petitioner returned to the plant medical department on February 23, 2017, because of her continued upper extremity symptoms. At that time, Petitioner was informed that she should be seen by her primary care physician because her symptoms did not usually occur in workers' comp injuries and other medical conditions could be causing some of her some symptoms (Petitioner's Exhibit 2).

Petitioner testified she sought medical treatment from her personal physician, Dr. David O'Neill. However, Dr. O'Neill would not provide treatment to Petitioner because her condition was work-related.

Petitioner subsequently sought medical treatment from Dr. Ryan Diederich, a plastic surgeon, on April 17, 2017. At that time, Petitioner advised Dr. Diederich she had hand pain approximately five to six years ago and was moved to a different job, but that in July, 2016, she moved back to her original position. Petitioner informed Dr. Diederich she picked up heavy plates/tins, put them on some type of shaking machine and repetitively performed this task for hours every day. Petitioner would then do rubber banding as well as heavy lifting. Petitioner stated she could not lift the plates because they were too heavy. Petitioner complained of numbness/tingling in both hands and she used braces at work and while sleeping. Dr. Diederich examined Petitioner and opined she had bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and bilateral medial/lateral epicondylitis. He ordered physical therapy as well as EMG/nerve conduction studies (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

The EMG/nerve conduction studies were performed on May 22, 2017. The studies revealed moderately severe bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome (Petitioner's Exhibit 5).

On July 13, 2017, Dr. Diederich performed surgery which consisted of an open right carpal tunnel release and an injection in the right lateral elbow. On July 27, 2017, Dr. Diederich performed surgery which consisted of an open left carpal tunnel release and an injection in the left lateral elbow (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Dr. Diederich subsequently saw Petitioner on August 7, 2017, and observed Petitioner was doing well. He noted Petitioner's right hand and bilateral elbow symptoms had completely resolved, but Petitioner still had some occasional numbness in the left hand but it was much improved. Dr.

Diederich released Petitioner from care in regard to her hands/elbows, but referred her to Dr. Bruce Vest, an orthopedic surgeon, for her shoulder symptoms (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Dr. Vest initially evaluated Petitioner on August 18, 2017. At that time, Petitioner complained of bilateral shoulder pain, right worse than left. Petitioner informed Dr. Vest she had worked as an operator for Respondent for the preceding 11 years and did a lot of heavy lifting at work which included lifting tin boards multiple times a day overhead and below the waist. Dr. Vest opined Petitioner had bilateral rotator cuff tendinitis and mild bilateral acromioclavicular degenerative joint disease. Dr. Vest administered injections in both shoulders and ordered physical therapy. He also authorized Petitioner to remain off work (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

Dr. Vest subsequently ordered an MRI scan of Petitioner's right shoulder. The MRI was performed on September 28, 2017. According to the radiologist, the MRI revealed rotator cuff tendinopathy without full thickness tear (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

Dr. Vest performed arthroscopic surgery on Petitioner's right shoulder on October 20, 2017. The surgery consisted of extensive joint debridement, subacromial decompression and resection of the distal clavicle (Petitioner's Exhibit 8).

Petitioner was seen by Dr. Diederich on December 22, 2017, because of bilateral elbow symptoms. At that time, Dr. Diederich administered injections in both the right and left elbows (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Following shoulder surgery, Petitioner continued to be treated by Dr. Vest who ordered physical therapy. Petitioner was last seen by Dr. Vest on February 9, 2018. At that time, Petitioner's right shoulder condition had improved and there was a full range of motion. Dr. Vest authorized Petitioner to return to work on February 20, 2018 (Petitioner's Exhibit 7).

Petitioner returned to work for Respondent as a cap operator; however, she was laid off as of October 12, 2018. Petitioner has not worked since that time.

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Mitchell Rotman, an orthopedic surgeon, on September 24, 2018. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Rotman reviewed medical records provided to him by Respondent as well as the video of other individuals performing the job of a cap operator. In his report, Dr. Rotman abstracted the medical records he reviewed and noted what he had observed in the video. Dr. Rotman opined Petitioner was at MMI and the surgeries performed by Dr. Diederich and Dr. Vest were reasonable and necessary (Respondent's Exhibit 2; Deposition Exhibit 2).

In regard to causality, Dr. Rotman opined that Petitioner's shoulder condition was not caused or aggravated by her work activities. He noted Petitioner did not do constant heavy lifting at or above shoulder level and most of her job duties as a cap operator were mainly from the elbow down. In regard to Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome condition, Dr. Rotman opined that this was not aggravated by her work activities. Dr. Rotman noted Petitioner had other risk factors, specifically, diabetes, obesity, her age and being female. However, Dr. Rotman opined Petitioner's work activities may have been an aggravating factor in the development of epicondylitis (Respondent's Exhibit 2; Deposition Exhibit 2).

Dr. Rotman also opined Petitioner had impairment ratings based upon the AMA guidelines of zero percent (0%) of each upper extremity for the bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and zero percent (0%) of the right shoulder. He did not opine as to an impairment rating in regard to Petitioner's bilateral epicondylitis (Respondent's Exhibit 2; Deposition Exhibit 2).

Dr. Vest was deposed on June 26, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Vest's testimony regarding his diagnosis and treatment of Petitioner's shoulder condition was consistent with his medical records. In regard to causality, Dr. Vest testified Petitioner's work activities, as stated in a hypothetical question, could have contributed to Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition (Petitioner's Exhibit 11; pp 15-17).

On cross-examination, Dr. Vest agreed that his opinion regarding causality relied heavily on a history of Petitioner's job requiring repetitive overhead activities. Dr. Vest conceded Petitioner did not advise him that her work activities rotated during her shift and, if Petitioner's work, in fact, required little or no overhead activities, it could cause him to change his opinion regarding causality (Petitioner's Exhibit 11; pp 24-25).

Dr. Diederich was deposed on August 15, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Diederich's testimony regarding his diagnosis and treatment of Petitioner's hand and elbow conditions was consistent with his medical records. In regard to causality, Dr. Diederich testified Petitioner's repetitive work activities could contribute to the development of Petitioner's carpal tunnel and epicondylitis conditions. This was based upon information provided by Petitioner as well as a hypothetical question posed by Petitioner's counsel during the deposition (Petitioner's Exhibit 10; pp 10-17).

On cross-examination, Dr. Diederich agreed he had no knowledge as to the weight of the plates/tins Petitioner repetitively handled. He also agreed Petitioner's diabetes, sex, age and obesity were risk factors for the development of carpal tunnel syndrome (Petitioner's Exhibit 10; pp 27-29).

Dr. Rotman was deposed on October 22, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. At that time, Dr. Rotman's medical report was received into evidence as an evidentiary exhibit. In regard to causality of Petitioner's shoulder condition, Dr. Rotman testified that given Petitioner's description of her work and the video he watched, there was no relationship between Petitioner's shoulder condition and Petitioner's work activities (Respondent's Exhibit 2; p 11).

In regard to Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome condition, Dr. Rotman testified it was not caused or aggravated by Petitioner's work activities because Petitioner's hands were not subjected to vibration or awkward wrist positions. He also noted Petitioner had other significant risk factors, specifically, diabetes, obesity, age and being female. However, Dr. Rotman also testified Petitioner's epicondylitis could have been aggravated by her work activities (Respondent's Exhibit 2; pp 10-13).

On cross-examination, Dr. Rotman agreed he did not know the weight of the metal plates or how much force was required to grasp them. Further, he did not know if the video showed all of the job duties that were performed by Petitioner (Respondent's Exhibit 2; p 25).

At trial, Petitioner testified she was previously diagnosed with diabetes, but it is controlled with medication. Petitioner stated she has lost strength and has a decreased range of motion in her right shoulder. Petitioner has occasional pain in her left shoulder with activity. Petitioner also stated she continues to experience tenderness in both elbows joints. In regard to her hands, Petitioner stated she has decreased grip strength, experiences occasional tingling in her fingers and her hands get cold when she holds objects for an extended period of time.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issues (C) and (F) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained a repetitive trauma injury arising out of and in the course of her employment by Respondent that manifested itself on February 3, 2017, and her current condition of ill-being is, in part, causally related to same. Specifically, the Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and epicondylitis conditions are related to the repetitive trauma, but Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition is not causally related.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner previously worked as a cap operator until sometime in 2011 and experienced upper extremity symptoms. When Petitioner was moved to another position, the symptoms lessened to a significant degree, but Petitioner again experienced the symptoms shortly after she returned to work as a cap operator in July, 2016.

Petitioner's testimony was that her job duties as a cap operator required the active use of both hands with repetitive flexion and extension of the wrists. The video of other individuals performing the job duties of a cap operator also revealed the active and repetitive use of both hands, although Petitioner disputed the accuracy of the video in regard to the pace that she worked at.

Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Diederich, testified Petitioner's repetitive work activities could have contributed to the development of Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome, while agreeing Petitioner did have other risk factors, such as diabetes, sex, age and obesity.

Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Rotman, testified Petitioner's work activities did not contribute to the development of Petitioner's carpal tunnel syndrome because Petitioner's hands were not subjected to vibration or awkward wrist positions and that Petitioner had numerous other risk factors. However, Dr. Rotman also testified Petitioner's epicondylitis could have been aggravated by her work activities.

The Arbitrator finds Dr. Rotman's opinion that Petitioner's bilateral epicondylitis could have been aggravated by her work activities, but that her bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome was not aggravated by her work activities to be rather inconsistent.

Based upon the preceding, the Arbitrator finds the opinion of Dr. Diederich to be more persuasive than that of Dr. Rotman in regard to the cause of Petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome.

In regard to Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition, Petitioner's testimony did not describe a significant amount of heavy overhead lifting. The video did not show any of the individuals performing overhead tasks.

Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Vest, testified there was a causal relationship between Petitioner's work activities and her bilateral shoulder condition; however, Dr. Vest's opinion relied heavily on Petitioner having to perform repetitive overhead activities and if, in fact, Petitioner did not have to perform repetitive overhead activities, his opinion was subject to change.

Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Rotman, testified that given Petitioner's description of her job activities and the video, there was not a causal relationship between Petitioner's job activities and her bilateral shoulder condition.

Based upon the preceding, the Arbitrator finds the opinion of Dr. Rotman to be more persuasive than that of Dr. Vest, in regard to the causality of Petitioner's bilateral shoulder condition.

In regard to disputed issue (J) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes that all of the medical treatment provided to Petitioner for her bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and bilateral epicondylitis condition was reasonable and necessary and Respondent is liable for payment of the medical services incurred therewith.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services for treatment provided to Petitioner for her bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and bilateral epicondylitis condition as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 9, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule. Respondent shall be given a credit of amounts paid for medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to 16 1/7 weeks of temporary total disability benefits commencing April 17, 2017, through August 7, 2017.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner was receiving medical treatment and was authorized to be off work because of her bilateral hand and elbow conditions.

In regard to disputed issue (L) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner has sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of five percent (5%) loss of use of the right arm, five percent (5%) loss of use of the left arm, 12 1/2% loss of use of the right hand and 12 1/2% loss of use of the left hand.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Dr. Rotman opined Petitioner had an AMA impairment rating of zero percent (0%) of each upper extremity for the bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome. He did not opine as to an AMA impairment rating for Petitioner's bilateral epicondylitis. The Arbitrator gives this factor minimal weight.

Petitioner worked as a cap operator at the time she sustained the accidental injury. Petitioner's job was physically demanding and required the active and repetitive use of both upper extremities. The Arbitrator gives this factor significant weight.

Petitioner was 43 years old at the time of the accident. Petitioner was 46 years old at the time the case was tried and has approximately 20 years before she will reach normal retirement age. The Arbitrator gives this factor moderate weight.

There was no evidence the injury had any effect on Petitioner's future earning capacity. The Arbitrator gives this factor no weight.

Petitioner sustained an injury to both elbows and was diagnosed with bilateral epicondylitis for which Petitioner received conservative treatment, including injections. Petitioner also sustained an injury to both wrists/hands and was diagnosed with bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome. Open carpal tunnel release surgical procedures were performed on both wrists. Petitioner continues to have complaints referable to both elbows and wrists/hands consistent with the injuries she sustained. The Arbitrator gives this factor significant weight.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review under §19(b) having been filed by Petitioner herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issue of employment relationship and being advised of the facts and law, reverses the Decision of the Arbitrator for the reasons stated below and remands the case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings on the remaining issues pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Commission, 78 Ill.2d 327 (1980).

Petitioner's application for adjustment of claim alleges that on April 13, 2017, Petitioner sustained multiple injuries when he fell from a scaffold. Following a section 19(b) hearing solely on the issue of employment relationship, the Arbitrator found no employment relationship and denied the claim. We disagree that Petitioner failed to prove an employment relationship.

Petitioner testified that he possessed special skills in the area of roof construction, including soldering sheet metal and laying out slate and tile roofs. Petitioner had done a lot of work on landmark buildings in and outside of Illinois. Petitioner began to work for Respondent Tile Roofs, Inc. in 2015 or 2016. Prior to that, Petitioner worked for Mortenson Roofing Company (Mortenson Roofing). Mortenson Roofing was owned by Michael Lucas, and Respondent was owned by Mr. Lucas's wife. Both companies (collectively, the Lucas entities) operated out of the same building. At Mortenson Roofing, Petitioner was a job site foreman/superintendent, managing roofing projects. Mortenson Roofing assigned the jobs. Petitioner ordered materials, "set up the job for work," supervised employees, and interacted with contractors regarding job scheduling for his (Mortenson Roofing) crew. Mortenson Roofing provided Petitioner with a company truck and paid for the gas. When Petitioner traveled for work, Mortenson Roofing paid for the hotels.

After semi-retiring, Petitioner did smaller projects for the Lucas entities and "[w]ent from Mortenson Roofing to [Respondent]" in terms of getting paid. Petitioner's job duties and hours did not change. It was the same type of work, but on a smaller scale. Although Petitioner was paid by Respondent, the crew he supervised was comprised of "[m]ostly Mortenson Roofing employees," "[r]eally just Mortenson employees." Petitioner continued to use the Mortenson Roofing company truck, and Mortenson Roofing continued to pay for the gas. When Petitioner traveled for work, Mortenson Roofing continued to pay for the hotels.

At first, Respondent issued payments by check to Petitioner personally. In December of 2016, Petitioner formed a business, Quantum Edge, LLC (Quantum Edge), at the request of Mr. Lucas. Petitioner "resisted for quite a while," but when Respondent stopped paying him, he "finally had to form the company to get paid." Respondent was the only client of Quantum Edge. After Petitioner formed Quantum Edge, his duties for the Lucas entities did not change. Petitioner continued to supervise a crew of workers. Petitioner owned some of the tools, but the majority were owned by Mortenson Roofing. Mortenson Roofing continued to pay for the hotels and provide the company truck.

Petitioner acknowledged that Quantum Edge had an employer identification number and was listed on the Secretary of State website. Quantum Edge did not have workers' compensation insurance. Between December 9, 2016 and April 4, 2017, Petitioner billed Respondent through Quantum Edge for the hours he worked at the rate of $40.00 per hour. He also billed Respondent through Quantum Edge for office supplies, fuel and other expenses. Respondent paid the invoices without withholding payroll taxes. When Petitioner worked for Mortenson Roofing, taxes were withheld from his pay.

On April 13, 2017, Petitioner was working on a residential project involving construction of a zinc roof. Petitioner sustained multiple injuries when he fell from a scaffold while doing layout work. Prior to the project, Petitioner had very little experience with zinc roofing. For the project, Petitioner and a foreman working for Mortenson Roofing received onsite training paid by Mortenson Roofing.

Michael Lucas, the owner of Mortenson Roofing, testified that he had known Petitioner for over 30 years and considered him a friend. Mr. Lucas valued Petitioner for his professional knowledge. After Petitioner retired from Mortenson Roofing, he went to work "outside of the union" for Respondent. Petitioner continued to supervise employees of Mortenson Roofing and Respondent. Petitioner also continued to order materials and rent equipment for Mortenson Roofing and Respondent. Mr. Lucas let Petitioner keep the company truck, and Mortenson

SOTRCC0053

Roofing or Respondent continued to reimburse Petitioner for the gas. At some point, Mr. Lucas and Petitioner spoke about Petitioner forming a business entity, and Petitioner eventually formed Quantum Edge.

We find the substance of the relationship between Petitioner and the Lucas entities—Mortenson Roofing and Respondent—remained unchanged after Petitioner formed Quantum Edge. Petitioner continued to supervise a crew of Mortenson Roofing employees; Petitioner continued to order materials and equipment for Mortenson Roofing or Respondent; Mortenson Roofing continued to furnish Petitioner's equipment and tools; Mortenson Roofing or Respondent continued to provide Petitioner with a company vehicle and pay for the gas; and Mortenson Roofing continued to pay for Petitioner's hotels while he traveled for work. Also, Mortenson Roofing paid for Petitioner's training in zinc roofing.

The Commission finds the corporate formalities between Quantum Edge and its only client, the Lucas entities acting through Respondent, existed on paper only. Petitioner was a de facto employee.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed November 15, 2018, is hereby reversed, and this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

No bond is required for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE

The petitioner testified that he was a longtime employee of Mortensen Roofing. He also testified that Mortensen Roofing and Tile Roofs had common ownership by Mike Lukis and his wife, Mary. Petitioner was employed by Mortensen as a site foreman/superintendent. Petitioner retired from Mortensen either in March 2015 or March 2016. Shortly thereafter, he began working for Tile Roofs.

Petitioner testified that over the course of his career, he developed special skills within the roofing industry. He testified that he learned how to solder on sheet metal, copper, and stainless steel and learned how to "lay out" slate and tile roofs. He had worked on a lot of landmark buildings. He bought his own tools.

When he first began working for Tile Roofs (after he had retired from Mortensen) the compensation he earned was paid directly to him personally. However, there was a discussion between him and Mike Lukis at which time it was decided that he would form a corporation and submit invoices for his time through the corporation. Thus, he formed a company by the name of Quantum Edge, LLC in December 2016.

Petitioner identified Respondent's Exhibit 2 as a series of invoices submitted by Quantum Edge to Tile Roofs from December 9, 2016 through April 4, 2017. The invoices identified the number of hours he worked as well as expenses that were incurred in conjunction with said work. Petitioner acknowledged that the invoices were paid in full without any deductions for taxes. When he previously worked for Mortensen, he received a traditional paycheck with taxes already deducted. In addition, Mortensen would make a separate payment to his union for insurance and other union benefits. Quantum Edge had its own bank account.

Petitioner also identified Respondent's Exhibit 2 as a W9 form issued by Quantum Edge. The form was signed on December 9, 2016. Petitioner testified that Quantum Edge was issued an employer identification number by the federal government. He also acknowledged that Quantum Edge was incorporated in Illinois and is listed as a corporation on the website for the Illinois Secretary of State.

Petitioner initially testified that the work he performed for Tile Roofs after he retired from Mortensen's was the same that he had performed for Mortensen's. On cross-examination, however, he acknowledged that he typically worked on smaller jobs for Tile Roofs. He also testified that he considered himself to be semi-retired while working for Tile Roofs. While he initially denied it, he ultimately admitted that he considered himself to be a consultant for Tile Roofs. Petitioner was repeatedly impeached with a recorded statement he had given prior to trial. The statement was introduced as Respondent's Exhibit 1. In fact, in his recorded statement, he stated that while working for Tile Roofs, "... I am a consultant. I am not really a roofer anymore. I was a roofer for years, but now I am a consultant because I kind of retired. So um, that's the reason I started Quantum Edge to, you know, for tax purposes".

Petitioner also initially testified that while working for Mortensen, he would not just supervise Mortensen employees. He would work alongside them. He testified that he continued to work alongside Mortensen employees, even after he had formed Quantum Edge. However, he was again impeached with his recorded statement at which time he stated that he just does the layout work for the Mortensen employees and does NOT do any roof installation. In addition, in his recorded statement, he stated that "I was doing, uh-huh, layout work, consulting work, preparing the areas that we were working on for them to install it". He went on to state that "well, I am a specialist in that material. So I have to measure the areas so they know how to lay it out and fabricate it and put it in".

Further, petitioner testified that Quantum Edge did not perform work for any company other than Tile Roofs. However, he acknowledged when he gave his recorded statement that he was trying to expand the business and work for others.

Petitioner also testified that when he started Quantum Edge, he made a choice not to purchase workers compensation insurance coverage. He was the only employee of Quantum Edge. Michael Lukis testified that he told the petitioner, after he formed Quantum Edge, and before the accident at issue, that petitioner would need to have insurance. Mr. Lukis also testified that the petitioner (working through Quantum Edge) had worked for another separate Wisconsin Corporation that was owned by Mr. Lukis' wife and son, in addition to Tile Roofs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In support of the Arbitrator's decision regarding whether an employee – employer relationship existed at the time of petitioner's accidental injuries, the Arbitrator finds the following facts:

An employer-employee relationship is required for benefits under the Act. Keating 68th & Paxton LLC., 401 Ill App. 3d 456, 464; 936 NE2d 1050, 1058 (2010). The claimant has the burden of proving the existence of an employer-employee relationship by a preponderance of the evidence, and when the evidence is conflicting and subject to diverse interpretation, the issue is a question of fact to be resolved by the Commission. Pearson v. Industrial Comm'n, 318 Ill.App.3d 932, 935; 743 N.E.2d 685, 686-87 (2001).

In analyzing whether an employer-employee relationship exists, there is no rule applicable in all situations. Morgan Cab Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 60 Ill.2d 92, 97; 324 N.E.2d 425, 427 (1975). Instead, the analysis is based on all the evidentiary facts in connection with the applicable principles of law. Lawrence v. Industrial Comm'n, 391 Ill. 80, 84; 62 N.E.2d 686, 688 (1945).

The Act defines the "employer" to include every firm "who has any person in service or under contract for hire, express or implied, oral or written." 820 ILCS 305/1(a)(2) (West 2012). The Act does not define who is an "independent contractor" as opposed to an employee. The supreme court has defined an independent contractor as "one who renders service in accordance with the will of the person for whom the work is done only as the results of the work, and who is free to exercise his own judgement and discretion as to the method or means by which the work is accomplished, entirely exclusive of the control and direction of the party for whom the work is done." Lawrence, 391 Ill at 85; 62 N.E.2d at 688.

No single factor is determinative concerning what the relationship is between the parties in a given case. Morgan Cab Co. 60 Ill. 2d at 97, 324 N.E.2d at 428. "It may be necessary to consider a number of factors with evidentiary value, such as the right to control the manner in which is done, the method of payment, the right to discharge, the skill required in the work to be done, and who provides the tools, materials or equipment." Id. Other factors include whether the worker's occupation is related to that of the alleged employer and whether the alleged employer deducted withholding tax." Lister v. Industrial Comm'n, 149 Ill. App. 3d 286, 290; 500 N.E.2d 134, 136 (1986). The right to control the way the work is performed is often cited as the most important factor in determining the relationship. Kirkwood, 84 Ill.2d at 21, 416 N.E.2d at 1081. J.R. Auto Transp., LLC v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2015 IL App (3d) 140198WC-U (Ill. App., 2015).

Another factor of great significance is the nature of the work performed by the alleged employee in relation to the general business of the employer. Ware, 318 Ill.App.3d at 1122, 252 Ill.Dec. 711, 743 N.E.2d at 583. "Because the theory of the workman's compensation legislation is that the cost of industrial accidents should be borne by the consumer as a part of the cost of the product, and whose work does not constitute a separate business which allows a distinct channel through which the cost of an accident may flow, is presumptively within the area of intended protection of the compensation act." Ragler Motor Sales v. Industrial Comm'n, 93 Ill.2d 66, 71, 44 N.E.3d 652 (Ill. App., 2015) City of Bridgeport v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 44 N.E.3d 652 (Ill. App., 2015).

It is the petitioner's position that he was an employee of Tile Roofs at the time he sustained his accidental injuries. It is clear that the petitioner performed work in the same field (specialized roofing) after he formed Quantum Edge, as he did when he had been previously employed by Mortensen Roofing. However, the precise nature of his work clearly changed. He was no longer a roofer. After all, at the time of the accident, Petitioner was 61 years old, 5'-9" and weighed 252 pounds. He probably no longer had any business being up on a roof.

Petitioner acknowledged that he was "semi-retired" when he formed Quantum Edge. He also acknowledged that he was working as a "consultant" for Tile Roofs. (RX #1 p.6, 8) He acknowledged that he had developed special expertise throughout his work life and that he used that special expertise to "lay out" work for Mortensen's employees while working as a consultant for Tile Roofs. (Id. p. 9) He no longer worked alongside Mortensen roofers. He just did the layout of highly specialized roofs such as copper, tile and slate. (Id. p.14) This included being a consultant on landmark buildings.

More importantly, he established a legitimate corporation (Quantum Edge), provided a corporate W9 form to Tile Roofs, submitted invoices through Quantum Edge for his time and expenses incurred, took responsibility for paying any taxes that he may have owed for revenue that was generated by Quantum Edge. (RX #3) All of this evidence establishes that the petitioner was, indeed, working as an independent contractor at the time he was injured.

Quantum Edge was by no means a sham corporation. It was a legitimate business recognized by the federal government and the State of Illinois through which the petitioner was conducting business. The fact that petitioner testified that he established Quantum Edge for "tax purposes" supports this conclusion. Petitioner billed out his services under "Quantum Edge." (RX #2) Likewise, when paid, checks were made out to "Quantum Edge," not Steven Qualizza. (RX #1 p.19) Quantum Edge had its own bank account. (Id. p. 20) One of the main reasons people establish corporations is to enjoy the tax benefits associated with corporate status.

Also, it is common practice for a longtime employee of a corporation to act as a consultant after the employment relationship has terminated. Corporations recognize that past employees have special skills and unique knowledge relating to the business of the corporation and it is desirable and beneficial to draw upon that skill and knowledge after the employment relationship has ended. That is precisely what happened here.

Petitioner was solely responsible for making decisions relative to the business of Quantum Edge. As the sole owner, officer and employee he made a choice not to purchase workers compensation coverage. Subparagraph 20 of Section 305/3 of the Illinois Workers Compensation Act states as follows:

> Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to apply to any sole proprietor or partner or member of a limited liability company who elects not to provide and pay compensation for accidental injuries sustained by himself, arising out of and in the course of the employment according to the provisions of this Act.

Petitioner bought his own tools. (RX#1 p. 23) Petitioner started the project in July of 2016 but stopped for a time to take care of a rental property of his own that he had to "straighten things out." (RX 1 p.15, 18) Thus, it appears he had some flexibility to design his own schedule which not normally afforded to employees. Additionally, it appears that Petitioner decided when not to work because it was too dangerously hot, cold, windy or rainy. (PX #1,2,3,4) Obviously, these are valid reasons not to work at heights and petitioner made the call, not respondent.

Thus, based upon the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator finds that petitioner was not an employee of the respondent at the time of his accidental injuries. Further, respondent has no liability for petitioner's injuries based upon any alternative theories given petitioner's election as the sole owner and officer of Quantum Edge not to purchase workers compensation coverage. Petitioner ostensibly knew the risks he was taking as he had formed his own business in the past.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issue of nature and extent, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

In the interest of efficiency, the Commission primarily relies on the Arbitrator's detailed recitation of facts. Petitioner is right hand dominant. On the date of accident, Respondent employed Petitioner as a truck driver and laborer. Petitioner sustained a right scapholunate ligament tear and a right wrist TFCC tear due to the August 10, 2017, work incident.

In November 2017, he underwent surgery that included a right wrist arthroscopy with debridement of the TFCC tear and a right wrist arthrotomy with open repair of the scapholunate ligament. Unfortunately, the soft tissue reconstruction of the right scapholunate ligament tear failed. Petitioner underwent a second surgery that included a scaphoid excision and fusion in January 2018. He returned to work without restrictions in May 2018. Petitioner's physician, Dr. Greatting, placed Petitioner at MMI in June 2018. While Dr. Greatting did not prescribe any permanent restrictions, he determined that Petitioner sustained a significant loss of range of motion in his right wrist with a loss of approximately 40% wrist extension and 65-70% loss of wrist flexion in the right wrist compared to his left wrist. Dr. Greatting also documented that Petitioner has lost approximately 50-55% of the grip strength in his right wrist compared to the left. In his August 2018 narrative report, Dr. Greatting opined that this significantly reduced range of motion and grip strength is permanent.

During the arbitration hearing, Petitioner testified that he continues to work in his original position. He testified that while his treatment did improve his condition, he continues to suffer from chronic complaints regarding his right wrist. He testified that his grip strength and range of motion is significantly limited in the right wrist. He no longer plays sports such as baseball, basketball, and football with his son. He testified that he tries to use his left hand to lift and throw items as it is stronger than his right hand. Petitioner testified that he uses over the counter medication three to four days a week and regularly ices his right wrist.

After carefully considering the evidence, including the opinion of Dr. Greatting and Petitioner's testimony regarding ongoing complaints, the Commission finds Petitioner sustained a 55% loss of use of his right hand. It is indisputable that Petitioner sustained a significant injury to his right wrist due to the work accident. He underwent two right wrist surgeries because the initial soft tissue reconstruction of the scapholunate ligament failed. The second surgery included a fusion. Despite surgical intervention and occupational therapy, Petitioner has not regained his normal strength and range of motion. Petitioner is unable to fully grip and lift heavy items with his dominant hand. His lack of strength and limited range of motion is permanent. However, despite his significantly reduced range of motion and grip strength, Petitioner has returned to his regular heavy-duty job as a truck driver and laborer and has no prescribed work or activity restrictions. After weighing the five factors pursuant to Section 8.1b of the Act, the Commission finds Petitioner sustained a 55% loss of use of the right hand.

The Commission otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed July 8, 2019, is modified as stated herein.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondent shall pay to Petitioner permanent partial disability benefits of $664.21 for 112.75 weeks, because Petitioner's injuries caused 55% loss of use of the right hand, as provided for in §8(e) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest pursuant to §19(n) of the Act, if any.

The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

DISSENT

After reviewing the facts of the case in light of the five factors enumerated in §8.1b(b) of the Workers' Compensation Act, I dissent from the majority's permanent partial disability award of 55% loss of use of a right hand.

According to Section 8.1b(b) of the Act, for injuries that occur after September 1, 2011, in determining the level of permanent partial disability, the Commission shall base its determination on the following factors:

(i) The reported level of impairment pursuant to AMA guidelines;
(ii) The occupation of the injured employee;
(iii) The age of the employee at the time of the injury;
(iv) The employee's future earning capacity; and
(v) Evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records.

In considering the degree to which Petitioner is permanently partially disabled as a result of the work-related accident, I weigh the five factors in Section 8.1b(b) of the Act as follows:

(i) No AMA impairment rating was submitted by either party, so this factor is given no weight.

(ii) Petitioner is employed as a truck driver/laborer for the City of Springfield. Petitioner does heavy duty work on a regular basis. Petitioner returned to work in his prior capacity with no restrictions. Thus, this factor is assigned moderate weight.

(iii) Petitioner was 31 years old at the time of the accident and has a significant amount of work life remaining until retirement. This factor is assigned greater weight.

(iv) Petitioner returned to his regular job as a truck driver/laborer for the City of Springfield. He has no restrictions on his job duties and Petitioner continues to work in this position, as of the date of hearing. There is no evidence of reduced future earning capacity as a result of the work-related accident thus this factor should receive no weight.

(v) Regarding evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, as a result of the work-related accident of August 10, 2017, Petitioner underwent a right wrist arthroscopy with a debridement of a triangular fibrocartilage complex tear and a right wrist arthrotomy with an open repair of the scapholunate ligament and a dorsal capsulodesis. Petitioner underwent a second surgery consisting of a right wrist scaphoid excision and a midcarpal arthrodesis in January, 2018. He completed a course of physical therapy and work hardening. In May, 2018, Petitioner asked his physician, Dr. Greatting, to release him to return to work. The medical records reflect Petitioner sustained 50-55% loss of grip strength, 40% loss of extension and 65-70% loss of flexion.

AS0030108

Petitioner returned to work as a truck driver/laborer with no restrictions on his activities and testified at Arbitration he is able to do his job. During his last visit with Dr. Greatting, on June 25, 2018, Petitioner advised his strength had significantly improved. He complained of intermittent, mild discomfort but indicated the discomfort did not limit him. Petitioner testified he experiences pain and aching in the wrist and hand for which he takes over the counter medication and applies ice. He testified he is unable to engage in sporting activities with his son, such as baseball, basketball and football. I would assign moderate weight to this factor.

Based on the evidence presented that Petitioner sustained a work-related injury requiring two surgeries, completed medical treatment and returned to work in a heavy duty job with no restrictions, I would find that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability in the amount of 45% loss of use of the right hand. Thus, I respectfully dissent.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The only matter at issue in this case is the nature and extent of the Petitioner's disability. The Parties stipulated that the Respondent will pay all related medical pursuant to the fee schedule. The Petitioner, Norman Howard, testified that on August 10, 2017, he was employed by the City of Springfield Sewer Department as a truck driver/laborer. (Arbitration Transcript hereinafter A.T., Page 10). Prior to August 10, 2017, Petitioner, who is right handed, had not had any problems with his right hand or wrist. (A.T., Pages 10 & 11). Petitioner testified that his right hand was his dominant hand and that is how he used it. (A.T., Page 11).

On August 10, 2017, Petitioner was with his crew trying to break open a manhole that was rusted. (A.T., Pages 11 & 12). Petitioner was using a large pry bar to open the manhole. When the manhole popped loose, the pry bar he was using kicked back and pulled his fingers all the way back. (A.T., Pages 11 & 12). Petitioner testified that he immediately knew something was wrong with his right hand because he went to pick up a chain and could not do it. (A.T., Page 12). Petitioner had no grip strength at all. (A.T., Page 12). Petitioner was also experiencing pain in his right hand and testified that when his injury occurred, he felt a pop in his hand. (A.T., Pages 12 & 13).

The medical records for the treatment Petitioner received are included in the record as Petitioner's Exhibits 2 through 7 and Petitioner's Exhibits 11, 14 and 15. Petitioner testified that he went to Memorial Express Care on South Sixth Street after his injury. (A.T., Page 14). He was put in a brace and instructed to follow up if he continued to have pain. After he returned to Express Care he was referred to Angela Royer, a physician's assistant at Springfield Clinic. (A.T., Pages 14 & 15). Nurse Practitioner Royer placed Petitioner's right arm in a cast. (A.T., Page 15). Petitioner wore the cast for six to eight weeks and then returned to Nurse Practitioner Royer. (A.T., Pages 15 & 16). He still had pain in his hand and no strength. He was then referred to Dr. Mark Greatting at the Springfield Clinic. (A.T., Pages 15, & 16). Dr. Greatting is an orthopedic surgeon. (A.T., Page 16). Dr. Greatting concentrates his practice in issues regarding the arm. (A.T., Page 16). Dr. Greatting's records are included in the record as Petitioner's Exhibit 6. Petitioner's Exhibit 7 are operative reports for surgeries performed by Dr. Greatting on Petitioner's right hand/wrist. The records indicate that on November 21, 2017, Petitioner underwent a right wrist arthroscopy with debridement of triangular fibrocartilage complex tear and a right wrist arthrotomy with open repair of scapholunate ligament and dorsal capsulodesis with dorsal midcarpal ligament.

Petitioner testified that he remained under Dr. Greatting's care after his surgery on November 21, 2017. His arm was casted and he went back at approximately the end of December 2017 or early January 2018 and the case was removed. The pins which had been placed in his wrist were also removed and another surgery was recommended. (A.T., Pages 18 & 19). The second surgery took place on January 17, 2018. The operative report is also included in Petitioner's Exhibit 7. The operative report from that surgery indicates that Petitioner had undergone a failed scapholunate ligament repair of his right wrist. He underwent a right wrist scaphoid excision and midcarpal arthrodesis with TriMed upper fusion.

During this second surgery, a plate and screws were placed in Petitioner's wrist which remained there at the time of hearing.

Petitioner testified that after the second surgery he had the cast removed and underwent a course of physical therapy at SIU Hand Therapy. (A.T., Page 20). The physical therapy lasted for approximately two months. (A.T., Page 21). After the physical therapy was completed, Petitioner engaged in work hardening. (A.T., Pages 21 & 22). After his work hardening was completed, he went back to Dr. Greatting's office on June 25, 2018. (A.T., Page 23). Dr. Greatting released him at that time. (A.T., Page 23). Petitioner testified that when he was released by Dr. Greatting, Dr. Greatting also ordered a round of testing to determine the loss of strength and motion in his hand. (A.T., Pages 23 & 24). The results of Petitioner's strength testing are summarized by Dr. Greatting in an August 19, 2018 letter. That letter is included in Petitioner's Exhibit 6. It states:

> To Whom it May Concern,
> Norman W. Howard (date of birth October 9, 1985) has had surgery on his right wrist secondary to an injury with a scapholunate ligament tear. He had 2 surgical procedures on his wrist with the most recent surgical procedure consisting of scaphoid excision and midcarpal arthrodesis on January 16, 2018. Norm was seen by SIU Hand Therapy June 25, 2018 and had strength and range of motion measurements made of both wrists. Based on the results of that evaluation, Norm has a significant loss of range of motion in his right wrist with loss of about 40% of wrist extension and 65-70% loss of wrist flexion of his right wrist compared to his uninjured left wrist. He has lost approximately 50-55% of the grip strength in his dominant right wrist compared to his left wrist. I feel these losses are permanent and will not improve or change with time…

During the hearing, Petitioner testified as to the loss of grip strength and motion in his hand. He also demonstrated the loss of motion for the Arbitrator. (A.T., Page 25). Petitioner testified that before this injury occurred, his right hand had the same unimpeded range of motion as his left. (A.T., Pages 25 & 26). Petitioner testified that he has very little side to side motion of his right wrist and hand and the up and down motion of his right hand is significantly diminished. (A.T., Page 26). In his own words, Petitioner testified that he does not have much movement up or down and he basically has no movement from side to side. (A.T., Pages 26 & 27).

Lastly, Petitioner testified that he has lost a lot of strength in his right hand. (A.T., Page 27). He considers his left hand to now be his dominant hand and it is stronger than his right hand. (A.T., Page 27). Petitioner testified that he has rearranged his activities at work to use his left hand whenever possible as opposed to using his right hand. (A.T., Pages 27 & 28). For example, when swinging a sledgehammer, instead of using his right hand to bring it down with force, he now uses his left. (A.T., Page 28). When carrying heavy things, he uses his left hand. Petitioner testified that he jackhammers and does a lot of picking up of large pieces of concrete, asphalt and things like that where his left hand is now the dominant force when performing those functions. (A.T., Page 28).

Petitioner testified that he is no longer able to engage in sporting activities with his son such as baseball, basketball, football and things like that. (A.T., Page 29). Even though his left hand is now his dominant hand, he is not able to throw a baseball with his left hand very well. (A.T., Page 29). The same is true with a football. (A.T, Page 29). Petitioner testified that he also still experiences pain on a regular basis. (A.T., Page 30). He ices his wrist a lot and rotates between Ibuprofen and Tylenol for the swelling and some of the pain. (A.T., Page 30). Petitioner testified that in an average week, he has to ice his wrist and take Ibuprofen and Tylenol about three or four days. (A.T, Page 30). After a week of work, Petitioner's wrist stiffens up and he has to loosen it up again when he starts work the following week. (A.T., Pages 30 & 31).

CONCLUSIONS

Pursuant to §8.1b of the Act, permanent partial disability from injuries that occur after September 1, 2011 is to be established using the following criteria: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to subsection (a) of §8.1b of the Act; (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; and (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. 820 ILCS 305/8.1b. The Act provides that, "No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability." 820 ILCS 305/8.1b(b)(v).

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that neither party submitted an impairment rating. The Arbitrator therefore gives no weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes Petitioner is employed by the City of Springfield Sewer Department as a truck driver/laborer. The Petitioner does heavy duty work on a regular basis. That work causes Petitioner to experience pain several times a week for which he must take over the counter pain medication and apply ice to his wrist. Given the stress put on his wrist by performing this work, it is conceivable that Petitioner may develop further problems with the wrist which would affect his ability to perform his job at some point in the future. The Arbitrator therefore gives greater weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that at the time of the injury, Petitioner was 31 years old. Petitioner continues to experience problems with his wrist and hand and has pain regularly. The Petitioner has lost most of the motion and strength in his right hand. His right hand was his dominant hand. He has a plate and screws in his right wrist and hand as a result of this injury. Dr. Greatting's letter of August 19, 2018, indicated that these conditions were permanent. Given the fact that these problems will continue throughout the course of Petitioner's life, they will continue for a lengthy period of time if Petitioner lives a normal life expectancy. The Arbitrator places significant weight on the fact that Petitioner is a young man who will experience these problems for the rest of his life. The Arbitrator therefore gives greater weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner returned to his regular job with the City of Springfield Sewer Department. There was no direct evidence of wage loss in this case. However, as indicated above, Petitioner's job is a heavy duty one. Performing it places stress on Petitioner hand and wrist. There may come a point where Petitioner is no longer able to engage in this type of employment. The Arbitrator therefore gives some weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator notes the Petitioner was a credible witness. The medical records indicate that Petitioner underwent multiple surgeries on his right wrist/hand because of the problems he was experiencing. He underwent physical therapy and work hardening. He has a plate and screws in his wrist. He has lost most of the strength and motion in his right hand. He is right hand dominant. He experiences pain and aching in his wrist and hand and has to take over the counter pain medications and apply ice to his wrist and hand multiple times per week. He has restructured his activities at work to use his left hand as his dominant hand. He is unable to engage in sporting activities with is son because he does not have significant range of motion or strength in his right hand and wrist to do so. Specifically, Petitioner is no longer able to throw a football or baseball. Dr. Greatting's records indicated that Petitioner's condition is permanent and will not improve.

Based on the above factors, and the record taken as a whole, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner sustained permanent partial disability to the extent of 60% loss of use of the right hand pursuant to §8(e) of the Act.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Respondent, Park District of Highland Park ("Respondent") employed Petitioner, Vladimir Fedorov ("Petitioner") as an ice dancing and ice skating instructor. Petitioner is an experienced professional ice dancer and former Olympian. Petitioner testified that he started at age six in Russia where he was placed in the Russian Institute for athletics, and began to learn his trade of ice skating. He testified that he went on to win the bronze medal in the Junior World Championships, bronze medal in the World Ice Dancing Championships, fourth place in the European Championships, and his competitive career culminated with 6th Place finish in the Lillehammer Olympics in 1994. Thereafter he came to the United States, and began instructing and coaching professionally. During his coaching career he coached several competitive national championship qualifying teams prior to and during his employment with Respondent. Petitioner testified that his sole trade is that of an ice skating instructor, and has never been employed in any other trade or field other than ice skating and ice dancing.

Petitioner sustained an undisputed work accident while working for Respondent on February 2, 2010. Petitioner testified that on February 2, 2010, he began work at his usual time in the morning instructing a class of beginner children ice skaters. He stated that as they were doing the warm ups, one student fell very hard on her hip. Petitioner picked the child up, and began to carry her to the door in the skating rink boards to take her off the ice. While exiting from the ice to the floor the child's leg became caught on the boards in the doorway, causing Petitioner to fall backwards. He continued to hold the child and she landed on his chest, while his left leg twisted behind him. He testified he felt a snap, and immediately knew that he had severely injured his left knee. He stated the leg immediately swelled, and he went to the emergency room, where he came under the care of Dr. Charles Lettvin of Illinois Bone & Joint Institute. (PX 1)

Petitioner immediately underwent a left patellar open repair surgery with Dr. Lettvin on February 5, 2010. Thereafter, he had post-surgical blood clotting, and his knee was locked in full extension for approximately two weeks. Petitioner began physical therapy on March 24, 2010, and continued to treat with Dr. Lettvin through November 8, 2010. (PX 1)

By March 2011 Petitioner had not reached maximum improvement and was referred to Dr. James Jill at Northwestern for further care. Petitioner testified that he sought a second opinion with Dr. James Hill, of Northwestern University Hospital, upon the recommendation of the one of Respondent's human resources employees. Records submitted show Petitioner saw Dr. Hill on March 3, 2011. A MRI was recommended which when completed revealed that he had a defect of the superior central portion of the lateral facet of the patella. It was noted that he also had extensive postoperative changes of the patella with evidence of ongoing scarring. On March 16, 2011, Dr. Hill noted his impression that Petitioner had a defect of the lateral facet of his patella with scarring of the patella tendon. The doctor felt Petitioner would not improve with further conservative care and recommended a left knee arthroscopy with excision of the scar tissue and treatment for the defect in the lateral facet of the patella. (PX 2)

On April 15, 2011, Dr. Hill performed a second surgery consisting of a left knee arthroscopy with debridement of synovium and plica. Petitioner continued in physical therapy and under the care of Dr. Hill. On November 28, 2011, Dr. Hill recommended a Functional Capacity Evaluation. The doctor's recommendation was carried out on December 15, 2011, at Athletico. The evaluator noted that Petitioner demonstrated high levels of effort throughout the evaluation. The evaluator felt Petitioner was not capable of performing the physical demands of the target job of Figure Skating Instructor. Because of Petitioner's left knee range of motion and strength deficits, it was recommended that he undergo a formal and organized work conditioning program to assist in balance training, functional single leg strength and the ability to tolerate twisting motions without disabling left knee pain. (PX 3)

Petitioner continued with additional therapy. On his return visit to Dr. Hill on March 2, 2012, Petitioner reported that he was improving. His gait was normal. He had full range of motion of his knee. There was 2 cm of atrophy of the left thigh and he had crepitus on flexion and extension of the knee. Physical therapy was continued. (PX 2)

Pursuant to Dr. Hill's referral, Petitioner underwent a second Functional Capacity Evaluation on June 18, 2012. In his Summary Report, the evaluator noted the results were valid indicating Petitioner was capable of performing at a "medium level and with some modifications a heavy physical demand level when done occasionally." The evaluator noted Petitioner was able to carry, push and pull at the heavy physical demand tolerance. Petitioner demonstrated limitations with walking or standing completing greater than 2-1/2 hours of repetitive standing and walking. Petitioner also demonstrated single leg balance equally between legs with eyes open and closed. He further performed single leg balanced activity with safe form and without loss of balance. Lastly, the evaluator stated, "[Petitioner] does have the physical strength and stability in his left knee to perform and be on the ice close to his students, but he will have difficulty performing demonstrations that require deep knee bending or lifting. If he can be assisted with this he may be able to return to his job as a figure skating instructor." (PX 3)

In addition to working part-time as an ice skating instructor, Petitioner also taught ice skating lessons as part of a personal business, F & B On Ice. Petitioner testified that the corporation is a business he runs in addition to working for Respondent. It is undisputed that Respondent knew of this secondary business. He worked for Respondent Monday afternoons, Tuesday mornings, and Wednesday afternoons. He also worked for Respondent Friday and Saturday mornings from time to time when needed, or when there was an upcoming competition. Petitioner concurrently conducted and taught his own private lessons in addition to the work he performed for Respondent. Petitioner used Respondent's ice rink and facilities for his own business, as well as other facilities, to instruct clients in the same manner as the type of work he performed for Respondent. Petitioner testified that in both his private lessons, and working for Respondent, he would instruct from the very basic level ice dancing routines, through elite professional Olympic and World Championship competitive level routines. These routines included up to 37 different routines, and required him to actively participate on the ice with his students at all times.

Petitioner is the sole shareholder of F & B On Ice, an S Corporation. The corporation's income is earned through Petitioner's private business as an ice skating instructor. From 2009 to 2015, Petitioner claimed the net profits from the corporation as income from an S corporation under line 17 on his personal tax returns. From 2009 to 2015, the corporation did not pay wages to any employees or compensate any officers, including Petitioner. (PX 4, PX 5) Petitioner testified that his personal tax returns and tax returns for F & B On Ice for the years 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, and 2015 were prepared by an accountant. Petitioner also testified he was given the opportunity to review each tax return prior to it being filed. He also testified that he has not filed any amendments to those tax returns.

Petitioner testified that he returned to skating instruction for Respondent in July 2012, "the 24th or 25th." Respondent paid Petitioner temporary total disability benefits from February 2, 2010, through July 15, 2012, or $21,822.54 over said period. Petitioner testified that currently, he is in constant pain. He has difficulty with ice dancing instruction. He can only instruct up to the most basic levels both for Respondent and at his own private lessons. He testified that many times he only instructs from off ice, and that when he attempts to skate on ice he suffers from instability and pain, which prevents him from skating as a partner with any of his students, or from doing any activities which require him to bend his left leg at all. He stated he constantly has to take pain medications and ice his leg.

Petitioner testified that still maintains his business as an ice skating instructor. He continues to maintain certification from the US Figure Skating Association to coach and teach skaters of all levels. He was first certified in 1999 and currently maintains that certification. Petitioner also currently maintains membership in the Professional Skaters Association, an organization of ice skating professionals engaged in the instruction and training of ice skating. Prior to the accident of February 2, 2010, Petitioner charged the same hourly rate for ice skating lessons for skaters of all skill levels. Petitioner testified that the annual income of F & B On Ice fluctuates and is influenced by numerous factors. Petitioner maintains a LinkedIn webpage in which he identifies himself as a national and international level coach of professional figure skating from 1999 to present.

With respect to (F.) Whether Petitioner's present condition of ill being is causally related to the injury, the Arbitrator finds the following:

Petitioner sustained an undisputed work accident while working for Respondent on February 2, 2010. At that time he sustained an injury to his left leg when he fell while carrying a beginner ice skater who had hurt herself. Immediately thereafter, Petitioner underwent a left patellar open repair surgery with Dr. Lettvin on February 5, 2010. By March 2011 Petitioner had not reached maximum improvement and was referred to Dr. Hill. The doctor ultimately performed a second surgery consisting of a left knee arthroscopy with debridement of synovium and plica. On June 18, 2012, Petitioner underwent a valid Functional Capacity Evaluation indicating Petitioner was capable of performing at a "medium level and with some modifications a heavy physical demand level when done occasionally."

Relying on the sequence of events, together with Petitioner's treating medical records from Illinois Bone & Joint Institute, Dr. James Hill of Northwestern University Hospital, and Athletico, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner's present left leg condition of ill being is causally related to his February 2, 2010, fall while working for Respondent.

With respect to (G.) What were the Petitioner's earnings, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The parties stipulated that Petitioner's earnings while working for Respondent were $2,922.50, which produced an agreed average weekly wage, from Respondent's earnings only, of $76.90. (RX 1) The parties also agreed that the corporate income from F & B On Ice , Petitioner's private company, were $84,455.00 for the year prior to his February 2, 2010 accident.

Petitioner argues that the corporate income of F & B On Ice should be considered wages earned through concurrent income, and therefore included in the average weekly wage calculation. The Arbitrator disagrees. The Appellate Court of Illinois has ruled unambiguously that net profits from corporate income are not included in the average weekly wage calculation. Paoletti v. Industrial Commission, 279 Ill.App.3d 988 (1996).

The Arbitrator looks to the Appellate Court's decision in Mansfield v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission for further guidance. In that case, the claimant worked part-time as a piano teacher for Naperville Park District. In addition, she taught piano lessons out of her home. When the claimant was injured working for the Naperville Park District, she argued her average weekly wage should be calculated using both her earnings with the park district and the income from the self-employment business of teaching lessons out of her home. In Mansfield, the Appellate Court held that the self-employment business income was not paid to her as wages from an employer, and therefore could not be included in the average weekly wage calculation. Mansfield v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Commission, 2013 Ill.App.(2d) 120909WC.

Based on the above, the Arbitrator calculates Petitioner's average weekly wage using solely the wages paid to Petitioner by Respondent in the 52 weeks prior to the accident. The income of F & B On Ice will not be included in the calculation.

Sec. 10 of the Act dictates that earnings "shall be divided by the weeks and parts thereof" actually worked by the claimant. The Appellate Court of Illinois has ruled that when the claimant's employment is less than full-time, earnings are divided by an entire workweek even if the claimant only worked a portion of the week. Ricketts v. Industrial Commission et al., 251 Ill.App.3d 809 (1993).

In the case at hand, Petitioner testified that he was a part-time employee at Park District of Highland Park as an ice skating instructor. Petitioner worked during 38 of the 52 weeks prior to the accident. The wage statement admitted into evidence as Respondent's Exhibit 1 reveals Petitioner earned $2,922.50 working as an ice skating instructor for Park District of Highland Park during those 38 weeks. Therefore, dividing the $2,922.50 earned over the 38 weeks actually worked yields an average weekly wage of $76.90.

Based on the above, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner's earnings during the year preceding the injury were $2,922.50 and his average weekly wage, calculated pursuant to Section 10 of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act, was $76.90.

With respect to (K.) What temporary benefits (TTD) are in dispute, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

The parties agree that Petitioner was at a minimum temporarily and totally disabled from work for the period of February 2, 2010 through March 5, 2012. Petitioner request additional temporary total disability benefits through July 15, 2012.

Medical documentation submitted and Petitioner's testimony demonstrates that he last saw Dr. Hill on March 5, 2012. At that time Petitioner reported he was improving. Dr. Hill continued physical therapy. Petitioner testified that he never returned to the doctor for another visit. Although Petitioner did not return to Dr. Hill after March 5, 2012, documents submitted show Dr. Hill referred Petitioner for a second Functional Capacity Evaluation. The evaluation took place on June 18, 2012 and was deemed valid indicating Petitioner was capable of performing at a "medium level and with some modifications a heavy physical demand level when done occasionally." Petitioner testified that he returned to skating instruction for Respondent in July 2012, "the 24th or 25th." Respondent paid Petitioner temporary total disability benefits from February 2, 2010, through July 15, 2012, or $21,822.54 over said period.

In summation, Petitioner last saw Dr. Hill on March 5, 2012. Pursuant to Dr. Hill's referral, Petitioner underwent a valid Functional Capacity Evaluation on June 18, 2012. Respondent paid temporary total disability through July 15, 2012, or $21,822.54; and lastly, Petitioner testified that he returned to skating instruction for Respondent in July 2012, "the 24th or 25th."

Taking all the above into consideration, the Arbitrator awards temporary total disability benefits from February 2, 2010 through July 15, 2012, a period of 125-2/7ths weeks. Respondent is entitled to a credit for TTD benefits paid.

With respect to issue (L.) What is the nature and extent of the injury, the Arbitrator finds as follows:

In determining the level of permanent partial disability for injuries incurred on or after September 1, 2011, the Commission shall base its determination on the following factors: (i) the reported level of impairment pursuant to the most current edition of the AMA's "Guides to the Evaluation of Permanent Impairment"; (ii) the occupation of the injured employee; (iii) the age of the employee at the time of the injury; (iv) the employee's future earning capacity; (v) evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records. (820 ILCS 305/8.1b)

No single enumerated factor shall be the sole determinant of disability. In determining the level of disability, the relevance and weight of any factors used in addition to the level of impairment as reported by the physician must be explained in a written order. (820 ILCS 305/8.1b)

With regard to subsection (i) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that no opinion comporting with the specific requirements of §8.1b(a) was submitted into evidence. The Arbitrator gives no weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (ii) of §8.1b(b), the occupation of the employee, the Arbitrator notes Petitioner was employed as an ice skating instructor at the time of the accident. In June 2012, Petitioner underwent a FCE finding Petitioner was capable of performing at a "medium level and with some modifications a heavy physical demand level when done occasionally." Petitioner testified that due to his restrictions, he can only teach up to the fourth, of thirty-seven total levels of ice dancing, and now has to refer any higher level instruction to outside ice dancing instructors. Further he can no longer engage in many of the on ice activities that he once was able to perform. That said, Petitioner is currently employed in the same course of employment as before the accident. Petitioner still maintains his business as an ice skating instructor. He continues to maintain his certification to teach ice skating of all levels of competition and identifies himself as a national and international level coach for professional figure skating on the LinkedIn webpage he maintains. The Arbitrator gives weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iii) of §8.1b(b), the Arbitrator notes that Petitioner is 38 years old at the time of the accident. As Petitioner is a younger individual who has to live with his permanent partial disability for longer period than that of an older individual, the Arbitrator therefore gives greater weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (iv) of §8.1b(b), Petitioner's future earnings capacity, the Arbitrator again notes Petitioner is currently employed as an ice skating instructor and still maintains his business as an ice skating instructor. He continues to maintain his certification to teach ice skating of all levels of competition and identifies himself as a national and international level coach for professional figure skating on the LinkedIn webpage he maintains. Petitioner testified that the annual income of F & B On Ice fluctuates each year based on a number of different factors, none of which were identified as the work injury on February 2, 2010. He also testified that he charges the same hourly rate for ice skating lessons of every skill level. There was no evidence presented to show Petitioner suffered a decrease in earning capability as a result of the injury. Because there is no impairment to future earnings, the Arbitrator therefore gives no weight to this factor.

With regard to subsection (v) of §8.1b(b), evidence of disability corroborated by the treating medical records, the Arbitrator notes Petitioner underwent two surgeries that being a left patellar open repair surgery with Dr. Lettvin on February 5, 2010 and a left knee arthroscopy with debridement of synovium and plica performed by Dr. Hill on April 15, 2011. During his last documented visit with Dr. Hill on March 2, 2012, Petitioner reported that he was improving. His gait was normal. He had full range of motion of his knee. There was 2 cm of atrophy of the left thigh and he had crepitus on flexion and extension of the knee. Pursuant to Dr. Hill's referral, Petitioner underwent a valid Functional Capacity Evaluation on June 18, 2012. Petitioner demonstrated that he was capable of performing at a "medium level and with some modifications a heavy physical demand level when done occasionally." The evaluator noted Petitioner was able to carry, push and pull at the heavy physical demand tolerance. Petitioner demonstrated limitations with walking or standing completing greater than 2-1/2 hours of repetitive standing and walking. Petitioner also demonstrated single leg balance equally between legs with eyes open and closed. He further performed single leg balanced activity with safe form and without loss of balance. Lastly, the evaluator stated, "[Petitioner] does have the physical strength and stability in his left knee to perform and be on the ice close to his students, but he will have difficulty performing demonstrations that require deep knee bending or lifting. If he can be assisted with this he may be able to return to his job as a figure skating instructor." Petitioner testified that he is in constant pain. He indicated that he has difficulty with ice dancing instruction. He can only instruct up to the most basic levels both for Respondent and at his own private lessons. He testified that many times he only instructs from off ice, and that when he attempts to skate on ice he suffers from instability and pain, which prevents him from skating as a partner with any of his students, or from doing any activities which require him to bend his left leg at all. He stated he constantly has to take pain medications and ice his leg. The Arbitrator gives some weight to this factor.

Based on all the above, the Arbitrator finds that as a result of the accidental injury, Petitioner sustained 32-1/2% loss of use of the left leg under Section 8(e) of the Act.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review under Section 19(b) of the Act having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of causal connection, medical expenses, prospective medical care, temporary benefits, and penalties and attorney's fees, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Indus. Comm'n, 78 Ill. 2d 327 (1980).

So that the record is clear, and there is no mistake as to the intentions or actions of the Commission, we have considered the record in its entirety. We have reviewed the facts of the matter, both from a legal and a medical/legal perspective. The Commission has considered all the testimony, exhibits, pleadings, and arguments submitted by the parties. The Commission is not bound by the Arbitrator's findings. Our Supreme Court has long held that it is the Commission's province "to assess the credibility of witnesses, resolve conflicts in the evidence, assign weight to be accorded the evidence, and draw reasonable inferences from the evidence." City of Springfield v. Indus. Comm'n, 291 Ill. App. 3d 734, 740 (1997) (citing Kirkwood v. Indus. Comm'n, 84 Ill. 2d 14, 20 (1981)). Interpretation of medical testimony is particularly within the province of the Commission. A. O. Smith Corp. v. Indus. Comm'n, 51 Ill. 2d 533, 536-37 (1972).

The Commission affirms the Arbitrator's award of $10,000.00 for Section 19(l) penalties. However, the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award for Section 19(k) penalties and Section 16 attorney's fees.

The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's findings and conclusions that Respondent failed to present any evidence to rebut the presumption of unreasonable delay pursuant to Section 19(l) of the Act. Respondent failed to respond to Petitioner's demand for payment of benefits within 14 days as required under Section 19(l) of the Act, and Respondent also did not comply with the Commission's Rule 9110.70, which required written explanation for denial of medical care or payment of temporary benefits.

However, the Commission disagrees with the Arbitrator relative to the award of Section 19(k) penalties and Section 16 fees as the Commission finds that the evidence did not demonstrate that Respondent's actions rose to the level of vexatious conduct. The Commission finds merit in Respondent's position that the delay in payment was in part caused by issues with calculating the correct amount owed in temporary benefits as demonstrated by the irregular and fluctuating hours and payment information contained in Petitioner's Exhibits 1 and 8. The Commission further finds that a legitimate dispute existed as to causal connection for Petitioner's bilateral hip condition and that Respondent had relied on its Section 12 examiner to deny payment of medical benefits. Thus, while the Commission affirms the Arbitrator's award of $10,000.00 for Section 19(l) penalties, the Commission vacates the Arbitrator's award for Section 19(k) penalties and Section 16 attorney's fees.

The remainder of the Arbitrator's Decision is affirmed and adopted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator, filed March 1, 2019, is hereby modified as stated above, and otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay to Petitioner temporary total disability benefits of $773.57 per week for 23 weeks, commencing July 5, 2017 through December 12, 2017, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under Section 8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay to Petitioner temporary partial disability benefits totaling $24,910.51 for the period commencing December 13, 2017 through January 11, 2019 as provided in Section 8(a) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay $90,141.09 in reasonable and necessary medical services pursuant to Section 8(a) of the Act and to be adjusted in accord with the medical fee schedule provided in Section 8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Petitioner is entitled to prospective medical treatment as ordered by Dr. Domb including physical therapy, massage and myofascial release for the right hip as well as an updated left hip MRI arthrogram and pre-operative and post-operative care related to left hip surgery.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Arbitrator's award for Section 19(k) penalties and Section 16 attorney's fees be and is hereby vacated.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall pay penalties pursuant to Section 19(l) of the Act in the amount of $10,000.00.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all other amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

Bond for removal of this cause to the Circuit Court by Respondent is hereby fixed at the sum of $75,000.00. The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in the Circuit Court.

ILLINOIS WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION ARBITRATION DECISION ADDENDUM
19(b) & 8(a)

Michelle Reagan
Employee/Petitioner

v.

Tiffany and Company
Employer/Respondent

Case # 17 WC 13278

Consolidated cases: N/A

FINDINGS OF FACT

A hearing was held in the above-captioned case on January 11, 2019. Arbitrator's Exhibit[4] ("AX") 1. The issues in dispute include causal connection, Respondent's liability for certain unpaid medical bills, whether Petitioner is entitled to prospective medical care to the right and left hips as ordered by Dr. Domb, and whether Respondent is liable for penalties and attorney's fees pursuant to Sections 16, 19(k) and 19(l) of the Act. AX1. The parties have stipulated to all other issues. Id.

Background

Michelle Regan (Petitioner) testified that she was employed by Tiffany and Company (Respondent) as a Sales Associate at the time of her undisputed accident at work. In this position, she sold fine jewelry to customers and received hourly wages in addition to commission. Petitioner explained that she was required to stand for long periods of time as well as bend and squat often to obtain merchandise below the showcases. Additionally, Petitioner testified that she was required to hurry to the customers and make first contact with them to obtain any commission related to those merchandise sales. Petitioner further testified that the position required her to wear professional attire and maintain a well-groomed physical appearance.

Petitioner testified that she was asymptomatic in her hips and did not require medical treatment to either hip or time off work as a result of any hip condition prior to October 15, 2016. The medical records corroborate Petitioner's testimony in this regard.

October 15, 2016

On October 15, 2016, Petitioner testified that she was wearing a skirt with pump-style dress shoes at work. She was coming from her mailbox at the back of the store carrying papers and traversing through a hallway when she slipped and fell on water left by the maintenance person who recently had mopped the floor. Specifically, she explained that her right foot slipped forward and she felt a pop or tear in her right hip. Petitioner then attempted to regain her balance but her left foot slipped to the left of her. Ultimately, she fell forward landing on her hands and knees. Immediately after the occurrence, Petitioner felt pain in her hips, knees and hands. She also felt embarrassed and noticed her knees, hands and papers, which were wet and strewn about the floor as a result of the fall.

[4] The Arbitrator similarly references the parties' exhibits herein. Petitioner's exhibits are denominated "PX" and Respondent's exhibits are denominated "RX" with a corresponding number as identified by each party.

Despite her pain, Petitioner continued working and she was permitted to sit in the back of the store and conduct customer follow up using a computer. During the ensuing days, Petitioner noticed she was in a lot of pain; she took Ibuprofen and hoped to get better. Petitioner did not seek medical treatment immediately following the accident as she believed she could take care of herself, but her work performance suffered dramatically as her ability to be on the sales floor was limited due to her pain. Petitioner's managers allowed her to sit in the back of the store and work on the computer as needed.

Medical Treatment

Due to the persistence of pain and increasing symptoms in her right hip, Petitioner first sought professional care from Dr. Andreano, a chiropractor, on November 2, 2016. Dr. Andreano's evidence deposition was taken and admitted into evidence at the hearing. RX3. By then, Petitioner explained that her hands and knees were still achy, but improving. She also testified that Dr. Andreano performed bilateral blocking treatment which temporarily improved the hip pain.

Respondent's workers' compensation insurance carrier then referred Petitioner for orthopedic care with Dr. Domb in early in 2017. PX3. Petitioner was first seen at Dr. Domb's office on January 18, 2017. Id. At that time, a consistent history of the fall at work was noted. PX3 at 99. The right hip MRI revealed tears of the superior and anterior superior labrum and gluteus minimus with a 1 cm retraction of the distal tendon stump and a partial tear of the gluteus medius. Id., at 155. Dr. Domb initially recommended therapy and injections for the right hip as Petitioner hoped to avoid surgery. Id., at 98.

While undergoing therapy, Petitioner reported pain and weakness in her left hip as well. PX3 at 152. She first reported pain in her left hip during therapy on February 22, 2017. Id. Petitioner also experienced swelling in both hips, right greater than left, as a result of therapy. PX3.

On July 5, 2017, Dr. Domb performed surgery to the right hip after conservative treatment had failed. PX3 at 68-71. The surgery included over nine specific procedures including an open repair of the gluteus medius, labral repair and loose body removal. Id.

Petitioner noted that the surgery was intended to be arthroscopic, but due to the damage, an open procedure was required which necessitated an incision approximately 12 inches in length. Post-operatively, Petitioner could not walk for eight weeks and explained that she had to learn how to walk again thereafter. She was on crutches and used her left leg to compensate for the right and the left hip was becoming more and more symptomatic including pain and weakness.

The medical records reflect that Petitioner then underwent a course of postoperative physical therapy through October 6, 2017. PX3 at 57-61. She underwent another course of physical therapy from October 17, 2017 through December 7, 2017. PX4.

In December of 2017, Dr. Domb recommended surgery to the left hip. PX3 at 55. Specifically, Dr. Domb opined that Petitioner's left hip symptoms worsened over time due to compensation for the right hip problems. Id., at 50. Petitioner testified that she has not undergone the left hip surgery to date due to lack of workers' compensation insurance authorization.

In early 2018, Petitioner underwent additional physical therapy for both hips from January 19, 2017 through May 16, 2018, and injections to the left hip. PX5, PX3 at 38-44.

Approximately one year post-operatively from the right hip surgery, Petitioner testified that she experienced swelling and fatigue in the right hip. However, she also noted relief within the joint as a result of the surgery such that she could take a step without painful clicking that she previously experienced. At that time, the left hip pain and swelling was increasing. Due to her pain and symptoms, Petitioner explained that her gait was impacted as she could not take a full stride due to the left hip. To accommodate the symptoms, Petitioner testified that she limited standing and walking. Further, she often utilizes a tennis ball under the hip while laying down to help relieve the pressure on the hip.

Section 12 Examination – Dr. Cannestra

On October 3, 2018, Petitioner submitted to a one-time medical evaluation with Dr. Cannestra at Respondent's request. RX1-RX2. Dr. Cannestra took a history from Petitioner, performed a physical examination, reviewed various treatment records, and rendered opinions regarding the relatedness, if any, of Petitioner's bilateral hip condition to her accident at work. RX1.

Dr. Cannestra opined that Petitioner sustained a work-related injury to her right hip limited to a right hip gluteus medius tendon rupture or tear. RX1. He opined that reasonable and necessary treatment for this condition was limited to physical therapy, oral anti-inflamatories, x-rays, MRI scans, surgical repair and bracing. Id. He specifically found that the platelet-rich plasma injections are considered experimental and were not reasonable and necessary. Id. Additionally, Dr. Cannestra opined that Petitioner suffered from a preexisting degenerative condition called femoral acetabular impingement and labral tear. Id. He opined that this condition was not caused by or aggravated by the fall. Id. Thus, Dr. Cannestra concluded that the treatment for this condition including the arthroscopic acetabuloplasty, iliopsoas fractional lengthening, femoroplasty, capsular plication, endoscopic trochanteric bursectomy and debridement, and iliotibial band tendon release were not indicated or necessitated by her work-related injury. Id.

With respect to the left hip, Dr. Cannestra opined that Petitioner's left hip condition was not caused or aggravated by the fall at work. RX1. He based his opinion, in part, on the fact that Petitioner did not complain of left hip pain for over four months after the accident. Id. Dr. Cannestra also opined that there was no evidence of a gluteus medius tendon rupture on the left hip MRI scan. Id. Rather he opined that the scan showed only degeneration of the tendon which was a preexisting disorder. Id.

Petitioner most recently saw Dr. Domb on December 17, 2018. PX3 at 4. Regarding the left hip, he continued recommending surgery and an updated left hip MRI. Id. Petitioner wishes to undergo this care because she hopes to recover and live pain free, but testified that the workers' compensation carrier has not authorized this care. Regarding the right hip, Dr. Domb recommends soft tissue therapy, massage and myofascial release, which Petitioner is undergoing at New Life Holistic. Id. As a result of that treatment, Petitioner testified that she notices definite relief and improvement in the texture and "lumpiness" of the right hip. She also noted that although the relief is temporary, she does feel right hip improvement.

Work Restrictions

The medical records reflect that Petitioner was placed off work after her right hip surgery from July 5, 2017 through December 12, 2017. PX3. Petitioner testified that she received temporary total disability benefits regularly during this time. Thereafter, she returned to restricted duty work per Dr. Domb from December 13, 2017 through the present. Petitioner's current restrictions include limited lifting, no prolonged walking or sitting with rest as needed, standing as tolerated and no more than four hours of work per day, three days a week. Id., at 6. These restrictions have increased over time due to swelling and increased symptoms with increased activity.

Petitioner testified that for the temporary partial disability period beginning on December 13, 2017 through the present, Respondent has not paid her temporary partial disability benefits with any regularity. At times, Petitioner explained that such benefits were paid two or more months behind. PX8. Petitioner testified that the irregularity of these payments has caused her financial and emotional hardship, including having to borrow money and necessitating her to rent out her house because she could not keep up with the bills. She was also forced to rent a lower cost attic apartment with no kitchen in which to live herself. Additionally, the lack of financial stability has caused her to end participation in extra-curricular activities as well as modify personal habits like buying at-home hair color products and press-on nails, rather than obtaining professional hair and manicure services as she did prior to her accident.

Petitioner testified that she attempted to address the issue of irregular temporary partial disability payments with her managers, human resources personnel, and Joni Shepard, the workers' compensation insurance claim adjustor. Petitioner expressed concern about making such reports as they might alter the light in which she is viewed by Respondent. In the past, Petitioner explained that she was seen as a "performer" whereas she is now seen as a "complainer." Petitioner expressed distress and worry about her job stability.

Additional Information

Regarding her current condition of ill-being, Petitioner has difficulty sleeping due to the symptoms in her hips. She used hike, which was one of her favorite activities, but she can no longer do so due to too much pain in her hips. Additionally, due to hip pain, she stopped working out with weights twice a week and doing yoga three times a week. As a result of the limited activity, Petitioner has gained 20 pounds since the accident. She restricts her activities after work because she must go to bed to recover from the pain and swelling in her hips that work exacerbated. Petitioner explained that if she sits for a prolonged period, it is painful to then stand and once she rises from a seated position, she must stand still momentarily to allow her hips to loosen up before she can start walking. Petitioner testified that her injuries also prevent her from being able to bend or squat normally, so she has to modify her activities. For example, Petitioner testified that when she retrieves merchandise from below the showcases at work, she now kneels on the floor to access the merchandise rather than bending over or squatting to obtain it. Petitioner explained that kneeling proves to be awkward and embarrassing as customers watch her in this task, and co-workers must step over her legs as she is kneeling.

Petitioner testified that before the October 15, 2016 accident at work, she always exceeded expectations in her job reviews, but she is now falling below expectations—even with a modified goal—due to the limitations resulting from her bilateral hip condition which limits her ability to get to the customers first. She cannot walk fast, and she has to take a break every two hours which removes her from the sales floor reducing her commission prospects further.

ISSUES AND CONCLUSIONS

The Arbitrator hereby incorporates by reference the Findings of Fact delineated above and the Arbitrator's and parties' exhibits are made a part of the Commission's file. After reviewing the evidence and due deliberation, the Arbitrator finds on the issues presented at the hearing as follows:

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Issue (F), whether the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally related to the injury, the Arbitrator finds the following:

Based on the totality of the evidence, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being in the bilateral hips is causally related to the accident on October 15, 2016. In so concluding, the Arbitrator finds the opinions of Petitioner's treating physician, Dr. Domb, to be more persuasive than those of Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Cannestra, in this case.

As an initial matter, the Arbitrator finds Petitioner's testimony at the hearing to be credible. Petitioner's testimony is corroborated by the medical records and other documentary evidence submitted at the hearing. Petitioner was asymptomatic in both hips prior to her fall at work. She had no prior treatment to either hip and lost no time from work due to any degenerative or pre-existing condition in either hip. Petitioner then sustained an undisputed slip-and-fall accident at work traversing a wet floor while engaged in her duties as a sales associate. Petitioner underwent a course of conservative medical treatment with a chiropractor that she regularly saw for treatment unrelated to either hip, but obtained no relief from her initial symptoms.

Petitioner then saw Dr. Domb on referral from Respondent. Dr. Domb evaluated Petitioner for her right hip complaints, which were not alleviated with further conservative treatment resulting in a right hip surgery. Petitioner later complained of left hip pain and symptoms. After evaluation and treatment by Dr. Domb, he concluded that Petitioner's left hip condition was due to compensation for the right hip.

While Petitioner had bilateral hip pain and symptoms immediately after her fall at work, the medical records reflect that Petitioner complained primarily of right hip pain and symptoms. Indeed, Dr. Domb and Petitioner's physical therapists focused on the right hip condition throughout her initial course of medical treatment. Dr. Cannestra, Respondent's Section 12 examiner, maintains that the lack of notation relating to left hip complaints for several months in the medical records supports his conclusion that Petitioner's left hip complaints were wholly unrelated to the fall at work. Dr. Cannestra also opined that Petitioner's right hip condition, with immediate complaints of pain and symptoms, is also unrelated to her accident at work. Rather, he contends that Petitioner's right and left hip conditions are wholly unrelated to the accident at work and are due to either pre-existing conditions or non-occupational sources. It is notable that Petitioner was asymptomatic in both hips prior to her accident at work. Moreover, Dr. Cannestra's credentials, while impressive, are also not as extensive as those of Dr. Domb who had the benefit of evaluating Petitioner throughout many months of medical treatment compared to Dr. Cannestra who only had the opportunity to see her once. Respondent offered the deposition testimony of Dr. Andreano, Petitioner's chiropractor, into evidence and his records were reviewed by Dr. Cannestra. While Dr. Cannestra would have expected Petitioner to report immediate left hip complaints after her accident, and he disagrees with Dr. Domb that Petitioner's possible left hip tear as noted in her MRI was aggravated by the accident at work or its sequelae, he fails to address how a previously asymptomatic 49-year-old patient who is expected to have degeneration throughout the body would only begin to experience left hip pain and symptoms after an altered gait over many months following a slip and fall injury at work in which her right lower extremity slipped forward resulting in a pop or tear in the right hip prompting medical treatment. Dr. Domb's opinions are consistent with Petitioner's credible testimony and treatment records.

Based on the totality of the record, the Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Domb in this case to be persuasive and reflective of a more informed view of the cause of Petitioner's right and left hip conditions after the October 15, 2016 accident—namely, a traumatic injury to an asymptomatic right hip causing overcompensation by the left hip resulting in an onset of pain and symptoms due to the aggravation of a pre-existing, but asymptomatic, left hip condition. Thus, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner's present conditions of ill-being in her right and left hips are casually related to her October 15, 2016 accident at work.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Issue (J), whether the medical services that were provided to Petitioner were reasonable and necessary and whether Respondent has paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services, the Arbitrator finds the following:

Petitioner claims entitlement to payment of reasonable and necessary medical bills from medical providers that administered care after her accident at work. As explained above, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has established a causal connection between her current bilateral hip condition of ill-being and accident at work. Given the consistency between all treating medical records, the persuasiveness of Dr. Domb's opinions, the lack of credible medical evidence to the contrary, and Petitioner's credible testimony, the Arbitrator finds that all of the medical care rendered to Petitioner after October 15, 2016 to address the bilateral hips is reflective of reasonable and necessary medical treatment to diagnose and treat Petitioner because of the effects of the accident at work.

Thus, Respondent shall pay the following reasonable and necessary medical services as reflected in Petitioner's Exhibits for medical bills that remain unpaid reduced pursuant to the medical fee schedule as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. The records reflect unpaid bills from Hinsdale Orthopaedic Services and Petitioner's fee schedule calculation of $90,141.09. PX7; PX11. Respondent shall be given a credit of for any medical benefits that have been paid, if any, as agreed by the parties, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Issue (K), Petitioner's entitlement to prospective medical care, the Arbitrator finds the following:

As explained above, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has established a causal connection between her current bilateral hip condition of ill-being and accident at work. Based on the totality of the record, the Arbitrator finds that the recommended right and left hip treatment by Dr. Domb is necessary to alleviate Petitioner from the effects of her injury at work. Dr. Domb has recommended physical therapy including massage and myofascial release for the right hip as well as an updated left hip MRI arthrogram and left hip surgery to include a labral repair vs. reconstruction, acetabuloplasty, femoroplasty, endoscopic versus open gluteus medius repair, with possible microfracture and iliopsoas fractional lengthening.

In support of the Arbitrator's decision relating to Issue (M), whether penalties or fees should be imposed upon Respondent, the Arbitrator finds the following:

The Arbitrator finds that additional compensation is due to Petitioner and shall be imposed upon the Respondent pursuant to Sections 19(l), 19(k) and 16 of the Act. In so concluding, Section 19(k) of the Act provides in pertinent part:

> In case where there has been any unreasonable or vexatious delay of payment or intentional underpayment of compensation, or proceedings have been instituted or carried on by the one liable to pay the compensation, which do not present a real controversy, but are merely frivolous or for delay, then the Commission may award compensation additional to that otherwise payable under the Act equal to 50% of the amount payable at the time of such award. Failure to pay compensation in accordance with the provisions of Section 8, paragraph (b) of this Act, shall be considered unreasonable delay. 820 ILCS 305/19(k) (Lexis 2010).

Section 19(l) provides in pertinent part:

> If the employee has made written demand for payment of benefits under Section 8(a) or Section 8(b), the employer shall have 14 days after receipt of the demand to set forth in writing the reason for the delay. In the case of demand for payment of medical benefits under Section 8(a), the time for the employer to respond shall not commence until the expiration of the allotted 30 days specified under Section 8.2(d). In case the employer or his or her insurance carrier shall without good and just cause fail, neglect, refuse, or unreasonably delay the payment of benefits under Section 8(a) or Section 8(b), the Arbitrator or the Commission shall allow to the employee additional compensation in the sum of $30 per day for each day that the benefits under Section 8(a) or Section 8(b) have been so withheld or refused, not to exceed $10,000. A delay in payment of 14 days or more shall create a rebuttable presumption of unreasonable delay. 820 ILCS 305/19(l) (Lexis 2010).

Also, Section 16 of the Act provides for an award of attorney fees where an employer, its agent, or insurance carrier "has been guilty of delay or unfairness towards an employee in the adjustment, settlement or payment of benefits due such employee… or has been guilty of unreasonable or vexatious delay, intentional under-payment of compensation benefits, or has engaged in frivolous defenses which do not present a real controversy, within the purview of the provisions of paragraph (k) of Section 19 of this Act, the Commission may assess all or any part of the attorney's fees and costs against such employer and his or her insurance carrier." 820 ILCS 305/16 (Lexis 2010).

The employer has the burden to show that any delay in paying benefits is reasonable. Electro-Motive Division v. Industrial Comm., 250 Ill. App. 3d 432, 436, 621 N.E.2d 145 (1993); Cook County v. Industrial Comm., 160 Ill. App. 3d 825, 830, 513 N.E.2d 870 (1987). It is insufficient for an employer to merely assert its belief that "the employee's claim is invalid or that his award is not supported by the evidence; the employer's belief is 'honest' only if the facts which a reasonable person in the employer's position would have would justify it." Cook County, 160 Ill. App. 3d at 830 (citation omitted).

In this case, no reasonable basis is evident from the record on which Respondent could consistently delay payment of Petitioner's outstanding temporary partial disability benefits without explanation as it did. Petitioner's Exhibit 8 reflects that Respondent's workers' compensation insurer initially paid TPD benefits to Petitioner weekly. These nine weekly TPD checks encompassed December 14, 2017 through February 10, 2018. PX8 at 1-9. Thereafter, despite Petitioner's counsel's demands for payment of further TPD payments, payments became sporadic including the next check issued since February 10, 2018 not being issued until after June 30, 2018. PX10 at 7-22. The following check encompassed most of July and the check thereafter, covering July 28, 2018 through August 28, 2018, was not issued until October 5, 2018. Id., at 11-12. The next check covering August 29, 2018 through October 6, 2018 was not issued until October 30, 2018. Id., at 13. Lastly, Allianz did not issue the check covering the period of October 7, 2018 through November 17, 2018 until December 5, 2018. Id., at 14. Moreover, no evidence was submitted that Respondent paid Petitioner any temporary partial disability benefits for any period after November 17, 2018.

Petitioner's counsel included correspondence dated March 19, 2018 and March 30, 2018 requesting a possible explanation for some delay, namely questioning whether Respondent maintained a dispute regarding Petitioner's entitlement to temporary partial disability benefits on some basis. Respondent did not offer any evidence of a response and no additional explanation was offered regarding Petitioner's regular pay. Moreover, Respondent provided no evidence that it complied with Commission rule 9110.70 requiring written explanation for denial of medical care or payment of temporary benefits. While Respondent ultimately paid further benefits and stipulated to Petitioner's entitlement to the same, no reasonable basis for the delay was offered. See AX1. An assertion at the time of the hearing that Petitioner's temporary partial disability payments were difficult to calculate given the nature of her compensation fails to cure Respondent's lack of explanation during the temporary partial disability payment period and failure to provide a reasonable, or any, explanation for its delays then.

Based on the foregoing, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the Arbitrator finds Respondent's delay in tendering temporary partial disability benefit payments from February 11, 2018 through the present amounts to an unreasonable and vexatious delay in the payment of these benefits to which Respondent has stipulated Petitioner's entitlement. The Arbitrator notes the temporary partial disability benefits due Petitioner, $24,910.51, less payments made for periods prior to February 11, 2018 ($3,310.70 see PX8 at 1-9), totals $21,599.81 in temporary partial disability benefits due to Petitioner for which the delay in said payments has been unreasonable and vexatious.

Petitioner asserts that Respondent is liable for penalties and attorney's fees related to the delay in authorization of medical treatment, which is not indicated. Hollywood Casino-Aurora, Inc. v. Illinois Workers' Compensation Comm'n, 2012 IL App (2d) 110426WC, 967 N.E.2d 848 (2nd Dist. 2012). However, Petitioner also contends that Respondent is liable for penalties and fees related to the delay in payment of authorized medical treatment related to the right hip and failure to pay bills related to the left hip. As with Petitioner's temporary partial disability benefit payments, Respondent offered no evidence regarding its reasoning for its failure to pay Petitioner's medical bills despite inquiries by Petitioner's counsel regarding the same.

Dr. Domb offered an opinion causally relating Petitioner's left hip condition to her accident at work or its sequelae as early as June 8, 2017. PX3 at 72. Petitioner initially made a demand for authorization of left hip surgery in Dr. Domb's December 11, 2017 office note and at every office visit thereafter. PX6 at 8; PX3 at 6, 12, 16, 21, 26, 31, 36, 44, 48. Petitioner's counsel made further demand on May 1, 2018. PX6 at 15-22. Respondent offered no response or basis on which to deny treatment or pay Petitioner's medical bills related to either hip stemming from the undisputed accident at work. Respondent inexplicably delayed until October 3, 2018 when it first sent Petitioner to a Section 12 examination with Dr. Cannestra. Moreover, many of the charges presently outstanding are for services including surgery to the right hip which Respondent authorized. Petitioner's counsel has demanded that Respondent satisfy said charges to no avail. PX10 at 61-75. Respondent's unexplained decision to wait almost fourteen months to obtain a Section 12 examination to address causation to either the right or left hip and failure to respond to Petitioner's demand for payment of medical bills for treatment of an accepted injury constitutes unreasonable and vexatious delay.

Based on the totality of the record, the Arbitrator awards penalties and fees as follows:

- Section 19(l) – $10,000 - $30 per day from February 11, 2018 through January 11, 2019, the date of hearing, totaling 334 days or $10,020.00 subject to the maximum of $10,000.00 for the delay in payment of TPD benefits;
- Section 19(k) - $10,799.91 representing 50% of the TPD benefits for which there was/is an unreasonable/vexatious delay in payment thereof ($21,599.81 x 50%= $10,799.91);
- Section 19(k) - $45,070.55 representing 50% of the outstanding medical pursuant to the Fee Schedule for which there has been an unreasonable, vexatious delay in the payment of same $90,141.09 x 50% = $45,070.55); and
- Section 16 - $11,174.09 representing 20% of the Section 19k penalties ($10,799.91 + $45,070.55 = $55,870.46 x 20% = $11,174.09).

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of causation, medical expenses, temporary total disability, and prospective medical treatment, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to *Thomas v. The Commission corrects a scrivener error in the Arbitrator's decision at p.4, first full paragraph, third sentence, to show that Petitioner's low back surgery was performed "by" (not "on") Dr. Kovalsky.

All else otherwise affirmed and adopted.

Case # 16 WC 31956

STATE OF ILLINOIS /
MURRAY DEVELOPMENTAL CENTER,
Employer/Respondent

MEMORANDUM OF DECISION OF ARBITRATOR

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner, a 40-year-old Mental Health Tech II, testified that she has been continuously employed with the State of Illinois/Murray Developmental Center since January 6, 2003. Her job duties required that she provide care for mentally and physically disabled individuals including feeding, bathing, clothing, showering, and transferring. Petitioner testified that she was physically capable of performing all of her job duties as a Mental Health Tech II leading up to her injury of September 8, 2016. Petitioner testified that on September 8, 2016, she put herself between two individuals and one of them were in a wheelchair. She put her arm on the back of his wheelchair and he swung around and hyperextended her left arm backwards. Her left shoulder popped, and she felt an immediate onset of pain. She notified her employer regarding the incident that same day and completed an Employee's Notice of Injury.

That same day, Petitioner was seen at St. Mary's Convenient Care in Centralia, Illinois where x-rays were performed on her left shoulder and restrictions were imposed on her job duties. Petitioner continued to follow-up at St. Mary's Convenient Care and underwent an MR arthrogram of her left shoulder. Michelle Hartke at St. Mary's Convenient Care referred Petitioner to Mark Miller, M.D., a shoulder surgeon in St. Louis. On November 21, 2016, Dr. Miller saw the Petitioner and prescribed physical therapy. He also recommended the injection of her left shoulder joint. Petitioner underwent physical therapy at St. Mary's Hospital in Centralia at Dr. Miller's request. On January 17, 2017, Dr. Miller performed a left shoulder surgery at the Orthopedic Ambulatory Surgery Center in Chesterfield, Missouri. Petitioner continued to follow-up with Dr. Miller following her surgery and on May 4, 2017, Dr. Miller referred her to Dr. Gornet, a spine surgeon. On May 4, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. Gornet who ordered an MRI scan of Petitioner's neck. Dr. Gornet referred Petitioner to Dr. Boutwell for injections in her neck. Petitioner testified that the injections did not provide any long term relief, but she had a very short amount of relief immediately thereafter. Petitioner continued to follow-up with Dr. Miller concerning her shoulder while continuing to treat with Dr. Gornet for her neck pain. Dr. Gornet recommended that Petitioner undergo a cervical disc replacement at C3-4. Thereafter, on December 5, 2017, Petitioner saw David Robson, M.D. for a Section 12 examination. Petitioner testified that she only saw Dr. Robson for a few minutes. Dr. Robson asked Petitioner about the injections and Petitioner indicated that she couldn't tell if there was any relief because her shoulder was still aching from her previous surgery and her neck pain overlapped with her shoulder pain. Petitioner testified that by the time she got through traffic and a 2-hour drive home, she had a headache following the injections and laid down. Petitioner testified that she has not underwent the cervical disc replacement at C3-4 because it has not been authorized by the workers' compensation carrier. Petitioner testified that she is requesting that an order be issued requiring the Respondent to authorize and pay for the surgery recommended for her by Dr. Gornet. Petitioner testified that she wants to have the neck surgery because she has pain every day and it is difficult for her to do her job and daily activities at home because of her neck pain. At work, her neck pain causes her problems when showering individuals and helping them with grooming and bathing. Petitioner testified that she has a hard time sleeping because of her neck pain causing her to sometimes sleep in a recliner. She testified that her neck pain increases whenever she has to drive any type of long distance because of the turning of her head. Petitioner testified that the check stubs admitted into evidence reflected her earnings for the State of Illinois from August 21, 2015 through September 15, 2016. Petitioner testified that she was performing her full job duties as a Mental Health Tech II for the entire year preceding her injury of September 8, 2016. When Petitioner saw Dr. Robson on December 5, 2017 she was off from work receiving TTD. Petitioner testified that prior to December 26, 2017, she was paid temporary total disability benefits. After Petitioner saw Dr. Robson on December 5, 2017, she was notified that her workers' comp benefits were terminated on December 26, 2017. On December 28, 2017 Petitioner saw Kendra Bowen who kept Petitioner off from work until she saw Dr. Gornet. After that, Dr. Gornet kept the Petitioner off from work from January 5, 2018 until February 11, 2018 when Petitioner requested that Dr. Gornet release her to return on a full duty basis. Petitioner testified that she asked Dr. Gornet to return her to work on a full duty basis because of financial reasons - she is a single mother of three and had no income. Financially she needed to go back to work. Petitioner is requesting temporary total disability from December 28, 2017 until February 11, 2018. Petitioner testified that the medical bills marked as Petitioner's Exhibit 1 were incurred by her for the treatment of her shoulder and neck. Petitioner testified that she had no injuries to her neck or left shoulder either before or after September 8, 2016. Petitioner did have one other worker's compensation claim for an injury to her right shoulder, but that case was settled.

On cross-examination, Petitioner testified that she was currently experiencing neck pain that travels across her left shoulder and down to her left elbow. She is currently working full duty since November 23, 2018 after being off following a low back surgery which was not work-related. Her low back surgery was performed on Dr. Kovalsky and Petitioner testified that she was still treating with Dr. Kovalsky for her nonwork-related low back surgery. Petitioner testified that in 2006, one of the discs in her low back was fractured and, after years of conservative treatment, she decided to have low back surgery since her oldest daughter had just turned 18 and she needed a legal driver and someone to watch the siblings because the Petitioner would be in the hospital for 3 days. Petitioner testified that she sustained the herniated disc in her low back due to an injury in 2006 that was neither work-related nor due to a car accident. She testified that she has been treating for her lumbar spine condition since 2006 and Dr. Kovalsky was her original doctor. When asked if the Petitioner informed Dr. Robson concerning her low back condition, Petitioner indicated she thought she had written that down in the paperwork. Petitioner does not currently have any restrictions for her low back condition. She is not currently treating for her left shoulder. With regard to her cervical spine condition, Petitioner testified that her last appointment was in March 2018 and she is still waiting for the cervical spine surgery to be performed. She is still working without any restrictions currently and is not undergoing any physical therapy. She is taking over-the-counter medications and some medications as prescribed for her lower back surgery in the form of Flexeril and Percocet. She does not wear any type of protective device. With regard to her current job performance, Petitioner indicated that her employer has been aware of her injury to her neck and it was documented. When asked if she has informed her supervisor of any of the difficulties, she is having performing her job tasks currently, Petitioner indicated that they are aware of it. Petitioner testified that the medical records admitted into evidence accurately reflect her symptoms at the time of her treatment and that she was honest with her healthcare providers concerning the symptoms she was having at the time of treatment. After the incident on September 8, 2016, Petitioner was seen at the Convenient Care Clinic in Centralia and had pain in her shoulder and heard popping. Petitioner testified that the day of her injury, her shoulder hurt so bad that she didn't recall her neck itself hurting, but it was hurting all the way up at least into the side and all of the way across the top down into her arm. When asked if she noticed any pain down her arm, at the time or any neck pain, Petitioner testified that she was in so much pain she doesn't remember exactly. However, the healthcare providers asked her where her main pain source was, and she indicated her shoulder was where her predominant pain was located. She had an MR arthrogram of her left shoulder and followed up with Dr. Miller through January 2017 when he performed surgery. When asked if she had complaints of pain in her cervical area or radicular symptoms down her arm with burning up until that point, Petitioner indicated that in October 2016 she called her doctor at Michelle Hartke's office and reported it. She indicated she did not believe they wrote it down; however, there was a prescription called in on one of the phone calls. In her physical therapy sessions, she indicated that her complaints were limited to her left shoulder injury and decreased range of motion in her left shoulder she would not dispute that fact. After undergoing surgery on January 17, 2017, Petitioner had an initial follow-up on January 31, 2017 and the records did not mention any neck pain. When asked if she would dispute that fact, Petitioner indicated that she was on quite of bit of pain medication because of the surgery but did notify her case manager and also telephoned Dr. Miller's office and was informed that they would follow-up on it at her next appointment. When she returned to Dr. Miller, he noted burning neck pain which traveled down into her left arm. At that time, Petitioner was referred to Dr. Gornet and was seen the same day. When asked if Dr. Gornet was aware of her lumbar spine condition, Petitioner indicated that he knew because she had seen him for a second opinion in 2009 concerning her lumbar spine. When asked if Dr. Gornet was aware of her lumbar spine operation with Dr. Kovalsky, Petitioner indicated that she has not seen Dr. Gornet since she had the lumbar spine surgery performed. Petitioner testified that she was not aware of any MRI's or image testing of her cervical spine prior to her injury date of September 8, 2016. Petitioner testified that she probably spent less than 5 minutes with Dr. Robson, but she had seen his assistant first. She indicated that the assistant performed the physical examination. Petitioner testified she had restrictions from December 27, 2017 through February 2018 at which time she asked Dr. Gornet to release her to full duty work. She did apply for non-occupational disability benefits at that time, in February 2018. She did receive one check for non-occupational disability but did not receive it until June 2018. This money was taken from her State Retirement System Benefits as non-occupational disability which she believes comes out of her retirement.

The medical bills exhibit was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 1.

The transcript of the deposition of Matthew F. Gornet, M.D. was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 2. Dr. Gornet testified that he is an orthopedic surgeon whose practice is devoted to spine surgery.

Dr. Gornet testified that the first time he saw the Petitioner following her injury of September 8, 2016 was on May 4, 2017. Dr. Gornet testified that Petitioner was referred to him by his partner, Mark Miller, M.D. Her main complaint was left trapezial and left shoulder pain, but the pain also radiated at times down her left arm into her forearm and hand with numbness and tingling. Petitioner told him that she did have a component of neck pain, but her trapezial and shoulder pain were the greatest issue for her. She felt that her problem began on or about September 8, 2016 while she was working at Murray Center and involved in an altercation. Her arm was essentially pulled and then pushed backwards. She saw Dr. Miller who diagnosed her as having a frozen shoulder and labral tear. She told Dr. Gornet that after Dr. Miller performed left shoulder surgery, a portion of her symptoms improved, but she still had symptoms in her trapezius, shoulder, forearm, and hand as well as her neck and those had not completely resolved. Petitioner told Dr. Gornet that she did not recall any previous problems of significance with her neck or shoulder. When she first saw Dr. Gornet, she was working light duty with a 20-pound limit and no overhead work. Dr. Gornet conducted a physical examination which revealed objective findings of some mild decrease in her biceps on the left at 4 over 5. Her sensation was normal. He ordered an MRI scan on that day which showed a disc herniation at C3-4. He noted that it was bilateral but in foraminal view on the left side and that correlated with her trapezial and shoulder pain. He first recommended an injection at C3-4 for her trapezial and shoulder pain and recommended a second injection at C5-6 which fit more with her symptoms down into her forearm and hand. He discussed an overlap between her shoulder and cervical spine condition with her and told her this is a common occurrence that you can have pathology in your neck that causes shoulder pain and you can have pathology in your shoulder which causes neck pain. It is not unusual to have this overlapping symptom. He noted that it was Dr. Miller who picked up on the fact that she may have another origin of her pain which prompted his evaluation with plain x-rays as well as the ordering of an MRI and sending her to see Dr. Gornet. Attached to Dr. Gornet's deposition were his treatment notes from May 4, 2017 through March 12, 2018. Also attached to Dr. Gornet's deposition was an image from Petitioner's MRI scan which Dr. Gornet alluded to in his note of May 4, 2017. On that image, Dr. Gornet identified the C3-4 level which he described as showing disc material coming out into the neural foramen. He testified that this foraminal herniation correlates with the Petitioner's trapezial and shoulder pain. Dr. Gornet discussed conservative care initially and recommended the injections that were performed by Dr. Boutwell initially on May 18, 2017 at C3-4 and on June 7, 2017 at C5-6. Dr. Gornet testified that those injections did not give her any long term or permanent sustained relief. Thereafter, Dr. Gornet recommended cervical disc replacement as her best option to cure and relieve the effects of her work injury. Dr. Gornet discussed the risks and benefits with the Petitioner. Dr. Gornet opined that Petitioner's shoulder and trapezius symptoms were the result of her work injury that occurred on September 8, 2016. Petitioner tried and failed conservative measures. Although the Petitioner was working full duty when he last saw her on March 12, 2018, her symptoms were affecting her quality of life. At the time of her last visit, she was having shoulder discomfort and some of this discomfort may be related to her neck and some may be in her shoulder. For the most part, Dr. Gornet believes that her neck is playing a role in her current shoulder complaints. Dr. Gornet testified that Petitioner's cervical disc herniation at C3-4 is causally related to the injury that she described to him as occurring on September 8, 2016. Dr. Gornet testified that he has had success in alleviating patients' symptoms by performing anterior cervical disc replacement for this type of condition. He testified that the treatments he recommended and provided for the Petitioner were reasonable and necessary in an attempt to cure or relieve the symptoms she experienced from the conditions he diagnosed. He further testified that the limitations and restrictions that he imposed upon her as reflected in his medical records were reasonable and necessary in his effort to alleviate her symptoms from the conditions he diagnosed.

Dr. Gornet testified that he believes that cervical spine surgery would reduce Petitioner's symptoms because she has objective pathology in her cervical spine which correlates with her subjective complaints. Dr. Gornet testified that even her shoulder surgeon who evaluated her for her shoulder does not believe her symptoms are coming from her shoulder anymore. Dr. Gornet testified that Petitioner's complaints are consistent with the condition he diagnosed in her cervical spine. He testified that the charges for the treatments he recommended and provided for her were reasonable, necessary and related to the injury she sustained to her cervical spine on September 8, 2016.

On cross-examination Dr. Gornet testified he treated the Petitioner previously for her low back. He treated her low back conservatively and told her that although she may have a problem with her low back, given her young age he told her, her best option was to try to live with the pain and he recommended against narcotics. His last visit with her for her low back was October 15, 2009. With regard to her low back condition, in reviewing his notes from 2009, he found no complaints of neck pain and no cervical complaints on her pain diagram. When questioned about the mechanism of Petitioner's injury of September 8, 2016, Dr. Gornet indicated that she was involved in an altercation and her arm was essentially pulled with a force being applied to her arm which affected her left shoulder and cervical spine. He indicated that is why there is often an overlap because you get a shoulder injury and a neck injury with the same mechanism of action. When asked about Dr. Miller's records, Dr. Gornet found the first reference to neck pain occurring on March 1, 2017 after her shoulder surgery on January 17, 2017, where Dr. Miller noted increasing pain after her shoulder surgery. In addition to her shoulder pain, Dr. Miller noted pain down her arm and into her fingers as well as neck pain, arm pain, periscapular pain, and chest pain. In further review of Dr. Miller's notes, Dr. Gornet stated on December 15, 2016, Dr. Miller did not mention anything in her neck or arm at all. However, he did describe scapular pain. Dr. Gornet testified that a C3-4 disc herniation can cause scapular pain and it can also cause shoulder pain. He testified that this is why there is an overlap - they can refer back and forth.

The medical records of SSM Health Medical Group were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 3. The records reflect that Petitioner was seen on September 8, 2016 with complaints of left shoulder pain. Petitioner provided a history of trying to stop two clients from having an altercation and as she was pulling the wheelchair of one away, the client turned the wheelchair she was holding onto, twisting her left arm backwards and there was an audible pop. X-rays of her left shoulder were taken and Flexeril was prescribed. Restrictions of no use of her left arm were imposed. The Petitioner returned on September 13, 2016 with complaints of left shoulder pain due to a work injury that occurred on September 8, 2016. Petitioner indicated that she had her arm on one of the resident's wheelchairs and they moved it, causing her arm to hyperflex. Petitioner had limited range of motion secondary to pain. Petitioner was to continue on one-handed duty and return in one week. Petitioner was seen again on September 20, 2016. Petitioner indicated her pain was getting worse. Due to the mechanism of injury and worsening of symptoms, an MR arthrogram of the left shoulder was ordered. Petitioner was to continue on one-handed duty. On October 7, 2016, a note was made concerning the Petitioner contacting the office requesting pain medications. On November 11, 2016, the MR arthrogram was reviewed, and a labral tear was found. Petitioner was referred to Dr. Mark Miller in St. Louis.

The records of Kendra Bowen, PA-C were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 4. The records reveal that on October 3, 2017, Petitioner was seen for pre-op clearance for a cervical disc replacement with Dr. Matthew Gornet with the surgery date to be determined based upon the pre-op workup. Petitioner was having neck pain and was seen for a pre-op general, physical examination and a comprehensive metabolic panel with urinalysis was ordered. Petitioner was instructed to hold Mobic for one week prior to surgery.

Petitioner returned on December 28, 2017 reporting continued neck and shoulder problems. The record indicates that Petitioner was cleared for neck surgery, but states at the last-minute work comp denied the surgery and sent her to another provider for a second opinion. Thereafter, she received a letter from work indicating that she was released to full duty. Petitioner complained of neck and shoulder pain and indicated that she was out of her Mobic and Flexeril and was in more pain without her medications. An off work slip was issued for neck pain indicating Petitioner was to remain off from work from December 28, 2017 until January 5, 2018. Her medications were refilled and was she instructed to follow-up with her orthopedic spine surgeon.

The medical records from St. Mary's Hospital of Centralia were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 5. The records reflect that on November 23, 2016, Petitioner saw David Toennies, PT with a chief complaint of left shoulder pain and decreased motion. Petitioner provided a history of being seen at PT today due to a left frozen shoulder and labral tear with sudden onset. The patient reported an onset of left shoulder symptoms on September 8, 2016 when she was assisting residents in a confrontation at work with her arm getting pulled back. Petitioner reported receiving an injection into her left shoulder on November 21, 2016 with plans to return to Dr. Miller on December 15, 2016. According to the physical therapy notes on December 13, 2016, the Petitioner had been seen for six physical therapy sessions since the initiation of physical therapy on November 23, 2016. The therapist noted that her treatment sessions included range of motion, light strengthening, cold pack, and patient education/home instruction. The Petitioner reported that her motion in her left shoulder had improved, but her shoulder pain has been staying the same. At that time, she rated her left shoulder pain at a 5-6/10. She reported an increase in shoulder pain when using her left arm. The therapist noted that the Petitioner showed progress toward her physical therapy goals regarding improving her left shoulder motion, but she had not progressed toward her goals regarding her pain level and regarding reports of increased pain in her shoulder with resistance muscle testing. The therapist noted that the patient was scheduled to return to see Dr. Miller on December 15, 2016. On December 20, 2016, a new order for physical therapy was received indicating that the patient was to continue physical therapy and that she was waiting for surgery on her left shoulder to be approved. On December 30, 2016, the Petitioner indicated that she continued to have difficulty sleeping at night and stated that with the therapy and her own home exercise program, her range of motion had improved. However, she continued to have a crepitation and increased pain with use of her left upper extremity. She indicated that she was still waiting for workers' compensation surgical approval.

On January 19, 2017, the patient reported undergoing left shoulder arthroscopic labral repair surgery on January 17, 2017. She came to physical therapy with her left shoulder immobilized in a sling. The patient reported tenderness with palpation into her left anterior/lateral/posterior shoulder. The Petitioner was to resume physical therapy two times a week for a period of six weeks. On February 27, 2017, the physical therapy progress report noted that the Petitioner had been seen for 12 physical therapy visits since her left shoulder surgery on January 17, 2017. The Petitioner reported movement and range of motion of her left shoulder increases her shoulder pain. She reported that she relied on pain medication to control/decrease her left shoulder and neck pain. The Petitioner rated her neck and left shoulder pain at a 5/10 when she is medicated and an 8-9/10 when her medication wears off. The Petitioner rated her left shoulder/neck pain at 7/10 when performing passive/active assisted left shoulder exercises with medication. The Petitioner also reported she occasionally gets numbness down her left arm. The physical therapist noted that the Petitioner had not progressed toward her PT goals as well as expected indicating that it has been difficult to progress the patient's exercises, per her protocol, because of her reports of neck/shoulder pain. The physical therapist noted that the patient was to return to see Dr. Miller on March 1, 2017.

On April 5, 2017, the physical therapy progress notes indicated that the Petitioner had been seen for 14 physical therapy sessions since her previous progress report on February 27, 2017. Her treatment sessions included range of motion, stabilization, strengthening, and patient education/home instruction. The patient reported that she noticed improvement in her left shoulder motion but still feels limitation is present. She reported that she is able to use her left arm better when doing tasks with her arm down by her side. She reported continuing to be challenged with using her left arm above shoulder height, for such activities as reaching into cupboards. The patient reported that she continues to get shooting pain into her left arm, but not as much numbness. She rated her neck pain at a 4-5/10 and her left shoulder pain at a 2-3/10. The physical therapist noted that the patient showed improvement with her active left shoulder motion and in her left shoulder strength. She continued to have decreased end range of motion in her left shoulder. The therapist noted that improving the function use of the patient's left shoulder and improving pain control of the patient's symptoms continue to be a challenge. The patient was scheduled to return to see Dr. Miller on April 6, 2017 and a further course of physical therapy would be decided following the patient's return visit with Dr. Miller.

On April 20, 2017, the physical therapy progress note indicated that an order was received to continue physical therapy for the patient's left shoulder and to add intervention for diagnosis of cervical degenerative disc disease. The patient rated her pain at a 2-3/10 and reported that her neck pain goes up to a 4-5/10 with movement of her left shoulder and with certain movements of her neck. She reported that her work duties (light duty) which require her to use her arms at shoulder height, increase her neck pain and increase her sharp pain/sleeping pain/numbness into her left arm. The patient was to continue physical therapy for her left shoulder and add intervention for her neck.

On June 12, 2017, the physical therapy progress note indicated that the Petitioner had a chief complaint of pain in her left shoulder from her neck to her elbow. The patient reported that she is currently being treated for neck pain and receiving injections in her neck. The patient complained of pain which is positional in nature. She reported functional deficits with bathing, grooming and upper extremity dressing. Her pain location was in her left shoulder from her neck to her elbow with a current pain level of a 3 and the worse pain in the last seven days as a 5. The patient described the physical demands of her job as a Mental Health Technician at Murray Center involving assisting clients with getting dressed/bathing/etc. It was noted that the patient does work with residents with behavior issues and the patient was currently working on light duty and had been on light duty since the onset of her symptoms in September 2016. According to the treatment plan, the patient was to be seen three times a week for four weeks. On August 3, 2017, a physical therapy discharge summary was prepared indicating that the patient had been seen for 58 physical therapy visits from January 19, 2017 to August 1, 2017. The patient noted a significant improvement in her symptoms with physical therapy. However, overhead lifting was discontinued due to increased neck pain and it was noted that the patient had some persistent pain in the left shoulder radiating into the clavicle. The pain ratings were between a 3-4. The patient was discharged from physical therapy and a home exercise program was given to the patient.

The medical records of Mark Miller, M.D. were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 6. The Petitioner initially saw Dr. Miller on November 21, 2016 and provided a history of being injured two and a half months ago on September 8, 2016. She told Dr. Miller that she was trying to keep two guys from fighting. One gentleman was in a wheelchair and as she tried to separate the individuals, one of the gentlemen "got my arm and flung it." She demonstrated an abduction external rotation movement. She felt her shoulder pop. Dr. Miller noted that her pain was primarily anterior, and that abduction was painful. Petitioner denied any prior problems with her left shoulder. Dr. Miller conducted a physical examination and reviewed the MRI arthrogram that was performed at SSM Health Good Samaritan in Mt. Vernon, Illinois on November 9, 2016. In his report, Dr. Miller states that the patient's MRI has the appearance of a Bankart tear, possibly extending a bit superiorly. However, she developed a post-traumatic frozen shoulder. Dr. Miller indicated that the Petitioner had not had any therapy since the injury which was now two and a half months ago. She developed a fairly dense posttraumatic frozen shoulder. He recommended a cortisone injection and physical therapy three times per week. He imposed restrictions of strictly one-handed work with the uninjured upper extremity and scheduled a follow-up appointment to see the Petitioner on December 15, 2016.

When Petitioner returned to see Dr. Miller on December 15, 2016. He noted that the Petitioner had made progress in physical therapy. He recommended additional physical therapy 2-3 times a week for two weeks. He also recommended left shoulder surgery to repair the labrum and the perform a Bankart repair. He imposed restrictions of no overhead lifting, no repetitive pushing or pulling, and no lifting more than 20 pounds with the left arm. On January 17, 2017, Dr. Miller performed a left shoulder arthroscopic labral repair with four PushLock anchors and a left shoulder subacromial bursectomy. Post-surgically, Dr. Miller ordered an abduction sling with pillow, a cold therapy unit, and CPM machine to be used on Petitioner's left shoulder for 8 days. Dr. Miller also recommended physical therapy two times a week for six weeks and scheduled a follow-up appointment. When Petitioner saw Dr. Miller on January 30, 2017, he noted that he was pleased with her progress with the use of the CPM machine and the physical therapy. He noted that she had been using the CPM machine for about 4 hours per day. He updated his prescription for pain medication and imposed restrictions on the Petitioner of single arm duties only with no client contact at Murray Center and no pushing, pulling, or lifting.

On March 1, 2017, Dr. Miller noted that the Petitioner was having increased pain with numbness going down to her fingers. He also noted that she was having neck pain, arm pain, periscapular pain, and chest pain. She described a lot of burning. The patient told Dr. Miller that she was having quite a bit of neck pain and burning after the injury of being involved with trying to break up a fight. Dr. Miller that the patient had a combination of symptoms currently that are suggestive of cervical pathology as well as glenohumeral pathology. Neck x-rays were abnormal, and she had symptoms suggestive of a radiculopathy. He prescribed a Medrol Dosepak and incorporated therapy with her neck to help resolve some of her symptoms. He increased her physical therapy to three times per week and again imposed restrictions of no repetitive pushing and pulling, and no lifting with her left upper extremity. When Petitioner returned to see Dr. Miller on April 6, 2017, she indicated that her shoulder motion was improving. She also indicated that she was still having quite a bit of neck pain and feels as though her neck symptoms are more problematic than the shoulder. Dr. Miller recommended continuing with physical therapy three times per week and noted that the patient was having as much or more pain with her neck than her shoulder. He indicated that he would recommend a referral to a cervical spine specialist to identify pathology/causation. On May 4, 2017, Dr. Miller noted that the patient was making slow, but definable progress. He noted that the patient continued to complain of pain radiating down her upper extremity and that at his last appointment he recommended a spine referral. However, that had not been done. Dr. Miller referred the Petitioner to see Matthew Gornet, M.D. regarding her neck symptoms. Dr. Miller recommended continued physical therapy three times a week for four weeks and imposed restrictions of no lifting greater than 20 pounds and no overhead work with her affected extremity.

On June 1, 2017, Dr. Miller noted that she was making slow but gradual progress with the range of motion in her left shoulder. He also noted that she was having some anterior pain which was likely tightness of the pectoralis minor. He noted that the patient had six physical therapy sessions since her last visit despite having issues with her range of motion. He noted a peer-to-peer review was performed that denied further visits, concentrating on a home exercise program. His report also noted that the Petitioner had an epidural injection at her last appointment through Dr. Gornet and that she was scheduled to have another injection on June 8, 2017. If that injection was unsuccessful, Dr. Gornet has discussed the subject of a disc replacement at C3-4. Dr. Miller recommended a work conditioning program and imposed restrictions of no overhead lifting or lifting up to 20-30 pounds with her left upper extremity. Petitioner returned to see Dr. Miller on August 2, 2017 who noted that the Petitioner was six and a half months postoperatively following the four anchor capsulolabral reconstruction on January 17, 2017. He also noted that she continued to have issues with her neck and was undergoing epidural injections under the care and treatment of Dr. Matthew Gornet. Because of the neck issues, she struggled with the work conditioning program. He also noted that since her last appointment she underwent a corticosteroid injection that was performed on July 17, 2017 under fluoroscopy to address some of her residual irritability. The Petitioner indicated that the last cortisone injection within the joint did not make any difference in her pain pattern. She continued to have numbness and tingling into her fourth and fifth digits. He noted that she was still having neck pain and upper extremity pain. The patient provided a note from Dr. Gornet indicating his strong recommendation of doing a C3-4 disc replacement that was currently being scheduled. Dr. Miller found the Petitioner to be at maximum medical improvement with regard to her left shoulder. He noted that she has overlapping issues with her neck that was causing symptomology. He did not believe further therapy would be productive at this time. He released the Petitioner with no restrictions and no follow-up appointment. He indicated Dr. Gornet's restrictions will supersede his if any are present.

Petitioner's paycheck stubs reflecting her earnings from August 31, 2015 through September 15, 2016 were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 7.

The Workers' Compensation Employee's Notice of Injury which was completed and signed by the Petitioner on September 8, 2016 was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 8.

The medical records of Kaylea Boutwell, M.D. were entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Petitioner's Exhibit 9. On May 18, 2017, Dr. Boutwell performed a C3-C4 epidural steroid injection. The records indicate that Petitioner's pre-procedure pain level was a 4-6 on the left side of her neck and shoulder down her arm and between her shoulder blades. Petitioner's post-procedure pain was a 3-4. On June 7, 2017, Dr. Boutwell performed a C5-C6 epidural steroid injection. Petitioner's pre-procedure pain was a 3-4 and her post-procedure pain was 2.

The transcript of the deposition of David Robson, M.D. was entered into evidence at the time of arbitration as Respondent's Exhibit 4. Dr. Robson testified that he is an orthopedic spine surgeon. He saw the Petitioner for an independent medical examination on December 5, 2017. His examination was limited to the cervical spine. Dr. Robson testified that he reviewed Petitioner's medical records from SSM Health Care Group, Dr. Miller, Dr. Gornet, Imaging Partners of Missouri, Orthopedic Ambulatory Center of Chesterfield epidural injection reports from May and June of 2017, MRI Partners, MRI dated May 4, 2017. In addition, he reviewed the films personally as well. Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner provided him with a history of working for Murry Center trying to separate two individuals who were fighting over an object. Her left arm was outstretched and pulled behind her. She began having immediate shoulder pain and some radiating pain into the neck. She sought treatment shortly thereafter. She had treatment in the form of physical therapy for the shoulder and neck. She ultimately underwent shoulder surgery which was performed by Dr. Miller in January of 2017 and had residual neck pain and had treatments with physical therapy and injections prior to seeing him. Dr. Robson testified that based upon his review of her diagnostic imaging of her cervical spine, he found that she had a small disc protrusion or bulge at the C3-4, C4-5, and C5-6 levels. He found no significant stenosis present. He testified that she did have an annular tear of the C3-4 space which could be consistent with an acute injury. During his physical examination, he noted that the Petitioner had tenderness in the left side of the neck and trapezius muscle when palpated. She was asked to perform a range of motion in her neck and all planes, and indicated that it caused increased pain. She had a normal neurologic examination. She did have some limitation in range of motion and tenderness when touched or asked to move her neck. Dr. Robson found no active radiculopathy in his examination. Based upon Dr. Robson's review of her medical records, he testified that she underwent two injections into her cervical spine with no short-term or sustained relief or long-term improvement noted. Dr. Robson testified that short-term improvement is more of a diagnostic tool and since neither of the cervical spine injections provided Petitioner with relief of her symptoms, this points to the fact that they necessarily weren't causing her symptoms. Dr. Robson testified that at the time of his examination, Petitioner had complaints of neck pain and pain in the left trapezius and shoulder region. He further testified that her complaints were supported by the objective findings and possibly related to her shoulder. He further testified that the majority of her pain came from her shoulder, but she may have had some contribution from her neck. He testified that Petitioner had a cervical strain which was treated with physical therapy and injections and he did not feel that she had a significant enough finding in her neck to warrant a surgical procedure. Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner's cervical strain is related to her work injury of September 8, 2016. Dr. Robson further testified that the treatment Petitioner received was reasonable and necessary and it is the same treatment he would have ordered. When asked if he believe the Petitioner was a surgical candidate, Dr. Robson testified that surgery is always an option but you have to weigh the risk and benefit. He believes that in Petitioner's case due to her BMI of 42.1 when normal is 25 which carries an extra risk for people who have above normal weight, he believes that risk outweighs any success that surgery can produce. Dr. Robson further testified that she had a small protrusion, none of which impacted the spinal cord and none of which caused any significant impingement other than mild at one level which Dr. Gornet wasn't even recommending surgery on, that can be improved with the inherent risk of a surgical procedure.

Dr. Robson prepared an Addendum report based upon his review of Dr. Gornet's testimony and an additional MRI scan that was performed. Dr. Robson testified that it was very similar to the previous MRI and he did not see any significant difference. He noted that Dr. Gornet identified a slice that he thought showed a left-sided protrusion at the C3-4 level. Dr. Robson agreed that it was there. He didn't doubt what Dr. Gornet said. Dr. Robson testified that he just felt that it was just a very mild finding and had a mild impact and wasn't worthy of the surgical procedure for all of the reasons he previously stated. In commenting on Dr. Gornet's deposition testimony, Dr. Robson indicated that neither of the cervical spine injections provided Petitioner with any relief would be evidence not in favor of advocating for a surgical procedure which is contrary to what Dr. Gornet testified in a follow-up statement to say that is really doesn't matter. Dr. Robson testified that there may not be long term improvement of symptoms following an injection, but even in a severe finding, a lot of times a patient has resolution of their symptoms for a couple of hours at least. In Dr. Robson's opinion, the findings on the MRI were mild. He testified that the Petitioner is at maximum medical improvement with regard to her cervical spine and he found no structural abnormalities that would cause him to impose any type of work restrictions.

On cross-examination, Dr. Robson testified that the type of trauma the Petitioner sustained on September 8, 2016 could cause a cervical strain and it could have caused a small protrusion as well. Dr. Robson testified that the Petitioner told him that she had no history of neck pain or regular treatment for her neck prior to September 8, 2016. In his review of Petitioner's medical records, he did not find any evidence that would indicate that she had any medical treatment for her neck prior to September 8, 2016. Petitioner told Dr. Robson that she had pain that is worse during exercise and worse during twisting and turning and that her pain is worse at night. She also told Dr. Robson that she had pain that was worse when laying down and worse with work. During his physical examination, Dr. Robson noted that neck pain was elicited by motion which is consistent with a diagnosis of cervical strain. Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner's symptoms could be caused by a herniated disc at C3-4. Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner had tenderness on the left neck and trapezius area. Those symptoms could be caused by a cervical strain or by a herniated disc at C3-4. Dr. Robson also testified that the trauma that Petitioner sustained on September 8, 2016 was sufficient to cause a disc herniation at C3-4. Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner completed a pain diagram indicating that she had burning on the left side of her neck, left trapezius muscle, and left shoulder. He testified that he thought Petitioner's grip strength was good. However, Petitioner testified that her grip strength had decreased. Petitioner also indicated on the pain diagram that she had numbness in the left little finger on her left hand and aching discomfort along her neck going down her left trapezius into her left arm. He indicated that the areas marked on the pain diagram were consistent with what Petitioner told him at the time of the office visit. Dr. Robson testified that based upon his review of the diagnostic films that there is a small foraminal protrusion on Series 10, Image 6 and that the small foraminal protrusion at C3-4 on the left could have been either caused or aggravated by the trauma that Petitioner sustained on September 8, 2016. Dr. Robson stated in his report that it is certainly a community standard to operate on a disc protrusion at C3-4 on the left side at this magnitude but not common in his practice. He does not believe it would be below the standard of care to do an operation on that finding, but he would not recommend it personally. Dr. Robson testified that reasonable minds can differ as to whether a specific patient requires a spine surgery, and within those parameters of reasonableness, he disagrees with Dr. Gornet.

On re-direct examination, Dr. Robson testified that he would not perform surgery on the Petitioner based on certain risk factors including risks inherent in a surgical procedure including infection, spinal fluid leak, nerve damage, paralysis in a cervical operation, difficulty swallowing, damage to recurrent laryngeal nerve, bleeding problems, in addition to Petitioner's increased risk secondary to her obesity. Dr. Robson testified that Dr. Gornet is the second best surgeon he knows. He said Dr. Gornet is very good. But Dr. Robson doesn't believe that it is worth the risk. He doesn't disagree with the diagnoses that have been made and the treatment that she's had, but surgical intervention is not necessarily the approach he would choose on pathology that she has on her exam and her imaging studies.

On re-cross examination, Dr. Robson testified that Petitioner's complaints of pain going down her arm and her symptoms in her small finger would be inconsistent with a disc herniation at C3-4. However, her neck pain and left side trapezius pain would be consistent with the injury.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Issue (F): Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being affecting her cervical spine causally related to the injury?

Respondent agrees that Petitioner's left shoulder condition is causally related to the injury of September 8, 2016.

Respondent disputes causal connection as it pertains to Petitioner's cervical spine based upon the opinions of Respondent's examining orthopedic spine surgeon, Dr. Robson. Dr. Robson opined that the September 8, 2016 injury caused a cervical strain. He agreed that Petitioner had a disc protrusion at C3-4 on the left and that the trauma she sustained on 9/6/2018 could have caused that protrusion. He testified that Petitioner's pain complaints of the trapezius shoulder and neck are consistent with the injury. He opined that the treatments Petitioner received prior to his examination on December 5, 2017 were reasonable and necessary. Dr. Robson stated it is certainly a community standard to operate on a disc protrusion at C3-4 on the left side of this magnitude, but not his common practice. He did not believe that surgical intervention would significantly improve her symptoms. Dr. Robson based this opinion on the fact that Petitioner's disc protrusion at C3-4 was small and she had absolutely no relief from the injection at that level.

Petitioner testified that she told Dr. Robson that it was difficult to tell if the injections provided any relief of her symptoms in her neck because her neck pain and shoulder pain overlapped.

Dr. Boutwell's records indicate that Petitioner did have some reduction in her pain level following the injection at C3-4.

Petitioner's treating orthopedic spine surgeon, Dr. Gornet, opined that her cervical disc herniation at C3-4 is causally related to the injury on September 8, 2016. Dr. Gornet testified that Petitioner continues to have pain and symptoms. He noted that she has tried and failed conservative measures. Dr. Gornet testified that the Petitioner has objective pathology on her MRI scan which correlates with her subjective complaints. He has recommended disc replacement. He further testified that he believes that he can help her with this treatment and he has had success in alleviating a patient's symptoms by performing an anterior cervical disc replacement at C3-4 for this type of condition.

At arbitration, Petitioner testified in a direct and forthright manner. She testified that she wants to have the neck surgery because she has neck pain every day. Her neck pain causes her difficulty sleeping and affects her activities both at home and at work.

Based upon the foregoing and the record taken as a whole, the arbitrator finds that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being relative to her cervical spine is causally related to the work accident of September 8, 2016.

Issue (J): Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?

Issue (K): Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care?

Based upon the aforementioned conclusions with regard to Issue F, which are incorporated herein by reference, as well as the record taken as a whole, the Arbitrator finds Respondent is liable for the medical expenses outlined in Petitioner's Exhibit 1, totaling $4,413.81, and orders Respondent to pay these expenses as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act. Pursuant to the agreement of the parties, all medical bills awarded shall be paid directly to the medical providers. Respondent shall be given a credit for medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of the services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

With respect to prospective medical treatment, the Arbitrator finds the reasoning of Dr. Gornet more persuasive than that of Dr. Robson, and finds that the testimony and the medical evidence, as a whole, supports the need for the cervical disc replacement at C3-4 as recommended by Dr. Gornet. The Arbitrator finds that the prospective treatment recommended for Petitioner by Dr. Gornet is reasonable, necessary, and causally related to Petitioner's work injury.

Issue (L): What temporary benefits are in dispute?

Petitioner testified that she received all of her temporary total disability benefits prior to December 26, 2017. She received notification that her temporary total disability benefits were terminated effective December 26, 2017. On December 28, 2017, Petitioner saw Kendra Bowen who kept her off from work until she could see her treating spine surgeon. Contained within Dr. Gornet's medical records is a Physician's Statement signed by Dr. Gornet on January 5, 2018 keeping Petitioner off from work until February 11, 2018.

Based upon the foregoing and the record taken as a whole, the Arbitrator finds that Petitioner has met her burden of proving that she is entitled to temporary total disability benefits for the period of time from December 28, 2017 through February 11, 2018.

Respondent shall pay Petitioner temporary total disability of $614.29 per week for 6-4/7 weeks, commencing December 28, 2017 through February 11, 2018.

In no instance shall this award be a bar to subsequent hearing and determination of an additional amount of medical benefits or compensation for a temporary or permanent disability, if any.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review under §19(b) having been filed by Petitioner and Respondent herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of accident, causal connection, medical treatment and expenses, prospective medical treatment, temporary total disability ("TTD"), and penalties, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator. The Commission affirms the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being regarding the right labral tear, acromioclavicular joint pathology, and recommended right shoulder surgery is not causally related to the work accident. The Commission further finds Petitioner's current condition of ill-being regarding her right sternoclavicular joint is not related to the work accident. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Comm'n, 78 Ill.2d 327, 399 N.E.2d 1322, 35 Ill.Dec. 794 (1980).

Findings of Facts

Petitioner worked for Respondent as a home health aid. She began working for Respondent approximately two years before the date of accident. On January 20, 2017, Petitioner sustained an injury while helping a client out of bed and into a wheelchair. Petitioner testified that she "pulled a muscle" and felt pain in her right shoulder after lifting the client. She immediately felt throbbing and tingling in her right arm. She testified that the pain was throughout her shoulder, particularly in her clavicle. Petitioner testified that her symptoms have remained unchanged since the date of accident. She would like to proceed with the right shoulder surgery recommended by Dr. Giannoulias. She rated her pain at 6.5/10.

Under cross-examination, Petitioner testified that she never had pain in her right shoulder prior to the work accident. She testified that the symptoms she felt immediately after her accident were about the same as they currently are—neither better nor worse. Petitioner agreed that on her Application for Adjustment of Claim she identified only her right collarbone as the affected body part.

Dr. DelosSantos, Petitioner's primary care physician, examined Petitioner on January 28, 2017.1 (PX 3). The physical examination revealed tenderness in the subclavicular area and slightly limited right shoulder range of motion. The doctor diagnosed a sprain of an unspecified site of the shoulder and upper arm. Petitioner visited Concentra on February 6, 2017, with complaints of right shoulder and neck pain. (PX 2). Petitioner complained of pain in the right anterior neck and right lateral neck that was constant and rated a 10/10. The pain also radiated to the right trapezius. The physical exam revealed right medial clavicle tenderness. X-rays of the cervical spine and the right clavicle showed no obvious signs of fracture. The doctor diagnosed a neck strain and prescribed physical therapy and medication. On February 16, 2017, Petitioner returned to Concentra and reported improving pain in the right anterior neck. Petitioner returned to Concentra on March 24, 2017, with complaints of unchanged symptoms located in the anterior chest bilaterally and radiating to the right shoulder. The exam revealed tenderness of the right trapezius muscle but no cervical pain and tenderness of the anterior chest up to the right shoulder. The doctor also noted swelling and parasternal tenderness of the sternum. The doctor diagnosed a neck sprain and strain, sternum pain, and soft tissue swelling of the chest wall.

Dr. Cohen first examined Petitioner on April 4, 2017. Petitioner complained of pain in the anterolateral shoulder region, but later noted most of her pain was around her clavicle, the anterolateral base of her neck on the right, and her sternoclavicular region into the sternal region. Dr. Cohen wrote that Petitioner tended to exhibit significant pain behavior. Petitioner was especially tender at the acromioclavicular ("AC") joint and sternoclavicular ("SC") joint. The doctor observed swelling at the SC joint on the right side. Due to her marked pain behavior and difficulty he had examining her, Dr. Cohen recommended an MRI of the right shoulder and a CAT scan of the right SC joint. He believed most of Petitioner's symptoms were coming from the SC joint. On April 10, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. DelosSantos and complained of right shoulder pain. She reported fracturing her clavicle in a work accident. Dr. DelosSantos noted the right shoulder was locally tender with adequate range of motion. A CT scan of the right arm had the following impression: 1) no evidence of acute traumatic injury to the right SC joint; 2) multiple foci of subchondral bony reabsorption of the clavicular head with benign-appearing periosteal reaction and a probable small SC joint effusion; and 3) a constellation of findings most consistent with a seronegative arthritis or low-grade repetitive trauma. A right shoulder MRI had the impression of a tear of the superior labrum with associated paralabral cyst extending into the suprascapular notch. There was no evidence of edema in the supraspinatus or infraspinatus muscles to suggest nerve impingement or denervation.

On April 25, 2017, Dr. Cohen wrote that while Petitioner's right shoulder felt better, she still had severe pain in the region of her SC joint on the right. His physical examination revealed no shoulder tenderness, but Petitioner was acutely tender at the right SC joint. Her shoulder movement was limited with guarding secondary to pain at the sternoclavicular region. Dr. Cohen agreed that the MRI showed changes consistent with a superior labral tear; however, he opined these were old changes that were no longer symptomatic. He performed a steroid injection into the right SC joint. On May 16, 2017, Dr. Cohen again noted that Petitioner's pain was located at the right SC joint. He also noted continued swelling and tenderness at the joint. He interpreted the recent CT scan of the right arm as showing somewhat destructive changes of Petitioner's medial clavicle at the sternoclavicular joint. Dr. Cohen ordered an MRI of the right sternoclavicular joint due to his concern that some of the changes found on the scan could be the result of a tumor. Petitioner never obtained the MRI and did not seek further treatment with Dr. Cohen.

Dr. Murtaza first examined Petitioner on June 20, 2017. (PX 1). Petitioner began treatment with Dr. Murtaza at the recommendation of her attorney. She reported feeling acute pain in her right shoulder and into the collarbone after lifting a patient. Dr. Murtaza interpreted the MRI as showing a superior labrum tear with a paralabral cyst as well as AC joint arthropathy. He prescribed pain medication and aggressive physical therapy. He was concerned that Petitioner may have developed frozen shoulder. Dr. Giannoulias, a colleague of Dr. Murtaza, examined Petitioner on July 12, 2017. Petitioner reported lifting a patient and feeling sharp and sudden stabbing pain in the right shoulder, collarbone, and AC joint. The doctor determined the results of Petitioner's examination were consistent with marked AC joint pain with no impingement sign. He diagnosed a right labral tear and significant AC joint pathology; additionally, Dr. Giannoulias recommended an arthroscopic labral repair and evaluation of the AC joint. Petitioner returned to Dr. Murtaza on October 26, 2017. In the corresponding office visit note, Dr. Murtaza wrote that the work injury caused a superior labral tear with biceps tenosynovitis and severe AC joint arthropathy causing impingement. On December 12, 2017, Dr. Murtaza authored a follow in which he opined that the mechanism of injury described by Petitioner is consistent with her current condition and requires surgery. (PX 1a).

Expert Opinion

Dr. Steven Mash — Respondent Section 12 Examiner

Dr. Mash examined Petitioner on September 8, 2017, at Respondent's request. (RX 3). Petitioner complained of discomfort to palpation and with breathing at the right SC joint only. Dr. Mash noted significant tenderness without swelling to palpation around the SC joint on the right. Petitioner had no complaints over the spinal glenoid notch. Dr. Mash diagnosed sternoclavicular arthropathy. He opined that Petitioner's current symptoms relate to the SC joint and believed Dr. Cohen's evaluations and the diagnostic exams objectively correlate with this diagnosis. Dr. Mash believed the abnormality demonstrated on the diagnostic study about the SC joint was preexisting and was likely exacerbated temporarily by the work incident. He opined that the loss of range of motion evident during Petitioner's physical examination is most likely attributable to the SC joint, not any of the AC joint or labral pathology seen on the right shoulder MRI. Dr. Mash did not believe Petitioner was a surgical candidate for shoulder surgery or surgery relating to the SC joint.

Dr. Mash opined, "The claimant has an unusual problem that likely relates to some underlying systemic disease process leading to the sternoclavicular complaint." Future treatment should focus on this problem; however, he did not believe any additional treatment would be related to the work injury. He agreed the treatment recommended by Dr. Cohen, including further diagnostic tests, is appropriate. Dr. Mash opined that Petitioner is at MMI for the temporary aggravation to her preexisting SC joint condition caused by the work incident.

Dr. Mash later reviewed films of the CT scan of the right clavicle and the right shoulder MRI. In a February 2018 addendum report, he agreed with the radiologists' findings on both exams, and clarified that Petitioner's major complaints during his examination and during her visits with Dr. Cohen focused completely around the SC joint, not the AC joint. (RX 4). He believed that while the limited range of motion about the right shoulder may relate to the SC joint, it did not relate to Petitioner's AC joint. He opined, "Just because the claimant has a positive finding on MRI in and of itself does not meet the prerequisite to consider surgery."

Conclusions of Law

Petitioner bears the burden of proving each element of her case by a preponderance of the evidence. Sisbro, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 207 Ill. 2d 193, 203 (2003). When a claimant suffers from a preexisting condition, the claimant must show that a work-related accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the preexisting condition "...such that the [claimant's] current condition of ill-being can be said to have been causally-connected to the work-related injury and not simply the result of a normal degenerative process of the preexisting condition." Id. at 204. The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner sustained an accident that arose out of and in the course of her employment on January 20, 2017. However, after carefully weighing the totality of the evidence, the Commission finds Petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that her current condition of ill-being relating to her AC and SC joints is causally related to the January 20, 2017, work accident.

After carefully considering all the credible evidence, the Commission affirms the Arbitrator's conclusion that Petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that her current condition regarding the right shoulder pathology evident on the April 2017 MRI is causally related to the January 20, 2017, work incident. The medical records show that while Petitioner's earliest complaints referred generally to right shoulder pain, the physical examinations of her treating physicians revealed notable tenderness at the SC joint and neck. Dr. Cohen, Petitioner's initial orthopedic doctor, agreed that the April 2017 right shoulder MRI revealed a labral tear and AC joint pathology. However, he determined that there was no objective evidence that the MRI findings are symptomatic. Instead, Dr. Cohen relied on his objective findings of tenderness and swelling in the area of the SC joint as well as Petitioner's complaints of pain in the region of her clavicle. Dr. Cohen interpreted the April 2017 CT scan of Petitioner's right arm as showing somewhat destructive changes of the medial clavicle at the SC joint. The doctor worried these changes were due to a tumor. Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Mash, noted that Petitioner did not raise any complaints during his examination relating to her right shoulder. Instead, Petitioner solely complained of discomfort to palpation and with breathing at the SC joint. After examining Petitioner and the relevant medical records, Dr. Mash agreed with Dr. Cohen's opinion that Petitioner's complaints are unrelated to the right shoulder pathology seen on the April 2017 MRI.

SOIMCC0058

The Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's conclusion that the opinions and treatment recommendations given by Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias are not credible given the totality of the evidence. Petitioner received treatment from several doctors, including her primary care physician and Dr. Cohen prior to beginning treatment with Dr. Murtaza in June 20, 2017. Dr. Murtaza opined that Petitioner's complaints are due to the pathology evident in the April 2017 right shoulder MRI. He referred Petitioner to Dr. Giannoulias, who examined Petitioner in July 2017 and wrote that the results of Petitioner's physical examination were consistent with marked AC joint pain. Dr. Giannoulias diagnosed Petitioner with a right labral tear with significant AC joint pathology and recommended surgical intervention. Dr. Murtaza later agreed with the surgical recommendation and opined Petitioner's current condition of ill-being regarding her right shoulder and the recommended surgery are causally related to Petitioner's work accident. The Commission finds the Arbitrator correctly assessed the evidence and properly denied a causal connection between the findings evident on the April 2017 right shoulder MRI and the work incident. There is no credible explanation in evidence accounting for the marked difference in objective findings and subjective complaints relating to Petitioner's right shoulder noted by Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias compared to her consistent history of complaints to all her prior treating doctors. The opinions of Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias differ significantly from those of Petitioner's earlier treating doctors. Their opinions also differ greatly from the very credible opinion of both Drs. Cohen and Mash that Petitioner's right shoulder pathology is asymptomatic and is not related to the work accident. Drs. Cohen and Mash agree that Petitioner's ongoing complaints are most likely related to her SC joint. For these reasons, the Commission affirms the Arbitrator's denial of a causal connection between Petitioner's right shoulder complaints and the findings revealed on the April 2017 MRI and the January 20, 2017, work accident.

While the Commission agrees with the Arbitrator's denial of causation regarding Petitioner's right shoulder, it reverses the Arbitrator's conclusion that the March 8, 2018, 19(b) hearing only addressed the causal connection of the right labral tear, AC joint pathology, and surgical intervention recommended by Drs. Giannoulias and Murtaza. The Arbitrator wrote, "Petitioner did not present evidence that her current condition was causally related to an aggravation of a pre-existing sternoclavicular joint condition, and, as such, the Arbitrator's decision does not address that issue nor whether Petitioner is entitled to TTD benefits or prospective medical treatment related to an aggravation of a pre-existing condition." The Commission respectfully disagrees with this statement.

When parties proceed to hearing pursuant to Section 19(b) of the Act, the Commission is tasked with determining all issues in dispute through the date of hearing. Occasionally, an Arbitrator may allow the parties to agree to reserve a specific disputed issue for subsequent litigation. For example, in this matter the parties agreed to reserve the issue of outstanding medical bills for future determination. However, there was no agreement limiting the 19(b) hearing solely to the question of whether Petitioner's current condition of ill-being regarding only her right shoulder pathology and recommended surgery. Instead, the issues in dispute included the causal connection of Petitioner's current condition of ill-being as well as disputed TTD. Petitioner also identified the shoulder surgery proposed by Dr. Giannoulias as a disputed issue.

After reviewing the record, the Commission finds that the all-encompassing issue of the causal relation of Petitioner's current condition of ill-being to the work incident was in dispute during the hearing. Petitioner made a strategic decision to only present evidence she believed supported her theory of the case that the right shoulder pathology and related surgical recommendation are causally related to the work accident. However, it was no secret that Respondent's theory of the case is that Petitioner's shoulder pathology is asymptomatic and unrelated to the work accident. It was also no secret that Respondent disputed the causal relation of Petitioner's overall condition of ill-being to the work accident. This included the symptoms relating to Petitioner's SC joint identified by Drs. Cohen and Mash. Dr. Mash's opinion expressly denies the causal connection of Petitioner's current SC joint condition and complaints to the work accident. Petitioner failed to submit sufficient evidence rebutting the opinions of Drs. Cohen and Mash that Petitioner's ongoing complaints involved only her SC joint. Furthermore, Petitioner failed to submit any evidence that her current condition relating to her SC joint is causally connected to the work accident. No doctor opined that Petitioner's current condition regarding her right SC joint is related to the work accident.

When a Petitioner proceeds to a hearing on the merits, the Commission weighs the evidence submitted by each party. The Commission does not, and should not, effectively give Petitioner a "do over" because she failed to submit any evidence rebutting a key element of Respondent's defense. After closely reviewing the totality of the evidence, the Commission finds Petitioner failed to prove her current condition of ill-being is causally related to the January 20, 2017, work accident. Petitioner failed to present credible evidence that any of her complaints or conditions, including those regarding the findings of the April 2017 right shoulder MRI and her ongoing complaints regarding her right SC joint, are related to the work accident.

Finally, the Commission corrects certain scrivener's errors in the Decision of the Arbitrator. First, on page one (1) of the Decision, the Arbitrator mistakenly wrote that Petitioner saw her primary care physician for a routing follow up involving unrelated treatment. On page two (2) of the Decision the Arbitrator mistakenly refers to a date of accident of January 30, 2017. On page three (3) of the Decision, the Arbitrator wrote Dr. Murtaza proscribed physical therapy. In the same paragraph, the Arbitrator refers to Illinois Orthopedic network. The Arbitrator also mistakenly refers to "Dr. Murtaza examination." The Commission hereby modifies the above-referenced sentences to read as follows:

> On January 28, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. DelosSantos, a primary care physician, for a routine follow up involving unrelated treatment. (pg. 1 of the Decision)
> On February 1, 2017, Petitioner's supervisor, Keisha Jefferson, completed a Supervisor Incident Statement Form which acknowledged that Petitioner reported injuring her right shoulder and collar bone while transporting a patient from a bed to a wheelchair on January 20, 2017. (pg. 2 of the Decision)
> On June 20, 2017, Petitioner presented to Dr. Sajjad Murtaza of Illinois Orthopedic Network. (pg. 3 of the Decision)

> Dr. Murtaza's examination showed reduced range of motion for both active and passive flexion abduction. (pg. 3 of the Decision)
> Dr. Murtaza assessed an early frozen shoulder and prescribed physical therapy, Valium, menthyl patches and he took Petitioner off work because the employer was not following the work guidelines. (pg. 3 of the Decision)

The Commission otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Decision of the Arbitrator filed on May 22, 2018, is modified as stated herein.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is not causally related to the January 20, 2017, work accident. Petitioner failed to prove her current conditions regarding her right labral tear and AC joint pathology and her right sternoclavicular joint are causally related to the work accident.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the right shoulder surgery recommended by Dr. Giannoulias is hereby denied.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondent shall receive credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest pursuant to §19(n) of the Act, if any.

The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was tried before Arbitrator Frank J. Soto on March 8, 2018. Petitioner filed an Application For Adjustment Of Claim alleging that she sustained an injury to her right collarbone on January 20, 2017. A Petitioner for an Immediate hearing was not attached to the Application For Adjustment Of Claim. (RX 7). On March 8, 2018, the Parties submitted a Request For Hearing pursuant to Sections 19(b) and 8(a) of the Act. The disputed issues involve whether Petitioner sustained an accidental injury that arose out of and in the course of employment, whether the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally connected to the injury and whether Petitioner is entitled prospective medical treatment and TTD benefits. Petitioner is seeking prospective medical treatment consisting of right shoulder arthroscopic labral repair surgery recommended by Dr. Giannulias. Petitioner filed a petition for penalties and attorney's fees pursuant to Section 16(k) and 19(l) of the Act. The Parties stipulated to reserve issues regarding whether Respondent is liable for unpaid medical bills. (Arb. Ex. 1).

FINDINGS OF FACT

Deteasia Enoch Collings (hereinafter referred as "Petitioner") testified that she was employed by Help At Home (hereinafter referred as "Respondent") as a homecare aid and her job duties consisted of cleaning, washing patients, assisting patients to use the bathroom, lifting garbage cans and boxes. Petitioner testified that prior to January 20, 2017, she did not participate in lifting patients.

Petitioner first testified that she pulled a muscle in her right shoulder while lifting a patient out of a bed to place the patient in a wheelchair on January 20. Petitioner later testified that her clavicle hurt more. Petitioner also testified that she notified her supervisor the day of the incident.

On January 28, 2017, Petitioner saw Dr. Delos Santos, a primary care physician, for a routing follow up involving unrelated treatment. At that appointment, Petitioner reported a muscle strain, of the left shoulder, after lifting a patient at home. Dr. Delos Santos examination noted that that Petitioner had slightly limited range of motion in the right shoulder. Petitioner was assessed with a sprain of unspecified site of shoulder an upper arm and proscribed cyclobenzaprine and Lidocaine Ointment. (PX 3, RX 5).

On February 1, 2017, Petitioner's supervisor, Keisha Jefferson, completed a Supervisor Incident Statement Form which acknowledged that Petitioner reported injuring her right shoulder and collar bone while transporting a patient from a bed to a wheelchair on January 30, 2017. (RX 1). Petitioner also completed an Employee Incident Statement on February 1, 2017 which stated the she injured her collar bone while lifting a patient from a bed to a chair. (RX 2).

On February 11, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Delos Santos for a routine follow-up examination and prescription refill. At that visit, Petitioner returned for chronic asthma, recurrent anxiety, coughing and occasional shortness of breath. The medical records do not indicate that Petitioner complained of shoulder or sternum area pain nor was any associated treatment proscribed. (PX 3, RX 5). Petitioner returned to Dr. Delos Santos on February 27, 2017 and March 11, 2017, complaining of low back pain in addition to her asthma and occasional shortness of breath. (PX 3, RX 5).

On March 10, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Delos Santos complaining of right shoulder pain and that she fractured her clavicle in a job-related injury. Dr. Delos Santos assessed pain in joint involving the shoulder region. On May 8, 2017 and June 5, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Delos Santos complaining of low back pain in addition to issues related to asthma and anxiety. (PX 3, RX 5).

On April 4, 2017, Petitioner presented to Dr. James Cohen at the Illinois Bone & Joint Institute. At that time, Petitioner completed a Medical History Form stating the reason for her visit was due to a right shoulder injury, on January 20, 2017, while at work. Petitioner also indicated that she had swelling in her neck and collar bone. (PX 2).

During the examination Petitioner reported while lifting a bed ridden woman, with the assistance of the woman's daughter, she felt a sharp pain in her right shoulder. Dr. Cohen noted that Petitioner initially described the pain in the region of the anterolateral shoulder but subsequently noted that the most of her pain was in her sternal region. Petitioner rated her pain as 10 out of 10 and denied prior shoulder or neck problems. Dr. Cohen indicated that he believed the Petitioner's pain complaints were emanating from her sternoclavicular joint and he ordered a MRI of the right shoulder and CT scan of the sternoclavicular joint. (PX 2).

April 10, 2017, Petitioner underwent both a CT scan of her upper extremity on the right without contrast, and an MRI of the right shoulder without contrast. The CT showed multiple foci of subchondral bony reabsorption of the clavicular head with benign appearing periosteal reaction and probable small sternoclavicular joint diffusion. The CT diagnosed was seronegative arthritis. It was also noted on the CT scan that correlation with laboratory values and clinical history of arthritis is recommended. The MRI of the right shoulder showed a tear of the superior labrum with associated parolabral cyst extending into some super scapular notch. There was no evidence of edema in the supraspinatus or infraspinatus muscles to suggest nerve impingement or denervation. (PX 2).

On April 25, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Cohen and reported that her right shoulder region was feeling much better, but, that she had "rather severe pain in the region of her sternoclavicular joint on the right side." Dr. Cohen reviewed the MRI and agreed that there were "changes consistent with the superior labral tear, but there appeared to be a large paralabral cyst that was extending into the bone with some bone sclerosis around it. This had the appearance of an old change and she is no longer having symptoms there." Dr. Cohen agreed with the CT scan radiologist's findings as being of seronegative arthritis and gave Petitioner a sternoclavicular joint injection. Dr. Cohn issued work restrictions of no use of the upper extremity and to refrain from physical therapy. (PX 2).

On May 16, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Cohen reporting that the injection helped "somewhat." Dr. Cohen was concerned that some of the "cystic changes [were] somewhat lytic and could indeed be due to a neoplasm." Dr. Cohen ordered an MRI of the sternoclavicular joint without gadolinium due to concerns involving the possible tumor. (PX 2).

On June 20, 2017, Petitioner presented to Dr. Sajjad Murtaza of Illinois Orthopedic network. Petitioner testified that she was directed to this clinic by her attorney. At that visit, Petitioner reported acute pain in the right shoulder and collarbone after lifting a client. Petitioner reported her pain level as 6 out of 10. Dr. Murtaza examination showed reduced range of motion for both active and passive flexion abduction. Dr. Murtaza also noted that Petitioner's AC joint was tender to palpation, pain with internal rotation and during the abduction and impingement maneuvers. Dr. Murtaza assessed an early frozen shoulder and proscribed physical therapy, Valium, menthyl patches and he took Petitioner off work because the employer was not following the work guidelines. (PX. 1).

On July 12, 2017, Petitioner was evaluated by Dr. Christos Giannoulias, who is also with Illinois Orthopedic Network. During that visit, Petitioner reported a sharp sudden stabbing pain in the shoulder, collarbone and the AC joint after lifting a client on January 25, 2017. Dr.

Giannoulias diagnosed a labral tear and significant AC joint pathology and recommended arthroscopic labral repair with evaluation of the AC joint. (PX 1).

On September 8, 2017, Petitioner underwent an independent medical examination with Dr. Steven Mash at the request of Respondent. Dr. Mash reviewed the medial records leading up to the date of this exam. During the visit, Petitioner reported that her current major complaints involve the right sternoclavicular joint only. Dr. Mash's examination found limited range of motion about the cervical spine, tenderness without swelling about the sternoclavicular joint on the right. Petitioner did not have any complaints of discomfort over the spinal glenoid notch on the right. The shoulder examination revealed dramatic limitation in range of motion which was limited secondary to pain. (RX 3).

Dr. Mash diagnosed sternoclavicular arthropathy. In his report dated September 18, 2017, which was entered into evidence without objection, Dr. Mash indicated the Petitioner's current issues were related to the sternoclavicular joint. Dr. Mash noted that Dr. Cohen's evaluation also focused primarily on the sternoclavicular joint and is consistent and the findings objectively correlate to the sternoclavicular joint. Dr. Mash opined the abnormality demonstrated on the diagnostic study about the sternoclavicular joint was pre-existing and likely temporarily exacerbated. Dr. Mash further opined that exacerbation to have been four (4) to six (6) weeks in length and that Petitioner's current condition is due to the pre-existing underlying condition.

Dr. Mash stated Petitioner's loss of range of motion and other complaints are entirely related to the FCE joint, not to the acromioclavicular joint or labral issues identified on the MRI. Dr. Mash opined that Petitioner's current problem is entirely pre-existing and any additional medical treatment would be due to the pre-existing condition. (RX 3).

Dr. Mash disagrees with Dr. Giannoulias' recommendation for arthroscopic evaluation of the right shoulder. Dr. Mash opined that the Petitioner is not a candidate for surgical intervention in the glenohumeral or acromioclavicular joint because Petitioner's current symptoms are associated with the sternoclavicular joint problem. Dr. Mash further opines that Petitioner suffers from an unusual sternoclavicular joint problem and she should seek additional treatment with an orthopedic surgeon, who focuses on that type of problem, and associated care at the direction of a rheumatologist to address the abnormalities noted in the sternoclavicular joint. (RX 3).

On October 26, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Murtaza who opined that Petitioners' right shoulder condition is related to a superior labral tear with biceps tenosynovitis and severe AC joint arthropathy. Dr. Murtaza further opines that Petitioner loss of range of motion and strength is secondary to the superior labrum tear with AC joint arthropathy. (PX 1).

On December 12, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Murtaza for the purpose of obtaining a more detailed history of how Petitioner injured her shoulder. At that time Petitioner reported that the patient was on a sheet when she lifted the sheet to move the patient out of the bed and into a chair. Dr. Murtaza opined the mechanism of injury was consistent with the Petitioner's condition and she requires surgical intervention. (PX 1A).

On February 12, 2018, Dr. Mash authored an addendum report, which was admitted into evidence without objection. In that report, Dr. Mash opines that Drs. Giannoulias' focus upon the MRI study was inappropriate when recommending surgery even though the MRI showed an abnormality. Dr. Mash indicated that Petitioner's major complaints involve the sternoclavicular joint and the evaluation and CT study were positive. Dr. Mash opined the surgery would not address Petitioner's problems which involve the sternoclavicular joint. Dr. Mash noted that Petitioner's complaints in his office and during her treatment with Dr. Cohen focused upon the sternoclavicular joint and not the AC joint. Dr. Mash opined that just because one has a positive finding on an MRI, in and of itself, does not meet the prerequisite to consider surgery. (RX 4).

At trial Petitioner testified, that she would like to have the right shoulder surgery recommend by Dr. Giannulias. Petitioner testified that she continues to suffer from throbbing pain which is at the same level as the day of the accident. Petitioner testified that her current pain level is 6 ½ out of 10 and she is unable to do her hair, cook and lifting pots.

Petitioner testified that she is not currently working and she has not worked since July 12, 2017. Petitioner further testified that she has not made any attempts to find work other than with Respondent. Petitioner does not recall the dates she contacted Respondent.

Petitioner testified her last doctor's appointment was on December 17, 2017 with Illinois Orthopedic Network. The Illinois Orthopedic Network records indicate that Petitioner met with Dr. Murtaza for the purpose of obtaining a more detailed history of the injury but that no treatment was given on that date. The last date Petitioner received medical treatment was on October 26, 2017 with Dr. Murtaza. (PX 1, PX 2).

Sheena Callazo, the risk management coordinator for Respondent, was called as a witness. Ms. Callazo testified that Petitioner returned to work light duty and was given office work to do and that she left work complaining of chest pain. After that incident, Petitioner returned to work and continued to work light duty until July 23, 2017. Ms. Callazo testified that work is available for Petitioner but she needs to complete in-service training to obtain her active status, which Petitioner has not attempted to do.

Patricia McCoy testified for Respondent. Ms. McCoy was a branch manager. Ms. McCoy testified that Petitioner needs to complete the in-service educational requirements to be considered active and the training is offered every quarter. Ms. McCoy testified to keep your active status, employees must complete four (4) hours of training per quarter and sixteen hours (16) each year, which is outlined in the employee handbook and available to Petitioner.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Arbitrator adopts the above Findings of Fact in support of the following Conclusions of Law set forth below.

The claimant bears the burden of proving every aspect of her claim by a preponderance of the evidence. Hutson v. Industrial Commission, 223 Ill App. 3d 706 (1992). To obtain compensation under the Act, the claimant bears the burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence, he suffered a disabling injury which arose out of, and in the course of his employment. Baggett v. Industrial Commission, 201, Ill 2d. 187, 266 Ill. Dec. 836, 775 N.E. 2d 908 (2002). Preponderance of the evidence means greater weight of the evidence in merit and worth that which has more evidence for it than against it. Spankroy v. Alesky, 45 Ill. App.3d 432 (1st Dist. 1977). The "arising out of" component is primarily concerned with causal connection. To satisfy this requirement it must be shown that the injury had its origin in some risk connected with or incidental to the employment to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury. Caterpillar Tractor Co. vs. Industrial Commission, 129 Ill. 2d, 52, 133 Ill. Dec. 454, 541 N. E. 2d. 665 (1989). Accidental injury need not be the sole causative factor, not even the primary causative factor, as long as it was a causative factor in resulting condition of ill-being. Rock Road Construction Co. v. Industrial Commission, 37, Ill. 2d. 123, 227 N.E. 2d. 65 (1967). "Liability under the Workmen's Compensation Act may not be based on imagination, speculation, or conjecture, but must have a foundation of facts established by a preponderance of the evidence..." Shell Petroleum Corp. v. Industrial Commission, 10 N.E.2d 352 (1937).

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUE (C) DID PETITIONER SUSTAINED AN ACCIDENT THAT AROSE OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF HER EMPLOYMENT, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

The burden of proof is on a claimant to establish the elements of his right to compensation, and unless the evidence considered in its entirety supports a finding that the injury resulted from a cause connected with the employment, there is no right to recover. Board of Trustees v. Industrial Commission, 44 ILL.2d 214 (1969). To recover benefits under the Act, a claimant bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that his or her injury "arose out of" and "in the course of" the employment. First Cash Financial Services v. Industrial Comm'n, 367 Ill. App. 3d 102, 105 (2006). Both elements must be present at the time of the claimant's injury to justify compensation. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 131 Ill. 2d 478 (1989). An injury "arises out of" one's employment if its origin is in some risk connected with or incident to the employment, so that there is a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury. Jewel Cos. V. Industrial Comm'n, 57 Ill.2d 38, 310 N.E.2d 12 (1974). An injury is accidental within the meaning of the Act when it is traceable to a definite time, place, and cause and occurs in the course of employment, unexpectedly and without affirmative act or design of the employee. Mathiessen & Hegeler Zinc Co. v. Industrial Board, 284 Ill. 378 (1918). A claimant's injury "arises out of" employment if it "had its origin in some risk connected with, or incidental to, the employment so as to create a causal connection between the employment and the accidental injury." Sisbro, Inc. v. Industrial Comm'n, 2017 Ill. 2d 193, 203 (2003).

The Arbitrator has carefully reviewed and considered all medical evidence along with all testimony. The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner has proven by the preponderance of the evidence that she sustained an accidental injury that arose out of and in the course of her employment by Respondent on January 20, 2017, as more fully described below.

Petitioner testified that she sustained an injury, on January 20, 2017, while relocating a patient from a bed to a wheelchair. Petitioner testified that she told her supervisor the day of the incident. The Supervisor Incident Statement shows that the Petitioner's supervisor, Keisha Jefferson, acknowledged being notified of the injury on January 30, 2017. The Report contains a similar description of the incident Petitioner reported to Dr. Delos Santos on January 28, 2017. The Arbitrator also notes that Petitioner provided a similar description of the injury to Drs. Cohen, Murtaza, Giannulias and Mash.

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUE (F) IS PETITIONER'S CURRENT CONDITION OF ILL-BEING CAUSALLY RELATED TO THE INJURY, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

In preexisting conditions cases, recovery will depend on the employee's ability to show that a work-related accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the preexisting disease such that the employee's current condition of ill-being can be said to have been casually-connected to the work-related injury and not simply the result of a normal degenerative process of a preexisting condition. Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 92 Ill2d 30, 36-37. When a workers' physical structures, diseased or not, give way under the stress of their usual tasks, the law views it as an accident arising out of and in the course of employment. General Electric Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 89 Ill.2d 432, 60 Ill.Dec. 629, 433 N.E.2d 671 (1982). When an employee with a preexisting condition is injured in the course and of his employment the Commission must decide whether there was an accidental injury which arose out of the employment, whether the accidental injury aggravated or accelerated the preexisting condition or whether the preexisting condition alone was the cause of the injury. Sisbro, Inc. Industrial Comm'n, 207 Ill.2d 193, 278 Ill.Dec 70, 797 N.E.2d 665 (2003). Even though an employee has a preexisting condition which may make him more vulnerable to injury, recovery for an accidental injury will not be denied as long as it can be shown that the employment was also a causative factor. Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Industrial Comm'n, 129 Ill.2d, 52, 133 Ill. Dec. 454, 541 N.E.2d 665 (1989).

The Arbitrator has carefully reviewed and considered all medical evidence along with all testimony. The Arbitrator concludes that Petitioner has failed to prove by the preponderance of the credible evidence that her current condition involving the right labral tear and AC joint pathology is causally related to Petitioner's alleged work accident of March 8, 2018, as set forth more fully below.

On July 12, 2017, Dr. Giannulias, of Illinois Orthopedic Network, indicated that Petitioner's chief complaint involved her right shoulder and she has marked AC joint pain. Dr. Giannulias records do not indicate that Petitioner had been experiencing significant sternoclavicular joint pain prior to April of 2017 nor does his records contain the CT scan nor address the recommendations and findings of Dr. Cohen and the CT scan radiologist.

On April 4, 2017, Petitioner reported, to Dr. Cohen, most of her pain was around her clavicle and the SC region into her sternal region. Based upon Petitioner's symptoms, Dr. Cohen ordered a CT scan which showed multiple foci of subchondral bony reabsorption of the clavicula head with benign-appearing periosteal reaction and a probable small sternoclavicular joint effusion. The CT scan radiologist's finding was seronegative arthritis and the radiologist recommended correlation with laboratory values and clinical history of arthritis. On April 25, 2017, Petitioner reported, to Dr. Cohen, that her right shoulder was not symptomatic and the only issue she involved her sternoclavicular joint. At that time Dr. Cohen proscribed sternoclavicular joint injections. On May 16, 2017, Petitioner returned to Dr. Cohen and reported that all her pain was in the right sternoclavicular joint. At that time, Dr. Cohen was concerned that some of the cystic changes were becoming lytic and he ordered an MRI of the sternoclavicular joint. (PX 2).

On September 18, 2017, after Dr. Giannulias' examination, Petitioner reported that her current pain involved the right sternoclavicular joint area. During the examination Dr. Mash found that Petitioner was experiencing significant tenderness without swelling around the sternoclavicular joint and that Petitioner did not report any discomfort over the spinal glenoid notch. (RX 3).

The Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Mash more persuasive then those of Drs. Giannoulias and Murtaza, both who are associated with Illinois Orthopedic Network. Prior to seeing Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias Petitioner's pain involved the sternoclavicular joint. However, Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias fail to address or acknowledge the significance of the sternoclavicular joint pain, CT findings or the discrepancies in Petitioner's symptoms reported to Drs. Cohen and Mash with those reported to Drs. Murtaza and Giannoulias. The Arbitrator finds the opinions of Dr. Mash to be consistent with Dr. Cohen's findings, treatment and the CT scan.

Dr. Cohen and Dr. Mash agree the MRI study showed a right labral tear with some AC joint pathology and the MRI findings are not consistent with Petitioner's symptomatology. (RX 4). Dr. Mash noted that a positive MRI finding in and of itself does not meet the prerequisite to consider surgery. Dr. Mash opined that the Petitioner's loss of range of motion is related to the FCE joint, not the acromioclavicular joint or labral issues, and as a result the surgery would not address the Petitioner's complaints.

Petitioner proceeded to hearing to determine whether the Petitioner's current condition of ill-being, consisting of the right labral tear and AC joint pathology, is causally connected to her injury of January 20, 2017. Petitioner requested, in part, perspective medical care consisting of the arthroscopic labral repair surgery recommended by Dr. Giannoulias. Petitioner did not present evidence that her current condition was causally related to an aggravation of a pre-existing sternoclavicular joint condition and, as such, the Arbitrator's decision does not address that issue nor whether Petitioner is entitled to TTD benefits or prospective medical treatment related to an aggravation of a pre-existing condition.

WITH RESPECT TO ISSUES (K), (L) AND (M) WHETHER PETITIONER IS ENTITLED TO PROSPECTIVE MEDICAL CARE, TTD BENEFITS AND PENALTIES, THE ARBITRATOR FINDS AS FOLLOWS:

In light of the Arbitrator's determination that Petitioner failed to establish that her current condition of ill-being, consisting of the right labral tear and AC joint pathology, was causally related to her injury of January 20, 2017, the remaining issues of Respondent's liability are moot and need not be reached by this Arbitrator. Accordingly, those benefits are hereby denied.

DECISION AND OPINION ON REVIEW

Timely Petition for Review having been filed by the Petitioner herein and notice given to all parties, the Commission, after considering the issues of causation, medical expenses, temporary total disability, and prospective medical treatment, and being advised of the facts and law, modifies the Decision of the Arbitrator as stated below and otherwise affirms and adopts the Decision of the Arbitrator, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof. The Commission further remands this case to the Arbitrator for further proceedings for a determination of a further amount of temporary total compensation or of compensation for permanent disability, if any, pursuant to Thomas v. Industrial Comm'n, 78 Ill.2d 327, 399 N.E.2d 1322, 35 Ill.Dec. 794 (1980).

The Commission clarifies the decision of the Arbitrator to show that Petitioner sustained accidental injuries to her right hand and/or wrist and left knee as a result of the accident on 10/12/16. The Commission notes that the Arbitrator determined Petitioner had sustained accidental injuries involving her right hand and left knee in the findings contained on p.2 of his decision, but indicated at p.13 of the analysis section of his decision that Petitioner had sustained accidental injuries to her right thumb and left knee. The Commission also wishes to emphasize that Petitioner proved her current conditions of ill-being with respect to her right hand and/or wrist and left knee were causally related to the accident in question, but that Petitioner failed to prove causation with respect to her right knee.

S0 IMCC0058

The Commission also corrects a clerical error in the Arbitrator's decision to show that Petitioner was temporarily totally disabled from 12/20/16 through 5/8/17, or a period of 20 weeks (not 20-1/7 weeks).

All else otherwise affirmed and adopted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that the Arbitrator's decision dated 1/29/19 is affirmed and adopted with changes as stated herein.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner the sum of $240.00 per week for a period of 20 weeks, that being the period of temporary total incapacity for work under §8(b) of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner reasonable and necessary medical expenses in the amount of $4,413.81, pursuant to §8(a) and §8.2 of the Act.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that this case be remanded to the Arbitrator for further proceedings consistent with this Decision, but only after the latter of expiration of the time for filing a written request for Summons to the Circuit Court has expired without the filing of such a written request, or after the time of completion of any judicial proceedings, if such a written request has been filed.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent pay to Petitioner interest under §19(n) of the Act, if any.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED BY THE COMMISSION that Respondent shall have credit for all amounts paid, if any, to or on behalf of Petitioner on account of said accidental injury.

The party commencing the proceedings for review in the Circuit Court shall file with the Commission a Notice of Intent to File for Review in Circuit Court.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

At the time of the injury, the Petitioner was 41 years of age and employed on a temporary basis for Manpower. The Petitioner testified that she was hired to set up a dome for a tennis court. The Petitioner testified that the job was supposed to last for 4 days and she admitted that she was paid $9.00 an hour. The Petitioner testified that the job only took two days to complete.

The Petitioner testified that on October 12, 2016, she was setting up a tennis court dome. The Petitioner testified that she had to lift and pull a tarp to get it stretched out. She testified that it was damp and she fell forward onto her hands. Her legs and stomach also hit the ground. The Petitioner testified that she worked until the end of the day. The Petitioner testified that her knee did not hurt when she fell. She testified that she had aching and swelling but did return to work the next day.

The Petitioner first sought treatment at the St. Joseph Medical Center Emergency Room on October 24, 2016. The records from St. Joseph Medical Center were entered into evidence as Petitioner's Exhibit #2. The Petitioner provided a history of falling backwards onto her outstretched hand on October 11, 2016. Her primary complaint was right thumb pain. She provided an additional history of getting up after the initial fall and then falling again on her left knee. X-rays of the left knee revealed mild degenerative changes. Examination of the right hand revealed mild tenderness over the right snuffbox. The Petitioner made no complaints to the right knee; there was no examination performed or findings made. The diagnosis was right thumb sprain.

On cross-examination the Petitioner testified that she did not report the accident to the respondent until November 17, 2017. Introduced into evidence, as Respondent's Exhibit #7, was a pain diagram. Circled on the pain diagram was the Petitioner's left knee. When asked to explain why the left knee was circled, the Petitioner testified that she was not facing the same way as the picture. The Petitioner denied signing the pain diagram, testifying that the signature was not as big as how she usually signs her name. The Petitioner admitted to having a prior right knee surgery in 1999 and receiving a workers' compensation settlement for same.

The Petitioner testified that after her initial encounter in the emergency room, she followed up with her primary care physician. PX 4 is a report from the OSF Medical Group showing an office visit on November 2, 2016. The note indicates the Petitioner was there to establish a care relationship. The Petitioner gave a history of her accident, stating that she fell forward and landed on her left knee. The left knee was examined and noted to show mild swelling and tenderness in the area of the patella. There is no mention of the right knee in the notes.

The Petitioner testified that she eventually came under the care of Dr. Lawrence Li. Dr. Li's records were entered into evidence as Petitioner Exhibit #3. The Petitioner was first examined by Dr. Li on December 9, 2016. She provided a history pf putting up a plastic dome tennis court. She slipped and injured both her wrists and knees. The right knee and wrist were the most severe. The left knee and wrist had gotten better. The Petitioner indicated that she went to the emergency room and they provided her with braces. X-rays of the right knee revealed mild osteoarthritis. Physical examination of the right knee revealed mild swelling, pain with palpation, and a positive McMurray's. The diagnosis was right knee meniscal or chondral injury and right wrist possible occult fracture.

An MRI of the right knee was performed on December 12, 2016. The impression was mild MCL sprain, multifocal chondromalacia, mild subtle blunting and fraying along the free edge of the posterior horn of the medial meniscus, and the possibility of a small ill-defined horizontal tear of the posterior horn of the lateral meniscus.

An MRI of the right wrist was also performed on December 12, 2016. The findings were subtle mild patchy bone marrow edema in the lunate and capitate, edema in the dorsal and volar pericapsular soft tissues along the extrinsic ligaments, and small distal radiolunar joint effusion and small radiocarpal joint effusion.

The Petitioner returned to Dr. Li on December 20, 2016. She was provided with an injection into the right knee. Physical therapy was ordered.

The Petitioner's initial physical therapy session was completed on December 20, 2016. It was noted that the Petitioner was working as a housekeeper at Luther Oaks Nursing Home. The Petitioner also testified that she began to work for Luther Oaks Nursing Home the day after Thanksgiving 2016. The Petitioner testified that she continued to work in the position until Dr. Li placed her off from work.

The Petitioner returned to Dr. Li on January 30, 2017. She reported that the injection in her right knee helped for about a week. The diagnosis was right wrist boney contusions at the lunate and capitate with ligament sprains and right knee medial and lateral meniscus tears. Dr. Li removed the Petitioner from work. The Petitioner continued with therapy.

The Petitioner was examined by Dr. Li on February 27, 2017. She stated that the right wrist was responding to therapy but still had some discomfort. Her right knee was causing her a majority of the pain. Dr. Li recommended proceeding with right arthroscopic knee surgery. Physical therapy continued.

At the request of the Respondent, the Petitioner was examined by Dr. Steven Mash on March 8, 2017. Dr. Mash's report was entered into evidence as Respondent's Exhibit #4. She stated that she worked for Manpower. On October 11, 2016, she slipped and fell while tenting a piece of plastic. She landed on all fours. She originally complained of pain in both knees and wrists, but eventually noted pain in the right wrist and knee. The Petitioner admitted to a prior right knee arthroscopy in in 1999. Examination of both wrists revealed full range of motion. There was some vague tenderness noted over the base of the thumb. Examination of the right knee was completely normal. Dr. Mash reviewed previous medical records and diagnostic studies. The diagnosis was resolved sprain/strain of the right wrist and chondromalacia patella. Dr. Mash causally related the wrist sprain strain to the fall. With regard to the right knee, Dr. Mash opined that the Petitioner experienced a temporary exacerbation of a preexisting underlying condition. The doctor did not recommend any further treatment. He further opined that the Petitioner would be able to return to work without restriction. In his report, Dr. Mash also indicated that while at this office, the Petitioner complained of a limping gait and demonstrated some limp on range of motion. When Dr. Mash observed the Petitioner in the parking lot, she was ambulating without any difficulty at any time.

The Petitioner returned to Dr. Li on April 3. 2017. The right knee continued to be painful with no improvement. It was noted that the knee surgery was denied by the independent examiner. Physical therapy was continued. Dr. Li testified that he did not examine the wrist at that visit because it was improving but that he recommended that she continue to treat it with therapy. (PX 6 at 17)

On April 19, 2017, Dr. Mash issued a supplemental report after reviewing images of the MRI studies. The report was entered into evidence as Respondent's Exhibit #5. Based on a review of the MRI image, the doctor's previous opinion was not changed. He was still of the opinion that the Petitioner's knee complaint is a temporary aggravation of a preexisting underlying condition and that no further testing or treatment was required.

The Petitioner was examined by Dr. Li on May 8, 2017. Her right wrist was doing well, and she no longer had the discomfort she previously had. The right knee was painful. Physical therapy was once again continued. Dr. Li testified that the right wrist had reached a point of maximum medical improvement as of that date. (Id at 23)

The Petitioner returned to Dr. Li on June 5, 2017. Her right wrist was doing well. She complained of pain in the right knee.

The Petitioner was examined by Dr. Li on August 1, 2017. Her right knee continued to bother her. It was noted that surgery was still pending the outcome of her workers' compensation case.

The Petitioner was last examined by Dr. Li on October 24, 2017. She continued to have pain with her right knee and had difficulty getting out of a chair. She was advised to return once litigation was completed. The Petitioner was to remain off from work.

The Petitioner testified that while she was treating for her knee, she also was diagnosed with breast cancer. The Petitioner testified that she took time off to treat for her breast cancer. She testified that she had not returned to work while treating for breast cancer.

Dr. Li testified via way of evidence deposition on June 22, 2017. Dr. Li testified that he was a board-certified orthopedic surgeon. He testified that he had an opportunity to treat the Petitioner; first examining her on December 9, 2016. At that time, she complained of right wrist and knee pain after sustaining a fall while working for Manpower. Dr. Li testified that his exam findings were swelling and a positive medial and lateral McMurray's test on the right knee. Examination of the wrist revealed tenderness in the snuff box. Dr. Li testified that he was worried about a possible torn meniscus. Dr. Li testified that he ordered an MRI of the right knee and that it demonstrated that it showed some tearing along the posterior horn of the medial meniscus. He admitted that based on the MRI, he could not tell if the injury was acute or not. The doctor testified that he provided the Petitioner with an injection that provided temporary relief and an injection. Since conservative treatment did not provide any relief, the doctor recommended a right knee arthroscopy. Dr. Li testified that he took the Petitioner off from work beginning on December 20, 2016. Dr. Li testified that by May 8, 2017, her wrist problem had resolved, and he stopped treating her for same. Dr. Li testified that there was a direct causal relationship between the right wrist injuries and right knee injuries and the reported incident that occurred in October of 2016. Dr. Li testified that the Petitioner was not at maximum medical improvement and that the right knee arthroscopy would be causally related to the accident. On cross examination, Dr. Li admitted that the small joint effusion on the MRI could have existed prior to the injury. Dr. Li also admitted that the mucinous degeneration seen in the MRI image was degenerative in nature. Dr. Li admitted that he could not tell how long the chondromalacia was present. Dr. Li further admitted that he could not tell when the right knee lateral and medial meniscus tears occurred. On cross-examination, Dr. Li testified that the right wrist MRI did not reveal any fractures. Dr. Li testified that his opinion on causal connection was based solely on the history provided to him by the Petitioner. Dr. Li admitted that he did not know how the Petitioner fell. He did not know if the Petitioner fell to the ground or if she sustained a twisting injury. Dr. Li did not know what the Petitioner's work at Manpower entailed. On cross-examination, Dr. Li could not provide a specific restriction for the wrist or knee, other than she as to remain off from work. Dr. Li admitted that the December 9, 2016 exam and December 20, 2016 examinations were identical, but he only removed her from work after the December 20, 2016 exam.

Dr. Steven Mash testified by way of evidence deposition on October 12, 2017. Dr. Mash testified that he was a board-certified orthopedic surgeon. He testified that in his practice he treats conditions involving the upper and lower extremities. Dr. Mash testified that he examined the Petitioner on March 8, 2017. The Petitioner provided Dr. Mash a history of slipping and falling when tenting a piece of plastic. She fell forward and landed on all fours. She initially complained of difficulty with both wrists and both knees, but over time noted ongoing discomfort about the right wrist and right knee. The Petitioner admitted to a prior right knee arthroscopy in 1999. Dr. Mash testified that he was able to perform an examination of the right wrist and right knee. With regard to the right wrist, Dr. Mash observed vague tenderness to palpation at the base of the thumb on the right. Examination of the right knee revealed full range of motion, no effusion, intact ligaments, no joint line tenderness or meniscal localizing signs. The only positive finding was some grinding on rage of motion on the patellofemoral joint, which was found in both knees. Dr. Mash testified that the patellofemoral grind was indicative of arthritis. Dr. Mash indicated that the diagnosis was a sprain-strain right wrist resolved and chondromalacia patella both knees. With regard to causal connection, Dr. Mash testified that the wrist strain sprain-strain was related and had resolved. For the knee, it was a temporary aggravation of a preexisting underlying condition. Dr. Mash testified that the Petitioner needed no further treatment for the wrist and knee. Dr. Mash also testified that he had an opportunity to observe the Petitioner's gait walking into his office and walking out of his office. He testified that she walked into the office with a limp. Dr. Mash testified that his workstation overlooked the parking lot and he had an opportunity to watch the Petitioner leave. He testified that the limping gait she demonstrated in the examining room was not present when she left the office and walked back to her crowd. Dr. Mash testified that he does not watch every patient leave his office, but only does so when he suspicious of patient behavior. Dr. Mash testified that arthroscopy surgery would not be causally related. Dr. Mash testified that he issued a supplemental report om April 19, 2017 after reviewing the MRI films of the right knee. He testified that the MRI did not reveal any acute injury and his opinion was not changed in any way.

F. ☒ Is Petitioner's current condition of ill-being causally related to the injury?

On October 12, 2016, the Petitioner testified that she was employed by Manpower to set up a dome tennis court. She testified that the conditions were slippery, and she fell forward onto her bilateral hands, bilateral knees and stomach. Despite this fall, the Petitioner continued to work the rest of the day. The Petitioner also returned to work the next day.

The Petitioner did not seek medical attention until October 24, 2016; almost two weeks after the fall. When the Petitioner presented to the emergency room, she only complained of right hand and left knee pain. There was no mention of any right knee pain within the emergency treatment record. Furthermore, the history provided to the emergency room physician was of falling backwards and not forwards. The record then details a second fall in which the Petitioner slips and falls directly on her left knee. The diagnosis was limited to a right thumb sprain. A right or left knee examination was not even performed.

When the Petitioner was next seen for care on November 2, 2016, she again complained of left knee pain with no reference to her right knee. She gave a history of falling on her left knee. (PX 4)

The Petitioner did not report the alleged accident to her employer until November 17, 2016. At that time, she filed out a pain diagram circling the left knee and right hand. (RX 7) This is consistent with the emergency room records from October 24, 2016. Again, there were no complaints involving the right knee. The Petitioner also testified that the day after Thanksgiving 2016, she accepted full time employment as a house keeper for a nursing home. The Petitioner continued to work in that position until Dr. Li removed her from work at the end of 2016.

The Petitioner did eventually come under the care of Dr. Lawrence Li on December 9, 2016. At that time, the Petitioner indicated that the emergency room provided her with braces, but the emergency records do not reflect same. X-rays of the right knee revealed arthritic findings.
The MRI films of the right knee do not conclusively demonstrate a meniscal tear, but merely raise the possibility of same.

After the initial evaluation, the Petitioner underwent a conservative course of treatment that included an injection and therapy. Despite the conservative treatment, the Petitioner continued to complain of pain and a recommendation for right knee surgery was made by Dr. Li.

Dr. Li provided his opinion as to causal connection via evidence deposition. Dr. Li admitted that his opinion as to causal connection was based on the Petitioner's provided history. Dr. Li did not know how the Petitioner fell or if she sustained a twisting injury. Furthermore, Dr. Li admitted that the small joint effusion on the MRI could have predated the accident and that he was unable to determine from the MRI films when the possible meniscal tears occurred. Dr. Li also said that it was his understanding that her pain, including her right knee pain began right after her accident. (PX 6 at 58)

Dr. Mash's right knee examination was completely normal. The observed grinding was evidence of preexisting arthritis that predated the accident. Dr. Mash testified that the MRI films of the right knee did not reveal any acute injury. Importantly, Dr. Mash observed obvious signs of symptom magnification. He noted the Petitioner walked into his office with a noticeable limp but was later observed in the parking lot to be walking without apparent distress.

After the accident, the Petitioner took full time employment as a housekeeper for a nursing home. There was no testimony or evidence presented that the Petitioner's right knee complaints prevented her from working in a full duty capacity. Per the Petitioner's own admission, she continued to work in a full duty capacity until Dr. Li removed her from work.

The Arbitrator finds that the petitioner did sustain accidental injuries to her right thumb and left knee. As to the issue of the right knee, the Arbitrator finds that the petitioner has failed to prove that the right knee was injured in the alleged injury.

In support of this finding, the Arbitrator cites the conflicting histories between the petitioner's testimony of falling forward on both knees and the history in the emergency room of falling backwards with no mention of injuring the right knee or complaints or findings to the right knee; the admissions by Dr. Li that the findings in question could have predated the injury; and lastly, the testimony of Dr. Mash which the Arbitrator found to be more convincing than that of Dr. Li.

G. ☒ What were Petitioner's earnings?

Petitioner's unrebutted testimony was that she was hired to perform a short- term job for $9.00 an hour. The rate is confirmed by the pay records entered into evidence by the Respondent. (RX 1) She testified again without rebuttal that she was to work 8 hours per day. The job was expected to take four days, but in fact only took a day and a half.

Under Section 10 of the Act, this job would be characterized as being short termed in nature. The Arbitrator believes the above evidence establishes that the AWW is $9.00 times 40 or $360.00.

J. ☒ Were the medical services that were provided to Petitioner reasonable and necessary? Has Respondent paid all appropriate charges for all reasonable and necessary medical services?

The Arbitrator finds that the Respondent has paid all reasonable and necessary medical services related to the wrist. The Arbitrator based on his finding of no causal connection to the right knee finds the issue moot, and therefore, makes no further comment.

K. ☒ Is Petitioner entitled to any prospective medical care?

The Arbitrator finds that based on the above, the Petitioner requires no further care for the right wrist. The Arbitrator based on his finding on no causal connection to the right knee finds the issue moot, and therefore, makes no further comment.

L. ☒ What temporary benefits are in dispute?
☐ TPD ☐ Maintenance ☒ TTD

The Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner was off work under the care of Dr. Li from December 20, 2016 through May 8, 2017 for his right wrist injury. He was taking physical therapy for that injury until said date. The treatment was reasonable for the injuries diagnosed. The Arbitrator finds the opinions of the treating doctor more persuasive than those of the examining doctor on this issue.

William R. Gallagher, Arbitrator

January 22, 2019

Date

Petitioner filed an Application for Adjustment of Claim which alleged he sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment by Respondent on August 24, 2016. According to the Application, Petitioner tripped and hurt his left knee (Arbitrator's Exhibit 2). Respondent disputed liability on the basis of accident and causal relationship. In regard to temporary total disability benefits, Petitioner claimed he was entitled to temporary total disability benefits of four and four-sevenths (4 4/7) weeks, commencing September 15, 2016, through October 16, 2016. At trial, Petitioner and Respondent stipulated that Petitioner was totally disabled for that aforestated period of time (Arbitrator's Exhibit 1).

Petitioner worked for Respondent as a highway maintainer. On August 24, 2016, Petitioner was working at the scene of an accident that occurred on I 270. A semi truck was driven through a section of highway retention cable in the median. Petitioner testified he was walking in the median and one of the hooks that held the cable in place was sticking up. Petitioner did not see it because of the grass and he caught it with his left foot. This caused Petitioner stumble forward, but he did not fall to the ground. Petitioner stated another employee, Darion Douglas, was present and witnessed the accident. Douglas did not testify when this case was tried.

August 24, 2016, was a Wednesday and Petitioner was able to work the remainder of that day as well as Thursday, August 25, and Friday, August 26, 2016, without any significant symptoms. Petitioner stated he began to experience left knee swelling on Saturday, August 27, 2016, and took some over-the-counter medication.

Petitioner initially sought medical treatment on August 30, 2016, at the ER of Gateway Regional Medical Center. At that time, Petitioner stated he had left knee and leg pain/swelling since Saturday and advised the symptoms began at home and "...resulted from an unknown cause." It was also described as not being "... a work related injury." Petitioner was diagnosed with either deep vein thrombosis (DVT) or cellulitis. A vascular Doppler ultrasound was performed on Petitioner's left leg which was negative for deep vein thrombosis. Petitioner was given a prescription for antibiotics and discharged (Petitioner's Exhibits 1 and 6).

Petitioner subsequently sought medical treatment at Parkland Health Center in Farmington, Missouri, on September 4, 2016. At trial, Petitioner testified he owned a cabin in the Farmington area. Petitioner testified his left knee had become swollen and when he went to Parkland Health Center, fluid was drained from his left knee.

According to the Parkland record, Petitioner had pain/swelling in the left knee, but did not advise that he had sustained a work-related injury. Fluid was drained from Petitioner's left knee. Another Doppler ultrasound was performed which was also negative for deep vein thrombosis. Petitioner was referred to Dr. Scott VanNess, an orthopedic surgeon (Petitioner's Exhibits 2 and 7).

Dr. VanNess saw Petitioner on September 7, 2016. At that time, Petitioner advised he injured his left leg on August 24, 2016, when his left foot hit a pin coming out of a cable guard. Petitioner stated he did not think much of it at the time it occurred, but then over the next three days, he had swelling/pain in the left knee/leg. Dr. VanNess opined Petitioner had either internal derangement of the knee or a plantaris injury. He ordered an MRI scan of the left knee (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

The MRI was performed on September 7, 2016. According to the radiologist, there was small joint effusion and fluid collection within the proximal soleus muscle. The impression was a healing muscle tear of the proximal soleus muscle (Petitioner's Exhibit 10).

Dr. VanNess saw Petitioner on October 12, 2016. At that time, he administered an injection in Petitioner's left knee and recommended physical therapy. Dr. VanNess saw Petitioner on November 9, 2016. Petitioner still had left knee pain, but on examination, the range of motion was full (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Dr. VanNess again saw Petitioner on November 30, 2016. At that time, Petitioner continued to complain of pain/swelling in the left knee. Dr. VanNess administered another injection in the left knee. Dr. VanNess last saw Petitioner on December 28, 2016, and noted he was going to refer Petitioner to a physician in Illinois (Petitioner's Exhibit 3).

Petitioner was subsequently evaluated by Dr. Dennis Dusek, an orthopedic surgeon, on June 28, 2017. Petitioner informed Dr. Dusek of a work-related accident, although Dr. Dusek's record noted it had occurred on August 26, 2016. Petitioner complained of intermittent pain/swelling in the left knee. Dr. Dusek's findings on examination were benign and he noted Petitioner had very muscular legs and calves. He opined Petitioner may have sustained a rupture of the plantaris muscle rather than the soleus. He noted Petitioner may have sustained a torn meniscus which may have been missed by the prior MRI scan. He ordered another MRI (Petitioner's Exhibit 4).

The MRI was performed on June 28, 2017. According to the radiologist, it was normal (Petitioner's Exhibit 11).

At the direction of Respondent, Petitioner was examined by Dr. Richard Lehman, an orthopedic surgeon, on January 16, 2018. In connection with his examination of Petitioner, Dr. Lehman reviewed medical records provided to him by Respondent. At that time, Petitioner complained of "...mild popping in the anterior aspect of the knee" but Petitioner had been working without difficulty. Dr. Lehman opined Petitioner had sustained a gastroc-soleus strain, but that it had completely resolved by the time of his examination. He opined Petitioner's "mild popping" of his left knee was not related to the accident of August 24, 2016 (Respondent's Exhibit 1; Deposition Exhibits 2 and 3).

Dr. Dusek was deposed on October 30, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. On direct examination, Dr. Dusek's testimony was consistent with his medical record. Dr. Dusek noted that the MRI of June 28, 2017, was negative, but he also testified Petitioner had injured the plantaris tendon, which was a very small tendon below the area where the MRI was performed and probably would not have been revealed because of its small size (Petitioner's Exhibit 13; pp 6-9).

Dr. Dusek described the mechanics of the injury and testified that when Petitioner slammed his foot down was when the tendon popped. In regard to the delay of Petitioner's left knee symptoms, Dr. Dusek described it as a very subtle injury and was not disturbed by the delay in Petitioner having complaints (Petitioner's Exhibit 13; pp 10-11).

Dr. Lehman was deposed on November 29, 2018, and his deposition testimony was received into evidence at trial. Dr. Lehman's deposition testimony was consistent with his medical reports and he reaffirmed the opinions contained therein. Dr. Lehman testified Petitioner sustained a gastroc soleus strain on August 24, 2016, but it had totally resolved by the time of his examination of Petitioner. He also stated that the minor popping Petitioner complained of was not related to the gastroc soleus strain (Respondent's Exhibit 1; pp 15-16, 20).

At trial, Petitioner agreed he was able to return to work to his normal job. He still has complaints of swelling when standing as well as grinding/popping in the left knee.

Conclusions of Law

In regard to disputed issue (C) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained an accidental injury arising out of and in the course of his employment by Respondent on August 24, 2016.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner's testimony regarding the circumstances of the accident of August 24, 2016, was unrebutted.

Petitioner testified the accident was witnessed by another employee, Darion Douglas. Respondent did not have Douglas testify at trial.

In regard to disputed issue (F) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner's current condition of ill-being is not causally related to the accident of August 24, 2016.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner did not report having sustained a work-related injury when he sought medical treatment on August 30 and September 4, 2016. It was not until he was evaluated by Dr. VanNess on September 7, 2016, that he attributed his left knee symptoms to the accident of August 24, 2016.

Dr. Dusek opined Petitioner sustained an injury to the plantaris muscle which he described as being very subtle and was not disturbed by the delay in Petitioner's delay of his onset of symptoms.

Respondent's Section 12 examiner, Dr. Lehman, opined Petitioner had sustained a gastroc soleus strain as a result of the accident of August 24, 2016.

Dr. Dusek only saw Petitioner on one occasion, June 28, 2017, and while he opined Petitioner had sustained a plantaris muscle strain, he did not opine as to whether Petitioner would have any ongoing complaints/symptoms thereafter.

Dr. Lehman testified that Petitioner's left knee popping was not related to the gastroc soleus strain he sustained as result of the accident of August 24, 2016. This was the only expert medical opinion in regard to causality of Petitioner's current symptoms.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes all of the medical treatment provided to Petitioner was reasonable and necessary and Respondent is liable for payment of the medical bills incurred therewith.

Respondent shall pay reasonable and necessary medical services as identified in Petitioner's Exhibit 14, as provided in Sections 8(a) and 8.2 of the Act, subject to the fee schedule. Respondent shall be given a credit of amounts paid for medical benefits that have been paid, and Respondent shall hold Petitioner harmless from any claims by any providers of services for which Respondent is receiving this credit, as provided in Section 8(j) of the Act.

In regard to disputed issue (K) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

The Arbitrator concludes Petitioner is entitled to temporary total disability benefits of four and four-sevenths (4 4/7) weeks, commencing September 15, 2016, through October 16, 2016.

In support of this conclusion the Arbitrator notes the following:

Petitioner and Respondent stipulated Petitioner was disabled during the aforestated period of time.

In regard to disputed issue (L) the Arbitrator makes the following conclusion of law:

Based upon the Arbitrator's conclusion of law in disputed issue (F) the Arbitrator concludes Petitioner sustained no permanent partial disability as a result of the accident of August 24, 2016.

ADDENDUM TO ARBITRATOR'S DECISION
FINDINGS OF FACTS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

This matter was heard in Ottawa on September 26, 2016 and proofs were closed in Kankakee on October 26, 2016.

[The parties asked for the decision not to be written as they were trying to resolve the case. Finally, in September, 2017, when respondent's counsel was appointed Arbitrator, proposed findings were submitted.]

The parties agree that on August 1, 2012, petitioner and respondent were operating under the provisions of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act; that petitioner earned $41,600 in the year pre-dating the claimed accident; and her average weekly wage, as calculated pursuant to § 10 of the Act was $800.00

At issue in this case is:

1. Whether the petitioner sustained accidental injuries that arose out of and in the course of her employment with respondent;
2. Whether petitioner gave timely notice of the accident.
3. Whether petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally connected to the claimed injury.
4. Whether respondent is liable for the unpaid medical bills.
5. Whether petitioner is due temporary total disability.
6. The nature and extent of injury.
7. Whether petitioner is entitled to penalties and attorneys' fees.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner, Linda Estes, Testimony

At time of hearing, petitioner had been employed for eight and one-half years for respondent. For the first three years she worked as a bulk operator and carton maker. The last job she performed was relief process checker.

A bulk operator is responsible for the machine that loads glass bottles onto a pallet platform. As each tier of bottles is complete, the bulk operator places a four-foot by five-foot cardboard tier sheet on top of the loaded bottles for the next tier of bottles. This is repeated until the pallet is fully loaded. The pallet operator secures the pallet with a wood top frame and moves onto a new pallet. Over an eight-hour shift, a bulk operator handles and positions 500 tier sheets and 48 top frames.

A carton maker lifts bundles containing 30 flattened 2" X 4" cardboard boxes into a machine that unfolds and assembles them for packing. This process is done 600 times in an eight-hour day.

Thereafter, for the next four years after bulk operator/carton maker, petitioner was a process checker. At the beginning of each shift, the process checker pulls a "set out" of 20 glass liquor bottles to inspect. The process checker completely examines each bottle, using his or her hands to check for sharp edges. This, according to petitioner, requires 25 hand rotations per bottle for all 20 bottles that were pulled for inspection. This process was done every hour during an eight-hour shift.

The process checker also uses a gage, called a magna mike, to check he thickness and height of the bottle. This requires manipulation with her hands. The process checker grabs four bottles at a time, two in each hand, to check. The process checker checks 24 defective bottles per shift to insure the gauges are accurate.

On April 7, 2011, petitioner was working as a bulk operator in relief of another employee. She had pulled down a number of tier sheets to the floor. As they hit the floor, the bounded back, bending her pinky and ring fingers back, causing pain. She reported the injury to Brian Layman. She asked to go for treatment. She was finally able to get treatment on April 14, 2011, when she went to St. Mary's Hospital. X-rays showed a fracture of the finger. She was put in a splint and placed on light duty. She followed up with Dr. Speca in May, 2011 at St. Mary's Hospital. She was taped and kept on light duty.

Thereafter, she went to Dr. Ortinau with Rezin Orthopedics. Although she was still in a ring and pinky finger splint, she was released to return to full-duty work by Dr. Ortinau. She was sent for a MRI of the right hand in August, 2011. She was then sent by Dr. Ortinau to Dr. Carroll. She was seen by Dr. Carroll in December, 2011.

Petitioner became a full time process checker in October, 2011. On December 20, 2011, petitioner reported her claimed injury to the safety manager.

Petitioner obtained an EMG on February 1, 2012 at the request of Dr. Ricca. She then saw orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Sinha, on March 7, 2012. Petitioner provided a work history to Dr. Sinha. Dr. Sinha performed a release of petitioner's right carpal tunnel syndrome on April 27, 2012.

In August, 2012, petitioner was seen by Dr. Ricca with numbness and tingling in her left hand. She had another EMG by Dr. Garg on September 5, 2012. She was referred by Dr. Ricca to Dr. Blair Rhode, whom she saw on September 24, 2012. She provided a job description to Dr. Rhode. She underwent another EMG to her left elbow, which was by Dr. Trudeau on October 29, 2012. On March 26, 2013, Dr. Rhode performed surgery to petitioner's left elbow. She also underwent a debridement in April, 2013. She was released to return to full duty work on June 28, 2013.

Petitioner continued to have pain and discomfort in her left elbow. On March 4, 2014, petitioner had another EMG by Dr. Trudeau. She underwent a revision of the left elbow surgery and carpal tunnel surgery. This improved her condition.

She was released from Dr. Rhode's care in October, 2014.

Petitioner confirmed she was examined by Dr. Eilers, at her attorney's request. She was cooperative. The exam took a half hour to an hour. She underwent two §12 exams with Dr. Ramsey Ellis; each lasting only15 minutes. She did not give details of her job to Dr. Ellis.

20 IWCC0031

She continues to have occasional pain in her hands.

On cross-examination, she confirmed she use a micrometer to check bottles. She would put the bottles on a cart to transport them to test. She turned the bottles with her thumbs. She occasionally picked up the bottle. She also was a carton maker and bulk operator. None of the jobs required use of power tools or air hammers. She did not push hands against resistance. She also did not use vibrator tools.

Petitioner agreed she was released to full duty work as of June, 2011 after her injury of April 7, 2011.

Petitioner confirmed she was seen by the HSHS Medical Group on January 17, 2014 due to neck pain, but was also having pain in lower left arm and numbness and fingers on left hand. Petitioner confirmed the neck condition was not related to a work accident. She was not sure the cause of the neck condition. She underwent a cervical MRI on December 12, 2013.

On rebuttal, petitioner testified that the video did not accurately depict the work she performed for respondent. She testified she used 8000 or 9000 hand movements per an eight-hour day. She disagreed with the number of bottles checked; she testified she checked 125 bottles per hour.

Jeffrey Donnell Testimony

Jeffrey Donnell, employed by respondent for eight years, testified in behalf of respondent. He is a line leader and presides over one line, which is from batch to forming to packaging to quality control. There are four lines at respondent's location in Streator Illinois.

He had performed the job of processor checker, bulk operator and carton maker. He sees this job performed every day.

Donnell agreed that the video identified as Respondent's Exhibit 8, depicts the job of process checker even though the some of the machines shown in the video were no longer used by respondent. Donnell confirmed petitioner would have to pull 20 bottles per hour to perform the inspection performed in the video. Respondent ran the liquor bottles identified in the photos from Petitioner's Exhibit 15A/16 and 15B/17 for only a year.

Medical Bills (PX.1)

Petitioner claims a total medical bills of $176,850.11 for all three claims, of which $115,015.54 remain outstanding.

St. Mary's Orthopedics Records (PX.2)

Petitioner was first seen by orthopedist, Dr. John M. Speca, on May 13, 2011 for the finger injury. She reportedly hyperextended her fingers when pulling cardboard sheets at work on April 7, 2011. X-rayed showed a nondisplaced fracture at the volar lip of the proximal end of the middle phalanx; this was the diagnosis. She was put on light duty as the fracture had not healed.

Petitioner was seen again on May 27, 2011. The diagnosis was nondisplaced volar lip avulsion fracture of the proximal end of the middle phalanx of the ring finger. She remained on restricted duty.

Rezin Orthopedics Records (PX.3)

Petitioner was first seen by Dr. Eric Ortinau on June 20, 2011 with complaints of left fourth finger pain. The middle phalanx fracture was healed. She was sent for hand therapy and released to return to work full-time; full-duty.

She was seen again on July 18, 2011. She was making good strides. She was to continue OT and continue full-time, full-duty work.

On August 23, 2011, petitioner was noted to have stiffness with contracture at the PIP joint. An MRI was ordered.

The August 29, 2011 MRI showed mild ill-defined bone edema, 2 mm area of subchondral cystic change and a remote sprain of the PIP joint radial collateral ligament.

At the September 6, 2011, petitioner lacked approximately 10 degrees' full extension of the left ring finger. She was referred to Dr. Carroll at her request.

Northwestern Orthopedic Institute/Dr. Charles Carroll Records (PX.4)

Petitioner was first seen by Dr. Carroll for a second opinion on December 12, 2011. Dr. Carroll's diagnosis was a stable PIP injury to the left ring finger. Dr. Carroll determined there was no further testing or further therapy, other than home stretching and use of LMB splint, necessary. Dr. Carroll believe petitioner would reach MMI within two to three months.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Carroll on August 1, 2012. Dr. Carroll reported no provocative testing noted for carpal tunnel syndrome, pronator syndrome, cubital tunnel syndrome or radial nerve compression at elbow or wrist. Diagnosis was stable PIP injury left ring finger, and also ulnar neuritis. She was to return PRN.

ATI Physical Therapy Records (PX.5)

Petitioner received physical therapy to the left fourth finger from June 21, 2011 through August 11, 2011.

St. Mary's Hospital Records (PX.6)

[These records included over hundreds of pages of superfluous and irrelevant documents. The discussion of this exhibit is limited to only the relevant pages that were identified amount the volume of non-relevant documents.]

On April 14, 2011, petitioner was seen by Dr. Amit Garg for the left finger injury. X-rays showed a small avulsion fracture along the ventral based of the left middle fourth phalanx.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Garg for follow up treatment of the left fourth finger on May 2, 2011. X-rays showed non displaced chip fracture along the palmer base of fourth middle phalanx.

On September 21, 2011, petitioner was seen in urgent care by Dr. Amit Garg. She reported she had ongoing pain in the third digit of the left hand. She was instructed to follow up with hand specialist. A referral was made to Dr. Charles Carroll.

Petitioner presented to the emergency department with right wrist numbness on December 20, 2011. Petitioner reported it started at 7:30 that morning at home. A Cat scan of the brain was performed. Diagnosis was paresthesia with peripheral neuropathy of the right hand and wrist.

Petitioner was admitted to the hospital on April 27, 2012 for severe right carpal tunnel release of the right hand. Petitioner had a history of numbness and tingling along the medial nerve distribution of the right hand that had been going on for several months. The EMG showed mild carpal tunnel on the right and none on the left. The surgical order form indicates the right carpal tunnel condition was not related to work.

Dr. Upendra K. Sinha Records (PX.7)

The February 1, 2012 EMG/NCV showed mild carpal tunnel syndrome of the right hand and normal on the left.

On April 27, 2012, Dr. Sinha performed a carpal tunnel release for severe carpal tunnel syndrome of the right hand. According to the history and physical at the time of admission to St. Mary's Hospital on April 27, 2012, petitioner claimed she had tingling and numbness along the median nerve distribution for the last many years; and in the last several months she has had more symptoms.

Petitioner underwent post-operative physical and occupational therapy in May and June, 2012.

Dr. Edward Trudeau Records (PX.8)

The October 29, 2012 EMG/NCV study done by Dr. Edward Trudeau showed ulnar neuropathy at the left elbow (cubital tunnel syndrome). Petitioner related the problem to the April 7, 2011 work injury.

The EMG/NCV study done by Dr. Trudeau on March 4, 2014, showed ulnar neuropathy of the left elbow, which was improved over the previous study of 10/29/2012, median neuropathy of the left wrist (carpal tunnel syndrome) which was new since 10/29/2012 study and mild left medial antebrachial cutaneous neuropathy. Again, petitioner related the condition back to her April 7, 2011 injury.

Parkview Family Practice/Glen L. Ricca Records (PX.9)

The December 20, 2011 ER report from St. Mary's Streator indicate petitioner reported right hand and wrist pain that started that morning at 7:30 AM at home.

On December 28, 2011, petitioner followed up with Dr. Ricca after ER visit of December 22, 2011.

Petitioner obtained an EMG on February 1, 2012 at Dr. Ricca's request for pain in both hands. The EMG/NCV showed mild right carpal tunnel syndrome and none on the left.

Petitioner was seen on August 8, 2012, due to paresthesia tingling left 4th and 5th fingers. She reportedly moved bottles all day while working for respondent.

The September 5, 2012 NCV/EMG report was negative.

On September 11, 2012, petitioner was seen for paresthesia tingling left fourth and fifth finger; symptoms persist even though the nerve conduction study was normal.

On October 3, 2012, petitioner reported to the emergency room with a history of pain in her right hand for two to three days. She reportedly hit her head (sic) on the porch rail at home.

Petitioner followed up with Dr. Ricca on October 9, 2012, after ER visit of October 3, 2012 for right hand trauma after striking it against an object.

Petitioner underwent a pre-op physical on March 20, 2013.

Orland Park Orthopedics Center for Sports Medicine/Dr. Blair Rhode Records (PX.10)

Petitioner first saw Dr. Blair Rhode on September 24, 2012 with the history of suffering a fracture of the left ring finger on April 7, 2011. Diagnosis was hand and elbow pain, cubital tunnel syndrome and closed fracture of distal finger.

She was seen again on September 26, 2012. An MRI of the left ring finger on September 26, 2012 showed chondromalacia involving the ring finger. She returned on September 28, 2012 for hand and elbow pain. She saw Dr. Rhode after the MRI on November 12, 2012. On November 20, 2012, she was given an injection into the cubital tunnel and splinted. On December 8, 2016, she advised the injection only gave her temporary relief. Left cubital tunnel surgery was proposed.

Petitioner underwent left cubital tunnel release on March 28, 2013. She followed up on April 4, 2013 and April 29, 2013.

She had additional surgery on April 30, 2013 for left elbow irrigation and debridement with closure of the wound.

She followed up on May 16, 2013, May 20, 2013 and May 30, 2013. On June 27, 2013, petitioner was released to return to work full duty on a trial basis. On July 24, 2013 petitioner was doing well performing her regular work. She was released from Dr. Rhode's care, having reached MMI.

On January 10, 2014 petitioner returned with significant symptoms in her elbow. The diagnosis was medial epicondylitis. She returned on February 8, 2014 with ongoing symptomology. An EMG was prescribed. She was seen on March 19, 2014, S/P EMG which showed persistent cubital tunnel and carpal tunnel syndrome. On April 17, 2014 a repeat surgery was discussed. On May 2, 2014 and May 15, 2014, additional surgery was proposed.

Petitioner underwent left open carpal tunnel release and cubital tunnel release revision with sub muscular transposition. She received follow up care on June 12, 2014, July 10, 2014, August 7, 2014, September 7, 2014. On October 2, 2014, petitioner was released to full duty work and determined to be at MMI.

Memorial Medical Center Report (PX.11)

The report is also contained in Petitioner's Exhibit 8.

Results Physical Therapy and Fitness Records (PX.12)

Physical therapy records from July and August, 2014.

Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Associates/Dr. Robert Eilers Report (PX.13)

Dr. Robert Eilers examined petitioner on August 11, 2015. He reviewed treating medical records, including EMGS and operative reports, as well as MRIs. Petitioner provided a history that on April 7, 2011, she was lifting 4 x 5 feet cardboard pieces, she bent her left hand backwards resulting in extension in injury to the fourth digit of her left hand.

On December 20, 2011, petitioner was having numbness and tingling in her hands and was diagnosed with carpal tunnel syndrome by Dr. Garg and referred to Dr. Ricca.

She reportedly worked with respondent as a lab process checker on the line doing various checking of bottles hourly and reporting defects, using gauges, cutting bottles with hot wire and emptying glass into the cullet. She reportedly lifted up to 30 pounds, which she did 10 to 30 times a day.

Dr. Eilers concluded petitioner avulsion fracture of the ventral base of the left mid fourth phalanx as a result of the April 7, 2011 work accident, with some acceleration of degenerative changes at the MCP and PIP joints, and enlargement of the pip joint.

Dr. Eilers concluded petitioner developed carpal tunnel syndrome on December 20, 2011, of the right hand and underwent carpal tunnel surgery on April 27, 2012, as a result of the work activities.

Dr. Eilers also concluded petitioner developed cubital tunnel syndrome on the left as a result of the repetitive activity, which necessitated cubital tunnel release performed on March 26, 2013, as well as additional surgery on April 30, 2013 to reclose the wound dehiscence from the March 26, 2013 surgery. Petitioner also had to undergo revision of the cubital tunnel release and a sub muscular transposition done on May 27, 2014.

In conclusion, Dr. Eilers determined petitioner sustained bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome and left cubital tunnel syndrome, which required surgical releases, and subsequent transposition. She also had some acceleration of her degenerative arthritis from the fracture of the fourth left digit. All of these conditions Dr. Eilers related to petitioner's employment activities with respondent.

Dr. Blair A. Rhode April 13, 2016 Deposition (PX.14)

Dr. Blair Rhode testified in behalf on petitioner via deposition on April 13, 2016. He is board certified in orthopedic surgery, sports medicine and from the American Board of Independent Medical Examiners (5).

Petitioner was first seen by Dr. Rhode on September 24, 2012. She reportedly injured her left ring finger when she was manipulating heavy cardboard on April 7, 2011, causing the finger to snap back resulting in a fracture. She continued to work and her symptoms did not significantly improve. (5-6)

Petitioner advised Dr. Rhode she developed medial-sided elbow pain with numbness and tingling to the ring and little finger on the left. The September 5, 2012 EMG showed no evidence of left-sided cubital tunnel syndrome. Dr. Rhode recommended another MRI. (6-7)

Dr. Rhode confirmed petitioner had not provided him with a history of right carpal tunnel surgery by Dr. Sinha in April, 2012. He had obtained this information from the medical records (7-8).

On November 28, 2012, petitioner related that she was required to pick up and inspect 12-ounce bottles at a rate of 400 to 500 per minute. She advised the cubital tunnel [on the left] symptomology developed in March or April. She developed the symptoms [on the left] from compensating from the right carpal tunnel condition, (9)

Dr. Rhode reported the October 29, 2012 EMG showed a moderately severe cubital tunnel syndrome (10). Eventually Dr. Rhode performed a left cubital tunnel release on March 26, 2013 after a course of conservative treatment (10-11). On April 30, 2013, Dr. Rhode performed an irrigation and debridement procedure at the operation site due to post-operative drainage (11). Petitioner was off work from the date of the surgery of March 26, 2013 until July 24, 2013, at which time Dr. Rhode deemed her to be at MMI (12).

Petitioner returned to Dr. Rhode on January 10, 2014 with continued medial sided-elbow pain; a repeat EMG was ordered and showed persistent cubital tunnel syndrome with evidence also of carpal tunnel syndrome (12-13). Dr. Rhode performed a revision of the left cubital tunnel procedure and a left carpal tunnel release (13-14). Dr. Rhode released petitioner to return to full-time, regular work on a trial basis on September 4, 2014 (14).

On October 4, 2014, petitioner was again released from his care. On that date, Dr. Rhode reported petitioner was doing well, with full range of motion and negative provocative maneuvers for compressive neuropathy both at the wrist and the elbow. Dr. Rhode also indicated petitioner would have some residual medial sided pain given the fact she had three surgeries and returned to work at her previous occupation (14-15).

Dr. Rhode testified he found petitioner's work for respondent was repetitive, but not forceful (15). He confirmed that the job described by petitioner as an inspector was the cause of the carpal and cubital tunnel syndrome [on the left] (16-17).

On cross-examination, Dr. Rhode confirmed petitioner did not perform any heavy lifting (19). Dr. Rhode confirmed petitioner had no pre-disposition, such as diabetes or thyroid problems, to the condition (21). Dr. Rhode agreed that cubital tunnel and carpal tunnel can be idiopathic (21-22).

Midwest Hand Surgery/Dr. Ramsey Ellis February 13, 2015 Report (PX.15)

Dr. Ellis examined petitioner at respondent's request on February 13, 2015, in order to perform an AMA rating. The only condition Dr. Ellis related to any work accident was the left ring finger injury. Dr. Ramsey found petitioner sustained a 14% digital loss which translates to 1.05 % loss of the upper extremity and a 1% Whole Person Impairment

Photos (PX. 15 A/16 & 15 B/17)

Dr. Ramsey Ellis March 17, 2015 Deposition (RX.1)

Dr. Ramsey Ellis, board certified plastic and reconstruction, as well as hand, surgeon, testified in behalf of respondent. Dr. Ellis had previously examined petitioner on February 5, 2013 and testified via deposition on November 12, 2013 [which was not introduced into evidence]. He also had issued June 27, 2013 addendum after viewing a job interview.

Dr. Ellis saw petitioner again on February 13, 2015. He reviewed additional medical records. Based upon his review of the video of the job and petitioner's previous interview regarding her job duties, Dr. Ellis concluded petitioner's job did not cause petitioner's cubital or carpal tunnel syndromes. Dr. Ellis noted no evidence of repetitive forceful grasping, flexion and extension of the wrist or prolonged use of hand-held vibratory tools. (9-12)

Dr. Ellis only performed an AMA rating for the left ring finger injury.

Genex Utilization Review October 21, 2014 Report (RX.2)

A utilization review was performed by Dr. Khalid Yousuf in behalf of respondent. Dr. Yousuf non-certified the surgery performed on May 27, 2014 as petitioner had not undergone appropriate conservative treatment before undergoing surgery.

Physical Demands Analysis of Process Checker/Inspector (RX.3)

According to the description, the process checker/inspector checks and inspects a variety of bottles in a variety of different manners.

St. Mary's Hospital Records (RX.4)

Among the voluminous irrelevant or duplicate of Petitioner's Exhibit 6, were records of treatment on May 9, 2011 and May 29, 2011 of petitioner's left finger injury. In addition, these records included treatment to petitioner's cervical spine in 2013 and 2014.

Dr. Charles Carroll Records (RX.5)

These records are duplicate of Petitioner's Exhibit 4, and also supplemental records contained in St. Mary's Hospital Records and Rezin Orthopedics records.

Rezin Orthopedic Records (RX.6)

Petitioner was seen by Dr. Ortinau on June 15, 2006 with complaints of left fifth finger pain after hitting it on the back of the door in the kitchen a few days ago. She suffered a fracture to the middle phalanx of the fifth finger. She was seen in follow up on June 22, 2006 and July 13, 2006. On August 17, 2006, more physical therapy for strengthen was recommended for strengthening; she was released from doctor's care.

Petitioner returned to Dr. Ortinau's office on March 20, 2007 with bilateral had numbness and tingling. The diagnosis was bilateral carpal tunnel syndrome; left greater than right. She was seen again on March 26, 2007 for left greater than right hand pain and numbness. She indicated she was having the pain for years. She was also shown to have possible Raynaud's. She reported the carpal tunnel brace helped.

She returned on April 9, 2007 after an EMG was positive for carpal tunnel syndrome. Carpal tunnel surgery was proposed, at least on the left.

On August 25, 2009, petitioner returned with right elbow pain. She reported it had been going on for a month. She was unsure of the cause. She reported she held off on scheduling the carpal tunnel surgery as her symptoms were not too severe. Diagnosis was stable carpal tunnel syndrome and epicondylitis.

On September 22, 2009 her condition had stabilized and she was released.

The remaining records are duplicate of Petitioner's Exhibit 3.

HSHS Medical Group/Family Medicine Parkview Records (RX.7)

Petitioner was seen by NP Patricia Hess for neck pain November, 2013 through January, 2014. On January 17, 2014 she had neck pain and also having pain in lower left arm and numbness and fingers on left hand. Treatment included physical therapy.

Video of Job of Process Checker Zip Drive (RX.8)

A 47-minute video showing an individual doing the checking job at respondent's.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Arbitrator adopts the Finding of Facts in support of the Conclusions of Law.

C. With respect to the issue of whether an accident occurred that rose out of and in the course of petitioner's employment with respondent, the Arbitrator makes the following conclusions of law:

The only nexus to the claimed accident date of August 1, 2012, is Dr. Charles Carroll's records from that date wherein Dr. Carroll reported petitioner's PIP injury of the left ring finger was stable. Dr. Carroll also indicated petitioner's testing was negative for carpal tunnel syndrome, pronator syndrome, cubital tunnel syndrome or radial nerve compression at elbow or wrist, although he does mention ulnar neuritis. Dr. Carroll offered no explanation as to the cause of the ulnar neuritis.

The September 5, 2012 EMG/NCV was negative for left cubital tunnel or carpal tunnel syndrome.

On September 28, 2012 petitioner reported to Dr. Blair Rhode that she processed and inspected 400 to 500 12-ounce bottles per day for respondent. This is the size of the bottles depicted on the video of the job, identified as Respondent's Exhibit 8. However, petitioner testified she processed the larger liquor bottles identified as Petitioner's Exhibit 15A/16 and 15B/17.

The October 29, 2012 EMG/NCV study done by Dr. Edward Trudeau showed ulnar neuropathy at the left elbow (cubital tunnel syndrome.) The petitioner related the problem to the April 7, 2011 accidental injury.

Dr. Eilers, who examined petitioner at her behalf, opined petitioner's job as a process checker was the cause of petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel and left cubital tunnel syndrome. This was based upon petitioner's description of her job. The Arbitrator notes petitioner testified that her job was to inspect the large liquor bottles (PX.15A/16 and 15B/17); and yet, she related to Dr. Rhode on September 28, 2012 that she processed only the 12-ounce bottle, which were depicted in respondent's video (RX.8). The job of process checker, as depicted in the video, was not onerous in regard to repetitive grasping as claimed by petitioner.

In addition, petitioner advised Dr. Rhode in November, 2012, that her left elbow symptoms developed in March or April [2012] from overcompensating for the right carpal tunnel syndrome. [The Arbitrator determined in case 13 WC 5771 that petitioner failed to prove that her right carpal tunnel syndrome was caused by her work activity with respondent.]

Furthermore, Dr. Rhode agreed carpal tunnel syndrome and cubital tunnel syndrome can be idiopathic.

Dr. Ramsey Ellis, who examined petitioner on two occasions in behalf of respondent, and viewed the job video tape, opined petitioner's bilateral carpal tunnel and left cubital tunnel was not caused by the work as a process checker noting the job did not include repetitive forceful grasping, flexion and extension of the wrist, or prolonged use of hand-held vibratory tools. The Arbitrator noted Dr. Rhode agreed that petitioner's job did not include forceful repetitive movement.

Based upon the foregoing, the Arbitrator finds petitioner failed to prove that her left cubital tunnel and left carpal tunnel syndrome was the result of the April 7, 2011 left finger injury, or the claimed repetitive work accident of August 1, 2012, or any other date.

As the Arbitrator determined petitioner was not injured in an accident that arose out of her employment with respondent, the claim is denied and all other issues are moot.

ADDENDUM TO ARBITRATOR'S DECISION
FINDINGS OF FACTS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

This matter was heard in Ottawa on September 26, 2016 and proofs were closed in Kankakee on October 26, 2016.

[The parties asked for the decision not to be written as they were trying to resolve the case. Finally, in September, 2017, when respondent's counsel was appointed Arbitrator, proposed findings were submitted.]

The parties agree that on December 20, 2011, petitioner and respondent were operating under the provisions of the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act; that petitioner earned $41,600 in the year pre-dating the claimed accident; and that her average weekly wage, as calculated pursuant to § 10 of the Act was $800.00

At issue in this case is:

1. Whether the petitioner sustained accidental injuries that arose out of and in the course of her employment with respondent;
2. Whether petitioner gave timely notice of the accident.
3. Whether petitioner's current condition of ill-being is causally connected to the claimed injury.
4. Whether respondent is liable for the unpaid medical bills.
5. Whether petitioner is due temporary total disability.
6. What is the nature and extent of injury?
7. Whether petitioner is entitled to penalties and attorneys' fees.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner, Linda Estes, Testimony

At time of hearing, petitioner had been employed for eight and one-half years for respondent. For the first three years she worked as a bulk operator and carton maker. The last job she performed was relief process checker.

A bulk operator is responsible for the machine that loads glass bottles onto a pallet platform. As each tier of bottles is complete, the bulk operator places a four-foot by five-foot cardboard tier sheet on top of the loaded bottles for the next tier of bottles. This is repeated until the pallet is fully loaded. The pallet operator secures the pallet with a wood top frame and moves onto a new pallet. Over an eight-hour shift, a bulk operator handles and positions 500 tier sheets and 48 top frames.

A carton maker lifts bundles containing 30 flattened 2" X 4" cardboard boxes into a machine that unfolds and assembles them for packing. This process is done 600 times in an eight-hour day.

Thereafter, for the next four years after bulk operator/carton maker, petitioner was a process checker. At the beginning of each shift, the process checker pulls a "set out" of 20 glass liquor bottles to inspect. The process checker completely examines each bottle, using his or her hands to check for sharp edges. This, according to petitioner, requires 25 hand rotations per bottle for all 20 bottles that were pulled for inspection. This process was done every hour during an eight-hour shift.

The process checker also uses a gage, called a magna mike, to check he thickness and height of the bottle. This requires manipulation with her hands. The process checker grabs four bottles at a time, two in each hand, to check. The process checker checks 24 defective bottles per shift to insure the gauges are accurate.
